Rab Bruce-Lockhart, the shifty stand-off half, was outstanding again in the Cambridge play. He scored two tries, the second on a 20-yard run on which he chucked the dummy, i. e., feinted a pass, twice and reversed his field cleverly. He also drop-kicked a field goal from twenty yards, for a total of ten points. His fellow international-ist, Springy Forrest, contributed three tries by hard running and converted four times for total of seventeen points. Dudley Reed, another of the three-quarter backs, scored two tries.

Forrest scored his first in the first two minutes after passes from Bruce-Lockhart and Douglas Low, the captain and fullback. Another run of twenty-five yards by Bruce-Lockhart and a swift pass to Forrest produced another try and Forrest converted for an 8-to-0 lead and the score continued to mount steadily.

The All-East side, selected from the rugby personnel of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the local clubs was never able to make much of a match of this final test.

Homers Help Villanova Nine Beat Penn, 10-7

PHILADELPHIA, April 2—Lou Wannemacher, Villanova's hard-hitting centerfielder, helped spoil Pennsylvania's baseball opening today by hitting two home runs as the Wildcats won, 10 to 7. It rained throughout the game. Wannemacher, a New York lad, connected in the first inning with the bases empty and again in the ninth with Art Vigilante and Bobby Bond on the paths.

Dick Trexler, making his Red and Blue varsity debut at short, hit a home run, double and two singles.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" --by Ripley

Society of Live Oaks

A few years ago, Dr. Edwin Lewis Stephens, then President of Southwestern Louisiana Institute, founded the "Live Oak Society," the purpose of which is to promote the culture, distribution, and appreciation of live oak trees. As acting secretary-treasurer, Dr. Stephens is the only human member of the society. All other members are live oak trees, known or suspected to be more than 100 years old. Oaks less than 100 years old, possessing all other qualifications, are eligible for the "Junior League." There are at present 125 venerable oaks listed as members, each tree having an "Attorney" who watches it carefully and collects the annual dues of 25 acorns from each member.

Cocktail Champion

Three years ago, John McCann opened up a dine-and-dance cafe and bar in Leominster, Massachusetts, and even though he never took a drink in his life, he took over the job of bartender himself. More than half his patrons were women who liked mixed drinks, and McCann developed several hitherto unknown concoctions. The favorites are "Ambrosia" and "Wistaria," which were entered in an international contest recently held by the United Kingdom Bartenders Guild at the Olympia, London, and both drinks won the highest American awards. Yet Mr. McCann still doesn't know what they taste like, because he never drinks.

Five Changes Made In Court Rules For 1938-39

CHICAGO, April 7—Five changes—two of them designed to give players of the streamlined game more rest—were written into the basketball rule book today.

The changes, adopted by the rules committee of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, were:

1. Increase of the number of time outs in the collegiate game to five from four.

2. Optional use of four 10-minute quarters instead of the customary 20-minute halves, with two-minute rests between first and second and between third and fourth periods.

3. Exemption of the outer half of the foul circle from provisions of the "three second" rule so that a player not in possession of the ball may stay in that territory more than three seconds without penalty.

4. Prohibition of substitutions immediately after a goal and before the ball is tossed into play from the end zone, unless a team has called time out.

5. Permission for optional extension of the end margin of the court from two feet to four feet from the face of the backboards.

No extra time outs were provided for high school games, but the committee ruled referees must call an official time out in the second and fourth quarters if no time has been called by either team durng the first four minutes in those periods.

In addition, scholastic deadlocks will be decided in a "sudden death" overtime session. The first team to score two points—on goal or free throws—will win. If the three-minute period ends with but one point scored, the team scoring will be declared winner.

The only other new matter in next season's rule book will be a rewritten "10-second" rule. Oswald Tower, of Andover, Mass., editor of the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada, said the rule was rewritten for clarification, but no change made.

Ohio State Wins Swimming Title As Patnik Scores Diving 'Slam'

N.Y. Herald Tribune

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 9—Princeton's great medley relay team set the lone new record of the 1938 National A. A. U. senior swimming meet tonight, but Ohio State University stole the show as the Buckeyes became the first college squad to take the team championship, and Al Patnik, brilliant sophomore, rounded out the first diving "grand slam" in history.

The Bucks piled up 41 points, while Patnik's performances constituted a real "honor roll." The blond diver, in sweeping the low and high-board events for the second straight year, added those conquests to his Big Ten and National Intercollegiate sweeps and the National A. A. U. outdoor high board crown.

Michigan finished second in the team race with 19½ points, giving Ohio State four victories in five starts against the Wolverines this year. The lone Michigan conquest over Ohio was by a single point in the National Intercollegiates.

Princeton, with a sensational victory in the 300-yard medley relay, the closing event, ran its points to 17 for third place. Harvard had 10½, the Miami Biltmore Club 10, the New York Athletic Club 5, Iowa and the Providence Boys' Club 3 each, and the Detroit Athletic Club 2.

Princeton's medley relay trio of Albert Vande Weghe, Hough and Parke, clicked through the 300 yards in 2:54.3, knocking six-tenths of a second off the American mark of 2:54.9, set in 1936 by the Lake Shore A. C., of Chicago.

Patnik and Ralph Flanagan, of the Miami Biltmore Club of Coral Gables, Fla., were the only double winners of the meet, the Southern star taking the 220-yard and 500-yard free-style events, while the Ohio State star swept the diving competitions.

Peter Fick, of the New York Athletic Club, successfully defended his 100-yard free style championship in tonight's opening event of the National A. A. U. senior swimming meet, turning in a 51.8 performance.

Kirar, Curwen in Dead Heat

Ed Kirar, of the University of Michigan, national intercollegiate champion, and Henry A. Curwen, of Harvard, finished in a dead heat for second place, a yard behind the winner.

Fick's time was eight-tenths off the world record set in 1927 by Johnny Weissmuller and tied by Fick two years ago. The New York star splashed to victory on the last leg after trailing Kirar to the 75-yard turn. William Kendall, of Harvard, was fourth, and Harold Van Oss, of Princeton, fifth.

Albert Vande Weghe, of Princeton, added the A. A. U. 150-yard backstroke crown to the intercollegiate laurels he won a few weeks ago as he beat out a brilliant field in 1:34.5, two and eight-tenths above the world record of Adolph Kiefer, of Austin, Tex., who did not defend his championship.

Ralph Flanagan, of the Miami Biltmore Club, Coral Gables, Fla., scored the first double of the meet as he dethroned Tom Haynie of the University of Michigan as 500-yard free-style champion.

The Florida star had a twenty-yard lead over John Macionis of Yale who finished second, and more than lapped the rest of the field. His time was 5:24.9.

The summaries:

150-yard back stroke—Won by Albert Vande Weghe, Princeton; Francis Heydt, Iowa, second; William Neunzig, Ohio State, third; William Beebe, Ann Arbor, Mich., unattached, fourth; Leroy Ogle, Detroit, unattached, fifth; Harold Stanhope, Columbus, unattached, sixth. Time, 1:34.5.

Three-meter board fancy diving—Won by Al Patnik, Ohio State (153.37); Jim Patterson, Ohio State (152.46), second; Elbert Root, Detroit A. C. (151.57), third; Earl Clack, unattached, Columbus (140.99), fourth; Al Greene, unattached, Chicago (139.16), fifth; William Danforth, Yale (133.34), sixth.

300-yard medley relay—Won by Princeton (Vande Weghe, Hough, Parke); Ohio State (Neunzig, Higgins, Guayes), second; Michigan (Haynie, Haigh, Kirar), third; Ohio State No. 2 and Wayne University, of Detroit, disqualified for premature take-offs. Time, 2:54.3 (new American record); old mark of 2:54.9 set by Lake Shore A. C., of Chicago, in 1936).

Dutch Soccer Team Beaten By K.R.A.C. By 3 To 1 At Kobe

Special To The Japan Times

KOBE, May 2—In celebration of the birthday of Princess Juliana, the local Netherlands soccer team took on the K.R. & A.C. team, but went down to a 3-1 defeat.

Though the Netherlanders offered tough resistance, the goings proved too tough for them, inasmuch as the K.R. & A.C. team had such all-around players as Westphalen, Wintersbrothers and Manuel Guterres.

Westphalen scored two goals for the winners and stole the show of the afternoon. Mehta scored the other point for the winners, while Gelden scored the lone point for the losers.

A windmill trophy was awarded to the winner of the game.

Comfort Kits Appreciated By Ex-Varsity Men

Comfort kits were sent by the Tokyo Six University Baseball league to former members of the league who are now serving on the battle fronts in China. Sponge balls were not forgotten so that the recipients would be able to toss them back and forth in their spare moments.

Among those who sent letters of thanks were:

Lieut. Masami Kuroki, former captain of the Waseda team, who went to the front last September.

Lieut. Toshiharu Inokawa, former Meiji catcher.

Lieut. Uchiyama, former Tokyo Imperial University player.

Tatsuo Yamada, former Rikkyo University player.

Lieut. Kajiuye, former Keio captain, who has been on duty in Shansi and Shantung provinces.

Lieut. Tetsuo Nakamura, former Rikkyo University player.

Nornay Saddler, A Fox Terrier Is Best In Show

By KINGSLEY CHILDS

N.Y. Times

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 9—Scoring his third straight best in show as he ran his all-time string to eleven, Champion Nornay Saddler, smooth fox terrier from the Wissahoc Kennels of Westbury, L. I., tonight took the premier award in the nineteenth annual allbreed exhibition staged on the Steel Pier by the Kennel Club of Atlantic City.

This consistent winner, owned by James M. Austin and his stepdaughter, Miss Madeline West, defeated five classy rivals in the grand finale to conclude an all-day program of keen competition, which attracted more than 550 dogs.

Handled by Leonard Brumby, Nornay Saddler flashed a splendid performance before a throng of canine enthusiasts, who stood two and three deep around the judging ring. William L. Kendrick of Philadelphia, who passed upon the merits of the finalists, gave all plenty of opportunity to display their qualities before making his selection.

The judge inspected them carefully, sending each group winner prancing up and down the arena on several occasions. Then he ordered Nornay and Mrs. Vincent Matta's orange sable Pomeranian, Sealand Moneybox, to one side, looked them both over for a few moments and picked the fox terrier.

Winner at Cincinnati, Too

Thus Nornay added another crown to those gained in the Bristol, Tenn., and by the triumph squashed Mrs. Matta's hopes of repeating a success recorded by her famous pom, Champion Little Sahib, here last season.

For Sealand Moneybox it was an eventful day. This little fellow, participating in his fourth show, not only kept intact his record of never having been beaten in his breed, but also headed the toy group for the second time. He was first exhibited at Westminster in Madison Square Garden last February and his owner, who hails from Astoria, L. I., evidently has another great campaigner capable of achieving a brilliant streak of successes.

Also in the ring for the final event by virtue of verdicts in other groups were a dachshund, boxer and chow, all champions; and a handsome English setter, who went to the head of the sporting gun division for his initial group victory.

The English setter was the bluebelton Pilot of Glen Grove of Prunes Own, from the kennels of Mr. and Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke of Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Making his second appearance as an individual contestant, Pilot scored over a formidable array of rivals. He was shown by Mrs. Duke and furnished a surprise in prevailing over the Irish setter Champion Milson Top Notcher, owned by the Milson kennels.

Pennine Paramount Wins

The sporting group also included another Duke breed winner, the lemon-and-white pointer, Pennine Paramount of Prunes Own, a $3,000 importation from England for this year's Westminster. But he failed to gain a place in the group as his kennel mate, purchased for a much smaller sum in Canada last Fall, went on to the final.

The dachshund was the consistent black and tan smooth-coated Champion Heidi Flottenberg, belonging to the Ellenbert Farm of Greenwich, Conn. Heidi, under the guidance of Gordon Forsyth, led his breed for the thirty-eighth time and then gained the chief laurels among the hounds.

For his working group victory, the boxer Champion Eros v. Luisenblick was put down in good condition by Nate Levine. Eros is a well-balanced fawn specimen with white markings and is owned by Mrs. Eulalia Goldsmith of Drexel Hill, Pa.

The chow contesting for the principal prize was Champion Far Land Thundergust from the kennels of Mrs. William Macfarland of Camden, N. J. The big black fellow tallied his sixty-second breed triumph and his twenty-sixth among the nonsporting entrants.

Fifty-six breeds were benched, and cocker spaniels, with 36, topped all others in numbers. The best cooker was a comparative newcomer, Robinhurst Hinda, an attractive buff bitch belonging to the Windholme Kennels of Harry T. Peters Jr. of Islip, L. I.

In the children's handling classes Clifford Nagle of New Brunswick and Miss Joan Saphier of New York won.

Cunningham Defeats Fenske

N.Y. Herald Tribune

CHICAGO, March 26—Glenn Cunningham, the old master of the milers, proved it again tonight before a roaring crowd of 10,000 at the Chicago Daily News relays by conquering his newest rival, sturdy Chuck Fenske, of Wisconsin, by about a foot after a steaming battle in the famous bankers' mile, in 4 minutes 9.9 seconds.

Cunningham, cagy and track-wise, remained off the pace through ten of the eleven laps, and had to turn on every ounce of pressure in the final circuit to pass the brilliant Badger youngster.

Gene Venzke, of Penn, staged a brisk finish to take third place from the fading Jimmy Smith, Indiana Negro. The first quarter went in 62 seconds, the half-mile in 2:06 and three-quarters in 3:08. It was Cunningham's fifteenth triumph of his greatest indoor season, and his eleventh mile in better than 4:10.

Jimmy Herbert, New York University Negro, tied his own indoor mark of 1 minute 11.1 second in winning the 600-yard run.

The Violet flyer jumped away to a short lead in the opening strides and held on to square accounts with Charles Beetham, of the New York Curb Exchange and former Ohio State star, who conquered Herbert here last year in a stirring race.

Herbert headed Beetham by a stride through most of the journey and added another yard in the drive to the tape. Herbert's time matched his achievement in New York March 12. Dick Squire, of Ohio State, was third, about three yards back of Beetham.

Ben Johnson, fleet Negro from Columbia University, sped to victory in the 40-yard dash, finishing in 4.4 seconds.

Johnson lunged into the lead at the start and stayed there to beat Perrin Walker, of the New York A. C. former Georgia Tech star, and Eblace Peacock, of Temple University, in a blanket finish.

Allan Tolmich, former Wayne University star, took the opening section of the high hurdles series, scissoring over fifty yards of barriers in the brilliant time of 6.2 seconds.

Philippine Teams All Set For Debut At Koshien, May 7

(Special to The Japan Times)

KOBE, May 3—The visiting Philippine boxing and wrestling teams will meet their All-Japan opponents on May 7 for the first time at the Koshien park, according to the schedule announced by the Japan Amateur Wrestling and Boxing Association.

The Philippine teams are composed of five boxers and five wrestlers, the pick of the Philippines, and are led by Captain Geronimo T. Suva, acting manager and coach for both teams. Captain Suva was compelled to lead the teams due to the sudden death of their original manager and coach Benjamin Gallegos.

Mr. Gallegos was confined to his bed soon after the ship sailed from Hongkong, and died before reaching Nagasaki. His body was taken ashore at Nagasaki, and was taken back to Manila by the first steamer for that port by his widow, who was traveling with the team.

As the result of the sudden death of Mr. Gallegos, the members have lost a great deal of spirit.

According to their captain, the main object of this trip is to return the visit of the Japanese basketball and wrestling teams which recently toured the Philippines, and he declared that the teams are ready to meet the best in Japan, and whether they win or lose, they are here to show a style of real sportsmanship.

In case of rain the competition will fall on the following day, May 8.

The teams' members are as follows:

Boxing

Francisco Ferreria—Flyweight (National University).

Joaquin Paloma—Bantamweight (National University).

Gonzalo Cordova—Featherweight (Philippines army).

Alex Villacampo—Lightweight (Far Eastern University).

Victor Cabrera—Welterweight (Philippines army).

Wrestling

Melanio Florendo—Bantamweight (Far Eastern University).

Salvador Luna—Featherweight (Gallegos Club).

Silvano Bernabe—Lightweight (Gallegos Club).

Nicolas Arcales—Welterweight (University of Philippines).

The Oldest English School in the World

Older than the House of Commons, older than the Lord Mayor, older than the Throne, older than the nation itself, is the Kings' School in Canterbury, England, founded in 598 by St. Augustine himself, apostle of the English and Archbishop of Canterbury. It was refounded in 1541 by King Henry VIII, after whom it was named the Kings' School.

Kings' School acually antedates by more than 800 years the famous education statute of England proclaimed in 1406 to the effect "that every man and woman have a right to set their son or daughter to take learning at any school that pleaseth them within the realm."

The Young First Sergeant

John B. Wooten of Atlanta, Georgia, left grammar school at the age of 14, before he even completed the seventh grade, enlisting in the 11th U.S. Cavalry at Fort Ogelthorpe, Ga. He gave his age as 18. He was honorably discharged in December 1918, when he was just past 15. Then in April 1920, he re-enlisted in the 7th Engineers, was made a Sergeant at the age of 16, and promoted to First Sergeant before he was 18—or before he was legally old enough for military service.

$100,000 Match Race Of Seabiscuit, War Admiral On

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 10—The proposed $100,000 match race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, current rulers of the American turf, moved a step nearer realization yesterday when Charles F. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, accepted the conditions set forth for the projected contest at Belmont Park in the Fall.

Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission, who has been handling negotiations, received a favorable reply from Mr. Howard yesterday by telephone from San Francisco. Since Samuel D. Riddle, owner of War Admiral, already has accepted, the stage for the race is set.

Whitney Message Received

All that remains now is to receive definite approval fror the Westchester Racing Association, which controls the Belmont track. Action by that body is expected soon, for Cornelus V. Whitney, one of the important stockholders in the association, wired Mr. Swope yesterday that he wanted a special meeting of the directors to be held Tuesday to decide on the race.

In compliance with Mr. Whitney's request, Joseph E. Widener, president of the association, has called the meeting. Mr. Widener has not been well and it is doubtful if he will be able to attend. A keen advocate of the proposed match, he has authorized Mr. Swope to act for him in the negotiations.

However, both Mr. Widener and Mr. Swope have made it clear from the outset that final approval depended on Mr. Whitney's attitude. For the present, that is where the matter must rest.

Statement by Swope

In a statement issued from the Racing Commission offices yesterday, Mr. Swope said:

"If Mr. Whitney wishes the match race for Belmont, he can have it. I suggested the race and succeeded in getting the agreement of Mr. Riddle and Mr. Howard. The amount was set by Mr. Howard, who had received several offers of a match, one in especial coming from Arlington Park, Chicago.

"Joseph E. Widener, president of Belmont, was eager for the match and asked me to represent him. He made it plain that the undertaking was to receive the cooperation and support of Mr. Whitney and this point has been made clear in the statements given out.

"I have no doubt of Mr. Whitney's good faith in asking for a meeting of the directors, although, on the other hand, I have no doubt that the directorate would affirm any action taken by Mr. Widener and supported by Mr. Whitney.

"I have notified Mr. Widener, who is in Philadelphia, of Mr. Whitney's request. It's up to Mr. Whitney and the directors. The race is theirs for New York to have if Mr. Whitney and they want it. There is nothing more for me to do. I hope that the best match in years may not be lost to us."

126 Pounds for Each

The conditions, which call for the race to be held at Belmont between Sept. 15 and Oct. 1 over the mile-and-a-quarter route with each horse carrying 126 pounds, were accepted without qualifications by Mr. Howard in his telephone conversation with Mr. Swope.

However, the owner of Seabiscuit said he would prefer to have the stall gate, to which his horse is accustomed, used at the start rather that the walk-up start be used. Mr. Riddle made his acceptance Friday.

When informed of this by Mr. Swope, Mr. Riddle said he would cause no difficulties by insisting that the walk-up barrier be used.

The delay in communicating with Mr. Whitney was due to the fact that he has been away on a fishing trip. The Belmont Park directors who will decide on the race, are, in addition to C. V. Whitney and Mr. Widener, George H. Bull, Henry W. Bull, John E. Cowdin, John Hay Whitney and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

Tokyo To Erect Statue Of Kano At Komazawa; His Death Is Mourned

A bronze statue of Prof. Jigoro Kano, member of the International Olympic Committee, who died aboard the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Hikawa Maru yesterday morning en route from Seattle, will be erected at the foot of the giant memorial tower planned for the main Olympic Stadium to be constructed at Komazawa.

This decision was taken Wednesday afternoon at a special meeting of Mayor Itta Kobashi and officials of the Tokyo Municipality as a tribute to the meritorious services of Professor Kano with respect to the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940. Formal action on the plan was to be taken this afternoon at the meeting of the Municipal Olympic Committee.

"Father of the Tokyo Olympic Games" is expected to be the inscription on the statue.

Funeral services for Professor Kano, who was homeward bound from Cairo where he was chief of the Japanese delegation to the meeting of the International Olympic Committee and was within three days of his destination at Yokohama when death overtook him, will be held jointly under the auspices of the Kodokan, judo organization of which he was the founder and president, the Olympic Organizing Committee, the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation of which he was honorary president, and the Tokyo Higher Normal School of which he was honorary professor. The date has not yet been set.

Services Aboard Ship

Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary-general, and the entire staff of the Olympic Organizing Committee will meet the Hikawa Maru Friday afternoon, and before the body of Professor Kano on the "A" deck, will hold services to pay their respects.

Professor Kano's death was regretted throughout Tokyo Wednesday, particularly in the light that the world will be unable to accord him appropriate honors at the time of the Olympic Games two years hence.

Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, chairman of the Olympic Organizing Committee and a member of the International Olympic Committee, said:

"Words cannot express my sorrow over Mr. Kano's death. From the fact that we entreated him to go to the Cairo meeting in my place, despite his advanced age, I am at a loss how best to offer an excuse. I can only express my appreciation for the great work he did at the Cairo session."

Count Michimasa Soyejima, the other Japanese member of the International Olympic Committee, said:

"I have known Professor Kano from the time I was 13 years old. I had not been going to school up to then because of a sickly constitution. My father became a member of the peerage then and I entered the Peers' School. Professor Kano then was an inspector of the school and in charge of the students as well. I remember that I failed once in both English and arithmetic and Professor Kano scolded me. When I returned from abroad in 1894, he invited me to dinner and we reminisced about my school days. I was embarrassed when he jokingly referred to my marks in school. Our fields of activity differed and I saw little of him after that.

Asked To Be I.O.C. Member

"In 1934 while I was in Riga, I heard of the death of Dr. Seichi Kishi, then president of the Japanese Amateur Athletic Federation and a member of the International Olympic Committee. Two or three months after my return to Japan, Professor Kano said he wished to see me, and I met him at the Tokyo Club. He urged me to succeed Dr. Kishi as a member of the International Olympic Committee. And I consented to do so. So it was that I attended the I.O.C. meeting which followed at Athens for the first time as a representative of Japan.

"Professor Kano was a member of the I. O. C. since 1910, and in such capacity, he worked tirelessly for the promotion of sports. He was also first president of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation. In fact, he has been the great benefactor of the sports world. The only time I was together with Professor at an I. O. C. meeting was at Berlin in 1936.

"Professor Kano's contribution to the Olympic Games is a great one, but the English think that his founding of judo and his development to its world-wide position today is an even greater accomplishment.

"I am unable to express my sorrow over Professor Kano's death. My one thought is that had he lived two years longer and seen the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo, he would have undoubtedly been very happy."

Ryozo Hiranuma, vice-president of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation and one of the most prominent figures in Japan's amateur sports, said:

"I am shocked at the report of the death of Professor Kano, who was always in the best of health. Knowing him as I do, I am sure that he had succeeded in his mission to the Cairo meeting, and that to the very end of his life he had been working in the interests of sports. I knew him from the time I was a student at Keio and took up judo."

Japan-Canada Davis Cup Match To Open On July 29 Or 30

Nagai Suggested To Succeed Kano As I.O.C. Member

Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary general of the Olympic Organizing Committee, is expected to be nominated as successor to Professor Jigoro Kano, who died Wednesday morning aboard the Hikawa Maru three days from Yokohama, as a member of the International Olympic Committee.

An emergency meeting of the Olympic Organizing Committee was held Wednesday afternoon on the question of the vacancy, which it believes, must be filled as soon as possible because of the 12th Olympic Games only two years hence. Nomination of Dr. Nagai was unanimous.

Formal request to the International Olympic Committee for the appointment of Dr. Nagai will be made in the near future after formal approval of Prince Iyesato Tokugawa and Count Michimasa Soyejima, the two other members of the I. O. C., will have been obtained.

Dr. Nagai, who was formerly Japanese Ambassador to Germany, attended the recent meeting of the I. O. C. at Cairo along with Professor Kano. He has all the qualification desired by the I. O. C. He speaks several languages, besides Japanese fluently, is in the prime of his life, and is secretary general of the Olympic Organizing Committee.

Brundage Mourns Death Of Kano

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, May 4—Warm sympathy was expressed by Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, at the sudden death early this morning of Professor Jigoro Kano, member of the International Olympic Committee and one of the most prominent leaders of Japanese sports circles, aboard the N.Y.K. liner Hikawa Maru en route back to Japan from Cairo.

"The sudden death of Professor Kano was a tragic news for myself and also for amateur sportsdom which lost one of its true friends," said Mr. Brundage. "I always regarded him highly because of his vision and integrity. He worked unceasingly to get Japan the 1940 Olympic Games and Japan must now be mourning his death deeply."

Recalling that the deceased Japanese sports leader was honored and respected by all who knew him, Mr. Brundage stressed that Professor Kano was largely responsible for bringing Japan to the forefront of international sportsdom. "I knew Kano at Stockholm twenty-five years ago leading a few athletes from Japan whose team became in 1936 one of the largest among fifty nations.

"At Los Angeles in 1932," recalled Mr. Brundage, "the Japanese Olympic team won the admiration of both athletes and spectators by performances and modesty reflecting the personality of their leaders."

"Kano was a sportsman to the last moment," he added.

Proofreaders Find Baseball No Fun

WASHINGTON, April 5—Baseball may be the great American game to lots of folks, but to lots of proofreaders it's no fun at all.

This year's rookie crop, a study of training camp rosters showed today, ranks with the best in the alphabetic big leagues. Among the super-tongue-twisters are:

Joseph Victor Lawrence Krakauskas—Washington Senators.

Julius Cisar—who's going to provide some arguments—Brooklyn Dodgers.

Leslie William Tietje—back in the league again after giving the spellers a year's rest—St. Louis Browns.

Outfielder Leo William Nonnenkamp—how many N's?—Boston Red Sox.

Pitcher William Ehrensberger—spelled with four E's—Phillies.

Robert E. Uhle—ah, another Uhle in baseball—Chicago White Sox.

Cannonball Heintzelman—El or Le?—the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lou Vezilich—another one for the St. Louis printers—playing for the Cardinals.

Proofreaders can always be proud of Pete Appleton, however. Before he came to the Senators he was Peter Jablanowski.

Pro Football Rules Are Changed To Curb Out-Of-Bounds Kickers

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, April 10—Professional football put a strap to its out-of-bounds kickers today as the National League Rules Committee made five changes in playing regulations.

The principal revision was that kick-offs out of bounds shall cause the ball to be put into play on the receiving team's 45-yard line, instead of the 35-yard marker as previously.

In addition, the committee instructed official league scorers to keep a record of all punts originating inside the 40-yard line which go out of bounds. From this compilation the committee will vote next year whether all such punts should be ruled touchbacks and put in play on the 20-yard line.

Reason for Opposition

Opposition to out-of-bounds kicks developed because most coaches believed they restricted the offensive possibilities of the game.

Many instances of deliberate out-of-bounds kick-offs were cited during the meeting and the committee expressed the opinion the new rule putting the ball in play nearly at midfield would limit this.

The committee also said the coaches felt it was not a difficult feat for any league punter to boot the ball out of bounds inside the 20-yard line if he has to kick only 25 or 30 yards. No change is contemplated on punts originating outside the 40-yard stripe.

Summary of Other Changes

Other rules changes made were:

Any two players withdrawn from a game during the fourth period may reenter once. (It is intended to prevent an injured player remaining in a game when he should be relieved and was founded on a specific instance in Washington when Ed Janowski, although hurt, continued playing because substitute Clark Hinkle could not return.)

All penalties against the defensive team within the 10-yard line shall be one-half the distance to the goal line. (Present rule applies only to offside penalties.)

The referee is empowered to penalize 15 yards for deliberate roughing of a forward passer after the ball has left his hands. (Caused by tendency to give Sammy Baugh and Arnold Herber, in particular, a "bouncing around.")

A forward pass incomplete in the end zone shall be ruled a touchback only on fourth down. If the incomplete pass on fourth down originated outside the 20-yard line, the defensive team shall be given the ball at the point the play originated.

The rules committee includes George Halas, Chicago Bears, chairman; Steve Owen, New York Giants; Bert Bell, Philadelphia Eagles; George (Potsy) Clark, Brooklyn Dodgers, and Earl (Curly) Lambeau, Green Bay Packers.

After the meeting club representatives engaged in a trading session, with Pittsburgh emerging as the David Harum by figuring in four deals.

Gildea Sent to Rams

The Pirates agreed to send John Gildea, regular right halfback and punter for two seasons, to Cleveland in exchange for Tackle Joe Maras, Duquesne University captain, who was drafted by the Rams.

Then Pittsburgh completed two separate deals with Green Bay. On sends Ed Brett, former Washington State end, to the Packers for Walt Bartanen, 265-pound tackle, who divided last season between Green Bay and St. Louis. The other swapped two draftees, Center Pat McCarty of Notre Dame and end Ray King of Minnesota for the Packers' Charles (Buckets) Goldenberg, a 223-pound guard and blocking back, and Chester (Swede) Johnson, a fullback.

New York and Pittsburgh exchanged draft rights in the other transaction—the Giants giving Ted Doyle, Nebraska tackle, for Hugh Wolf, University of Texas fullback.

Besides members of the rules committee, the meeting was attended by Art Rooney and John Lipscomb, Homer Harshman and Buzz Wetzel of Cleveland and Wellington Mara of the Giants.

Yale Turns Back Springfield, 7-2

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 11—Yale today displayed batting power and nearly perfect fielding to beat Springfield College, 7—2, in opening its fifteenth baseball season under Joe Wood's coaching.

Albert Alter, sophomore second baseman who got two hits and had six faultless fielding chances, including participation in both double plays executed by the Elis, vied for the star's role with Eddie Collins Jr., who made three hits and did some dazzling base running.

Monroe Jubitz, Yale's starting twirler, was withdrawn after two innings, and Gordon Hoover yielded only three singles the remainder of the game. Jubitz had allowed one hit.

Springfield was first to score, getting a run in the third inning. Knox took first on interference by Catcher Wargo, went to second when Fowle walked and to third on Tracy's sacrifice, finally scoring on Ace Clark's fly to center.

The Blue tied the count in its half of the frame when Collins singled to center, stole second, advanced on an out and came in on Hall's poor throw to first.

Yale went 2 up in the fifth, Collins again starting the drive, this time with a double. This blow along with Greg Doonan's one-base hit and Reed's wild throw accounted for two runs. Singles by Alter, Wargo, Collins and Marcus and a pass to Doonan produced four tallies in the sixth.

Springfield made its second run in the eighth when Tracy singled and went all the way around on a pass to Clerk and an out.

Dear Mr. Vaccari,

I have the honour to express to you my hearty respect and gratitude for your worthy work "Complete Course of Japanese-Conversation Grammar" and its "Supplement." It was really a great joy to me to find in these books an easier and smoother way to attain success in my teaching Japanese language here. Your books have especially delighted my students because of the treatment of the Japanese grammar in a similar way to that used in teaching European languages as adopted by you in your volumes, and in this respect, above all, your method is highly estimated.

Your Grammar and Supplement are really the best things for foreigners to master the Japanese language without discouraging themselves.

....this new manual is practical and useful, and what Count Kabayama in his prefactory note calls its "human method" will make it acceptable to the growing number of English students of Japanese. When the student has mastered its sixty lessons he will have completed the equivalent of an ordinary Japanese school education and will be at home in the language and able to proceed to higher things.

A feature of the book is its transliteration with Chinese characters of every Japanese example rendered in English spelling so that the student is gradually familiarized with the appearance of the language as well as with its sound.

All World Mourns Passing Of Kano; I.O.C. Members Pay Tribute To His Work

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, May 4—The New York Herald Tribune today gave prominence to news of the sudden death of Professor Jigoro Kano early this morning aboard the N.Y.K. liner Hikawa Maru and paid a 50-line tribute with a photograph to the dead leader of Japanese sports circles.

Professor Kano, who was born in Japan in 1860, the paper recalled, organized a society primarily designed to educate the Japanese as early as 1901. The journal also pointed out that Professor Kano, who weighed only 105 pounds, successfully floored an American reporter weighing 200 pounds when he recently visited here as an exponent of jujitsu.

Assertion Holds Good

With regard to the recent Cairo session of the International Olympic Committee, at which he represented Japan, the New York Herald Tribune stressed that Professor Kano's assertion regarding the 1940 Olympics still holds good despite the present China situation because sports are independent of politics.

Frederic R. Coudert, American member of the I. O. C. and who was a close friend of Professor Kano during the Cairo meeting, meanwhile said he was greatly dismayed by news of the sudden death of the Japanese sports leader.

"Professor Kano's sudden death," he said, "is a loss not only to Japan but also to all world athletics. All members of the I. O. C. had high regard for him, who was a courteous and kindly gentleman."

William Hammond, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union, also expressed astonishment at the suddenness of the death of Professor Kano, who was seemingly in good health a fortnight ago when he met him here. Professor Kano, he recalled, "had a calm and excellent judgment and good ideas."

It was learned that the American Olympic Committee is preparing a most cordial telegram of condolence, which will be dispatched tonight.

Garland Grieved

William Garland, American member of the International Olympic Committee, also said that he was greatly grieved by the death of Professor Kano, whom "all loved and respected."

"His character and devotion to the Olympic ideals were truly outstanding," he said, "It's tragic that he won't witness the fulfilment of his fondest dream, the holding of Olympic Games at Tokyo."

Dr. Von Halt Grieved

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, May 4—Dr. Ritter von Halt, German member of the International Olympic Committee, today said he was awfully grieved over the sudden death of Professor Jigoro Kano early this morning aboard the Japanese liner Hikawa Maru.

Professor Kano, who was Japanese member of the I.O.C. and one of the most prominent leaders of Japanese sports circles, Dr. von Halt recalled, rendered great service to international sportsdom, especially the Olympic Games, to which his death must be a great loss.

Dr. von Halt further declared that Professor Kano has been one of his closest friends ever since the 1928 Olmpics at Amsterdam, at which he made his acquaintance. He recalled that he worked in cordial cooperation with Professor Kano at the recent Cairo session of the I.O.C.

Burghley Mourns Kano's Death

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 4—Paying a high tribute to the service rendered by the deceased Japanese sports leader to International Olympic Games, Lord Burghley, British member of the International Olympic Committee, today expressed cordial sympathy at the sudden death of Professor Jigoro Kano, Japanese member of the I.O.C. and one of the most prominent figures in Japan's sports circles, aboard the Japanese liner Hikawa Maru early this morning.

"Father" to Sugimura

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, May 4—Expressing heartfelt sympathy at the sudden death of Professor Jirogo Kano early this morning aboard the Japanese liner Hikawa Maru en route back to Japan from Cairo, Ambassador Yotaro Sugimura, Japan's most sports-loving diplomat and master of jujitsu, declared that Japanese sportsmen lost their father.

"Professor Kano," said Ambassador Sugimura, "lived with me during his recent stay here after the Cairo Conference of the International Olympic Committee, at which he represented Japan. He called me his son and I treated him like my father, eating and sleeping together."

"I found him a little tired," the Japanese Ambassador continued, "but I did not expect such sudden death."

"With Professor Kano's death," Ambassador Sugimura concluded, "Japan lost an unreplaceable leader both in sport and cultural worlds. With him Japan was able to rise to the present high level in international sports."

Ambassador Sugimura sent a telegram of condolence to the Kano family in Tokyo immediately following receipt of news of Professor Kano's death.

Francois Pietri, president of the French Olympic Committee, meanwhile paid a high tribute to Professor Kano's activities at the Cairo conference of the I.O.C. to retain the 1940 Olympiad for Japan.

"He worked hard, too hard at Cairo, where there were a number of both important and trivial difficulties, to manage to bring the Olympics to Tokyo, and he overcame all the difficulties almost by himself," Mr. Pietri said.

"I knew Kano for a long time and he was one of my best friends," he continued, "when I saw him here last time he looked so weary that I advised him to stay a little more to rest. But he smiled a Japanese smile and went away. I keep even now his image in the last interview."

Riho Kano, 26-year old son of the deceased Japanese sports leader who is working here for the South Manchuria Railway Company, said he was greatly shocked by the sudden and unexpected death of his father. He had just sent a letter to his home in Japan today believing his father already back in Tokyo, he said.

Funeral Services For Kano Will Be Held At Kodokan Monday

Funeral services for Professor Jigoro Kano, member of the International Olympic Committee, who died aboard the Hikawa Maru Wednesday morning from an acute attack of pneumonia, will be held at the Kodokan hall at Suidobashi, where he for many years taught the various holds and throws of judo, beginning at 10 a.m. next Monday under the joint auspices of the Kodokan, the Meikeikai, the Olympic Organizing Committee, and the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation, according to Shinto rites.

The body of the late Professor Kano was expected to arrive at Yokohama at 3 p.m. today aboard the Hikawa Maru. The widow, Dr. Hiroshi Shimomura, president of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation, Ryozo Hiranuma, vice-president of the same Federation, and Dr. Takashi Go, chairman of the athletic committee of the Olympic Organizing Committee, were to go off port.

The body was to be taken by automobile direct to the Kano residence at Koishikawa.

Harvard Oarsmen Highly Impressive

By ROBERT F. KELLEY

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 6—The current edition of Harvard's varsity crew put in an impressive bit of rowing tonight at the end of the hardest day's work it has done this season.

It is vacation time here and the men turned out twice, as they will each day this week. Flat water with very little wind, conditions which have not prevailed for days, brought a lot of mileage and the men finished tonight with about fourteen miles under their belts. And they looked well as they did it. There is little doubt that this crew will measure up well to the fine Harvard eight which last June set the record at 20:02 for the upstream four miles at New London.

The crew today, of course, was not the one that finished last season, but it is a crew which is farther along than it was at this time last year.

There is notable improvement outboard, despite the appearance of occasional faults, and several of the individuals in the eight apparently have improved over last year. Most notable of these is Jim Chace, the captain and stroke. A lot of the time last year the port side beat Chace into the water, but they were not doing it tonight. For a big man—Chace is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 190—he handles himself extremely well.

Cleaner Blade Work

The improvement in the crew is one that might be normally expected. Last year at this time the men were starting under a new coach; they were thinking hard about the change from their old stroke. This year there is an obviously easier mental attitude and this is reflected in cleaner blade work. It is a good crew now and one that may develop into one of the best in recent Harvard history.

This is so despite the fact that the No. 7, the No. 2, the No. 4, the bow and the coxswain from the winning Crimson eight of last June have left college. The final seating has not been settled as yet. There are one or two doubtful places in the crew, but the visitor here realizes that Harvard rowing is on a sound footing.

The improvement in the crew's mental attitude is reflected also in the coach. Last year Tom Bolles had never sent a varsity eight to the starting line. This time he is starting after having proved himself a real coach and the set-up is much easier. Bolles is liked by the men who work for him, he likes his position, and Harvard crews from now on are likely to be among the leaders each season.

Power Well Applied

Tonight there were faults which displayed themselves at times, but few that lasted throughout each stroke and thus could be labeled chronic. Most of the men did things the right way a good part of the time. The No. 7 was cutting it off a bit at times at the finish and sometimes washing out, but not all the time. The No. 6 was occasionally missing water at the catch. The No. 2 was sometimes awkward inboard, though he sent a boiling puddle aft from his oar blade.

Inboard the men are sometimes not so handsome, but outboard there is unmistakable evidence of power well applied.

In today's boating the crew rowed with Chace, of course, at stroke. Behind him was John Clark, who rowed No. 4 in the varsity last year until the departure for Red Top. Then came Doug Erickson, at the same place where he rowed last year, and John Gardner, also at the same place as in 1937.

Walter Kernam, No. 6 with last year's freshmen, was at No. 4. Dud Talbot was at No. 3, where he was last year, and the No. 2 was John Richards, No. 4 of last year's freshmen. At bow was Bill Dearborn, No. 7 in last year's jayvees. E. White was steering this evening.

Three Are 6 Feet 4

In their present boating they weight a shade over 180 and only one man in the boat is under 6:03 in height. They are remarkably matched in height, three being 6:04, four 6:03 and one an even 6 feet.

The season starts April 30 against M. I. T. and Rutgers and there follows an extremely active season, with the Compton Cup race against Princeton, M. I. T. and Syracuse at Princeton May 7; Cornell, Syracuse and Tech here May 14; the Adams Cup event with Navy and Penn at Annapolis May 21 and Columbia at New York May 28 before the Yale race June 24.

Harvey Love has three good-looking freshman crews in action and Bert Haines is working with a full quota of snappy-looking lightweights. Harvard rowing is distinctly impressive at this time this year.

Futabayama Tops All Wrestlers In New Rankings

Grand Champion Tamanishiki, who has long held the seat of "yokozuna" or grand champion on the "East" side in the official sumo rankings, has been replaced by handsome Futabayama, grand champion, who up to the end of the tourney last January had hung up the unprecedented record of 53 victories, according to the rankings announced by the Japan Sumo Association Thursday for the "Summer" tournament which will be held for 13 days beginning May 11.

Tamanishiki now is the head man on the "West" side, the post that had been assigned to Futabayama for the last two seasons. In other words, it is taken to mean that Futabayama is the undisputed champion of them all among the professional wrestlers.

Outstanding Changes

The other outstanding change is the ranking of Mayedayama, 25, as "ohseki" or champion on the East side. He was promoted because of his sterling performance in the January tournament.

Other salient changes include the promotion of Banjaku, he of the great protruding belly, and Nayoroiwa, understudy of Futabayama, to "sekiwake," rank immediately below champion. Taikyuzan, Tamanoumi and Ryogoku, who held this rank, were demoted to "mayegashira," or the general first ranking circle. Haguroyama, another stable mate of Futabayama, was elevated to "komusubi," which is immediately above "mayegashira." Ayanobori was made the other "komusubi," a post which he had held previously but lost because of a poor showing from illness.

Wrestlers are ranked in the "mayegashira" list according to their performance. The new rankings follow:

East Side	West Side
Taikyuzan	Tamanoumi
Itsutsushima	Ryogoku
Hatasegawa	Shachinosato
Wakashima	Kaikozan
Takekabuto	Kasagiyama
Ohshio	Asahigawa
Kyushuzan	Komanosato
Dewanohana	Tsurugamine
Dewaminato	Tomoegata
Kojimakawa	Akinoumi
Fujigadake	Ayanishiki
Toshuzan	Kaneminato
Takanobori	Ryuozan
Kashimanada	Aobayama
Onami	Genjiyama
Bochozan	Katsuragawa
Ayawaka	Tsukuhamine
Banshinzan	Yamatonishiki

Through a ruling adopted several years ago, the competition is not confined to matches between the two sides. The bouts are picked so that a wrestler meets practically all the fighting opponents on either side.

U.S. Golf Champ Takes Position As Braidburn Pro

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 12—Strapping Ralph Guldahl, holder of both the United States and Western open championships, yesterday became a full-fledged representative of the metropolitan golf district.

Having previously signed a contract to act as professional at the Braidburn Country Club in Madison, N. J., the 26-year-old Texan yesterday celebrated his seventh wedding anniversary by moving into a house on the New Jersey course, where he succeeds Jimmy Dante as pro.

It will be his first club connection in nearly three years, but under the terms of the contract Guldahl, now regarded as one of the world's outstanding players, will continue to campaign.

Will Play for District Title

One of his first appearances as a representative of the district will come when he plays in the metropolitan open championship May 12-14 at Fresh Meadow. He will defend his United States and Western titles and plans to play in the Professional Golfers Association, Canadian and several other tournaments.

Guldahl first came to public notice when he finished only a stroke behind Johnny Goodman in the United States open championship of 1933 at the North Shore Club, Chicago. Overtaking the Omaha amateur there after being nine strokes behind with only fifteen more holes to play, he missed a tie by failing to sink a four-foot putt.

Having missed his chance there, he was hardly heard of for two years. After losing his game, he tried his hand at several other lines of work, only to return to golf and become one of the game's top-notchers. The turning point of his career came when he finished sixth in the True Temper open at Detroit in 1936 and won $240.

Holds U. S. Open Record

His ambition fired by that feat, he started back on the road to fame with a vengeance, winning the Western open with a score of 274, one of the best scoring feats of the year, and finally winding up the season with victories in the Miami Biltmore and Augusta open tourneys, which put him near the top among money-winners.

Last year he broke Tony Manero's record of 282 in the national open, setting the mark at 281 at Oakland Hills; repeated in the Western open and finished close on Harry Cooper's heels in the race for top prize-winning honors and for the Vardon Trophy, emblematic of scoring honors.

Meiji Is Favored To Down Rikkyo Over The Week End

Meiji, champions of the Spring and Fall seasons last year of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league, is a slight favorite to down Rikkyo in their Spring series Saturday and Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

In Southpaw Shimizu, Meiji probably has the best moundsman in the league. So far this season, he has shown a tendency to be wild. But if he will have regained his control by Saturday afternoon, Rikkyo will be in for plenty of trouble. His indrop to right hand hitters breaks sharply and is difficult to hit.

Saigo to Pitch

Pitted against him will be Right Hander Saigo, Rikkyo's ace twirler. He gave a nice performance against Hosei two weeks ago, and there will be no surprise if he hooks up a pitchers' duel with Shimizu.

Meiji is a bit stronger in the infield, because of the combination of Suglura at shortstop and Kameda at second. But Meiji has been suffering this season without a catcher to fill the gap left by the graduation of Captain Sakurai. Both Kamibayashi and Tsukakoshi are playing their first season in the "Big Six" league and have tended to be excited, falling on their pegs to second. But Tsukakoshi has the makings of a good backstop and should fill the post creditably before the end of the season. As for Rikkyo, it has a veteran in Machida.

In Ito, Kato and Captain Yoshida, Meiji has a heavier hitting outfield. It will be remembered that Kato's single and then a triple by Ito brought in three runs in the last half of the ninth to down Keio 3 to 2 two weeks ago.

Rikkyo, however, has shown plenty of fight this season, possessing the ability to come from behind to win, and the game over the weekend should give the fans a treat.

Hosei Heavy Favorite

Hosei is a heavy favorite to beat Tokyo Imperial, perennial holders of the cellar position, in the number of the twinbills. But Hosei is not likely to take any chance and will most likely send husky Akaneya, left hander, to the mound. Tokyo Imperial (Teidai) seems unable to hit left handers.

British Squad Set As Nine Are Added

N.Y. Times

LONDON, April 11—The Royal and Ancient Golf Club, often accused of favoring "country club" talent, today named an Irish bartender, a St. Andrews cigar store clerk and a Welsh soldier among the nine selected to complete the British Walker Cup squad.

The squad of twenty-five will play May 5-6 for places on the team which will meet the United States at St. Andrews, June 3-4. The British amateurs never have beaten the Americans in the international competition.

The bartender is J. Fitzsimmons, present Irish amateur titleholder who serves at the Portrush Golf Club in County Antrim. Andy Bowie is the clerk and St. Andrews amateur champion the past three years. A. A. Duncan, a member of the Welsh Guards, holds the British Army title and is rated one of the best putters in the game.

Just to make the selection as democratic as possible, the committee even chose a left-hander. He is Ivor Somerville Thomas of Liverpool, who reached the sixth round of the British amateur championship in 1933.

The other additions, made after a storm of protest by London sports writers who accused the selection committee of ignoring some of the country's best prospects, were Harry Bentley, D. H. R. Martin, James Lindsay, W. R. S. McLeod and Eric McRuvie.

Bentley, German amateur champion, won the English championship in 1936 and played in the Walker Cup matches of 1934 and 1936. McRuvie also played on the Walker Cup team in 1932 and 1934. Lindsay and McLeod both have played on Scottish international teams.

Action by Tolley in Doubt

In the trials the players will be divided into threesomes for the first day of play over thirty-six holes. For the second day, they will be paired for regular match play.

There is still no indication whether Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion, will resign from the selection committee to try for a place on the team.

6 Players In Training For England's Team In Davis Cup Play This Year

By F. R. BURROW

Observer

LONDON.—Of our victories Davis Cup team of two years ago—Perry, Austin, Hughes, and Tuckey—none remains. Of last years team, Austin, Tuckey, Hare and Wilde, Wilde is the sole survivor. Round him—for his doubles play ensures him a place in this year's team—a new side to be built. This is no easy task for the Selection Committee of the L.T.A., but they have taken the job in hand and put six men into training, both on the courts and off, from whom, presumably, the four who alone can play in a Davis Cup match will finally be picked. These six are F. H. D. Wilde, D. W. Butler, D. McPhail, R. A. Shayes, C. M. Jones, and E. J. Filby. Filby is the youngest of the party by about four years; Butler, the eldest, is twenty-eight.

At the moment there is only one "pair" in existence for the doubles match—Butler and Wilde, who played a good deal together at the end of last season with some success. Whether they are the best pair which can be constructed remains to be seen. Wilde is undoubtedy the cleverest and best of the lot, but he requires a partner who can finish off the rallies with powerful smashing, as Hare used to be able to do for him, and, for that matter, Tuckey last year. Butler suffers from the disadvantage of not having played in the class of tennis in which the ball is hit realy hard till a couple of years ago, and he has not, even yet, the killing power required in modern doubles.

It is a thousand pities that he and Shayes were not the two men sent to America last summer to represent this country; play on the fast American courts against their hardhitting players would have put fifteen on to Butler's game, and forced Shayes to concentrate; lack of concentration is almost his only failing, for he has all the strokes and is more likely to be a second Perry than any other of the six. There was a time, and a long time, when Perry, too, could not concentrate. Concentration only came to him after a long and bitter fight with himself, but it did come in the end, and then he became indeed the "strong man armed." So it may be with Shayes.

Special Training

Butler is not only very sound, with a good knowledge of the game and exceptionally quick-footed and fast about the court, but he likes more time to make his shots than a very hard-hitting opponent is likely to allow him on a fast grass court. Wilde, on the other hand, is the better pleased the faster the game: if Davis cup matches could be played on a wood floor he would be first string. On other surfaces he does not much care for singles; the double court gives him more scope for those skilfully-engineered coups which he has so often brought off against the best pairs in the world. McPhail, till last year, had played very little outside Scotland, but he showed that he had all the makings of a first-class player and well deserved the place given to him by the L. T. A. in their ranking list. It is unfortunate that at present he is on the injured list. Jones is probably the most thorough and painstaking of all our players; he is of the school of Wilding and Lacoste, but lacking the inspiration which carried them to the heights. He has the foundation; the superstructure has yet to be built. Filby is the "baby" of the party; he is only 21. But as Shayes might conceivably become a second Perry, Filby, though (as a table-tennis player naturally would be) reminiscent in some of his shots of Perry, could more nearly approximate to Austin if he took the trouble and cultivated a more cheerful outlook.

All these six are to have special training from Maskell, and, however the team may be eventually made up, they ought to be able to account for Rumania in the first round, as the match will be played in England (at Harrogate in the second week in May), and a young and untried side will not be subjected to the ordeal of traveling across Europe to play in Bucharest. But, presuming our men to win, there will be an almost equally long journey either to Prague or Zagreb, according to the result of Czechoslovakia's first round with Jugo-Slavia. And there, I imagine, our national interest in this year's Davis Cup will depart. And nothing would please me better than to be proved wrong.

A Wise Experiment

Some may be astonished that, while here are two or three other players at least in this country at the present moment who could be depended on to defeat most, if not all, of the selected six, none of them has been put into training. The reason is, doubtless, that most of those better players are past their prime; the idea of the L.T.A. is to take some of the younger players who are almost bound to improve with the experience afforded them by international tennis, and who should be at their best in a year or two's time when we may have some chance of regaining the Cup. This policy of an experimental team of young players would appear to be a sound one. Only four out of the six can, in any case, form the team, and it is quite possible that one or two others, such as H. Billington and M. D. Deloford, might show such form during the next selection committee to consider that they have claims to inclusion. The present intention is, I understand, that during the Melbury tournament the six probables shall play a series of matches—a sort of "American"—among themselves, in order to give the selectors some idea of their relative singles form. This, however, may not turn out to be conclusive so far as making up the team is concerned: for example, if Wilde should happen to show a worse record in singles than four of the others, he could not in any case be left out as one of the doubles pair. These "trials" are seldom entirely satisfactory; all that can really be said for them is that they do afford a partial indication as to current form.

A Knotty Point

At the recent meeting of the International Federation, the Committee of Management decided to ask all federated nations to submit any "knotty points" as to the interpretation of the rules for consideration of the Federation, in order that they might be decided and collated. (It is rather a pity, by the way, that there is no "etiquette" of the game attached to the rules, as there is in the case of golf: an authoritative pronouncement with regard to some of the things a player should and should not do would be more than useful). But a "knotty point" arose at the meeting itself, which should take some solving. A prominent Austrian player, resident for a short time in Brazil, had, during his residence there, played against professionals, contrary to the rules of the I. F. Not having completed three years' residence in Brazil, he was still under the authority of his National (Austrian) Association, which alone had power to inflict the appropriate penalty on him. The Austrian Association had either not dealt with the case at all or, at any rate, it had not communicated its action to the I. F.

And now, Austria having ceased to exist as a separate nation, presumably the Austrian L. T. Association has ceased to exist also. Hence, there is apparently no authority capable of dealing with this particular player's infringement of the rules of the Federation. It will be interesting to see how this case is eventually dealt with. Presumably the player in question has now become a German; but whether the German L.T.A. can penalize him for something done while he was an Austrian is far from clear. An interesting situation.

City Committee Votes In Favor Of Komazawa As Site For Olympics

Formal approval of the Komazawa site for the construction of the main Olympic stadium for the 12th Olympic Games in 1940 was given by the Olympic Committee of the Municipality at its meeting Friday afternoon.

The committee will discuss the budget at its next meeting on Monday with the view to presenting it to the Municipal Assembly which is scheduled to meet either on May 15 or 16.

The total cost of the stadium, including the preparation of the athletic field, is estimated at ¥12,000,000. Seating capacity will be 100,000.

Johnson Greatest Pitcher Of All Time, Schacht Says

NEW YORK, April 5—Al Schacht, the baseball clown, is back from his annual tour of the training camps, and he still hasn't spotted that rookie pitcher who can throw a ball like Walter Johnson used to.

Every spring when Al makes the rounds of the camps, working out and lining up engagements for the season, he keeps watching the young pitchers, searching for that easy, flowing motion that made Johnson his idol. He's about decided now that he'll never find it.

Al, who was with the big Swede on the Washington club for many a year, clowns practically all the time except when he gets around to the subject of Johnson. Then he gets serious and sentimental all at once.

"Why do people keep talking about who was the greatest pitcher when anybody with any sense knows there was never one even close to Walter?" he asks. "Ask any man who ever tried to hit that fast ball of his. They'll tell you.

"When I look at some of these guys they call fast-ball pitchers these days it hands me a laugh. Why, Johnson threw a ball harder when he was loafing along behind a one-run lead than anybody ever has, and that includes Lefty Grove at his best."

None of which is news, precisely. Everybody has heard that Johnson could blaze them across so fast that on dull, cloudy days the batters didn't like to get within bat-length of the plate. But as time passes the phenomenal Johnson becomes only a legend to a new generation, so it is a little exciting to hear Schacht bring it back to life.

"Some days when Walter really felt like throwing that onion it was tough for the opposing team. They would just stand back and wave their bats until everybody, even Walter, was laughing. On days Johnson was due to pitch for us you could count on two or three members of the other team taking the day off. They didn't like to face him and you couldn't blame 'em.

"Funniest thing that ever happened was one day when our regular catcher got a split finger about the middle of a game and we put in a young fellow named Rip Williams to catch Johnson. Walt was pretty fast that day, and Billy Evans was calling strikes behind the plate.

"The first one went over Williams' shoulder and hit Evans an awful thump on his protector. An umpire in those days wasn't armored up like he is now. The second pitch also went right past Williams and cracked Evans square on the shin. Billy grabbed his shin and turned around and bawled out that the game was called on account of darkness. I'll swear he made it stick, too, and the sun wasn't even down."

Supposing Johnson in his prime were pitching for the present-day Yankees, how would he do?

"He would average about 30 wins and two losses a season," figured Al. "He couldn't possibly do worse than that."

The coffin of the late Prof. Jigoro Kano, member of the International Olympic Committee, who died Wednesday morning from an acute attack of pneumonia, in the main lounge of the Hikawa Maru which arrived late Friday afternoon from Seattle. The portrait of Professor Kano was done by a friend in Paris and it had never left his side. It was to have been a souvenir to his family of his trip to Cairo.

3,000 At Wharf To Pay Respects As Body Of Prof. Kano Arrives

Special To The Japan Times

YOKOHAMA, May 6—It was a solemn group of persons who waited on the pier this evening to pay their respects to the late Professor Jigoro Kano who died on board the N. Y. K. Hikawa Maru en route to Japan from Cairo where he had successfully fought to bring the 1940 Olympic Games to Tokyo and Sapporo in spite of the intense opposition of the representatives of several European nations.

Only Mrs. Sumako Kano, the widow, Fumimasa Kano, his son and heir, relatives and a small group of friends were permitted to board the ship. Among the notables present were Count Michimasa Soejima, Dr. Hiroshi Shimomura, Ryozo Hiranuma, Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, Dr. Takashi Go and Admiral Hyo Takarabe. On the pier about 3,000 persons waited for the body of the late Professor Kano to be taken off the boat and taken to the Kano residence at Koishikawa.

The coffin of the late Professor Kano draped in white was in the main lounge of the Hikawa over which was a large oil painting of Dr. Kano which he had done in Paris by D. Kondo. It was in this room where the mourners paid their respects to the spirit of Dr. Kano.

While waiting for the boat to dock, the representatives of the press were shown the last letter written by the late Professor Kano while in Paris to Count Soyejima. The contents were:

April 4, 1938, Paris.

My dear Count Soyejima:

I sincerely hope that this letter finds you in the best of health. Since I left Japan, I have been kept quite busy traveling from country to country. But now my mind is at ease because Japan has been awarded both the summer and the winter Olympic Games, however there now arises the problem of the Tokyo International Exposition which will be held during the same year as well as many other difficulties which must be overcome.

Yours respectfully,

JIGORO KANO.

P.S. April 8th. I have left Paris for Japan via the United States and expect to be back home early in May.

Baillet-Latour Sorry

Domei Tsushin

BRUSSELS, May 5—Sincere personal sorrow was voiced here today by Count de Baillet-Latour, chairman of the International Olympic Committee, over the sudden death early yesterday morning of Professor Jigoro Kano, Japanese member of the I.O.C., aboard the N.Y.K. liner Hikawa Maru en route back home from Cairo.

Paying high tribute to the achievements of the late leader of Japanese sportsdom, the I.O.C. chairman said that Professor Kano had been one of the most active members of the Committee since 1909 and had followed the deliberations of the Committee closely every year.

"I specially appreciated his noble life fully devoted to the highest form of sport. I am keeping an everlasting memory of the fights he won last year though he was already aged," he said.

"Unfortunately, Professor Kano did not realize his dream to attend the 1940 Olympiad to be held in Japan," he said, "However, his memory will remain alive for ever in Japanese sportsdom."

Ireland, Italy Tied In Opening Singles Of Davis Cup Match

Domei Tsushin

DUBLIN, May 5—The opening gun of the 1938 Davis Cup competitions was fired today when the Italian and Irish teams met for the initial day's play in the first round of the European Zone. The two singles matches played today were divided, Lyttleton-Rogers defeating the Italian ace Giorgio De Stefani and V. Canepele of Italy taking the measure of McVeagh of Ireland.

Lyttelton-Rogers, playing excellent tennis defeated De Stefani in four sets, 7-5, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2. Canapele dropped only two games in scoring over McVeagh in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2, 6-0. The doubles are scheduled for tomorrow.

Rules Are Changed By Court Coaches

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 6—The rules committee of the National Association of Basketball Coaches today applied two "brakes" to last season's "racehorse" game.

The committee increased to five the permissible number of timeouts for the college game and provided for optional use four ten-minute quarters instead of the usual twenty-minute halves.

The "three-second rule," used last season by National A. A. U. teams and recommended unanimously yesterday by the coaches, also was adopted.

Other rule changes approved included: optional use of a four-foot instead of a two-foot, out-of-bounds margin behind the face of backboards and barring of substitutions after a goal is made until the ball is back in play.

Outer Half Is Exempted

The outer half of the foul circle was exempted from present provisions of the "three-second" rule in the case of a player who does not have possession of the ball, bringing the collegiate regulations into accord with those of the A. A. U. The change eliminates last season's penalty for lingering in the area by players without the ball. The rule remains unchanged in regard to players having the ball.

For high school games, next season's rules on ties will make the overtime period a "sudden death" session. The first team to score 2 points, either by a field goal or two foul goals, will be the winner. However, should the teams play through the three-minute extra period with only 1 point being scored, the team making the point will be the victor. In addition, the time between the close of regulation time and the start of the overtime will be increased from one to two minutes. Officials also will be instructed to take a time out in the second and fourth quarters provided no time out has been called by either team during the first four minutes of play.

The practice of making substitutions during the brief interval between the scoring of a goal and putting the ball back in play, which the committee found in frequent use last season, will be banned next year. Unless one team has taken time out, substitutes and the scorer's horn must wait until play is resumed.

Tower Announces Changes

Oswald Tower of Andover, Mass., editor of the national basketball committee of the United States and Canada, who announced the changes, said the "brakes" were applied to allay the "apprehension of so many" that the game's increased speed was detrimental to the athletes.

"All our reports, however," Tower said, "and our studies and research showed that no harm had developed from the present speed of the game."

The additional time-out had been added, he said, to provide any necessary extra rest for the players.

The same object brought insertion of optional play by quarters for the colleges. Under the new rule, games played by quarters must have two-minute rest periods between the first and second and between the third and fourth quarters. The fifteen-minute half-time intermission was unchanged.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" --by Ripley

Avenge In Death

Tom Quick was the first white child born within the limits of the present Borough of Milford, Pennsylvania, and as a child he played with Indian children, learned their language, their skill as hunters, and also their savage cunning, in which he overmatched them later when he turned avenger. When about 20 years old, he saw his father murdered by Indians and from that day his life work was revenge. He vowed he would kill 100 Indian braves, and one by one they fell before him. It is recorded that they believed Tom Quick could not possibly miss an Indian with his rifle, and that they had no bullet deadly enough to kill him. His deathbed regret, as he lay ill with smallpox, was that he had killed only 99 Indians, but he killed the 100th in death when the Indian who dug up the body to get Tom Quick's scalp, contracted the disease and died.

Meiji Defeats Rikkyo, 4-1 For 5th Straight Victory; Hosei Routs Teidai, 10-0

Pitcher Saigo of Rikkyo had one bad inning—the third when he faltered to allow four runs—to spoil his great pitching against Meiji Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium. The result was that Meiji hung on to the lead to win by 4 to 1 and register its fifth straight victory in as many games to lead in the standings.

Southpaw Akaneya of Hosei checked Tokyo Imperial to one lone hit by Captain Imanaka in the seventh and Hosei won by 10 to 0 in the curtain-raiser of the doubleheader.

The rain that postponed the games on Saturday did not let up early Sunday morning but it stopped in time to allow the doubleheader to be staged. But heavy skies hung over the diamond to threaten a downpour at any time. The ground was wet and play afield was difficult.

Shimizu Starts for Meiji

Left Hander Shimizu started for Meiji on the mound but he was yanked out in favor of Kodama at the outset of the seventh when he began to show signs of weariness. Rikkyo had rallied to put over a run in the fifth inning. Kodama hurled airtight ball in the last three innings to live up to his reputation as the best relief pitcher in the circuit.

Meiji first threatened when it loaded the bags with only one away in the second inning. This happened when Sakata started off the session with a two bagger down the right field foul line. Saigo elected to walk Sugiura. Kamei flied out to left. Kameda lifted a short fly back of short. Yuki muffed it. Sakata was halfway between second and third and would have been forced out at third but Kitahara dropped the peg to the bag. Saigo, however, rose to the occasion and struck out the next two men, Mikoshiba and Shimizu, to retire the side.

But then came the third inning. Captain Yoshida flied out to right but Ito, who had tripled to win a ball game for Meiji against Keio not so long ago, came through with a three bagger to right field. And Kitazawa followed with a hit through third to bat in Ito. Sakata registered his second double of the day—a smash to left center—and Kitazawa romped the whole way home. Sugiura walked again. Kamei also walked, to clog the bases. Kameda struck out but Kitahara messed up Mikoshiba's grounder at second and both Sakata and Sugiura tallied.

Rikkyo scored its lone run in the fifth inning. Arimura Texas Leaguered to center. Saigo rifled a hit through third. Yuki walked on four straight balls to fill the bases. Kamibayashi was sent in to catch in place of Mikoshiba. Sakurai, batting for Fukumura, lined out to second, and Saigo who dashed out from second was doubled. With Machida at bat, Yuki was caught off first but while he was being run down, Arimura managed to beat out the throw to the plate. And that was Rikkyo's only run in the game.

Yutani Hit Hard

Teidai sent its best pitcher, Yutani, to the mound but Hosei had no mercy on him and pounched upon him for three runs in the first and four more runs in the second to clinch the ball game. Kawai took over the mound duty in the third and finished the game.

Yoshida, Hosei outfielder, slammed one into the left field bleachers in the eighth.

Chicago Sextet Tops Maple Leafs Before 18,000

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 10—Before the largest crowd ever to see a National Hockey League game, Chicago's fighting Black Hawks defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs by 2 to 1 tonight to take a two-to-one game advantage in their final best-of-five series for the Stanley Cup, emblematic of world hockey supremacy. The paid attendance was 18,496

In a battle marked by numerous exchanges of punches, both on the ice and in the record throng of spectators, the "Cinderella team" won on a third-period goal by the veteran Elwyn (Doc) Romnes.

Playing with a guard over his nose, fractured in three places in last Thursday's game, Romnes took a double relay from Paul Thompson and Mush March and drove a 25-foot shot past Goalie Walter Broda, who could not move fast enough to save.

Bounds Out of Net

The goal came with less than five minutes of play remaining. The puck bounded out of the net, bringing a complaint by the Leafs that it had not crossed the line, but the referees, Babe Dye and Clarence Campbell, said there was no doubt the Hawks had scored.

Mike Karakas, regular goalie for the Hawks, who was injured in the game against the American last Sunday night, made his first appearance of the Stanley Cup series tonight. Wearing a special shoe to protect his fractured toe, he turned in a fine exhibition in the Chicago nets.

The record throng smashed the former National Hockey League mark for paid admissions, set in the Spring of 1931, when 17,071 fans watched the Hawks play Montreal's Canadiens on the same Stadium Ice.

The surprising Hawks, who barely squeezed into the play-offs and then eliminated the Canadiens and the New York Americans with sensational uphill victories, had to come from behind tonight to defeat the team which holds the league title.

Two Penalized Early

Less than two minutes after the game started, and with two Chicagoans in the penalty box, the Leafs swept into the lead on a goal by Sylvanus Apps. Romnes, whose nose was fractured in a collision with Red Horner at Toronto, slashed Horner on the first Hawk rush. He received a minor penalty and seconds later was joined by March, penalized for board-checking Gordon Drillon.

Drillon and Bob Davidson received assists on Apps' goal, scored from about six feet out on a slashing shot at a rolling puck. During the period, which saw nine penalties handed out, the Hawks once had a two-man advantage for four minutes but could not crack the Leaf defense.

Carl Voss, signed by the Hawks this season after being cut adrift by the Montreal Maroons, tied the score late in the second period, tallying on a short shot after a face-off near the Leaf net. Both teams were at full strength when the goal was made and no one was in the penalty box when Romnes' winning counter was notched.

In the closing minutes Goalie Broda tossed the puck straight out after a save, instead of to one side of the net, and the Hawks were awarded a penalty shot, which Art Weibe failed to convert. Broda was sorely tested in the final minute, March and Earl Seibert almost scoring on solo dashes as the desperate Leafs were caught down in Chicago ice.

Next Games in Chicago

The fourth game of the series, which will give Chicago its chance to clinch the sport's world championship, will be played here Tuesday night. If a fifth game is necessary, the teams will battle at Toronto on Thursday night. The Hawks won the opening game, 3 to 1, and the Leafs took the second 5 to 1.

While there were numerous scuffles between players, only one of the twelve penalties assessd was a major. George Parsons drew five minutes in the box for trading punches with Roger Jenkins of the Hawks, who escaped with a minor. Two spectators were ejected from the building for fighting during the wild opening stanza.

Collegians Defeat Filipino Quintet By 47 To 35 Score

The All-Japan students basketball team trounced the visiting All-Philippine quintet by 47 to 35 Sunday afternoon at the Kyoto Gymnasium. It was the visitors' debut in Japan Proper.

The Japanese collegians had their shooting eyes and rang the basket effectively from long range from the start of the game to lead all the way through. The visitors rallied for a time to be only a point behind, 6 to 7, after 7 minutes of play, but that was the closest they came. The score at half time was 22 to 15.

Belmont Agrees To Post $100,000 For Horse Race

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 13—The $100,000 race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, which had looked so nebulous when set tentatively for next Fall, became a reality yesterday when the board of directors of the Westchester Racing Association voted unanimously to put up the money for Memorial Day, May 30. Owner Samuel D. Riddle promptly accepted the new date for War Admiral.

Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission, stated last night that he had talked on the long-distance telephone with Charles S. Howard in San Francisco and that the Westerner also had accepted. Mr. Swope added that Mr. Howard had made the condition that Red Pollard, Seabiscuit's regular jockey, must be in the saddle. Pollard has been on the ground with a broken collarbone and during his absence Seabiscuit was defeated in two races, by a nose each time.

Pollard's broken collarbone will be X-rayed today, with the expectation that the lad will be found ready to ride. Mr. Howard's devotion to Pollard is due to the boy's success in handling Seabiscuit. The owner holds the opinion that his colorbearer might have won both the Santa Anita Handicap and his prep for that rich prize, had Pollard been in the saddle.

Sport Expected to Benefit

Thus the day's events brought to fruition the efforts for the test which a few days ago horsemen had stated bluntly never would be held, and which racing leaders had felt was fraught with many dangers to the sport of racing. It is probable that no sporting event is harder to consummate than a two-horse test between thoroughbreds. At the moment there not only is enthusiasm for the meeting, but general agreement that the sport will benefit.

C. V. Whitney, vice president of the Westchester Racing Association, presided in the absence of Joseph E. Widener, who was ill at his home in Philadelphia, at the meeting of the board held at the Jockey Club. The following statement was issued after adjournment:

"The unanimous vote of the board of directors was that a $100,000 purse be authorized and offered to the owners of War Admiral and Seabiscuit for a race to be run during the Spring meeting at Belmont Park on Decoration Day, weather permitting, with each horse to carry 126 pounds, at one mile and a quarter. We are offering this race because public interest is high and the two horses are sound and at the top of their form."

Peter A. B. Widener, also a member of the board, represented his father, who is a lifelong friend of Mr. Riddle. It was only a few hours later that the directors received Mr. Riddle's acceptance. Others present at the meeting were George Francis, George Bull, Henry W. Bull, John S. Cowdin and John Hay Whitney.

Reasons Against Fall Race

While no statement to that effect was made, it became known that those at the meeting ruled against having the race in the Fall because of the uncertainty of the physical condition of either or both horses so far ahead, because one or both might be beaten one or more times in the interim and because one or both might be withdrawn from great stake events throughout the country instead of accepting their engagements.

Then, too, the traditional stakes in the Fall at Belmont, including the $100,000 Futurity, are attractive enough without embellishment and a Fall meeting would ruin the prospective meetings now scheduled in the weight for age events at Saratoga and Belmont.

On the general subject of races of this kind there was a feeling that purses of such size tend toward commercialization of the sport, especially when there are plenty of opportunities for the horses to meet in traditional stake events. One director said: "It is to be presumed when talk of a two-horse race arises that both parties want to race. If that is so, there won't be too much straining at imaginary gnats."

As it is, the directors will have to pull apart the stake schedule for the Spring meeting. The classic Suburban Hand'cap, now scheduled for Memorial Day, probably will be run May 28 instead and other changes will have to be made.

Details of the race were left to the two owners. Mr. Howard had asked for a fast track, which condition was accepted when setting Monday, May 30, as the prospective date. In the event of rain the race will be postponed from day to day until there is a fast track.

Nagoya, Eagles Win And Lose In Tripleheader

Nagoya and the Eagles won a game and lost one apiece in the tripleheader of the professional baseball circuit at the Korakuen stadium Sunday.

The Lions beat Nagoya in the day's first game by 2 to 1, putting over the winning tally in the last half of the eighth. Second Baseman Otomo's hit with Yanagizawa on second accounted for the deciding run.

Notwithstanding the rain, both teams played fine ball afield without committing an error.

Nagoya turned the tables over the strong Eagles in the second game by 7 to 4. Tadashi Kameda, recent arrival from Honolulu, started on the mound for the Eagles but lacked control. He came through with a two-bagger in the fifth to put the score on a 3-all basis but issued three walks after one out in the sixth and received the high sign to quit. Masao Furukawa, another Honolulu boy, took over the pitching job but he fared poorly.

Husky Shigesato of Nagoya was touched for 11 hits by the Eagles but he kept them fairly well scattered to finish the game a winner.

The Eagles took the measure of the Senators in the last game behind the airtight pitching of Nakagawa, who checked the Senators to four hits. The score was 1 to 0.

The Eagles scored in the sixth when Urushibara walked after one, stole second and then romped home on Nakane's short hit to right field.

Italy, Poland Enter 2nd Round Of Davis Cup

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 7—Italy and Poland today walked off with the first team victories in this year's European Zone Davis Cup competition, Italy eliminating Ireland by four matches to one and Poland clinching its series against Denmark by a third straight win. The outcome of three over first-round ties meanwhile remained undecided.

Already leading 2-1, the Italians wound up their campaign against the Irish at Dublin by taking both concluding singles matches. Giorgio de Stefani, top-ranking Italian ace, clinched the series with a straight-set victory over Ryan, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, and V. Canapele widened the margin by overcoming G. L. Rogers, 5-7, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3, 6-1.

At Katowice, the Poles took their third straight from the Danes as Ignacy Tloczynski and J. Hebda defeated Einer Ulrich and Niels Korner in the doubles, 6-2, 6-3, 6-8, 6-3. Two more singles matches remain to be played, but they will not affect the outcome.

Play meanwhile began in two other ties, France meeting Holland at Scheveningen and Belgium clashing with Greece at Athens. Conclusion of the first day's singles matches found France and Holland deadlocked at one-all, while Belgium enjoyed a 2-0 lead. The results of individual matches were as follows:

France-Holland: H. van Swol (Holland) defeated Bernard Destremeau (France), 6-3, 6-0, 8-6; Yvon Petra (France) defeated T. Hughan (Holland), 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Belgium-Greece: A. La Croix (Belgium) defeated L. A. Stalios (Greece), 6-1, 6-2, 6-1; Naeyaert (Belgium) defeated J. Michailides (Greece), 6-1, 6-4, 9-7.

Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, who started play at Belgrade yesterday, remained deadlocked with one singles victory to the credit of each team.

Jannazzo Stopped By Krieger In 11th

By FRED VAN NESS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 7—Solly Krieger of Brooklyn took another stride toward a chance at the middleweight title last night when he scored a technical knockout over Izzy Jannazzo of the East Side in the eleventh round of their scheduled twelve-round bout at the Hippodrome. Referee Joe Vacarelli stopped the contest in 2:12 of the eleventh when Jannazzo was plainly tired and almost defenseless against Krieger's attack.

Up to the end it was a good fight for the crowd of 2,384 who paid $4,846 to see the battle. Krieger carried too much power in his blows for Jannazzo, who was fighting here for the first time as a middleweight. Krieger weighed 161 pounds and Jannazo 157½.

Through the first four rounds it looked at if Jannazzo might outpoint Solly as he matched his speed and boxing skill against his rival's heavier punching. In these early sessions he danced around Krieger, peppering him with lefts to the face and an occasional right cross to the jaw, and easily stayed out of harm's way. Izzy easily took these rounds.

Jannazzo Bleeds Badly

But in the fifth Jannazzo began to tire and Krieger went to work on him. Two hard rights to the body and a stiff left hook to the jaw sent Izzy back on his heels, and in the following session he began to bleed badly from a cut over the left eye and one on the nose.

In the seventh Solly staggered Izzy with a right to the jaw and had him in full retreat. Jannazzo tried to hold him off with a left jab, but Solly ignored the taps and bored in with his blows to the body.

Jannazzo was holding up through his experience and ring generalship, but early in the eighth he was in distress as Krieger pounded him in the body and then shot his head back with a right uppercut.

Both fighters coasted through the ninth and there was little damage done, but Krieger administered an other beating to his tiring rival through the tenth. At the start of the eleventh Krieger battered Jannazzo hard in the body. He got him into a corner, where he ripped a hard left to the stomach and crossed a right to the jaw. The blow staggered Jannazzo, who was so tired that he could scarcely hold his arms up to defend himself. Jannazzo reeled toward the ropes after the next attack and the referee stepped in and stopped the fight.

Lewis, New York Middleweight, Takes National A.A.U. Ring Title

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, April 6—Little Bobby Carroll of Newark, N. J., one of seven Negroes to gain the finals of the National A. A. U. boxing tournament, tonight became the 1938 flyweight champion by outpointing Jesse Salzar, Mexican mite from Omaha, Neb., in a fast three-round bout.

William Speary of Nanticoke, Pa., a bit huskier than last year when he ruled the flyweights, gained his second national title in as many years—the bantamweight—by outpointing his Philadephia teammate, John Aiello, in an slam-bang three-rounder.

The Midwest's first 1938 title was gained in the 126-pound division by Bill Eddy of Flint, Mich., after an uphill battle with Jackie Simmons, stiff-punching Kansas City Negro. The latter had all the better of th going until late in the second round when Eddy floored him with a terrific right to the stomach.

Ford Beats Morrison

The crowd's idol, Richard (Tickey) Ford of Lawrence, Mass., gained the third championship for the Eastern forces by carving out a decision over six-foot Allen Morrison of Mattoon, Ill., in the 135-pound title bout.

Unable to reach the lanky Morrison's jaw, Ford concentrated on his body with such two-fisted fury that he dropped the mid-Westerner with a vicious barrage early in the second round. They fought toe-to-toe during the finale, with the Lawrence boy giving much more than he received.

Jimmy O'Malley of Chicago, the most polished boxer in the three-day tournament that attracted 175 entries, cast all science to the winds when he won the 147-pound championship by slugging with John Santiago, the only one of the seven Hawaiians to gain the finals. O'Malley dropped his courageous foe three times in the first round and twice in the second before the referee intervened.

Lewis Fresher Than Rival

The fourth Easterner to conquer was Bradley Lewis of New York in the all-Negro 160-pound final against Buddy Waterman of Detroit. Lewis, who entered the ring much fresher than his Midwestern opponent, cut loose at the opening bell and floored him for 9 with a lusty body attack early in the first round. Waterman came back strongly, however, and mauled with Lewis until their bout ran out.

The all-Negro light heavyweight finale was a slow contest. It ended with Willie Muldune of Cleveland outpointing Willie Collins of Philadelphia.

The fourth Negro champion to be crowned was Daniel Merritt, Cleveland heavyweight, who gave the mid-West an even split with the East by knocking out Carroll Garretson of Tulsa in the second round.

Semi-pro Baseballers Banned From Playing In Olympic Contests

Domei Tsushin

PHILADELPHIA, May 8—Semi-professional baseball players will be banned from competing for places on the 1940 Olympic baseball team, the executive committee of the American Baseball Congress announced here tonight. Baseball, however, has not yet definitely been listed as a formal event on the forthcoming Olympic program, although more than a dozen nations have signified their willingness to send teams to Tokyo.

In determining the winner, the Congress announced, the United States will be divided into the eastern and western sections and the deciding championship will be held in a neutral city in July, 1940. The eastern winner will tour England and the western team will go to Hawaii before departing for Tokyo.

Tigers Keep Winning Streak In Pro Loop

The Osaka Tigers continued their winning streak in the recently opened Spring season of the Japan Professional Baseball Federation by winning two games Monday at the Koshien stadium near Osaka. They have yet to be beaten in five games.

The Tigers took the Giants into camp by a 4 to 2 count in the first game and then nosed out the Hankyus by 2 to 1 in the tilt immediately following.

In the first game of the day at the Koshien ball park, the Giants ran roughshod over the Dolfins by 9 to 1.

The Liong kept themselves right close to the Tigers in the standings by bumping off the Senators and the Eagles at the Korakuen stadium here. The scores were 5 to 1 and 10 to 6.

Meiji Tumbles Rikkyo Nine, 6-1 For 2 In Row

Meiji proved too strong for Rikkyo Monday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium and made it two straight in their series for this Spring. The score was 6 to 1 and Meiji's sixth straight victory in as many games to lead the standings in the Tokyo Six University ball league.

Pitcher Shimizu of Meiji had a fine afternoon and had the Rikkyo batsmen eating out of his hands throughout the afternoon. He yielded but four hits. The Rikkyo batsmen erred heavily by letting the first pitch, usually a fat one that cut the heart of the plate, go by without swinging, and thereafter found themselves swinging at Shimizu's hooks. The latter sent eight men back to the bench via the strikeout route. As it was, he was touched for only one hit up to the sixth, a two bagger to right center by Right Fielder Tabe in the fourth inning.

Meiji Hits Hard

Meiji nicked the Rikkyo moundsman, Ishida, for 10 blows that its victory was no fluke.

The first run came in the second frame when Sakata, Meiji's hard hitting first baseman, smashed a double to right center. Sugiura flied out to center and Kamei was tossed out at first on a hopper to short, Sakata going to third on the same play. Second Baseman Kameda swung at Ishida's second pitch, an outside ball, and lashed it for a hit through short to bat in Sakata.

Meiji pounced on Ishida for three hits in a row in the sixth to add another run. And this happened after two were away. Once again, Sakata started the ball rolling with a hit through short. Sugiura singled to left and Kamei followed with a bingle through short and third to bat in Sakata.

What proved to be Rikkyo's only run came in the first half of the seventh. Both Tabe and Arimura walked. Ishida sacrificed to advance the two to third and second respectively. Yuki came through with a timely hit to left to bat in Tabe but Arimura was thrown out at the plate trying to score on the same hit. Sakurai, pinchhitting for Fukumura, struck out and there was no more scoring.

Meiji Clinches Game

There seemed a chance for Rikkyo but Meiji salted the game away in the first half of the eighth inning with three runs. Kitazawa and Kodama, who had replaced Sakata at first, both walked after one out and Sugiura banged out a three bagger to right center to score the two men on the bags. Sugiura scored a minute later on a wild pitch by Ishida.

Kitazawa's two bagger brought in Shimizu for Meiji's last run in the ninth inning.

Ito Meets Kongo On Monday Night

Isamu Ito of the Ginza Boxing Club, one of the best known flyweights of this country, will take on Iwao Kongo, protege of Kintaro Usuda and sensational pugilist, in one of a triple-main event shows next Monday night, May 16, at the Hibiya Park amphitheater. The smoker will be sponsored by supporters of Ito, who will be making his final appearance as he has decided to hang up his gloves.

In the other two eight rounders will be Ko Sasazaki of the Nippon Boxing Club, and Hidetaro Mitcarai of the Nitto Club, both featherweights, in the one and Tetsu Yamaoka and Yukito Tanaka of the Usuda club, also featherweights, in the other.

Main question of the Ito-Kongo bout will be whether the former's ring generalship will win over the rushing tactics of the latter. Kongo has sky rocketed to fame, what with his splendid showing over Joe Teiken, once considered in sixth place of the world's flyweights, and he will be out to score a knockout victory. But it will be no surprise if Ito outsmarts him and boxes his way to a decision.

Hayafusa Yamazaki will take on Katsuhide Isoyama of the Usuda Boxing Club in the semi-final over six rounds. Both are bantamweights.

There will be three four-round preliminaries on the card, as follows:

Juro Ishii (Usuda) versus Soichi Maruyama (B.G.).

Tsuneo Hirama (Nichibei) versus Kiyoshi Shibasaki (Nippon Boxing Club).

Masao Sato (Nichibei) versus Fighting Joe (Nippon).

Yugoslavia Tops Czechoslovakia 3-2 In Davis Cup

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 8—Yugoslavia today joined Italy and Poland in the second round of the European Zone Davis Cup tourney as a default by Mr. Cejnar, Czech player, in the fifth and deciding set of the concluding singles match gave the Yugoslavs a narrow 3-2 team victory. Holland meanwhile forged ahead to a 2-1 lead over France.

As a result of a doubles victory yesterday, the Czechs entered the last day of play at Zagrez with a one-match lead, but this was wiped out by Ference Puncec, of Yugoslavia, with a four-set win over Roderick Menzel. The series then went to the Belgrade team when Cejnar, with the score tied at two-all against Mitic, defaulted on account of darkness.

The Czech player asked that the last set be held over until tomorrow because the light was too bad to continue play, but the umpire ruled against a postponement, awarding the match to Mitic when Cejnar refused to resume play. Scores of the individual matches were as follows:

Puncec (Yugoslavia) defeated Menzel (Czechoslovakia) 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2; and Mitic (Yugoslavia) won by default over Cejnar (Czechoslovakia) with the score at 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 2-6.

France meanwhile dropped behind Holland at Scheveningen when the Dutch doubles pair of T. Hughan and H. van Swol defeated Yvon Petra and J. Bolelli, of France, in five sets after the Frenchmen had led two sets to zero earlier in the match. The final score was 6-8, 1-6, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Poland, which had already clinched its first-round series against Denmark yesterday, today annexed both concluding singles matches at Katowice, thus scoring a clean sweep of five matches to none.

Ohioan Rolls 300 In U.S. Bowling

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 12—Mike Blazek of Conneaut, Ohio, rolled a perfect 300 game in the American Bowling Congress today. He became the fifth man in the thirty-eight-year history of bowling's world series to pitch twelve consecutive strikes.

Blazek entered the bowling hall of fame on his last game. He bowled 610 Monday night with the Renner Beer team. He completed his doubles today with 614.

His first singles game produced only scores of 171 and 145, but his last game set the Conneaut bowler apart from the thousands who had preceded him in the six-week-old tournament.

It was not Blazek's first 300 game. Four times previously the Ohioan had reached perfect figures. On one occasion he cleaned the drives twenty-four times in a row for two perfect games.

Blazek's game did him no good in the singles or all-events ratings. His two mediocre games pulled him down to a 616 total in the singles and 1,840 in the combined standings.

Ervin Roloff and Allie Rogahn of Milwaukee started out headed for the doubles leadership today. After accumulating 903 pins in the first two games, they needed but 433 more for the lead. They slipped to 379 and their 1,282 total left them well out of the running. It was the loftiest two-man count of the day.

A. B. C. officials announced tonight that a recheck of games rolled Sunday by Leonard Dettloff of Detroit gave him a total of 1,937 in the all-events standing, instead of 1,938, and placed him in a tie for fifth with Cliff Roblings of Columbus, Ohio.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" --by Ripley

Locomotive Operates Without Brakes

With their 641 tons of weight and 7,125 horsepower, the mammoth electric locomotives of the Virginian Railway constitute one of the most powerful moving power units in the world. And, Believe It or Not, they can handle a train of 9,000 tons on a down grade without brakes. The locomotives are automatically regenerative—that is, when descending a grade of such amount that the net tractive effort becomes negative, the motors become generator and return power to the electric power lines. Thus, the 9,000-ton trains descending the Kelleysville and Merrimac grades of the Alleghany mountains, are held to a constant speed of 15 m.p.h. by regeneration. It is necessary to use the brakes only to bring the train to a complete stop, resulting in great saving on brake shoes and brake maintenance.

Chicago Black Hawks Win Stanley Cup By Beating Maple Leafs For Upset

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 12—The indomitable Chicago Black Hawks, one of the longest long shots in all sports history, scored in every period tonight to defeat the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4 to 1, to win the Stanley Cup and world hockey championship before 17,204 spectators at the Chicago Stadium.

The Hawks, who had finished only third in the American Division and lost their last three games of the regular National Hockey League season, defeated the Leafs, holders of the league title, on sensational second-period goals by Carl Voss and Jack Shill. The tallies, which broke a 1-1 deadlock, indirectly led to an additional counter in the final period to clinch a third victory for the Chicagoans in four starts against Toronto in the final series.

Winning their second Stanley Cup, the Hawks trounced the speedy Leafs with a dogged fighting spirit. Taking the lead within six minutes on Cully Dahlstrom's counter, the Hawks saw the high-geared Leafs, overwhelming favorites to win the cup before the series, roar back for the tying goal, scored by Gordon Drillon, with help from Jimmy Fowler.

Voss Steals Disk

Undaunted, the Chicagoans battled the Leafs evenly through three-quarters of the second stanza and then counted twice in 1 minute 13 seconds. Voss, a veteran obtained from Montreal's Maroons, stole the puck from Defensemen Fowler and Reg Hamilton and rifled a ten-foot shot past Goalie Walter Broda to put the Hawks in front.

A few plays later Shill drove a counter which will take its place in hockey's "book." Obviously on the defense, he idly lifted the puck into the air toward the Leaf net, flicking the disk from a spot fully 110 feet from the Toronto cage. Broda came out, dropped confidently to his knees for what appeared a routine stop, and then saw the rubber bounce over his stick and into the twine.

The goal forced the Leafs to open up in the third and this aided Chicago to a score by Mush March, diminutive forward. Taking a pass from Doc Romnes, March rifled a shot from right wing to beat Broda with less than four minutes of play remaining.

During the entire final stanza Chicago, led by Goalie Mike Karakas, fought off desperate Leaf bids which had the crowd in a constant uproar. While the attendance was a capacity, it did not approach the 18,496 overflow throng that had set a league record last Sunday.

An Outstanding Feat

The outcome made the Hawk manager, Chunky Bill Stewart, one of the year's outstanding sports figures. In his first year as a major league hockey pilot Stewart led his players through an uphill, incredible climb comparable to the 1914 climb of baseball's Boston Braves from last place to the world title.

The Hawks accomplished close to the same feat. During the regular season they beat Toronto only once in six games. They won only fourteen of forty-eight games and had forty-two more goals scored against them than they could notch. They qualified for the play-offs only because Detroit's Red Wings, Stanley Cup holders the previous two seasons, collapsed.

Reaching the play-offs, Chicago lost a game to Montreal's Canadiens, but then won two straight. They lost another series opener to the New York Americans, but again advanced by winning the next two games. They won the opener from Toronto, lost the second with Rookie Paul Goodman in the nets and came from behind Sunday to win and qualify for the opportunity to scale the heights they reached tonight.

The victory, worth more than $1,000 to each Chicago, climaxed one of the dizziest seasons in the league's history. Not expected to defeat Boston's Bruins, Toronto took the league title in three straight games. Then the Hawks, with Manager Stewart at the reins, galloped to their amazing triumph in the sport's world series.

Only Five Penalties

The deciding game, while rough, was not as vicious as previous encounters, although the first period was enlivened by several "wrestling" matches. Only five penalties in all were assessed, none a major. After the final whistle, as the cup was presented the almost hysterical Hawks, the Leaf personnel congratulated the victors.

Some wag, after the game, dubbed the Hawks the "Election Electrifiers." During the day voters balloted in the Illinois primary and Chicago's last and only other cup victory was achieved during an election. On April 10, 1934, Chicago defeated Detroit for the world title, winning the fourth game in overtime.

U.S. Confidence In Tokyo Unshaken By Kano's Death

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, May 9—America's firm adherence to Tokyo as the site of the 1940 Olympiad has not been shaken by last week's sudden death of Professor Jigoro Kano, member of the International Olympic Committee and one of the most prominent leaders of Japanese sportsmen, it was stated in sports circles here today.

These circles, however, suggested the advisability of the Japanese Olympic Organizing Committee giving fresh assurances that the preparations now in progress in Tokyo for the 1940 Olympics will not be hampered in the slightest way by Professor Kano's death. The disappearance of the latter, they pointed out, is evidently creating some uneasiness regarding smooth progress of the preparations not only in European countries but even in some sections of the United States.

Some European countries, these quarters opined, are apparently anxious to find a defect in Japan's preparations with which they can propose to shift the Games from Tokyo to elsewhere. Some quarters express belief in this connection that early recommendation of a successor, possibly Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary general of the Japanese Olympic Organizing Committee, to the late Professor Kano would be helpful in dispelling uneasiness in this respect.

Hosei Swamps Teidai, 6 To 0 For 2 Straight

The ball game between Hosei and Tokyo Imperial Tuesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium was decided right in the first inning when the former registered four runs. The final count was 6 to 0. Pitcher Yutani of Tokyo Imperial hurled a fine game after that yielding a total of but five hits but for naught, what with his teammates scratching but four hits off big left hander Akaneya of Hosei.

On top of it, the Teidai players committed six errors, enough to lose any ball game. And five of them were by the infielders.

Hosei's eventful first inning follows:

Karazawa walked. Takio doubled to left. Murakami followed with a single to left to bat in both Karazawa and Takino. Tsuruoka was tossed out, third to first, and Murakami advanced to third on the play. Yoshida grounded out to second but Yutani uncorked a wild pitch and Murakami tallied. Suzuki walked and then was caught between first and second. But First Baseman Tajima pegged wild to second and Suzuki gained life at that bag. He then romped home on Second Baseman K. Furukawa's error of Ito's grounder for the fourth run.

Philippine Cagers Beat Rikkyo, 47-42 In Debut In Tokyo

Rikkyo led all the way in the first half, which ended 25 to 20, but the visiting All-Philippines basketball team came from behind in the second half to outscore the Japanese collegians by 10 points to win their debut in Tokyo by a 47 to 42 score Tuesday night at the National Gymnasium at Suidobashi.

The Filipinos rallied after resumption of play after the interval and in four minutes had deadlocked the count at 27-all. Thereupon Borck and La O, forwards, worked the ball beautifully under the basket to score time and again and at 17 minutes the visitors were leading 46 to 36. Resorting desperately to long shots, Cho and Takahashi of Rikkyo started to ring the basket but were unable to overtake the Filipinos' lead.

Borck was high point scorer with 21 points.

Princeton Routed By St. John's 10-2

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., April 12—St. John's University of Brooklyn pounded Dawson Farber and Bob Riddle for twelve hits and overwhelmed the Princeton baseball team, 10-2, on University Field today for its third straight victory. Seven errors afield counted heavily in the Nassau defeat, the second in five starts.

The visitors opened the scoring in the first frame when Al DeStefano singled and came home on Farber's wild throw to third. They picked up their winning counter three innings later on a pass and a single that netted two runs, annexed another tally in the fifth, four more in the seventh and topped off with a brace in the eighth and ninth.

A walk, a single by Captain Eddie Novak and Shortstop Frank Haggerty's blunder combined to give the Tigers two runs in the fifth, but then the Nassau attack subsided except for Riddle's double in the seventh, which was wasted when he was left on base.

France Squeezes Win Over Holland In Davis Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 9—Led by Holland by a score of two matches to one at the end of yesterday's play, France today narrowly escaped being eliminated from this year's Davis Cup competition by winning both singles matches and thus advancing to the second round of the European zone.

With Holland needing only one more victory to oust France from the competition, both French players displayed a championship brand of tennis to down their respective opponents. Yvon Petra of France defeated H. van Swol 6-0, 6-3, 6-2 while Bernard Destremeau took the measure of T. Hughan, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Belgium, meanwhile, made it a clean sweep over Greece at Athens when after winning the doubles encounter on Sunday, took today both final singles matches. Both of the opening day's singles went to Belgium. On Sunday, A. La Croix and De Borman of Belgium defeated L. A. Stalios and J. Michailides of Greece 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

In today's concluding singles, Naeyaert of Belgium defeated Stalios 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 while P. Geelhand scored a straight set victory over Michallides, 6-4, 6-3 6-3.

England, meanwhile, led Rumania two matches to one at the conclusion of today's play. After splitting yesterday's opening singles matches, Butler and Frank H. Wilde paired to win from the Rumanian couple of O. Schmidt and Caralluliis. The scores were 8-6, 7-5, 6-2.

London Invaded By Australian Cricket Players

Times, London

LONDON, April 21—The Australians have arrived. A large crowd at Waterloo was there to welcome them; cameras, gates to prevent the over-enthusiastic crowd from scrambling too near; and the usual fuss at such an arrival. When the train steamed in one wondered what the result would be of this invasion. Are they unbeatable; are their bowlers so much better than any we can find; and will, in the end, they amass so many runs that the game will be as good as over whenever they win the toss? I don't believe it.

They come, many great cricketers among them, men who are almost terrible in thought; they will show us many beautiful points of the game; but is that to say that there are not yet in this country some who can equal, even surpass, in skill? That matter of selection, whom to choose in trying to form a regular team, a side which bears the resemblance of a steady force, is the duty of our Selection Committee. The Australians come set and primed, they will have little trouble in deciding which is the best team for any particular occasion. They have picked a side in Australia, known men they are, while here we seem to be so vague in appreciation. A man may make a glorious century in a Bank Holiday match, a game which counts so much, and afterwards he is forgotten.

Perhaps their great advantage in Australia lies in the fact that the games which matter, their Sheffield Shield matches, are the perpetual test. Be that as it may, and Test Matches are not the beginning and end of all cricket, the Australians have come to show us some technique which is well worth the learning. They bring the greatest batsman of modern times, himself a wise captain, and of all things they bring bowlers who are an object-lesson of the intention, the true purpose, of bowling. Go to watch O'Reilly, and you will understand why batsmen find runs hard to make cheaply. Great batsmen they have had, great batsmen they still have, but it is the method of their bowling which remains their great strength. You can place a field to accurate bowling; runs can be saved over and over again; the wicket-keeper is encouraged when he is certain where the ball will pitch on any kind of wicket. This is the lesson taught by every Australian team that has come over here. Watch them, and see how few runs they give away.

Crystal Spring

Pecos County, Texas, is far famed for its natural spring waters, the most famous of which is Comanche Spring in Fort Stockton. Without any appreciable variation of flow, the spring gushes 35,000,000 gallons every day, and through the 250 years it has been known to civilized man, its temperature has never been known to vary from the pleasant 72 degrees. The rapid flow of water allows it to remain in the pool only a few minutes, whence it is drained off by an irrigating canal serving 6,500 acres of fertile farm lands adjacent to Fort Stockton.

Sumo Fans Spend 24 Hours At Opening Day Of Tourney; Grand Champions All Win

Twenty four hours at a stretch at a sports event. That is what happened to thousands of fans that stormed the gates of the Kokugikan bowl Tuesday night for the opening day of the 13-day "Summer" sumo tournament Wednesday. For the final bout of the day was not over until exactly 8:55 o'clock in the evening.

The bouts progressed slowly Wednesday for the reason especially that the wrestlers were all keen to start the tournament in auspicious fashion and hence were overcautious. Most of the bouts went to the full time of 30 minutes allowed in the "shikiri" or process of getting started. Then there was the official ceremony of the champions of the last tourney in January returning the perpetual trophies to the Japan Sumo Association to be contested for again at the present tournament.

Rites at Late Hour

It was not until 4:30 that the "dohyoiri" or formal entrance into the ring of the four grand champions—Futabayama, Tamanishiki, Minanogawa and Musashiyama—started. This is something to be witnessed once, with the grand champions, each escorted by two stalwarts, one of them carrying a Japanese sword, going through the rites symbolizing his highest rank available in the sport that is absolutely clean and on the fair and square.

This "dohyoiri" usually starts about 2 p.m., so it was that the bouts yesterday were performed at an average of two hours behind time.

Grand Champions Futabayama, Tamanishiki, Minanogawa and Musashiyama won their bouts in convincing style. Futabayama, who is out to win his fifth undefeated championship, which is already an unprecedented record in the annals, took but a second to down Kaikozan in the evening's final bout.

The day's outstanding victory was registered by Itsutsushima who threw Kagamiiwa, of "ohseki" rank or immediately below grand champion. He will be the man to be watched in the present tourney. And this applies to Futabayama as well.

One bout was declared a draw. Kyushuzan and Asahigawa, who are of virtually equal build and two of the cleverest wrestlers in competition today, tried desperately to throw the other, but neither cared to take the offensive after time had been called to allow them a minute's rest, and the bout was scheduled to be retaken after an interval of the next two matches. But in the rematch, there seemed no chance of a finish, with each holding one of the other's hands over their heads and waiting for an opening, that the bout was called a draw.

Mayedayama Wins

Mayedayama, who is performing for the first time as an "ohseki" in the official tournament, started off auspiciously by taking the measure of the veteran, Wakashima.

In one of the most keenly anticipated matches of the day, Ayanobori resorted to his effective leg kick and down went Tamanoumi, ace pupil of Tamanishiki, on to the sand.

Banjaku and Nayoroiwa, who had been promoted to "sekiwake" rank, immediately below "ohseki," won convincingly. The former threw Ryogoku while the latter lifted Shachinosato, considered by some as the best looking of the wrestlers, into the air and deposited him outside of the ring for an impressive win.

The results of the bouts in the order after the intermission, indicating the wrestlers of the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle, follow:

Jinmuyama defeated Tsukubane.
Hishuzan defeated Katsuragawa.
Onami defeated Yamatonishiki.
Aobayama defeated Banshinzan.
Toshuzan defeated Ryuozan.
Ayanishiki defeated Takanobori.
Akinoumi defeated Fujigadake.
Kojimagawa defeated Ayawaka.
Tomoegata defeated Bochozan.
Dewaminato defeated Genjiyama.
Kashimanada defeated Tsurugamine.
Oshio defeated Komanosato.
Ayanobori defeated Tamanoumi.
Kaneminato defeated Dewanohana.
Kyushuzan drew with Asahigawa.
Haguroyama defeated Kasagiyama.
Nayoroiwa defeated Shachinosato.
Banjaku defeated Ryogoku.
Itsutsushima defeated Kagamiiwa.
Mayedayama defeated Wakashima.
Musashiyama defeated Tatekabuto.
Minanogawa defeated Hatasegawa.
Tamanishiki defeated Taikyuzan.
Futabayama defeated Kaikozan.

City Formally Decides To Erect Statue Of Kano At Komazawa

A special committee of the Tokyo Municipality reached a decision Wednesday afternoon to erect a statue in memory of the late Professor Jigoro Kano, who died last week on his way back from the International Olympic Committee's session at Cairo, in front of the main Olympic stadium to be built at Komazawa for the 1940 Games.

Great services rendered to the development of sports in Japan by the late Dr. Seiichi Kishi who worked hard together with Professor Kano to bring the 1940 Olympic Games to Tokyo, will be commemorated in some form at the Olympic Gymnasium to be built at Kanda for the Olympic indoor games, it was also decided by the committee.

Billows Predicts 'Big Things' For Walker Cup Team

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 14—Ray Billows, the Poughkeepsie, N. Y., printing firm salesman and golfer who saw fond hopes realized when he made the U. S. Walker Cup team, predicts "big things" for "our boys" when they meet their rivals in the British Amateur and Walker Cup matches.

Genial Ray, 15 pounds heavier than last year when he was runner up in the U. S. amateur to Omaha's Johnny Goodman, comes right out flatly and says one of our Walker Cuppers will win the British Amateur and the Walker Cup team will score another victory.

And he doesn't leave much room for an "if" in the picture either.

Ray knocked off from a business trip long enough to take advantage of a spring-like day and breeze around the Bellevue Country Club's rolling layout, the scene of his defeat by Tommy Goodwin in the 1936 New York State amateur.

He said it was his first "real round" of the Spring and that business had kept him from getting in anything like real practice.

He was hitting the ball a mile, however, and stuck tight to par for hole after hole cheating a high wind with long, low, and slightly hooked shots.

"That's the way I like to see 'em go," he declared. "The wind doesn't get as much of a chance to work on 'em."

"By that you mean you have an idea you might win the British Amateur, because you figure that low hit ball of yours will keep out of trouble in the stiff British breezes?"

"Well," said he as he whammed a brassie second shot to a small green on a par five hole, "faint heart never won fair lady."

"Seriously though," he continued, "I don't know about the rest of the fellows, but I've got plenty of practice ahead of me before we sail May 10 for England and before the British Amateur at Troon May 23. I have less than a month to get in top form. That's hardly enough."

"But you're even par right now and hitting the ball like a champion!"

"Maybe so," grinned Ray, "but maybe you've noticed par isn't good enough these days."

It's easy to get the idea that, given a few breaks, Ray is going to be a determined young man hot after that British Amateur championship as a time up for the Walker Cup play early in June.

He might win it, but he won't admit it.

Miss Kono Of Diving Fame Is Married

Miss Fusako Kono, who made a name for herself by placing sixth in the women's high diving at the 11th Olympic Games in 1936 at Berlin, has taken a plunge into a "pool of love," according to Domei.

Miss Kono, who is 22 and lives in Nishinomiya, near Osaka, was married at 2 p.m. Wednesday, to Yutaka Shirai, 30, son of Yuzo Shirai, rice dealer, also of Nishinomiya.

Mrs. Shirai has announced her retirement from competition.

Helen Wills Moody Packs Her Rackets For Trip Abroad

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14—Helen Wills Moody, who made tennis history in 1935 with a comeback for her seventh Wimbledon title, packed her favorite rackets today to battle for an eighth English championship. She sails from New York April 20.

Mrs. Moody is now playing what coaches declare is her best game.

The lure of the Wimbledon championship, virtually symbolic of the world title, proved irresistible for Mrs. Moody, who in 1936 announced she was retiring to design fashion.

May Meet Miss Jacobs Again

Several weeks ago, however, she began intensive training for another big-time campaign that again may pit her against 1935 Wimbledon final. Mrs. Moody won after trailing 2—5 in the final set.

In 1933, Mrs. Moody and Miss Jacobs, long keen tennis rivals, met in the finals of the National championships at Forest Hills. Trailing in the deciding set, Mrs. Moody was forced to default by a back injury.

"My back seems as good as ever," said Mrs. Moody yesterday as she finished an exhaustive match with Gerald Strarford, former California champion.

A strong wind failed to slow her hard, driving game, but she lamented "I was awful."

"I'm not saying whether I am satisfied with my game or whether I think I can win again at Wimbledon," she said. "But I have trained harder for this season than for any other I can remember."

Kinsey Predicts

Howard Kinsey, California Tennis Club coach and former Davis Cup doubles star, predicted another title for Mrs. Moody.

"Nobody can beat her the way she is going now," he said. She's faster, stronger and headier."

Mrs. Moody, named on this year's Wightman Cup team, will play in two English tournaments preceding Wimbledon. Then she will compete in the Berlin and Warsaw championships and return to the United States in time for the September National championships.

Enquiry Invited.

Goliath Won In This Case

Dewagadake (right), giant of giants in the professional sumo circles and who was once reputed as a coming grand champion, but has gone far down in the ranks because of a sore back, as he appeared in the ring Wednesday at the Kokugikan for the first time in two years. A big favorite of the fans, who call him "Bunchan," because of his clumsiness and kiddish smile, he was given a great ovation. His opponent was Tachinomori (left), one of the smallest wrestlers. The latter tried desperately to win but "Bunchan" was much too big for him.

Ball-Handling Big Factor In Winning Games

Christian Science Monitor

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 14—One of the most interesting happenings at the convention of the National basketball rules committee held at Chicago recently was a report on how accuracy in ball-handling reflected itself in winning ball games, by Dr. Forrest C. Allen, head basketball coach at the University of Kansas, and chairman of the research committee on the rules body.

Dr. Allen presented a detailed chart that was worked out at Kansas whereby points from plus 10 (for a goal scored) to minus 8 (for a personal foul) were awarded each player in an endeavor to evaluate the exact value of the player to the team. Such statistics had been kept on all home games the past season, he said, and for both Kansas and the visiting team for the three first conference games of the season.

In these three games, Kansas scored 139 points to 102 for the three opponents. Superior shooting of the Kansas players was demonstrated by the record of 56 goals out of 165 shots at the basket, or 33.9 per cent; while the visitors were connecting only 39 times out of 184 chances, or 21.2 per cent of the times.

In the same way, Kansas was superior in free throws, making 27 of 42 trials, 64.3 per cent; while the visitors were making 24 out of 44 chances, or 54.5 per cent.

Even more striking was the ability of the Kansas players to get the ball off the opponents' backboard, having made 78 such recoveries, while the opponents were getting the ball off the Kansas backboard only 34 times—less than half as many times. Nor were the Jayhawkers alert only in getting the opponents' rebounds, for 70 times a Jayhawker caught his own teammates' throw that rebounded, while the opponents were retaining possession only 51 times.

In other phases, such as wild passes to opponents, out of bounds, and the like, Kansas and opponents collectively had almost the same records.

Dr. Allen also presented results of research in all the Big Six colleges in which, by agreement, held balls are taken to the nearest of three circles to be thrown up by the referee. In 24 of the 30 conference games, the held ball was thrown up in the center circle 52 out of 435 times a held-ball was called. Reports from 18 of the 30 games showed the ball was given to the team scored on 586 times. Under these conditions it required 2527.1 seconds, or an average of 2m. 34s, per game, to move the ball across the center line to the forward court. This is an average of 4.37 seconds per occasion.

Games Of Irish Date 1000 Years Before Olympics

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

DUBLIN.—Ireland's enthusiasm for sport dates back to more than a thousand years before the ancient Greeks first held their Olympic Games. The Irish may be credited, indeed, with organizing the first sports meeting the world ever knew—the Taiteann Games in the year 1829 B. C. You can find reference to the Games of 1829 B. C. in the ancient "Book of Leinster," which was written somewhere around the time (1168 A. D.) when the last Tailteann Games were held in Ireland, prior to the modern revival of them in 1924.

It seems that the games began all because of a lady—the beautiful Queen Tailte, foster-mother of Luguid of the Strong Arm. Legend tells that this broth of a boy founded the Tailtean Aonach (fair) in her honor about 3000 B. C. at the place now called Teltown.

The festival was celebrated always at the beginning of August and in addition to contests in feats of strength, physical skill and endurance there were military displays, horse races, chariot races and musical and poetical competitions. A great concourse of merchants assembled for trading purposes and many matters of national importance were decided at conferences of the law-makers.

Sports Surmount Political Barriers

There may be a boundary between the North and the South, and there may be sharp divisions of opinion on many matters, but the sports folk just can't help getting together.

Last year a new governing body called the Irish Amateur Athletic Union came into being in the South. It made no claim to govern athletics in the North, and the two political sections of the Emerald Isle were able to get together in the friendliest manner, to exchange views on the possibility of holding All-Ireland championships under joint control.

Prior to this, a Free State track and field team visited Belfast for the first time in 13 years and was defeated by 91 points to 43 in a match with the pick of Northern Ireland's talent.

More important than the result was the amiable atmosphere that pervaded the attendant discussions. Another example of the tendency to link up in the administration of sport is furnished by the controllers of table tennis in the North and South. They have recently joined forces.

Always United in Rugby

On the Rugby Football field there always has been "a united Ireland." And "home" matches against the other sides in the international championships—England, Scotland and Wales—are shared between Dublin and Belfast.

Rugger is a dominant sporting interest in Winter. Along with field hockey and Hurling. Irishmen have a great flair for hockey. They hold the international championship at the present time.

The traditional game of the Irish is, of course, hurling, a sort of super-hockey, fostered most assiduously by the Gaelic Athletic Association, which takes an intensely nationalistic view upon sporting matters. The G. A. A. was founded on Nov. 1, 1884, and since then it has jealously preserved the traditions and encouraged the pursuit of hurling, Gaelic football, Camogie and other indigenous athletic activities.

Whatever one's sporting interests may be, they can be indulged in Ireland. And if they should happen to include horses, then a great treat awaits one in Dublin, both May 3 to 7 and August 2 to 6. For those are the dates of the Royal Dublin Society Spring Show and Horse Show respectively, which bring the best of the equine population of Ireland under review in the Ballsbridge enclosure.

Horses in High Favor

These occasions provide high carnival for horse lovers, as the Irish people most emphatically are. Beautifully-groomed animals hold the center of the stage. To the spectator insufficiently educated in horse-lore to appreciate the full significance of proceedings in the scores of show classes, the great draw is the jumping, which at the Horse Show reaches its climax with an international military competition.

The rest of the Irish sporting scene is extensive. There are golf and lawn tennis, cricket and lacrosse, track and field athletics, badminton and squash rackets, relatively new but rising rapidly in popularity, handball (played most enthusiastically with soft and hard ball in every county), shooting, billiards, bowling, pony polo, and boxing; not to mention rowing and yachting, both of which show signs of regaining their former glories. And chess. And, no doubt, a few other things unintentionally overlooked.

Such, in broad and necessarily sketchy outline, is Sporting Ireland, a common ground without boundary lines.

Britain Defeats Rumania By 3-2; Misses Austin

Domei Tsushin

HARROGATE, Yorkshire, May 10—Seriously weakened by the loss of Henry W. "Bunny" Austin, Britain's 1938 Davis Cup team barely squeezed out a first-round victory over Rumania here today, a split of the concluding singles maintaining the Englishmen's narrow one-match lead to give them the series by a score of three to two.

The outcome was not decided until the final match as O. Schmidt, of Rumania, opened the day's play by defeating C. M. Jones, of England, in five sets to even the count at two-all. The Britishers emerged victorious, however, as R. A. Shayes pounded out a convincing straight-set victory over Carollulis. The scores were as follows:

O. Schmidt (Rumania) defeated C. M. Jones (England) 6-3, 6-1, 0-6, 2-6, 8-6; R. A. Shayes (England) defeated Carollulis (Rumania) 6-3, 6-0, 6-3.

Today's results gave the two teams an equal number of victories in the singles, while the British margin of victory was provided by yesterday's win in the doubles.

Arrested For Capturing A Town

On the day after the surrender of Vera Cruz during the Mexican War, 1847, General Scott sent General Quitman with a brigade to cooperate with the navy in the capture of Alvardo. The navy had twice retired in the attempt without success. General Quitman arrived there on April 1st and found that the town had already been captured by Lieutenant Hunter of the steamer Scourge, who found the town unoccupied by Mexican troops. He demanded its surrender and quietly took possession. When the naval and military forces arrived they had nothing to do but hold the town. However, authorities disapproved of Lieut. Hunter's conduct of summoning the town upon his own responsibility, and he was court martialed. From this unusual episode Hunter acquired the sobriquet "Alvarado." The court martial ruined and embittered him for life.

Grand Champ Minanogawa Defeated On Second Day Of 'Summer' Sumo Tourney

First of the four grand champions to be defeated in the 13-day sumo championships at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku is Minanogawa, the biggest of the quartet, who was downed by the veteran Wakashima, who hails from Wakayama prefecture, Thursday afternoon in the second day's bouts.

Once again, it was Minanogawa's slow start that was responsible for his setback. Wakashima had the jump on him and attacked with both hands. Even the giant Minanogawa found himself being shoved back. He attempted to extricate himself from Wakashima's hold but the latter charged even harder. And when he had Minanogawa at the edge of the ring, he resorted to a final push with his powerful right arm and out went Minanogawa for defeat.

Futabayama Wins

Tamamoumi, ace pupil of Grand Champion Tamanishiki, made a gallant stand against Grand Champion Futabayama, who has been undefeated in four tournaments. Two times he checked Futabayama's charge, only to be pushed out on the third attempt.

Tamanishiki had little trouble disposing of the up and coming Haguroyama, who is Futabayama's stablemate. No sooner had they stood up in the last bout of the day than Tamanishiki pushed and out was Haguroyama. The bout lasted but a second.

Grand Champion Musashiyama was equally impressive in his victory over Kaikozan, he of the great protruding stomach. Musashiyama started pushing and Kaikozan never once checked it.

Banjaku, with almost as large a stomach as Tamanishiki and one of the really great wrestlers, scored a sterling victory when he took the measure of Itsutsushima, who has been reported to be in great condition and one of the few men likely to have a chance against Futabayama. The deciding factor was Banjaku's thrust of his left arm through Itsutsushima's defense for a firm grip on the latter's girdle. This meant that Itsutsushima too gained a similar hold, but it was not his favorite one of a grip with his right arm. Banjaku saw his opportunity when Itsutsushima attempted to shift his grip, from left to right, resorted to a body throw and down went Itsutsushima.

Mayedayama, who it is considered will be Futabayama's rival in the next year or two, won his second straight victory with an impressive win over Ryogoku, who gave Futabayama the hardest match in the January tournament. Both succeeded in the getting a grip on the other's girdle to be on even terms. Ever the aggressor, Mayedayama threatened to attempt a body throw. Ryogoku in turn attempted a leg kick but Mayedayama took advantage of Ryogoku's position which had momentarily become unfavorable and threw him outside of the ring.

Ohshio Brilliant

Husky Ohshio, who at one time was considered one of the most promising to become a grand champion, used his great belly as a lever and shoved the strong Akinoumi out of the ring for victory after a torrid bout.

Kagamiiwa, of "ohseki" rank or immediately below grand champion, who up to two years ago was nicknamed the "Wild Bull" because of his fiery wrestling and great strength, suffered his second setback in as many days. Lanky Taikyuzan, another native of Osaka, proved too fast for him in the offensive.

That size is not the absolute winning factor in Japanese wrestling was amply proved in the bout between Kaneminato and Banshinzan. The latter is almost twice as large as the former. But Kaneminato, who would not be admitted into the sport today because he is only an inch or two over 5 feet in height, is one of the cleverest wrestlers in competition today—and he without doubt is the most conscientious. He shoved the bigger man out of the ring to win.

Show Over Early

The bouts progressed along much faster than the opening day and the final match was over at 6:42 p.m. as compared with the 8:55 on the previous day.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Hishuzan defeated Tsukuhamine.
Jinmuyama defeated Katsuragawa.
Genjiyama defeated Ayawaka.

Meiji Favored To Beat Waseda In Crucial Series Over Weekend

The championship of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league may be decided on Saturday and Sunday in the Meiji versus Waseda series at the Meiji Shrine stadium. At the moment, Meiji is on top of the standings with six victories in as many games while Waseda already has lost one game at the hands of Rikkyo.

A better pitching staff in Southpaw Shimizu and Right Hander Kodama over Left Handers Kondo and Matsui of Waseda should win for Meiji. But both are good hitting teams and the fans are in store for a rare treat.

Keio is favored to down Tokyo Imperial in the other part of the twinbills.

Governor Vetoes Dog Racing Bill

N.Y. Times

ALBANY, April 12 — Governor Lehman today vetoed the Quinn bill which would have opened the door for dog racing in four of the larger counties, Nassau, Westchester, Monroe and Erie. In a brief veto memorandum the Governor wrote:

"If dog races and betting at dog tracks are to be permitted in the State of New York, appropriate change should be made in the State Constitution. Meeting in Albany at the present time is a Constitutional Convention. The bill is disapproved."

This marked the third time that the Governor vetoed dog racing measures sent to him by the Legislature. His action did not come as a surprise because of his determined efforts in recent years to stamp out dog racing. On several occasions last year he ordered the State police to close dog tracks operating in up-State counties.

Bill Stays in Committee

In his annual message to the last Legislature the Governor urged that the penal law be amended "to clarify beyond a peradventure of a doubt that the sale of options, or any other similar devices, at dog races shall be definitely prohibited." Such a bill was introduced, but it never got out of committee. Instead, during the closing days of the session, the bill drafted by the Greyhound Racing Association and introduced by Senator Elmer F. Quinn, New York Democrat, was passed by a substantial vote in both the Senate and Assembly.

On the day that the Quinn bill made its appearance in the Senate Governor Lehman sent a special message to the Legislature reiterating his request for passage of a measure sharpening the teeth of the penal law to prevent option betting on dog racing.

Dog racing as proposed in the Quinn bill was to have been an "experiment" for one year. Corporations to conduct dog racing in the four counties would have been under the strict regulation of the State Racing Commission. Each corporation would have had to have a minimum capital stock of $50,000.

Chicago Cubs Beat White Sox In Series

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 16—Blasting Sugar Cane for four runs in each of the third and fifth innings the Cubs defeated the White Sox, 10 to 4, before 7,7880 fans at Wrigley Field today and clinched Chicago's Spring baseball honors for the National League.

It was the Cubs' ninth victory in fifteen games between the two Chicago clubs. A final game will be played at Comiskey Park tomorrow.

Rip Collins's homer with two on was the big blow in the third, while doubles by Coaker Triplett and Billy Herman, singles by Frank Demaree and Bill Jurges and a pass to Collins were the main items in the game-clinching fifth.

A homer by Boze Berger off Curt Davis with two on in the fourth was the most potent of the six hits off Davis and Bill Lee. The Cubs totaled thirteen off Cain and Thornton Lee. The game was interrupted twenty-two minutes by rain in the sixth inning.

Mako Denies Auckland Rumors

LOS ANGELES, April 13—The championship tennis combination of J. Donald Budge and Gene Mako—with Mako as spokesman—entered a flat denial today that they had high-pressured New Zealand net officials into giving them £20 (about $100) apiece for appearing in an exhibition match in Auckland several weeks ago.

Answering criticism reprinted here from the New Zealand sportsman that Budge and Mako "demanded" £20 each for the exhibition, Mako said:

"Sure, they gave us 20 apiece, but we didn't demand it. It's ridiculous to say we demanded it. We'd have played whether they gave it to us or not."

The Auckland article said Budge "demanded £20 each for himself and Gene Mako. The cable left no doubt that they would not fulfil their advertised appearance in Auckland unless they were paid."

Mako countered that the amounts were given for "expense money—they always show us a good time but we have to spend a lot of money besides." He said he and Budge were in Auckland one day.

The sportsman said no traveling expenses were involved.

Both Budge and Mako remained aboard ship, the article said, which would eliminate hotel expenses.

"I guess somebody is just trying to stir up something," Mako concluded.

Pigskin Clinches Race At Epsom, Beating Terror

Times, London

LONDON, April 21—Mrs. Chester Beatty's six-year-old horse Pigskin, by Papyrus out of Swiney, trained by Lawson at Manton and ridden by C. Richards, won the City and Suburban Handicap at Epsom yesterday afternoon by a head from Terror, with Lady of Shalott beaten for second place by a length and a half. Intolerance was fourth, Puzzler fifth, and Flag of Truce sixth. The winner started favorite at 6 to 1, Terror was at 20 to 1, and Lady of Shalott at 10 to 1.

Such are the bare facts of a rather tame City and Suburban Handicap. It is true that there was a duel all the way up the straight between Pigskin and Terror, but the former was always going just the better of the two, and there never seemed any real danger to either of them from any other member of the opposition. Further, these two, drawn respectively Nos. 2 and 1 on the stands' side rails, had jumped off in front and had always been there. There was a little excitement before the start, as long before the horse got to the gate Fedor had unseated Packham twice, and then refused for a long time to go near to the starting-gate. He upset more than one of the field, and may, indeed, have spoiled the race. Never Surprised, for example, did not get well away.

The race had not been in progress more than a hundred yards before Terror, ridden by Mahr, and Pigskin, ridden by C. Richards, were out with a clear lead. Fedor, quite properly, and Never Surprised were last. At the top of the hill Pigskin and Terror were still leading by several lengths, Terror having just the better of the argument. Reward was now third and Esquemeling fourth. Coming down the hill into the straight it seemed reasonably certain that either Terror or Pigskin would win, although it is to be noted that at that time Flag of Truce, a stable companion of Pigskin, was not badly placed and was going well. Three furlongs from the finish Pigskin got his head in front of Terror, the two of them being well clear of the other starters. Terror, however, would not give in and Pigskin had to be ridden all out to win by a head. When the race was to all intents and purposes over Lady of Shalott, who had been shut in more than once, found an opening and came with such a run that she was beaten for second place by only a length and a half, and if the race had been a hundred yards longer she would no doubt have won.

An Easy Win

There is very little that can be written about the two opening events, the Betchworth Selling Plate and the Evelyn Selling Plate. The former was won with much ease by the Lady Luster colt, who was always at long odds on. He won from Mizmaze, with a stable companion, Divine Lady filly, third and Black Pearl fourth. More than one of the two-year-olds who finished behind the winner will most probably be placed in time to win small races, but it is also certain that they are rather moderate. The well-bred Sindhi won the Evelyn Selling Plate, also with ease. He is well bred, being by Diophon out of Mirawala, and was bred by the Aga Khan. He is now owned by G. Bennett and trained by him. He has had the reputation of being not too genuine, but ridden this time by G. Richards he was led by only Plank. He was out alone in front early in the straight, and won without being challenged from Red Messenger, who made up a lot of ground in the last quarter of a mile. Empire Son was a moderate third. Sindhi was bought in after the race for only 140 guineas.

The Hyde Park Stakes, which followed the City and Suburban Handicap, was another dull affair, for there were only hree starters, and Canticle started at 6 to 1 on. He won as such a favorite should do, making all of the running. It needs only to be recorded that Gold Link was second and Mauna Loa third. The second is a big and strong colt by Gold Bridge, and it will be surprising if he lets down his gallant sire all through his career on the racecourse. He should make a fine three-year-old sprinter. Mauna Loa is by Blandford out of Potrait, useful breeding on the sire's side, but not so good on that of the dam. The breeding of the winner is not so aristocratic, as she is out of Versicle, who being out of Verdict, is not in the Stud Book.

Yokohama To Build Super Highway To Site At Komazawa

Special To The Japan Times

YOKOHAMA, May 11—A super highway between the projected Olympic grounds at Komazawa and the yacht harbor here at an approximate cost of one million yen has been planned by the Kanagawa Prefectural engineering department to meet the increased traffic in 1940. The proposed road will be 20 meters in width between Yokohama and Kikuna and 12 meters between Kikuna and Tamagawa river on the outskirts of Tokyo.

The authorities here hope that the proposed road will also ease the congested traffic between Tokyo and this city and remove the threat of a greater Tokyo harbor which would seriously affect the business of this city.

Eastern Crews To Make Bid For Supremacy

NEW YORK, April 13—Washington and California, the Pacific Coast's Colossi of rowing, will face a fleet of 12 to 14 crews on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie, June 27, as the East makes one more bid to return rowing leadership to the Eastern seaboard.

The record of the Western eights grows more staggering every year. Not since 1934 has an Eastern boat won one of the races. A Navy varsity last captured the richest prize in 1931 and the Huskies of Washington, starting in 1933, have bagged four freshman victories.

The tall men from Seattle are defending in each of the three races—varsity, junior varsity, and freshmen—this year. Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, who announced the entries yesterday, says dryly, "They'll probably be pretty fair."

California, Navy, Cornell, Syracuse, Columbia, and Wisconsin, the lone mid-western entry, will be arrayed against Washington in the varsity four-mile classic. The Huskies are seeking their third straight title in this and the other two races.

Only Cornell and Navy contended the right of way with Mr. Ulbrickson's young men in last year's junior varsity race. This year there's a possibility both Columbia and Syracuse also will enter the three-miler. Their entry would increase the total number of crews to 17 for the three races.

Navy, usually a threat in the freshman race, will be missing this year since the date of the regatta conflicts with the annual plebe Summer cruise. So California, Cornell, Syracuse, and Columbia will try to head off the Huskies in the two-mile opening race.

As usual, plans and plots to outwit and outrow the coast Giants are rife. At a luncheon given by Stevenson yesterday, half a dozen reasons for western supremacy were given along with a dozen antidotes.

One official of the I. R. A. attributed the East's losses to lack of spirit.

"The eights get out there to line up and it's all over for the East. The boys have had the idea they can't beat the West dinned into them so much they can't imagine winning."

Most hopeful sign for Eastern rowing is a reawakened interest in the sport. Dartmouth, Williams, Rollins, Manhattan, and Rutgers and several others are supporting crews while high and prep school rowing is booming.

Japanese Defeat Filipinos In Boxing, Wrestling

The All-Japanese teams won convincingly from the visiting Philippine aggregations in wrestling and boxing Thursday night at the Hibiya Public Park amphitheater to repeat their triumphs last week at Koshien.

The Japanese made a clean sweep in the wrestling by taking all four matches, all on falls. The score in the boxing was 4 to 1.

The Japanese grapplers were far superior to the Filipinos in technique and it was only natural that they should defeat the visitors, who resorted almost in the entirety to strength.

The results were:

WRESTLING

Bantamweight: Michiaki (Japan) won by fall from Florendo (Philippines), 8 minutes 30 seconds.

Featherweight: Yoshioka (Japan) won by fall from Luna (Philippines), 6 minutes 10 seconds.

Lightweight: Kin (Japan) won by fall from Bernabe (Philippines), 8 minutes 30 seconds.

Welterweight: Kazama (Japan) defeated Arcales (Philippines), 5 minutes 35 seconds.

BOXING

The results of the boxing were:

Flyweight: Ito (Japan) decisioned Ferreira (Philippines).

Bantamweight: Faloma (Philippines) decisioned Sai (Japan).

Featherweight: Ko (Japan) decisioned Cordova (Philippines).

Lightweight: Kagino (Japan) decisioned Villacompo (Philippines).

Welterweight: Ri (Japan) decisioned Cravera (Philippines).

Frick Forecasts Close Flag Race In National Loop

By FORD FRICK
President National League

N.Y. Times

I feel that 1938 is going to be one of the most momentous years in baseball history.

Maybe it's because this is baseball's hundredth year. When the curtain rings down next October we'll be looking back upon a complete century of our national sport's life since Abner Doubleday laid out the first baseball diamond on the Cooperstown (N. Y.) Commons in the Spring of 1839.

Maybe it's because National League clubs in their Spring mobilizations have shown an impressive array of new players in every line-up, the largest influx of strong new talent for many years. In nearly every club's line-up there's at least one newcomer stationed in an important position. This means that there'll be something vitally interesting in the picture of every club as it faces the first "play ball" of the 1938 pennant race.

Sees Earnest Effort

I know that a lot of my anticipation of big things in 1938 comes from the way National League clubs have performed in training camp games and along the north-bound exhibition trail. Every club in its play has shown earnestness and seriousness of purpose that means another close pennant race and a hard-fought battle for every position all the way down the line.

That's not all of it, though. In Winter we fans get to brooding about war and business and the social order and things like that. But by the time mid-April starts the bats swinging and the balls skipping across major league panoramas, these wintry broodings seem to do a fast fadeout.

I think 1938 is going to be a great year because it's another test of baseball as the national game, the common meeting ground of all the parties and schools of thought and guilds in our land. Ever since baseball began it has been fulfilling that function in our national life. In 1938 the challenge is just as serious and important.

Attendance Figures Up

I'm happy about it because all the evidence to date is that baseball in 1938 will do its job better than ever before. The first Florida exhibition game—Cardinals vs. Yankees at St. Petersburg—set a new attendance record for St. Petersburg. In most of the training camps the first games set a new record.

This meant to me that the national attitude to baseball is strengthened this year more than ever. A league president is supposed to say each Spring that things look great, prospects are brighter than ever, everything points to a banner year.

Ever since I've been a president that's been the easiest part of the job, because that's the way I have felt every Spring. But what with one thing and another and this and that, this year it seems easier to say it than ever before.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" --by Ripley

The Regent Diamond

Working in a mine near Golconda, India, in 1701, one of the slaves found the huge rough treasure and concealed it in a self-inflicted wound in his leg. Escaping from the mine, the slave confided his secret to a sea captain, who promised him freedom in exchange for the diamond. The captain eventually sold the gem to Thomas Pitt for $5,000, and it became known as the Pitt diamond. Its possession, however, caused Pitt so much anxiety that upon its disposal it was given the name Regent and its popularity grew to such extent that in 1717 it changed hands for the price of $675,000 and was mounted in the crown of Louis XV. It has since played an important role in French history, and now reposes in the Louvre, Paris.

In cutting the stone, it was reduced from 410 to 136¾ carats. The diamond dust recovered in the cutting process was valued at $35,000.

Futabayama Is Stronger Than In January, Beats Tough Ryogoku With Ease

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

It was Ryogoku who gave Grand Champion Futabayama his toughest bout in the last tournament in January and almost spoiled his undefeated record of four seasons—the two had to rewrestle after long deliberation on the claim by Grand Champion Tamanishiki, who had been Ryogoku's second, that Futabayama's right foot had stepped outside the ring in throwing his opponent. But it was a different story Friday afternoon before an enthusiastic crowd of near 20,000 fans that jammed the Kokugikan bowl on the east side of the Sumida river. Despite Ryogoku's speed in thrusting his right arm through Futabayama's defense for a vantage hold on the latter's girdle, through sheer strength, Futabayama started pushing and just about crushed Ryogoku into two outside the ring.

It was Futabayama's third victory in as many days and his 56th consecutive victory in the official tournaments at the Kokugikan bowl. He is out to win his fifth championship without a defeat, and the indications are that he will do it. He has put on a lot of weight since the January tourney. His stomach is much bigger, protruding almost as much as that of Grand Champion Tamanishiki, whose weight of 34 kwan or approximately 280 pounds he now equals. A big stomach is necessary for a champion wrestler. It is a powerful weapon to use as a lever to lift opponents into the air and then deposit them outside of the ring for victories. Then on the defense, it is used to prevent opponents from obtaining holds on the girdle, which in many cases is the deciding factor for victory or defeat. This indigenous sport of Japan is probably the only one existing in which a fat projecting stomach is desired. Almost 6 feet tall, and with powerful shoulders, plus his stomach that has been described in the foregoing, Futabayama is one of the most impressive looking "yokozuna" or grand champions in years.

Minanogawa Wins

Grand Champion Minanogawa, who on Thursday suffered a setback by Wakashima, was expected to have a battle on his hands in the last bout of the day against Itsutsushima. But the quickness with which he dispatched Itsutsushima dumbfounded the spectators. After a rather lengthy "shikiri" or process of getting spiritually united to stand up and do battle, Itsutsushima, with his head bent, rushed to thrust his right arm through Minanogawa's defense for a grip on his girdle. But the grand champion, who is the largest of the first ranking wrestlers and his known for his slowness, surprised the crowd by sidestepping to the right, and with his great hands, cuffed Itsutsushima's head and down went the latter sprawling on to the sand. It would be more precise to say that Minanogawa showed Itsutsushima with his hands because striking is prohibited in the sport.

Grand Champion Tamanishiki indicated that it is he alone that has a chance of stopping Futabayama's winning streak and that he will hang up an unblemished record until he meets Futabayama on the climaxing 13th day of the tournament. He had a strong opponent to meet in Ayanobori, who has been reported to be in the pink of condition for the first time in several seasons, and one of the select few considered to have a chance against the invincible Futabayama. It was Tamanishiki's ability in preventing Ayanobori to obtain a hold on his girdle that accounted for his quick victory. No sooner had they stood up than Tamanishiki, known as the quickest starter despite his 230 pounds, thrust his two arms through Ayanobori's and he started pushing. Even the tough Ayanobori was powerless under such circumstances, and he was promptly pushed out.

Musashiyama Given Battle

Shachinosato, considered the best looking of the sumo men, put up a gallant fight against the other Grand Champion Musashiyama. For a moment or two, the two stood motionless in the middle of the ring. Shachinosato had his right arm through for a grip on Musashiyama's girdle and he crouched low, forcing Musashiyama to take an erect position. It seemed as if Shachinosato might have a chance to pull off a gala surprise. But he lost his opportunity by failing to become the aggressor. For while he was deliberating what to do, Musashiyama maneuvered himself and thrust his right arm through for a similar hold with Shachinosato, and that was the end. For with superior strength and technique, once they were on even terms, he took no time in throwing Shachinosato.

But the best match of the day was that between Kagamiiwa, of "ohseki" rank or immediately below grand champion, and Haguroyama, up and coming stable-mate of Futabayama. Haguroyama was the aggressor. He pushed and pushed and had Kagamiiwa at the edge of the ring, but the latter checked the drive. Then Haguroyama pumped his two powerful legs into the sand and started pushing again. Once again Kagamiiwa was on the verge of being shoved out, but once more he saved himself with a supreme effort. Then as Haguroyama firmly grasped Kagamiiwa's girdle and pushed to force Kagamiiwa into an erect position, the latter when experts had considered him in hopeless position, suddenly hooked his left leg onto Haguroyama's from the outside, and attempted a body throw from left to right. It worked and Haguroyama's body sailed clean through the air before hitting the sand for a sensational victory for Kagamiiwa.

Mayedayama, new "ohseki," had a narrow escape in his bout with Taikyuzan. As a matter of fact, the latter swung Mayedayama around close to the ring edge and seemed on the way to victory but it was Mayedayama that fell on top of him outside the ring to win.

Wakashima Again

Wakashima, who on Thursday defeated Minanogawa, hung up another sterling victory and in convincing style when he lifted the strong Tamanoumi and carried him outside of the ring.

Akinoumi, up and coming wrestler of the Dewanoumi camp who hails from Hiroshima City, won two silver trophies presented by the Tokyo Nichi Nichi and the Kodan Magazine, by shoving out Kojimakawa, stalwart of the Tachinami camp to which Futabayama belongs.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Harridge Expects Season Of Thrills

By WILLIAM HARRIDGE
President of the American League

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 16—I am convinced that the 1938 baseball season which opens Monday will afford as keen and wholesome recreation as any year of its history and will attract increased thousands of spectators who enjoy clean, exciting sport.

We of the American League enter this new season, the 100th since the first diamond was laid out at Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1839, confident that baseball this Summer will be replete with thrills for the fans and immensely successful in a financial way.

Increase in Interest

That America is yearly becoming more sportsminded must be evident even to the casual observer. The startling increase at all sports events during the past year is but the outward expression of increased popular interest.

I believe that baseball will play an important part in this nationwide increase in competitive sports interest. I feel the American League will do its part, contributing a lineup of generally strengthened teams which should make for close games and an exciting pennant race from start to finish.

With new records in attendance set in numerous exhibition games this Spring, I believe that the interest of the fans will be generally increased in every team in the league. The splendid showing this Spring of the St. Louis Browns, I am sure, will aid not only the attendance of that team, but the attendance of every club in the circuit.

Clubs Show Improvement

Detroit, Cleveland, Boston and Chicago, I think, will be better than last season, while Washington and Philadelphia also will be stronger. The New York Yankees, who drew so well both at home and on the road in 1937, again will be the focal point of millions of fans.

In addition, this year brings up many new faces in both major leagues and fans always keep close watch on the way in which newcomers attempt to take the place of departed stars who helped make baseball the truly national sport it has come to be.

I look forward with all fans to Monday's cry: "Play ball!"

Hosei Gridders Play Kansai "U" Sunday At Koshien Stadium

(Special to The Japan Times)

KOBE, May 14—Another off season annual grid classic between the Kansai University aggregation and the Hosei University will take place at the South Koshien stadium on Sunday, May 15.

Despite the hot weather the Kansai gridders have been going through intensive drills every day, and feel confident that they will come through with their first victory since the inauguration of American Football in that institution some three years ago.

The kick-off is slated to take place at 2 p.m.

Japanese Davis Cuppers To Visit Holland, Reich

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 12—Tamio Abe, non-playing captain, Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu, members of the Japanese Davis Cup squad, arrived here today from Germany after participating in the international tennis tourney at Wiesbaden, Germany.

After staying here for five days, the Japanese players are scheduled to leave here on May 17 for Holland where they will participate in another tourney. Later they will revisit Germany.

California Has Great College Baseball Race

Christian Science Monitor

LOS ANGELES—The Bears of the University of California at Berkeley; the Trojans of the University of Southern California, and the Gaels of St. Mary's are in a great race for the baseball pennant in the 15-game season of the six-way California Intercollege Baseball Association.

After the Mexican-standoff invasion of the San Francisco Bay region by the favorite Trojans, the Bears on April 15 led the league in this wise: won 10 and lost 3, Gaels 8 and 3, Trojans 7 and 3, U. C. L. A. 5 and 5, Stanford 5 and 8, and Santa Clara 1 and 14.

Cal's two remaining games with Stanford end their season's play, and Cal's record of thumping the Trojans last week is enough to deflate any logical hopes of Cal dropping one of the Stanford games in order to give U. S. C. a chance to win the gonfalon. As it stands, U. S. C. can only tie Cal if both win their remaining games.

Trojans Split Tour

In splitting games on its northern tour, the Trojans beat Santa Clara and Stanford and lost to Cal and St. Mary's. They were defeated with their star pitchers in the box, and this looks bad for any easy triumph over St. Mary's. Always having an Indian sign over the Bruins, the Trojans would surprise no one, however, by sweeping the series.

On paper, St. Mary's can take its two games from the Bruins as well as from the Trojans and thereby win the pennant, if Cal drops its remaining game with Stanford, or ties Cal if the latter goes undefeated.

The closeness of the competition makes it one of the best in years, and it's still anybody's race (if a phrase may be coined). Traditional rivalry is enough to boost Stanford, despite her miserable record, to equal any occasion as far as Cal is concerned, so it is far from safe to predict a double win for Cal, although she won the first 12 to 1.

Likewise, the Trojans have a "traditional" superiority over their remaining opponents, and Troy's chances of running out undefeated are enhanced by the advantage of being among the league-leading trio, the team which has to travel least from now on. This was a factor in forcing Troy to halve its northern schedule, and Troy cordially is wishing "you are the same" to St. Mary's.

Trojans Have Fine Record

To top it off, Troy is out to defend her record: champion in 1930, 1932, 1935 (tied with Cal) and 1936. Last year Troy was runner-up to Cal. This margin remained concise in the current series, in which Cal won the first game 4 to 2 in 10 innings, lost the second 10 to 5, and won the deciding game 5 to 2. In this series, Coach Justin McCarthy (Sam) Barry, who has been coaching baseball at U. S. C. since 1930, put in everything he had, but it wasn't enough. Alex Petrushkin '38 lost both the Cal games. He has alternately pitched and played left field for three seasons. Today's lone Cal win was accomplished with Jack Brewer, a sophomore surprise, on the mound.

It is with right-hander Brewer that Troy hopes for oncoming years rest. He is a 6ft. 2in. import from Long Beach. He has a hard and fast delivery which he is learning to mix with curves. He is not as steady as he no doubt will be in the next two season. Experts are already seeing in him another Joe Gonzales, who ended a remarkable pitching career with Troy last year by being signed by the Boston Red Sox.

Also strengthening Troy's hope for the future is Roy Engle, the sophomore first-string catcher. From San Diego he came to College on his reputation in football, at which he earned his letter as fullback last season. Much is expected from the Brewer-Engle battery in the next three years.

Captain at Shortstop

The Troy infield is led by Capt. Hal Sieling, shortstop. Small but fast, he led the league in assists last season. He is lead-off man and consistently hits above .350, so he appears headed for coast honors again.

The rest of the team is composed of Wayne (Lefty) Murdock '40, left-handed first baseman, who is a good fielder and a fair hitter; Arthur M. Lilly '39 at second; William Tanner '38, who is clean-up man, at third; Comrade Petrushkin in left, when he isn't pitching, and when he's chucking, the field position falls to Jack M. Hanson, a promising sophomore; John E. Ramsey '39, who led the league last year with his .467, at center; and Lester G. Evans '40 in right field. All in all, the Trojans are in a good position to save their reputation this year by taking a first-division place at worst and at the same time build constructively for ensuing years.

War Admiral Picked To Beat Seabiscuit

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 14—Turf followers marked time yesterday, except for discussion as to who would win the $100,000 race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit on May 30, while the air mail was carrying formal agreements to owners Samuel D. Riddle and Charles S. Howard. These were sent by Treasurer John J. Coakley of the Westchester Racing Association so that the Belmont Park organization might proceed with the revision of its Spring stake program.

With the big race on Memorial Day, the date of the Suburban Handicap will be changed to May 28, according to present indications. It also is likely that the date of the Metropolitan Handicap will be shifted, as well as those of all other stakes except the Belmont, which will remain June 4.

Conference Slated Tomorrow

These moves await a conference among officials of Belmont Park and Racing Secretary Jack Campbell, who is expected from Bowie tomorrow for a discussion. In the meantime Messrs. Riddle and Howard will signify formally their intention of racing their horses on the day appointed.

The race seems likely to develop into an East-West controversy as to the respective merits of the horses, as there appears only a corporal's guard in this area willing to concede Seabiscuit any chance. From Herbert Bayard Swope through the ranks of officials who desired not to be quoted, and down to the ordinary horse player, there was a surprising unanimity for War Admiral.

Whether this is Eastern pride remains to be seen. Word from the Coast is that the Californians are just as cocksure about Seabiscuit.

Kurtsinger Very Confident

One who put himself far out on a limb in favor of War Admiral was Jockey Charles Kurtsinger. He said: "It won't be close. How can Seabiscuit get close to War Admiral?" Kurtsinger, of course is War Admiral's jockey, and there are others who think differently. But that's what the race is for—to settle the difference of opinion.

Mr. Swope, resting yesterday from his labors in arranging the race, said: "I was glad of the chance to help arrange matters. I think it will be the greatest match race of all.

"Matters now are in the hands of the Westchester Racing Association officials, and I am sure they will handle details without asking too heavy an increase in admission prices. It is a race in which I am sure the public will be interested, which it will patronize, and with which it will be pleased."

"Still Up in the Air"

LOS ANGELES, April 13—Contradicting all previous reports, Charles S. Howard said late today that the Belmont Park race between his horse, Seabiscuit, and War Admiral was "still more or less up in the air."

Mr. Howard said the main doubt surrounding the Spring date lay in the condition of Seabiscuit's jockey, John (Red) Pollard, and until it was definitely learned whether Pollard could ride, acceptance was uncertain. Pollard, who broke his collarbone at Santa Anita Park more than a month ago, is expected to learn definitely tomorrow whether he can ride by May 30.

Mr. Howard said the change from a September date had caused a hitch in his original plan to keep his stable in California for the Hollywood Turf Club meeting at Inglewood with its featured $50,000 added Gold Cup Handicap July 16.

"The race with War Admiral is paramount to everything, but I am under some obligations to race here this Summer," Mr. Howard said. "But if Pollard can get back into the saddle and be in condition to ride May 30 we will go East."

The owner was still undecided whether Seabiscuit would run in the Bay Meadows Handicap at San Mateo Saturday.

Baillet-Latour Approves Shift Of Games' Site

From Saburo Kurusu, Japanese Ambassador to Belgium, has come word that Count Henri Baillet-Latour, chairman of the International Olympic Committee, has sanctioned the shifting of the site of the main Olympic Stadium from the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine to Komazawa.

Ambassador Kurusu sent a radio message to the Foreign Office, which the latter Friday transmitted to the Tokyo Municipality, which is to act on the budget of ¥12,000,000 next week.

The decision of the change in the site was informed to Count Baillet-Latour by Count Michimasa Soyejima, member of the I. O. C., by radiotelephone recently.

On his inspection visit to Japan before the 11th Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936, Count Baillet-Latour looked over the layout at the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine and expressed satisfaction. And it was this layout that was pictured to members of the I. O. C. at its meeting at Berlin during the 11th Olympic Games by Count Soyejima for the Japanese delegation and by Count Baillet-Latour. And thus was it that the 12th Olympic Games were awarded to Tokyo.

Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary-general of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee, will broadcast over JOAK for 20 minutes beginning 7:40 p.m. next Thursday, reporting on the recent meeting of the I.O.C. at Cairo, particularly on the outstanding accomplish of the late Prof. Jigoro Kano, I.O.C. member, who died last week on the Hikawa Maru homeward bound from Seattle.

Dr. Puccio Pucci, member of the Fascist Goodwill Mission that was recently in Japan and who came as a representative of the Italian Amateur Athletic Federation, issued a statement at Dairen Friday to the effect that Italy expects to send over 400 athletes to the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940. He also voiced regret at the untimely passing of Professor Kano, before the staging of the 1940 Games.

Yale Turns Back Columbia By 4-3

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 13.—Although held to three hits by Jack Moller, Columbia University ace, Yale, the defending champion, capitalized on eight bases on balls to turn back the Lions, 4 to 3, in the opening game of the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League today.

Moller was the individual star of the contest, contributing two safeties, including a double, to the visitors' seven-hit attack against Moe Jubitz, Eli hurling star, and driving across two of the losers' three markers. He also fielded his position brilliantly, having four assists. However, his passes paved the way for three of Yale's runs.

An Errorless Battle

Both team gave their twirlers errorless support, the New Yorkers, who were making their initial start of the season, turning in two fast double plays. In the fourth, Dean Arnold took Alter's bounder, tagged Tibbetts racing into second and then rifled a throw to Stickel to catch Alter. Sid Luckman hauled down Bill Loveday's liner in the fifth and with a quick toss to first doubled up Jubitz.

Yale made the deciding tally in the eighth inning after Wargo had opened for the Elis by fanning. Loveday drew a base on balls and advanced to second as Molley threw out Collins at first. Doonan then singled to deep right, Loveday racing home when Stoltz's throw-in was cut off at second base. Marcus then grounded to Luckman, who tagged second to retire Doonan and the side.

Collins Gets a Triple

Columbia sent across its first run in the second inning, but the Elis came right back to tie the count in their half, and then go ahead by 3—1 in the third frame, which was featured by Eddie Collins' triple following a pass to Wargo. The Lions scored once in the fourth and drew even at 3-all in the sixth on Luckman's single and Moller's two-bagger.

Jubitz bore down in the last three frames to check the threatening invaders. In the seventh the Lions were retired with Art Radvilas, Captain Hube Schulze and Stickel stranded on the bases, and in the eighth the Eli pitcher struck out Desmond, Moller and Murphy in succession.

5-Year Program Of Manchoukuo Will Be Revised

Funds To Be Allocated Various Industries Under New Plan

Domei Tsushin

HSINKING, May 14—A draft revision of the five-year plan for the industrial development of Manchoukuo, which has been enforced since last year, will form the subject of discussion at a joint conference of Government officials and representatives of semi-official companies and banks scheduled to take place at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the Japan-Manchoukuo Military Club here.

The draft plan, on which final decision has been taken by the Manchoukuo Government after consultation with the Japanese authorities, is designed to expand the five-year industrial plan now in force so as to cope with the new situation arising out of the current Sino-Japanese hostilities.

The amended plan lays special stress on iron manufacturing, coal mining and liquid fuel production. It also includes new lines of industry such as manufacturing of agricultural apparatus and fertilizers.

As to the agricultural policy, welfare of the people will demand the first and foremost attention. Production of soya-beans on a larger scale is also included in the new program.

With unqualified support promised by Japan, ¥4,800,000,000 will be raised and allocated to every line of industry, namely, ¥3,800,000,000 to mining, ¥140,000,000 to agriculture, ¥640,000,000 to communications and ¥220,000,000 for immigration.

The draft plan points out the necessity of raising funds through encouragement of gold production, promotion of export trade and attraction of foreign capital.

Lunghai Railway

toward Hofei.

Both Huangshan and Szefangshan are located along the Hwainan Railway between Tsihsien and Hofei. The Japanese trapped and annihilated about 2,000 Chinese troops at Szefangshan Wednesday, and the following day completely demolished approximately 6,000 soldiers armed with trench mortars at the top of Huangshan, it was learned. The Japanese suffered little or no losses.

As these mountains fell into the hands of the Japanese, the city of Hofei is now within a striking distance. Being an important communications point, it has been the headquarters of enemy guerilla corps in the region.

Taiyingtsi Is Captured

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED PLACE, May 14—An unnamed Japanese unit which suddenly made its appearance at a certain point, early this morning captured Taiyingtsi, about 32 kilometers south of Suhsien on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and along the Kwei River, thus affecting seriously the enemy concentrated around Kuhsien on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and in Anhwei Province.

Stage Vigorous Offensive

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED PLACE, May 14—Keeping pace with the Japanese offensive on the ground, Japanese Army planes belonging to the Kugishima, Kanzaki, Mayejima and Uyeda units today staged a vigorous attack from the air despite the strong wind.

The Japanese Army squadron rained bombs over the Chinese positions along the southern section of the Tientsin-Pukow railway, demolishing the military establishments there.

Another Japanese air unit belonging to the Kinugawa detachment carried out a daring low flight over the enemy concentrated near Kuchen and Suhsien on the Tientsin-Pukow line, and machine-gunned them. Heavy damage was reported to be inflicted upon soldiers of the 131st Division of the Chinese Army.

Paishan Is Occupied

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED PLACE, May 14—An undisclosed Japanese unit at 5:30 a.m. today captured the walled town of Paishan, half way between Suhsien on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and Yungcheng, key point in northeastern Honan Province which has already been placed in the Japanese hands.

Nearing Lunghai Line

Domei Tsushin

PEKING, May 14.—Chinese batteries in the vicinity of Tsaochow about 50 kilometers south of Puhsien on the Shantung-Hopei border were demolished at about 8 a.m. by the same Japanese contingent which had crossed the Yellow River in the face of enemy forces at Puhsien the day before yesterday, according to a communique issued by the Army headquarters here at 4 p.m. today.

It was also pointed out that a Japanese unit, which started its action near Tsining in southwestern Shantung Monday, broke through the defense line linking Kiaiang and Yutai this morning after having repulsed the Chinese at various places on its southward drive. Heavy damage is believed to have been done to the enemy.

Despite hot weather, the same communique disclosed, these corps are rapidly advancing toward the Lunghai Railway in high spirits. While crossing the River, the Japanese sustained eight casualties.

The Japanese operating on the Anhwei-Kiangsu border to the east of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway have since been gradually pressing toward the enemy right flank while reducing key points one after another, the communique concluded.

Sato Leaves For China

Kennosuke Sato, Parliamentary Counselor of the Commerce and Industry Ministry, will leave here for North China Tuesday to inspect industrial conditions there and Manchoukuo.

Peace Industries Using More Nickel Than Arms Makers

Armament Plants Using Only 10 P.C. Of Total Output

TORONTO, Canada—With Canada supplying 86.5 per cent of the world's consumption of nickel, it is interesting to note that practically 90 per cent of this metal is today used for commercial purposes and only ten per cent can be traced to the use, in one form or another, in armaments. The general manager of the Canadian company controlling the production of nickel in the Dominion stated, in his presidential address here recently, that approximately $18,750,000 had been expended in the past twenty years in research, development and publicity to create peace-time used for nickel. "Whereas prior to and during the Great War, the greatest part of the world's nickel production was used in armament," he said, "today the converse was true and all but a small part of the world's nickel is absorbed by industry for a multitude of peace-time uses."

Nickel is of minor importance in warfare as contrasted with steel, copper, zinc and lead, he said. Not only does but a small fraction of nickel go into war materials, but the percentage that does go into armament represents a negligible percentage of the total of all metals used for such purposes. "For example, no nickel whatever, is used in rifle or machine gun barrels or in bayonet steel. Nickel in bullet jackets has been replaced largely by 'gilding metal,' a less expensive alloy containing no nickel whatsoever. Nickel is used in large gun forgings, trucks, airplanes and in armor for battleships. The alloy steels used for the purposes enumerated contain only from 1 per cent to 5 per cent of nickel and the amount of nickel so used is less than 10 per cent of the world output. Thus nickel is not essentially a war metal, nor is it essential to war, whether gauged by the percentage of nickel which goes into armament or whether gauged by the percentage of armament metal which is represented by nickel.

"Nickel is sold in bulk to steel makers and alloy manufacturers throughout the world, who, in turn, sell their nickel-bearing products to numerous fabricators for final distribution to numerous users. Thus the nickel used in armament exclusively cannot be segregated successfully."

Sales of nickel by the Canadian company have increased progressively since 1932, and during the past year reached a total of 207,700,000 pounds. Other countries producing nickel are: New Caledonia, Norway, Germany, Burma, Brazil, Greece and Tasmania. Aside from these active sources of supply, there are potential supplies in Finland and Russia, and known deposits in South Africa, Dutch East Indies, Alaska and Chosen.

Mexico Withdraws Envoy To London

Domei Tsushin

MEXICO CITY, May 13—Climaxing a period of ill-feeling between Great Britain and Mexico which has been evident since the latter's expropriation of British oil properties, the Mexican Government, through its foreign relations department, today announced the withdrawal of the Mexican minister to the Court of St. James, Primo Villa Michel.

In making public the minister's withdrawal, the foreign relations department based its action on the "unfriendly attitude" of the British Government. Observers interpreted the Mexican government's move as a threat that, if relations are not improved, a formal rupture of diplomatic relations may be expected.

Volume Of Notes Issued By China Banks Increases

Chinese Defense Bonds Fail To Make Appearance On Shanghai Mart

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, May 12—Bank notes issued by the four government banks, including the Central Bank of China, Bank of China, Bank of Communications and Farmers' Bank, amounted to 1,693,850,000 yuan at the end of April, showing an increase of 15,000,000 yuan as compared with the preceding month, according to a Hankow report reaching here today.

These figures which have been disclosed by the committee on issue reserve apparently indicate a considerable expansion of Chinese currency with the Central Bank of China alone issuing 460,877,000 yuan worth of bank notes which is the highest level on record.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that during the month, the Central Bank sold foreign currency amounting to about 1,500,000 pounds sterling, thus withdrawing its bank notes for some 30,000,000 yuan.

The following is the table on note issues of the aforesaid four banks:

(In Million)	April	March
Central Bank of China	461	444
Bank of China	652	654
Bank of Communications	319	319
Farmer's Bank	262	262
Total	1,694	1,679

Bonds Not On Sale

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, May 13—Despite the recent announcement by the Chinese National Government that 500,000,000 yuan worth of its national defense bonds would go on sale from May 1, not a single bond of the kind has made its appearance for sale at the local market, it was learned.

The reason, according to Chinese quarters, is due to the fact that the Government's campaign corps, though first attempted to obtain the subscription of 10,000,000 yuan worth of the bond, has found it difficult to attain the objective because of the incapability of the general populace to meet such Government request.

Meanwhile, local Chinese banks disclosed that they decided to subscribe a large amount of the national defense bonds but that negotiations got under way at Hongkong instead of here. In this connection, the same quarters also stated that Hongkong is now China's financial center where representatives of local banks are stationed.

Interesting Facts Seen In Anschluss

Aspects On Credit And Debit Side Of Recent Move

BERLIN, April—(INS)—What has Germany gained by the incorporation of Austria?

In the first place, the Reich has gained 6,500,000 taxpayers. They include 200,000 Jews, however, who will cause the legislators considerable additional headache?

It has added 32,000 square miles of mostly alpine stretches to its territory, which will no doubt become a favorite with German holidaymakers for the coming years.

It has gained 30,000 trained soldiers and their military equipment, including artillery and motorized units.

It has added 250,000 tons of coal, nearly 3,000,000 tons of lignite and, about 1,000,000 tons of iron ore yearly.

Its wood production has been increased by one third through Austria's wide forests, badly needed for the 4-year-plan-paper-and textile industry.

It has gained nearly 2,500,000 cattle, 260,000 horses, 325,000 goats, nearly 3,000,000 pigs.

Germany has, moreover, found about 150,000,000 marks worth of gold and foreign exchanges in the Vienna treasury, which represents twice as much as the Reich possessed.

It has gained a country rich in natural water power, which can be turned into a huge supplier of electrical energy.

Moreover, the incorporation of Austria has dethroned Germany's highest mountain, the Zugspitze, and made the Grossglockner, about 11,000 feet high, the queen of the German Alps.

It also dethroned Germany's second city, Hamburg, putting Vienna with nearly 2,000,000 inhabitants in its place and making Hamburg third.

On the debit side, Germany inherited an army of unemployed. But this inheritance was made at a moment when the full capacity of the German labor market was reached and shortage of skilled labor is beginning to make itself felt. Therefore the German industry will regard the Austrian working class as a welcome collaborator for the completion of their giant task of establishing maximum self-sufficiency.

Self-sufficiency: By incorporating Austria, Germany has certainly not increased her "degree" of self-sufficiency, at least not in the realm of foodstuffs, since Austria cannot feed its population from its own food resources. Although cattle breeding is on a large scale, other essential foodstuffs such as grains cannot be grown because of the mostly alpine character of the country.

The balance of debits and credits in the big deal which Chancellor Hitler has just negotiated by the incorporation of Austria shows one clear fact: Germany has become power No. 1 of the European continent, geographically, economically and politically speaking. There can be no arguing away this naked fact.

L'HOMME DE MINUIT.
Roman, par FRANCIS CARCO de l'Académie Goncourt

La nuit est, par excellence, l'atmosphère romanesque de M. François Carco, la nuit et ses ombres désincarnées toujours à la poursuite de la forme réelle et dense qu'elles ont perdue, la nuit surprise, par éclairs, crevée par les jaillissements des lumières fugitives et brutales, domaine des inquiétudes et des tourments, noire série des heures vouées aux peines et au sanglots, aux malheurs et aux crimes; la nuit où toutes les réalités libérées des lignes que leur impose le jour se diluent dans la brume ou s'enflent en créations de rêve et en constructions de cauchemar.

C'est dans ce second empire de la vie de l'homme où les images de la lumière gardent si peu d'elles-mêmes avant de s'effacer devant la mystérieuse intrusion des pensées, des voix et des choses nocturnes, que M. Francis Carco a trouvé les thèmes les plus poignants de ses études. La nuit lui apporte, par surcroit, cet élément de poésie diffuse dont elle est gonflée et où il aime à plonger son réalisme le plus dur.

A quelques centaines de mètres du Montparnasse transformé de l'après-guerre, la vieille rue de la Gaîte a gardé son visage d'autrefois. Il en est peu dans Paris qui soit aussi fortement marquée par les générations populaires qui en ont battu les pavés. Dans un univers qui tend à l'uniformité morne, elle mérite toujours son nom; elle est gaie. Et comme si le mot de gaîté n'était pas assez expressif, les indigènes du lieu ne l'ont jamais appelée autrement que la "Rue de la Joie". Elle est, aujourd'hui comme autrefois, grouillante, jacassante, rieuse, blagueuse, galvanisée par cet extraordinaire dynamisme qui émane du populaire. Les plaisirs et la ripaille se la partagent; les bistrots et les charcutiers y règnent par leurs alignements d'alcools et leurs étalages de cochonnailles. Les bals musettes et les caf'-conc' délectent les cervelles avec leurs programmes de chanteurs, de gymnastes et d'excentriques, corsés de l'apparition sensationnelle d'une vedette des boulevards venant apporter au populo dont elle est sortie quelques minutes de plaisir de luxe sur l'une de ces petites scènes où elle a souvent connu ses premiers succès.

Ce sont précisément les deux artistes d'un de ces music-halls qui sont les personnages principaux de L'Homme de minuit. Car dans le jeu tragique que M. Carco nous conte il y a en réalité deux "hommes de la nuit", deux équilibristes spécialisés dans la note burlesque créée par les Anglais. L'un a tué, pendant que l'autre faisait le guet. La victime? Une de ces vieilles clochardes qui traînent tout le jour, la main tendue, en spectres de la misère, et regagnent, la nuit venue, le galetas où elles thésaurisent les revenus de leur mendicité. La mère Paul appartient à la lignée dont Balzac a créé l'inoubliable prototype avec le mendiant de Saint-Sulpice. La mère Paul a donc été assassinée une nuit dans la cave qui lui sert de logement par l'un des duettistes, Jim, l'autre, Jimmy, veillant au grain sur le trottoir.

Les soupçons de la police, aussitôt, tombent juste—car le livre de M. Carco n'est rien moins qu'un roman policier—; ils convergent vers le duo des acrobates, mais, faute de témoignages et d'indices, on abandonne l'enquête.

Sur le plan judiciaire, l'affaire est donc terminée... Tout au contraire, elle commence. Jim et Jimmy n'ont plus rien à craindre des hommes... Ils ont tout à craindre d'eux-mêmes. Et ce que M. Carco suit dans cette aventure angoissante, c'est le lendemain de l'assassinat dans l'âme de celui qui a assassiné, la marche fatale qui le mènera à l'arrestation par le chemin des abandons et des imprudences nées de la peur, lentement, inexorablement maîtresse de sa tête et de ses nerfs.

Japan Virtually Clinches Far Eastern Cage Title By Topping Philippines, 31-29

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

Japan virtually won the title in the Far Eastern basketball championships Sunday afternoon at the outdoor court of the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine by nosing out the Philippines, 31 to 29. For Japan is an overwhelming favorite to down Manchoukuo this afternoon at the same court in the climaxing game of the tourney. The team from Hsinking was swamped 59 to 24 by the Philippine contingent on Saturday.

Their Imperial Highnesses Prince and Princess Takamatsu saw the entire game. The crowd was disappointingly small—two thousand as compared with the more than 50,000 that witnessed the doubleheader of the Tokyo Six University baseball league in the adjoining lot.

Japanese Defense Effective

A letdown in the last 10 minutes of the first half cost the Philippine quintet the game. Or it might be put the other way about that the man-to-man defense of the Japanese team worked too well then for the visitors. For the Filipinos got off to a flying start and were leading 8 to 0 at the end of the first three minutes of play. The Japanese combination deadlocked the count at 8-all at the end of the first 10 minutes and thereafter was never headed in the scoring though it was a two or one point margin during the greater part of the game.

Too much emphasis on long distance shooting, though it worked in the first five minutes of the contest, was one of the decisive factors for the Manila team's defeat. Granted that the Japanese put up a tight defense, the Philippine team should have persisted a bit more in its passing down in the opponent's territory with the view to maneuvering for an opening for a shot from basket close distance. Of course, there might have been a different story to relate had Captain Borck, always a high scorer, been in form but he was not up to his usual performance. He missed many a shot, when he should have passed to his team-mates from about the foul throw line, and the result was that the Japanese took the ball from the board and worked it down to the other end of the floor. And there was a noticeable tendency on his part to slow down at intervals of the game.

While the same Mr. Borck accounted for eight of his team's points, Sunday's game will be a tough one for him to forget for in the second half, he missed two easy goals right underneath the basket.

Adherence to the fundamentals of the game, especially that of passing in the opponent's territory to effect a close shot, without recklessly abandoning the ball to the opponents was a strong contributory factor for Japan's victory.

In the conversion of free throws did the Japanese also prove superior to the Filipinos. The latter succeeded in converting five out of twelve as against five out of nine by the former.

Guard Rius, who wore jersey No. 3, played a bang up game for the visitors. He and Center Arce broke up many a scoring play by the Japanese team. It was his field goal from the right flank that put the Philippine team but a basket behind, 31-29, with but a minute to go. And the gun went off with his shot from virtually the middle of the floor in flight for the goal. But it spun around the hoop and bounced away for victory by the Japanese team.

Yokoyama Stars

The outstanding star of the victorious Japanese combination was Forward Yokoyama, who wore jersey No. 9. He was all over the floor, leading the attack in close scoring distance. He three goals in the second half contributed greatly to his team's victory. Then there was Captain Matsui at guard, who was pivot man in working the ball into enemy territory. Hirooka gave a fine exhibition also at forward, as did Cho at guard.

The Filipinos just about played the slow starting Japanese casaba artists off their feet at the outset of the first half. The first tip-off was a basket producing play for the visitors. Arce outjumped Oka and a pass to Rius resulted in a beautiful goal from the right flank. Forward Lao followed with a sensational one-handed field goal. Then Borck was alone under the basket and registered for a 6 to 0 lead. He followed with another field goal and the score 8 to 0 in the Filipino's favor at the end of three minutes. The Japanese players worked the ball down time and time again and threatened the Manila team's goal but their shooting was terrible. But their man-to-man defense began functioning and the Filipinos shifted to long range shooting.

With Forward Nagata starting the ball rolling with conversion of a free throw, the Japanese quintet began rallying and a basket by Cho put the score on an 8-all basis at 10 minutes. Then a field goal by Hirooka put the Japanese into the lead 10-9 at 15 minutes. Two more baskets by Hirooka and a three throw conversion by Cho helped the Japanese to lead 15 to 12 at half time.

It was the Japanese that went into a scoring spree at the outset of the second half and they were ahead by 20 to 13 at the end of the first 8 minutes. But the Filipinos rallied, mainly through the fine work of the guards who intercepted the ball, and cut the Japanese lead, 20 to 19, Borck coming through at this stage of the game with two timely field goals. But he had shot all his works for he proved ineffective during the rest of the game, part of which he spent on the side line for a breathing spell. Matsui converted a much needed point on a free throw, and Cho and Murakami followed with field goals to put Japan into a 25 to 19 lead. Bautista came along with one for the Philippine contingent and Jones made good a free throw and the Philippines were only three points behind, 25-22.

Cho Sinks Beauty

Yokoyama came through with a field goal for Japan and Arce retaliated. Yokoyama sank another and Japan still led 29 to 24. Lao registered two points and the score stood 29 to 26 in Japan's favor with five minutes to go. Borck returned into the game. Lao converted a free throw which put his team but two points behind with three minutes to go. Cho virtually won the game for Japan when he sank a beauty to put his team into a 31 to 27 lead with but a minute to go. Japan called time out and when play was resumed, the speedy Arce sunk one from the right flank and the score went 31 to 29. As the excited fans were in a near frenzy, the gun sounded with Arce's shot in the air, but it missed the basket.

Von Cramm Sentenced To A Year In Prison On Immorality Charge

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, May 14—Baron Gottfried von Cramm, former mainstay of Germany's Davis Cup team and second-ranking tennis player of the world in amateur ranks, was sentenced to one year in prison by a court here today on charges of "immorality."

Only player to give any real competition to Donald J. Budge, of the United States, last year, Baron von Cramm was suddenly arraigned on sex charges after he returned to Germany a few months ago from a round-the-world playing tour accompanied by Henner Henkel, also of the Reich Davis Cup team.

In the course of the tour, the German stars played a series of exhibition matches against members of the Japanese Davis Cup team at Tokyo and Osaka.

Reports last month indicated that G. von Metaxa, first-ranking Austrian player, might take von Cramm's place on this year's German team.

Washington Sets 2 Marks, Ties 3d In Coast Regatta

N.Y. Herald Tribune

SEATTLE, April 16—The University of Washington Huskies went victory crazy today on the wind and rain lashed waters of Lake Washington to score their fourth successive grand slam over the University of California Bears in their thirty-fifth annual Pacific Coast rowing duel.

A throng of some 60,000 spectators, lining the hilltops and jamming water craft and observation train, saw the Olympic and national champions parade over the finish line in the varsity, junior varsity and freshman races in record times.

Washington won the three-mile varsity duel by two and a half lengths, the junior varsity three-mile by a scant half-length and the two-mile freshman struggle by a length.

The Husky varsity and jayvee, rowing on comparatively flat water but in a down pour, shattered the Sheridan Beach course records, and the Washington freshman, riding on the tail of a blustery wind, equalled the short-course mark.

The varsity times were Washington, 15 minutes 48.6 seconds; California, 15:57.4 The Washington junior varsity scored in 16:04.2, and California in 16:06, and the Husky freshmen returned 10:40.2, against the Bears' 10:44.8. The records, all made by Washington two years ago, were varsity, 15:56.4; jayvee, 16:14.2, and freshman, 10:40.2.

It was Washington's nineteenth consecutive victory in three years of major competition and the twenty-fourth triumph in twenty-five starts in the last four years.

California had its greatest chance for a victory in the junior varsity battle when the two boats crossed the two-mile mark on even terms and fought nip-and-tuck to the finish. The Huskies had saved a little more power for the final dash and pulled ahead in the last few seconds.

The California varsity started out like a winner, holding a six-foot margin over the first half-mile, but the old Washington "sock," led by one of the greatest of all Husky strokes—Don Hume, of Olympic fame—took command at the mile mark and steadily pulled away. It was a battle of Washington power against California's smooth-sweeping, high-stroking cadence.

The Bears rushed away with a 36 beat from the starting point, gaining a slight lead. Washington was content to settle down almost immediately to a slow, methodical 31, that eventually brought dividends. California, rowing a stroke higher than the Huskies, lost its advantage at the half-mile mark and Washington slowly began to put on the pressure. At the mile buoy, Washington had gained a half-length lead with both eights dropping to 30 strokes to the minute. Increasing the pace to 32, the Bears kept within three-quarter length distance at the two-mile mark.

Just when Harry Kueny, Bears coxswain, began calling for more speed, the Husky boat picked up and sailed away, leaving the struggling Southerners in its wake, 8.8 seconds behind.

Washington had to shoot the works to beat off California in a bow and bow finish in the junior varsity struggle, cracking the course record by ten full seconds.

The Huskies beat off a stubborn California challenge in the last 100 yards of the freshman two-mile race.

The boatings:

California varsity—Steve Frost, bow; Henry Peters, No. 2; Curt Rogge, No. 3; Henry Trobitz, No. 4; Emil Bergh, No. 5; Linton Emerson, No. 6; Ray Talcott, No. 7; Beal Beal, stroke; Harry Kueny, coxswain.

Washington varsity—George Chica, bow; John Carey, No. 2; Norman Turay, No. 3; John White, No. 4; Gordon Adam, No. 5; Ewen Dingwall, No. 6; Robert Murray, No. 7; Don Hume, stroke; John Rosenkranz, coxswain.

Kondo Pitches Waseaa To 2 Wins Over Meiji; Keio Downs Teidai

Southpaw Kondo today is the hero on the Waseda University campus, and will probably be so for the next several weeks for he came through with an iron man feat Saturday and Sunday by pitching the Waseda nine to brilliant victories over Meiji, champions of the Spring and Fall seasons last year, at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Although nicked for 13 hits on Saturday, Kondo finished the game a winner by virtue of a five-run rally by his team-mates in the seventh to forge into a 6 to 3 lead. First Baseman Go's two home runs and a three bagger by Minamimura with the bags loaded in the seventh helped Kondo considerably. The final score was 7 to 5.

But Kondo was in superb condition on Sunday and yielded but seven hits. His team-mates bombarded Pitchers Shimizu and Kodama of Meiji for 12 blows.

Waseda led 3 to 2 at the end of the third inning and then salted the game away by tallying six times in the fourth.

Shimizu, Meiji's ace last year, was sent to the showers in the fourth after Minamimura and Ogusu had smashed him for doubles to score the fourth run after him. For once, Kodama faltered in the relief role as Waseda sent five more across the plate before the side was retired.

Keio made it two straight over Tokyo Imperial by winning 4 to 2 in Sunday's curtain-raiser. In Saturday's game, the Teidai nine established a record for errors when it miscued 16 times, enough to lose a couple of games. The final score was 19 to 7 in Keio's favor.

The standings follow:

Long Time Before British Challenge

SOUTHAMPTON, England, April 21—T. O. M. Sopwith, twice unsuccessful challenger for the America's Cup, sees no prospect of Britain challenging again for the famous international yachting trophy for many years.

"Under no circumstances will I make another attempt with Endeavour II," said Sopwith on his return from New York yesterday. "Until we have a testing tank for sailing ships of the type that has been perfected in America, it's not the slightest use to try to build a yacht that can beat the best America can produce—to do that costs an immense sum of money."

Sopwith lost to Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger with Endeavour II last year and to Vanderbilt's Rainbow with Endeavour I in 1934.

Only 3 Remain Undefeated In Sumo Tourney

Grand Champion Futabayama proved too powerful for Banjaku—pushing him out of the ring—Sunday afternoon in the fifth day of the 13-day sumo tournament at the Kokugikan bowl, and as a consequence there are but three wrestlers within the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle yet without a defeat. They are Futabayama, Grand Champion Tamanishiki and Nayoroiwa, stablemate of Futabayama.

Being a Sunday, the bowl was a sell-out from early morning with an attendance exceeding the 20,000 mark.

Tamanishiki Given Battle

Tamanishiki was given a tough time by Shachinosato, reputed the best looking of the grapplers. Two times, they were given breathing spells because of the intenseness of the bout, but to no avail. The consequence was that the judges ordered a rebout after the Futabayama-Banjaku match. Starting all over, Shachinosato never had a chance against the grand champion who pushed him out of the ring before giving him a chance to attain a hold.

Ryogoku, one of the stalwarts of the Dewanoumi camp, pulled off a major surprise by taking the measure of Haguroyama in a torrid bout.

Kagamiiwa, veteran "ohseki" or rank immediately below grand champion, vanquished another tough opponent in Ayanobori, who on Saturday had turned the tables over Mayedayama, who had been promoted to ohseki after the close of the January tournament.

Nayoroiwa, another stable-mate of Futabayama, won his fifth straight victory by outfighting the strong Itsutsushima.

Musashiyama Beaten

The major surprise on Saturday was the defeat of Grand Champion Musashiyama by Tamanoumi, ace pupil of Tamanishiki.

The results of the bouts after the intermission on Sunday follow:

Yamatonishiki defeated Orochigata.
Tsukubamine defeated Ichiwatari.
Banshinzan defeated Bochozan.

Saburo Miyatake, former home run hitter of Keio University, topped the Hankyus' victory with a homer in the eighth inning.

In the other game of the day, the Hankyus tumbled the Senators by 9 to 4.

Japanese Attacking

As it was during the greater part of the basketball game Monday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens court between Japan and Manchoukuo, the Japanese team, (in white), storming the Manchoukuo goal. The final score was 66 to 26 in Japan's favor.

Japan Routs Manchoukuo By 66 To 26 To Capture Far Eastern Cage Title

Japan proved too strong for Manchoukuo and won the Far Eastern basketball championship with ease before a small crowd at the outdoor court of the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens Monday afternoon. The score was 66 to 26.

Despite the big lead, the Japanese team did not function all too well in its teamwork. It is possible that the players were too confident of victory and had the tendency to slow up at times.

The Manchoukuo team never gave up fighting and forged into the lead at one stage of the first half. The Japanese got off to a fine start and were leading 8 to 2 at the end of the first five minutes of play. Guard Chang Jui sank in a basket to cut the lead to 8 to 4. And then came a play which is seldom seen in a championship match. Ri, who had been sent into the game for Kin of the Japanese team, shot one through the Manchoukuo basket by mistake to give Manchoukuo two points. Spurred by this fluke basket, the Manchoukuo team sank three more goals to forge into a 12 to 8 lead. The game then developed into a nip and tuck affair until the Japanese offensive finally began to function after 11 minutes of play. A goal by Yokoyama put the Japanese team into a 16 to 14 lead and the latter finished the half on the longer side of a 30-16 score.

Japan attacked mercilessly from the outset of the second half and after six minutes of play was already leading by 46 to 19.

Forward Yokoyama and Center Oka of the Japanese team were high point scorers with 13 points apiece.

The Manchoukuo team showed considerable improvement from Saturday's game when it was swamped 59 to 24 by the Philippine team. It's passing in enemy territory, for one thing, was much better.

Dudas Stopped By Schmeling In Fifth Round

N.Y. Herald Tribune

HAMBURG, Germany, April 16—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight contender, let loose a barrage of rights and lefts to the face and body to score six knockdowns and win a five-round technical knockout over Steve Dudas, of Edgewater, N. J., tonight.

The bout was Schmeling's last tune-up for his championship match with Joe Louis in the United States on June 22, and left little doubt in the minds of the 23,000 fans who packed Hanseaten Hall that the German is in prime condition. Least doubtful of all was Dudas, still dazed, though not cut, as a result of the battering he received.

"Schmeling gave me the hardest licking I ever had," said the American. "I am certain he will knock out Louis if he remains in his present condition."

Max, meanwhile, smiled broadly and announced that he would sail shortly for the United States to begin training for Louis.

The Black Uhlan completely outclassed Dudas, sending him to the canvas six times for counts ranging from three to eight before the American's manager, Billy McCarney, threw in the towel. Schmeling weighed 194½ pounds, his rival 195.

Dudas was the aggressor as the first round of what had been scheduled as a fifteen-round bout got under way. He was throwing left and right hooks to the body and face, but Schmeling's sharp uppercuts and stinging rights soon drew the steam from Steve's punches.

A sharp left to the mid-section forced Dudas to the floor for a count of six in the third round, and from then on the American was steadily on the down grade, although he continued to put up a game fight.

Schmeling set the stage for the finish at the start of the fifth with a series of smashing right and left uppercuts that had his opponent rubber-legged. A dynamite right to the head sent Steve to his knees for seven. He got to his feet again, went down under another right to the jaw, and the count had gone to eight when the towel came fluttering into the ring from the American's corner.

Schmelings showing was a vast improvement over his last appearance here January 30, when he outpointed Ben Foord, of South Africa, by a wide margin but disappointed the majority of experts by failing to put over a knockout. Foord appeared in the semi-final on tonight's card against Walter Neusel, Germany's second-ranking heavyweight, and was disqualified in the eighth round of a twelve-round scrap after three warnings for rough tactics and foul blows. Neusel, scoring heavily in the fierce infighting, was ahead on points when the bout was stopped and he was decalred the winner.

Schmeling's American manager, Joe Jacobs, was in his corner, while three German officials, Otto Griese, referee, and Paul Noack, Max Pippow and H. Eukens, judges, handled the bout. Among the 23,000 spectators were Hamburg's Governor Kauffman and numerous prominent German actors and Army officers.

U.S. Skating Committee Adopts Budget For Games

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, May 16—The speed skating committee of the American Olympic Committee today adopted a $15,000 budget for the 1940 Tokyo Olympiad. At the same time, it was announced by the committee that the United States may send four entries in each of the four events in the Winter Games at Sapporo in 1940, if the budget is met.

Tamanishiki, Futabayama Only 2 Unbeaten

Two grand champions were defeated in the sixth day of the 13-day professional sumo tournament Monday afternoon at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku. It was the third setback for Minanogawa and the second for Musashiyama. Their victors were Tamanoumi and Banjaku respectively.

Kagamiiwa, the veteran "ohseki" or rank immediately below grand champion, registered another surprise in his stellar comeback by throwing Nayoroiwa, who had been undefeated up to then. As a consequence, Grand Champions Futabayama and Tamanishiki are the only two with a clean slate in the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle.

Lanky Taikyuzan twice charged against Futabayama but the latter proved too powerful for him and pushed him out of the ring.

Tamanishiki had a close shave in his bout with Itsutsushima. The latter was on the verge of shoving him out of the ring when he resorted to a body throw using his two arms as a lever and out went Itsutsushima's body from the ring before his.

Wakashima, veteran wrestler from Wakayama prefecture who has been vieing with Kagamiiwa in the brilliance of their comebacks, won another sterling victory when he disposed of the strong Haguroyama, up and coming stable-mate of Futabayama.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Yamatonishiki defeated Katsuragawa.
Kashimanada defeated Orochigata.
Hishuzan defeated Aobayama.

Harvard Hits Penn Hurlers, Winning, 12-7

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, April 16—Harvard bunched ten of its sixteen hits in three innings today and defeated Pennsylvania, 12 to 7, in the opening Eastern Intercollegiate League game for both teams.

Led by Captain Ulysses Lupien, who had a home run and two singles, the Cantabs had little difficulty in solving John Conway and George Rusnak, veteran southpaw. Lupien hit his home run in the third inning after Art Johns had reached first base on Fred Raffetto's wild throw. The circuit blow went into the center field concrete stands.

Dave Shean and Paul Doyle also contributed three hits apiece, two of Doyle's being doubles.

Harold (Slim) Curtis and Tom Healey permitted thirteen hits, the former being relieved in the fifth after Herb Ogden hit a homer with Dick Trexler on base and Sonny Brown and Tom McDonald followed with singles. Healey took up the mound work with two men out and disposed of Bill Dignan on an easy infield out.

Ogden also had a two-bagger and single, and Captain Chuck Diven three singles. The new Penn first baseman drove in four runs.

Penn got off to a two-run lead in the first inning when Charley Morris tripled to left, scoring Diven and Ogden ahead, but the Cantabs soon found the range on Conway, took the lead with three runs in the second and never were headed, although Penn came within one run of tying in the fifth.

Murakoso Is Ordered To Go To China Front

Kohei Murakaso, diminutive 32-year-old athlete of Chuo University, who placed fourth in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meter races at the 11th Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936, and has been Japan's hope in the forthcoming 12th Olympic Games in 1940, has been summoned to the colors. He has been ordered to the China front, according to Domei.

Interviewed by the press Monday, Murakoso said he had been in training not only for the 1940 Games but to be in the best of physical condition to serve his country whenever the call came.

N.Y.U. Retains Three-Weapon Fencing Title

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 17—Saving much from what had promised to be a lean harvest, New York University swordsmen won the prized three-weapon trophy at the forty-fifth annual championship of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association on the strips of the Hotel Astor yesterday. It was their fourth such victory in a row and their fifth in the last six years.

On the way to this stunning triumph the Violet slashed its way to the saber crown and was pressing Yale for the foils laurels with a match between the two contenders for the famous Iron Man Trophy still to be settled. The epee honors went to Navy.

As for individual titles, only one was decided at the conclusion of the first twenty hours of work with the blades. Midshipman Harry Foley of Navy carved a clean-cut success with the ancient dueling sword.

Bukantz Foils Leader

Danny Bukantz of City College was assured of a tie for the foils championship, with only Maurice Grasson of Yale, the defender, in a position to head him off.

As for the other laurels, Jack Gorlin, of N. Y. U. was out in front, with Sadet Don Thackeray of Army the only one left with a chance of tying him.

That was the set-up at the end of the matinee. Every one of the twelve teams in the tournament still had one match left to fence, but the three-weapon standings found N. Y. U. beyond overtaking at 27½ victories, with Yale in second place at 67½. Navy had won 65 and Army 62.

The epee duelling found Navy a definite first with 25 points to 23½ for N. Y. U., 22 for Princeton and 20½ for Army. With the sabre New York had 26 bouts won to 23 for Yale, while Army, with one match left, had 21 points. In foils Yale had a 24-23 advantage over N. Y. U. and Army, through for the day, had garenerd 23 points.

A Tribute to Coach

The work that the pupils of Julio Martinez Castello did in this tournament was nothing but a tribute to their coach. For the first time the Violet did not have a single star of outstanding quality. Its epee team was considered so weak that it would be an anchor to windward in the quest for three-weapon honors.

But so well did the trio of youngsters with the dueling sword perform that they rocketed New York right back into the picture. Their second place to Navy was beyond the wildest dreams of their supporters. Their foilsmen did well and their saber men won a championship.

The Violet wielders of the cavalry sword were Gorlin, Jimmy Castello, son of the coach, and Richard Nussbaum. They were consistent from start to finish and rose to the heights in turning back Yale in the deciding match. That finished things with this blade and sent New York beyond the reach of all pursuers.

Foley on Brink of Tie

The Navy epee victory, team and individual, was achieved under rather dramatic circumstances. The Midshipmen came down to their final bout trailing N. Y. U., 23½ to 22. At that same moment Foley was on the brink of a four-way tie for the individual crown.

So the Annapolis contingent crossed blades with Cornell. The big Red trio was not going anywhere in particular, but it so frequently happens in this tournament that some overlooked underdog suddenly comes to life with a vengeance. Middle supporters devoutly hoped that Cornell would not seize upon this occasion to do anything like that.

Foley stepped on the strip against Harold Parker. Touches went to 2-all and it was with bated breath that Navy and N. Y. U. adherents watched the flash of the blades in the deciding touch. There was a clatter of steel against steel and then the left-handed Midshipman lunged for his championship.

That stroke left Navy a half a point behind, and it was up to Bob Shaw to settle things in his match with Charles Pratt. And he did just that. The subsequent victory of Phil Glennon over John McLellan was merely in the nature of an anti-climax as it left the final standings 25 to 23½ in Navy's favor.

Sarnoff Bows to Dwyer

But, by way of indicating how these upsets crop up, Stanley Sarnoff of Princeton, in his last engagement, was beaten by C. K. Dwyer of Hamilton. That removed him from the picture and prevented him from tying Foley, whom he had vanquished the day before.

The new individual champion, a first classman, is from Trenton and never fenced before he entered Annapolis four years ago. He climaxed a year of steady swordsmanship with a title that every midshipman in the Astor thought he richly deserved. He won nine of eleven bouts, while the next three places had to be settled on touches. Paul Moss of N. Y. U. and Sarnoff and J. W. Croach of Harvard followed in that order, all with eight won and three lost.

The foils situation was nowhere near as clean-cut at the end of the afternoon session. Yale had a 24-23 lead on N. Y. U., with one bout against each other certain to settle things. But the Violet was in an uncomfortable spot since it had to score a smashing 3-0 victory to triumph. A 2-1 success meant a tie, with touches deciding and anything else was of no use whatsoever.

This same confusion also carried over into the individual title chase. Dan Bukantz of City College finished his duelling with a fence-off for the crown the worst he could expect. Maurice Grasson of Yale, the defending king, had a 9-1 record to the Beaver left-hander's 10-1. But the Eli southpaw still had an all-important bout with Milton Sokora of N. Y. U., another of the ubiquitous left-handers.

Zaugg Conquers Soroka

Soroka missed his chance to make things even more muddled when he unexpectedly bowed to sophomore Jack Zaugg of Princeton in his last match of the afternoon. Had he won then his encounter with Grasson would have sent the winner into a fence-off with Bukantz. As it was, though, he could win himself but he still had a chance to drive Grasson out of his championship. A setback to the Eli would automatically give the crown to the Beaver star.

Although Soroka lost to Zaugg, his two left-handed Violet teammates, Silvio Giolito and Archie Ignatow, came through handsomely to assure New York a 2-1 triumph that left it hot in pursuit of Yale. But the big blow to Violet hopes was an unlooked-for setback by Navy late in the afternoon. Soroka triumphed but the other two were beaten, so that a chance to recoup valuable ground was lost.

The Elis swept their three afternoon matches and New York three of four, seemingly a trifle but actually a very important happening as the Eli team of Grasson, Phil Viscidi and Paul Perlowin held up very well throughout. But the real star of the foils competition was Roy Steyer of Cornell in Class B. He won all eleven matches. What makes this particularly unusual is that his brother, Murray Steyer, won all eleven foils matches two years ago in Class C for N. Y. U.

Ito Quits Ring; Loses In Final Fight To Kongo

Isamu Ito, one of the best flyweights ever produced in this country in his heyday, hung up his gloves Monday night after appearing in the final bout of his 10-year career as a pugilist. He lost a decision over eight rounds to Iwao Kongo, protege of Kintaro Usuda, in a smoker at the Hibiya Park amphitheater.

Lacking speed and kick in his punches, which carried him to many victories in the past, Ito was unable to offset Kongo's rushing tactics. Kongo, on the other hand, showed considerable improvement in his ever rushing style by landing a greater number of his punches in the mid-section of his opponent's body.

Ito won the plaudits of the fans when he gamely continued fighting despite a hard, low punch landed by Kongo in the fourth round.

A hard right uppercut by Takashi Sasazaki, 126 pounds, floored Hidetaro Mitearai, 125 pounds, for the full count in the seventh of their eight-round affair. Mitearai gave a better showing than had been expected. As a matter of fact, he was leading up to the fourth round.

Yukito Tanaka and Go Nozu fought to a draw in the other eight-round bout. They weighed in at 137 and 136 pounds.

60 Straight Wins Is Record Made By Futabayama

Handsome Futabayama, champion of grand champions, won his 60th consecutive bout Tuesday afternoon in the seventh day of the 13-day "Summer" sumo tournament at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku for an unprecedented record. Thus it means that he will be registering all time marks each day he wins during the remaining six days of the tourney.

Futabayama's opponent Tuesday was Ayanobori, considered the smartest wrestler in the Dewanoumi Camp, but he was no match for the grand champion who threw him with a body throw right in the middle of the ring. Futabayama's opponent this afternoon is the veteran Wakashima, who has been going great guns, but he is likely to be defeated without much trouble.

No Definite Goal

Questioned by the press Tuesday afternoon if his goal is 100 consecutive victories Futabayama replied that he intends to win as many bouts as possible, that he has no figure of 100 or 200 set, and that he might even lose on Wednesday. The indications are bright that Futabayama will go through the tourney for his fifth undefeated season.

Grand Champions Minanogawa and Musashiyama had another bad day to taste defeats in two consecutive days. Nayoroiwa, Futabayama's younger stable-mate and considered a future grand champion, outpushed the bigger Minanogawa out of the ring for victory. The up and coming Haguroyama, another stable-mate of Futabayama, threw Musashiyama after a torrid bout. Musashiyama threatened by pushing Haguroyama to the edge of the ring but the latter checked the drive, and in turn took the offensive. He resorted to a body throw and down went Musashiyama.

Grand Champion Tamanishiki had a narrow escape in his bout with Banjaku, whose stomach is almost at large as Tamanishiki's. Each grasped the other's girdle and tried to throw the other but in vain. The result was they stood in the middle of the ring, neither side daring to become the aggressor. The result was that time was called twice. The bout went to Tamanishiki when Banjaku was unable to continue because of an injury he had sustained during the encounter.

Mayedayama, who had been promoted to the rank immediately below a grand champion after the tourney in January, lost his second bout when Itsutsushima weathered his furious two-handed attack, succeeded in effecting a clinch and then lifted him into the air and deposited Mayedayama outside the ring.

Kagamiiwa Wins

The veteran Kagamiiwa, an "ohseki" or rank immediately below grand champion, won his fifth straight bout after his bad start of two defeats on the first two days. This time he took the measure of Shachinosato, who on the previous day had given Tamanishiki a battle royal.

The up and coming Kojimakawa, another member of the Camp Futabayama belongs to, scored a major surprise by disposing of Wakashima.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Banshinzan defeated Hishuzan.
Ayawaka defeated Katsuragawa.
Fujinosato defeated Genjiyama.
Ryuozan defeated Aobayama.
Toshuzan defeated Tsukubamine.
Yamatonishiki defeated Ayanishiki.
Fuligadake defeated Bochozan.
Kashimanada defeated Tomoegata.
Takanobori defeated Dewaminato.
Komanosato defeated Kaneminato.
Kyushuzan defeated Onami.
Oshio defeated Dewanohana.
Asahigawa defeated Kasagiyama.
Akinoumi defeated Tatekabuto.
Kaikozan defeated Tsurugamine.
Kojimakawa defeated Wakashima.
Hatasegawa defeated Ryogoku.
Tamanoumi defeated Taikyuzan.
Kagamiiwa defeated Shachinosato.
Itsutsushima defeated Mayedayama.
Futabayama defeated Ayanobori.
Haguroyama defeated Musashiyama.
Tamanishiki defeated Banjaku.
Nayoroiwa defeated Minanogawa.

Sons Of Four Coaches On Dads' Teams At Yale

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 23—Four Yale athletes answer "Yes, Dad," to the calls of a quartet of coaches these days in an unprecedented number of father-coach and son-athlete combinations.

The four athletes are Joe Wood, son of Smoky Joe Wood, baseball tutor; Jim Hinchclig, whose dad, Bill, is tennis coach; Maurice Grasson, whose father, Bob, is fencing instructor, and DeLaney Kiphuth, son of Bob, swimming mentor.

Young Hinchcliff is tennis captain and Grasson fencing leader. The other two youths are freshmen. Young Wood made his debut with the cub nine by striking out ten Milford Prep batters in five innings and banging out two timely singles in three trips to the plate. Immediately after the game, which the Yale fresh men won, 10 to 4, Wood was elected captain.

The fathers of the quartet are successful coaches of long standing at Yale, their services totaling eighty-two years.

Who Is Going To Stop Him?

Grand Champion Futabayama (left) winning his 60th straight victory in the sumo tourney at the Kokugikan over a space of three years. Thrown was Ayanobori, one of the few who had been considered to have a chance of winning.

Cardinals Unhappy To Hear Of Dizzy Dean's Trading To Cubs For Three Players

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, April 16—President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals announced today Dizzy Dean, star pitcher, had been traded to the Cubs for Pitchers Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun and Outfielder George Stainback.

Breadon made the announcement at the St. Louis club's offices. In a written statement he said further:

"To friends and supporters of the Cardinals in St. Louis and throughout the country:

"This deal has been thoroughly discussed by Mr. Rickey (Branch Rickey), Frankie Frisch and myself and we have agreed it was for the best interest of the Cardinal club."

Further details of the transaction were not disclosed by Breadon. This was taken as an indication that cash also was involved.

A Regular Since 1932

Dean's entire professional baseball career has been under the Cardinal banner, most of his first two years in organized baseball being spent at farm clubs. He became a Cardinal regular in 1932.

Davis is a right-handed pitcher who won ten games and lost five with the Cubs last season. Shoun is a left-hander. Stainback is a right-handed outfielder.

The Cardinals were an unhappy gang of ball players when they were told of the trade after today's exhibition victory over the Browns.

Dean said he was "glad to leave to go to Chicago, but I hate to leave the fellows."

"I'll bet they do all right by me there, though," he said, his face brightening. "I'll bet they give me $10,000 more than I'm making here."

Maybe a Yacht Thrown In

Another ball player chimed in: "Yeah, and they'll probably give you a yacht, too, to ride around in on the lake."

Pepper Martin, sitting on a bench with a sad look on his face, was pessimistic. "There goes our pennant and world series money," he commented.

Terry Moore declared, "Yeah, we'd have been a cinch with Diz."

All the players asked over and over again whom the Cardinals received in exchange for Dean. They apparently were surprised that the club got only two pitchers and an outfielder for the "great one."

One suggested that the Cardinals must have got "a lot of cash" in the deal and Martin commented "You can't play cash on the baseball field."

Then Pepper brightened again. "I'll bet they use some of that dough to get Mungo," meaning Van Mungo, star pitcher of the Dodgers.

Dizzy said he would leave for Chicago tonight.

Martin was asked about the condition of Dizzy's arm this year.

"Well, he's been sort of in and out, so far," Pepper answered. "He hasn't been pitching his fast ball."

Asked About Fast Ball

Some baseball writers suggested perhaps Dizzy's fast ball was gone.

Moore replied: "Don't worry about that. He'll have his fast ball all right when he gets to Chicago."

Martin was almost inconsolable. He drew some consolation from Joe Medwick, who told him "your Mudcats (Pepper's hillbilly-ball player orchestra) won't have any more competition from Dizzy."

That was the only comic note of the afternoon. The dressing room was gloomy. The cut-ups were silent and the others were too thoughtful to make wise cracks.

Dean, still in the clubhouse, talked about the world series.

"The boys had the pennant money sewed up and some of it spent," he commented. "Why, it'll be too bad for us now—I mean for the Cardinals—for now I'm going to Chicago and I'll have to help them win the money and spend it."

Manager Frisch came up. Diz shook his hand solemnly.

"Frankie," the big right-hander said, 'I want you to know I've enjoyed playing for you."

A player commented, "Bunk."

Diz turned. "No it isn't," he asserted. "I really have."

Frisch said, "Diz, I'm sorry to see you go. Be a good boy and take care of yourself." Frisch had a long face.

"What will the effect be on the Cardinals?" he was asked.

"I haven't anything to say," Frisch replied sourly.

"Diz, it'll be the last time you can ever sign my book," one said.

"You really going to Chicago?" another asked.

"Why're you goin'?" asked a third.

Dean did not answer.

Clarence Rowland, a Chicago official, and Diz talked briefly. The Chicagoan said "I'm very happy the deal finally has been closed." He indicated the trade had been on the fire all Spring, since training season opened. He said telephone calls from California, Florida and St. Louis made it click. "We finally caught up with them," he added.

Corrected by Players

As he left, Rowland said "the Cards are the club to beat this year."

Half a dozen players corrected him. "You mean, 'that was the club to beat.'"

Rowland answered: "I think the deal will benefit both teams."

He declined to reveal even approximately what amount of cash changed hands. He was more interested in Dean.

"I'm convinced Dizzy is just as good as he ever was," Rowland declared. "You recall when he pitched against the Yankees he let 'em down with about one hit. He didn't pitch so well against the minors but there was nothing at stake then."

Dizzy yelled, as he was leaving, to Rookie Enos Slaughter:

"Good luck, Enos, hope you have a good year."

The great one left the ball park, shouting, "So long, fellers!"

Breadon Is Optimistic

CHICAGO, April 23—The Deans may be gone and the experts may be picking the St. Louis Cardinals to finish no better than third, but President San Breadon wound up and let fly the emphatic statement today that "we're still the Gas House Gang and we'll win the National League pennant."

The four defeats suffered by the Cardinals in their five starts apparently don't bother Breadon. Neither does the absence of Dizzy Dean, now a Chicago Cub, and Paul Dean, currently trying to start a comeback with Houston in the Texas League. In fact, Breadon believes the always colorful Gas Housers will pack more "dynamite" than ever and do an excellent job of crossing up those who predict the team will be somewhere below the Cubs and New York Giants come next Oct. 2.

"In the first place I think we've gained enough extra strength to more than make up for the loss of the Deans," Breadon said. "In Max Lanier, Mex Macon and Bill McGee, all up from Columbus, we have three comers certain to aid our pitching and take up slack left by Paul Dean's loss. Any or all of the three may be good enough to win regular starting jobs.

"Curt Davis, I believe, is going to just about balance the pitching strength we lose through Dizzy's sale to Chicago, figuring on the basis of help we had from Diz last season, when he pitched only two and a half months for us. I'll admit the pitching strength is problematical, but we have possibilities of a fine mound staff with men like Lon Warneke, Ray Harrell, Davis, Si Johnson and Bob Weiland around."

In young Enos Slaughter, whose triple with the sacks loaded gave St. Louis its first victory of the season, Breadon believes the club has one of the game's future stars. He also feels the return to duty of Joe Medwick, the outfield slugger out with an ailing back, will make St. Louis hard to stop.

"The Cardinals always have been a colorful, aggressive team and always will be because when a deal comes up involving player switches, we always keep the one who has shown the most aggressiveness," Breadon said. "They're the Gas House Gang of old, because Frankie Frisch really is the Gas House Gang himself.

"We still have Frankie and we'll win that pennant."

National League Won Honors In Spring Tilts

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 20—Although they do not pay off on the outcome of Spring exhibition games and the results are practically forgotten with the first day of the championship season, it is with no little satisfaction that Bill Brandt, manager of the National League's Service Bureau, has drawn up a set of statistics showing that in the interleague contests played during the training campaign just ended, his circuit had much the better of it over the American League.

For these results seem to show the beginning of a determined effort on the part of the senior major loop to refute certain implications made in recent months that, by reason of its innumerable defeats in recent world series and all-star conflicts, the National League has allowed itself to become inferior to its rival circuit.

In fact, it is no secret, that when President Ford Frick made his early rounds of the National League training camps last March he spent no small part of his time exhorting managers and players alike to put "everything they had" into their efforts in the exhibition contests with the rival loop.

The Winning Habit

"Nothing like getting the winning habit early," was part of Frick's pep talk, "and maybe it will stay with us when the all-star and world series games roll around this year."

That Frick's exhortations had hit a responsive chord was manifest almost from the beginning. Even Bill Terry, who in past years rarely concerned himself with the outcome of exhibitions while engaged in his annual hook-ups with the Cleveland Indians, did a decided about-face.

"We're not losing any more games than we possibly can help," said the Giant leader as his long series with the Indians began, and although in other years he thought nothing of putting on entire second team on the field along about the fifth inning, he invariably kept his regulars going full time this year.

122 Games Played

As a result of all this, the National Leaguers turned in a surprisingly fine record, for of the 122 interleague games played this Spring, the Frick loop won sixty-nine, the Harridge circuit captured only fifty-two and one game resulted in a tie.

Even more impressive is the fact that no fewer than four clubs, the Pirates, Reds, Giants and Cubs, compiled better than .500 records against their American League rivals. Three drew even, these being the Cards, Dodgers and Phillies, while only the Beens fared worse than .500 and that by only one game, Casey Stengel's men winning eight and losing nine.

In contrast to this, the Red Sox were the only American League club to top .500, winning eleven and losing eight, while only the Browns managed to get an even break. All the others, including the world champion Yankees, who won seven and lost eight, finished below .500.

Although the Pirates turned in the best percentage mark of .714, winning five and dropping only two, the Reds actually were the most successful in the interleague conflicts. Bill McKechnie drove his newly acquired Cincinnatians to fourteen victories against only seven defeats. The Giants, who captured their long series with the Indians by the decisive margin of ten games to six, finished with a record of twelve and eight, having broken even in their four games with Athletics.

The Cubs also showed a substantial advantage at the finish with thirteen victories against nine defeats.

Of the sixteen major league clubs, the Senators turned in the poorest record, winning only three of their eleven starts against National League competition, while the White Sox also fared rather poorly, winning only eight and losing fifteen.

Following is a tabulation of the way the clubs fared in their interleague competition this Spring:

Victory No. 62 Is Registered By Futabayama

Grand Champion Futabayama, though he must be under great tension for he has everything to lose in his phenomenal winning streak, shows no excitement in each day's bout at the "Summer" sumo tournament which has four more days to go at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku. Thursday afternoon, he defeated Mayedayama, the up and coming stalwart, for his ninth straight victory in as many days of the tourney and his 62nd win in the official championships.

This afternoon, Futabayama was to meet the veteran Kagamiiwa of "ohseki" rank, which is immediately below grand champion, and then he has to meet the other three grand champions, Musashiyama, Minanogawa and Tamanishiki, in the order named. The question is whether he will hang up his fifth undefeated season. The indications are that he will from the invincible strength he displayed in taking the measure of Mayedayama Thursday afternoon.

Lifts Mayedayama

No sooner had the two stood up in the final bout Thursday afternoon as more than 20,000 fans were in a near frenzy from excitement—for the cry is "Beat Futabayama"—than Mayedayama, instead of resorting to his usual charging tactics with his two powerful arms, slipped in his two arms through Futabayama's defense for holds on the latter's girdle. Then he attempted to lift the 280-pound Futabayama with the view to carrying him out of the ring, but Futabayama attempted a leg throw to check him. Then he maneuvered himself into a hold to throw Mayedayama out of the ring, using his two arms as a lever if Mayedayama should start pushing. Futabayama thrust his right arm through for a firm grip on Mayedayama's girdle and with his herculean strength, lifted Mayedayama into the air and threw him outside the ring.

Tamanishiki kept his record unblemished by giving the strong Ryogoku no chance. He promptly pushed him out the ring for victory. This afternoon, Tamanishiki was to meet Grand Champion Minanogawa and was a slight favorite to win.

Minanogawa lived up to a grand champion Thursday by throwing Kagamiiwa after a keenly contested bout. His body throw was a beauty.

Nayoroiwa Wins

For the second time in two consecutive seasons, Nayoroiwa, younger stable-mate of Futabayama, used his protruding stomach as a lever and lifted Grand Champion Musashiyama into the air and deposited him coolly outside the ring.

Kasagiyama, former Waseda University student, who had a poor season in January, registered his seventh victory by taking the measure of Tamanoumi.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Banshinzan defeated Fujinosato.
Tsukubamine defeated Katsuragawa.
Hishuzan defeated Genjiyama.
Ayawaka defeated Kaneminato.
Bochozan defeated Ayanishiki.
Akinoumi defeated Aobayama.
Yamatonishiki defeated Kojimakawa.
Ryuozan defeated Tomoegata.
Tsurugamine defeated Toshuzan.
Dewanohana defeated Takanobori.
Onami defeated Komanosato.
Kyushuzan defeated Fujigadake.
Kashimanada defeated Oshio.
Tatekabuto defeated Wakashima.
Hatasegawa defeated Shachinosato.
Taikyuzan defeated Kaikozan.
Ayanobori defeated Asahigawa.
Haguroyama defeated Itsutsushima.
Nayoroiwa defeated Musashiyama.
Minanogawa defeated Kagamiiwa.
Tamanishiki defeated Ryogoku.
Futabayama defeated Mayedayama.

The Real Grand Champion In Sumo

The central figure in all four pictures is Grand Champion Futabayama, who Thursday threw Mayedayama for his ninth straight victory in the current 13-day sumo tournament and his 62nd consecutive victory in the official championships at the Kokugikan bowl for an all-time record, going through the rites of "dohyoiri" or a grand champion's formal entrance into the ring. The girdle of rope is symbolical of his uppermost rank in the sport.

Boston Marathon Won By Pawson By Wide Margin

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, April 20—Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R. I., is once again king of the greatest Marathon of them all—the Boston Athletic Association's annual Patriots' Day race from Hopkinton to Boston. Yesterday saw the Rhode Island playground instructor breast the colored yarn on Exeter Street one-fifth of a mile ahead of the field to become the fourth "repeater" in the 42-year-old history of the run.

Pawson's other victory came in 1933 when he set a new course record of 2h. 31 3-5s., the mark which stands today. In covering the circuitous route yesterday the best Pawson could do was 2h. 35m. 34-5s.

Pat Dengis of Baltimore was able to pull into second place some 300 yards ahead of Boston's own Johnny Kelley, winner in 1935.

One of the outstanding features of yesterday's race, which was run under ideal weather conditions, was the showing of the Veteran Clarence H. De Mar, seven-times winner of this event. The Keene, N. H., school teacher, whose last triumph came in 1930, finished in seventh place.

Mel Porter of New York, the National Marathon champion, pulled into fourth place. He raced shoulder-to-shoulder for the first 18 miles with the leaders. Many of the runners found the weather too warm and did not show up as well as expected.

The American Marathoners dominated the field yesterday by taking the first seven places. Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Quec., one of the pre-race favorites, could do no better than eighth place. The others in the first 10 were Paul Donato, Boston; Mike Mansulla, Brockton; Walter Hornby, Hamilton, Ont., and Fred Ward of New York.

The Greek runner Stylianos Kyriakides, who many thought would be up in front, was forced to drop out six miles from the finish.

George Shaw, who came all the way from London, Eng., to compete, found the going difficulty from the start and at the five-mile mark was in 103rd place. He was not checked from that point on.

The Millrose A. A., composed of Dengis, Porter and Ward, won the team prize.

Waseda Nine Favored To Vanquish Hosei And Capture Pennant

Waseda University's baseball team, which sprung a surprise by making it two straight over Meiji last Saturday and Sunday to forge into the lead of the Tokyo Six University league's standings for the Spring season, is favored to down Hosei Saturday and Sunday and incidentally to clinch the championship.

Southpaw Kondo, who pulled off the iron man stunt by pitching both games against Meiji, is expected to be called upon to repeat the same stunt.

If husky Akaneya, also a left hander, of Hosei is in form, Waseda will have a battle on its hands on the two days.

Rikkyo and Keio are evenly matched in the other number of the doubleheaders.

$30 Is Top Price For Louis Bout Coming June 22

By FRED VAN NESS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK April 27—Promoter Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club yesterday announced the prices and other details for the heavyweight championship fight in which Joe Louis will defend his title against Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium on June 22.

Jacobs said that he had selected New York against the bids from Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia because this city had supported his promotions at Madison Square Garden and the Hippodrome throughout the year and he felt that the local fans were entitled to the championship fight.

The promoter stated that generous offers had been made by Chicago and Detroit for the fight. He pointed particularly to the efforts that had been made by Governor Horner of Illinois, Mayor Kelly of Chicago and Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois Boxing Commission, to have the fight held in Chicago. He also told of the efforts that had been made by Mayor Reading of Detroit as well as others of the motor city to have the fight held there.

Glad to Work in Harmony

The New York State Athletic Commission no doubt had considerable influence in causing Jacobs to select New York. It is no secret that the commission felt keenly the loss of the Louis-Braddock fight which was held in Chicago last year. Jacobs admitted that the commission had been persistent in its efforts to land the bout for New York and declared that he was glad to work in harmony with the officials.

It is quite probable that the decision was influenced some time ago when the commission granted Jacobs permission to hold the fight between Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong at the Madison Square Garden Bowl May 26.

With the site for the bout settled Jacobs will now go ahead with plans for the promotion of what he regards as the greatest heavyweight attraction in New York fight history. He already has requests for tickets amounting to $100,000 and has scaled the Stadium so that it will accommodate a crowd of 80,000 with a prospective gate of a million dollars or more.

The List of Prices

The promoter said yesterday that the prices would range from $3.50 for general admission to $30 for the best ringside seats. In between the prices will be $5.75, $7.75, $11.50, $16.50 and $20.

There will be forty rows of seats around the ringside. The first fifteen will be on the flat and the next twenty-five on a rise.

Louis is expected to arrive here about May 7. He will make his training camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he has trained for all of his successful fights here. He will first go to Lafayetteville, N. Y., for a little outdoor exercise.

Schmeling is due in New York May 9 and plans to go first to French Lick Springs, Ind., for a short stay before going to Speculator, N. Y., where he will pitch his training camp. This is where he trained for the "phantom fight" with Jimmy Braddock, and he was much impressed with it.

Shodai Downs Manchoukuo Cagers, 57-52

The Shodai (Commercial College) cagers bumped off the visiting Manchoukuo team by 57 to 52 Thursday night at the National Gymnasium at Kanda.

Shodai got off to a flying start when its best combination functioned all too well for the visitors and hung up a 15 to 4 lead in the first 10 minutes of play. At this juncture, the Shodai coach took out Forward Hirooka and Center Hiratsuka. The Shodai offense weakening, the Manchoukuoans started a rally and with Wang Fang shooting baskets from all corners of the floor, they deadlocked the count at 26-all. Thereupon, Hirooka and Hiratsuka were rushed back into the game and Shodai managed to finish the first half with a 30 to 26 lead.

The Manchoukuoans suffered heavily in the second half when Kaun Lan was kept on the side lines for fear that he might be thrown out of the game because of the limit on personal fouls. The consequence was that the team's offensive weakened.

Kyoto Imperial Men Working Out For Annual Yacht Race

Special To The Japan Times

KYOTO, May 19—The annual yacht race of the Kyoto and Osaka Imperial Universities and the Doshisha University will take place on Lake Biwa off the coast of Yanagasaki, Otsu, at 10 a.m. May 22.

In view of the fact that among the participants of this year's race there are such champions as Mikamidani of the Imperial University and Yoshimoto, Akino and Maeda of the Doshisha University, who are to participate in the 1940 Tokyo Olympic Games, keener attention is now being focused on the coming race. The Kyoto Imperial University in particular, is said to be practicing earnestly for the occasion.

San Romani Tops GlennCunningham

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 23—Archie San Romani, former Emporia (Kan.) Teachers College athlete, won the special mile race at the Kansas Relays today, edging out Glenn Cunningham in a photo finish in the comparatively slow time of 4:23.

Dan Lash, former University of Indiana star, finished third, ten yards behind the leaders, and Gene Venzke was last.

Cunningham, expected to shoot for his own meet record of 4:12.7, and possibly for the world mark, never held the lead until a brief period on the homestretch.

It was Cunningham's first defeat in his last twenty-two starts.

Dick Kearns, University of Colorado senior, successfully defended his decathlon title, staging a great finish to beat Claude Kilday, Occidental College star, who held a big lead at the end of yesterday's five events.

Kearns apparently won by approximately 140 points, with his point total exceeding his 6,484 winning mark of last year. At the end of nine events he had 6,451 points and Kidlay was in second place with 6,312. In the final event, the 1,500-meter run, Kearns's time was slightly better than that of his Coast rival.

Under sullen skies carrying the constant threat of rain, Fred Wolcott, sensational Rice Institute sophomore, fulfilled the expectations of the approximately 5,000 spectators by skimming over the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.2 seconds. The old mark of 0:14.5 was set by Sam Allen of Oklahoma Baptist in 1935.

Wolcott, who ran an 0:13.9 race in the Texas Relays, was whisked along by a good wind again today and there was doubt the mark would stand.

In the decathlon Lee Todd of Elm Creek, Neb., won the javelin with a toss of 180 feet.

Minanogawa Stirs Fans By Victory Over Tamanishiki

Grand Champion Minanogawa staged the biggest upset of the 13-day "Summer" official sumo championship tournament at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku Friday in the 10th day's bouts by defeating Grand Champion Tamanishiki with as beautiful a throw as has been seen in years. Many were the fans that started leaving the bowl soon after the up and coming Mayedayama had pushed out Grand Champion Musashiyama out of the ring for victory, with a foregone conclusion on their part that Tamanishiki would dispose of Minanogawa without much trouble in the final bout of the day.

Futabayama Alone Unbeaten

The result is that 27-year-old Grand Champion Futabayama remains the only undefeated wrestler in the tourney of some 300 contestants. The veteran, Kagamiiwa, put up a gallant stand but Futabayama proved too powerful for him Friday. Today, Futabayama was to take on Musashiyama and was a strong favorite to win. His other two remaining opponents are Minanogawa and Tamanishiki.

Only other wrestler within the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle to have but one setback charged against him besides Tamanishiki is Kashimanada. Next in line is Akinoumi, who hails from Hiroshima City, with two defeats.

Prince Seif el Islam el Hussein, third son of the King of Yemen, was an interested spectator of the bouts Friday.

Present also were the 20 members of the Chinese women's goodwill mission. They were amazed at the size of the long-haired wrestlers and their strength.

Both Tamanishiki and Minanogawa were cautious in the "shikiri" or process of getting started and they required the full time limit of 10 minutes. Forced to start, Tamanishiki proved the quicker of the two and he thrust his two arms through Minanogawa's defense and started pushing. Minanogawa was forced back and when it seemed curtains for him, he made a gallant stand at the edge of the ring. He sent the more than 20,000 fans into a frenzy as he shoved Tamanishiki back to the center of the ring. Tamanishiki essayed a half turn to the right when Minanogawa suddenly thrust his right arm through Tamanishiki's left arm for a firm grip on the latter's girdle. Tamanishiki, ever the aggressor, started to push when Minanogawa put everthing in his right arm, pulling at the same time with his left, and Tamanishiki's 280-pound body sailed through the air and landed on the sand.

By virtue of his splendid victory over Tamanishiki, the hope has mounted that Minanogawa might stop Futabayama, who is well on the way for his fifth undefeated season. Minanogawa today was to meet Ayanobori, perhaps the best all-around wrestler, and it would not be a surprise if he proves a victim to Ayanobori's cleverness.

Ayanobori Wins

Ayanobori scored a win over over Nayoroiwa, younger stable-mate of Futabayama, Friday after the judges had reversed the referee's decision. Noyoroiwa, with his herculean strength, was on the verge of shoving Ayanobori out of the ring when the latter resorted to a throw or rather yanking with his two arms and the two fell out of the ring. The referee ruled that Nayoroiwa had won. The judges claimed that Nayoroiwa had been first to go out of the ring.

Banjaku, who had been forced to quit because of a leg injury and accordingly lose to Tamanishiki on Wednesday, made his reappearance after a day's rest. But his injury proved a handicap and he was defeated by Haguroyama.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Ayawaka defeated Kakogawa.
Bochozan defeated Orochigata.

Newark's 4 In 9th Stop Montreal, 6-5

NEWARK, N. J., April 27—A single by Jim Gleeson in the ninth inning with the bases loaded capped a four-run rally and enabled the champion Newark Bears to defeat the Montreal Royals today, 6 to 5.

The Bears chased Harry Smythe, Montreal starter, to cover with a shower of hits in the final frame and finished their work against Oadis Swigart, who walked Merrill May and then was bumped for pinch singles by Mike Chartak and Buddy Rosar before Gleeson ended the game.

Gleeson was the batting hero with four safeties in five chances. Kelleher, pinch hitting in the eighth, smacked a home run with the bases empty.

Ernie Bonham, Jack Haley and Jack Fallon pitched for the Bears, with the latter receiving credit for the victory. He hurled the last inning and retired the Royals in order.

Montreal collected thirteen blows, with Gus Dugas setting the pace with four, including a homer in the fifth. Alex Hooks also hit for the circuit in the fifth.

Yale Football Practice Draws Record Number

Christian Science Monitor

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 19—With between 60 and 70 players turning out daily, candidates for the Yale varsity football team are right in the midst of their spring practice. Work started a week ago and the men are being given some strenuous workouts. Yale does not play any spring games with other colleges; but there promises to be plenty of scrimmage. Practice games were staged last week and the coaches have had a chance to see how the newcomers look in action.

Head Coach Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond commented favorably on the enthusiasm of the squad. He says that the average attendance this year at spring practice is the highest it has been for years which indicates a keen interest in the game. There is lively competition for the positions on the Varsity left open by graduation.

The coaching staff remains about the same as last year with Earle Neale handling the backs, Marshall Wells the line, Ivy Williamson the ends, and Bill Renner working with the kickers. Gerry Ford, head coach of the J. V.'s, is assisting with the line. One new coach, Jimmy de Angelis, recruited from the Freshman staff, is also helping Pond.

Outlook Is Fair

The outlook for next year is only fair as the entire backfield which started against Harvard last season is gone, along with Jack Castle, a guard, and Frank Gallagher, the regular center. This backfield, led by Clint Frank, one of the greatest backs in Eli history, was the potent factor in the team's success. Dave Colwell was one of the finest kickers in the country. His long boots will be sorely missed and Coach Renner is working hard with several boys in an effort to find a satisfactory successor. It will be difficult to find backs to replace men of the caliber of Al Hessberg and Charley Ewart.

There is a nucleus of very good material for Coach Pond to build around, and if he can develop some good backs from the sophomores, Yale should have a fairly well-balanced aggregation. At the ends are two veterans in Flick Hoxton and Johnny Miller. Their understudies are A. D. Dyess and Joe Zilly, the rangy 180-pounder from the freshman team.

The tackle positions are well fortified with Capt. Bill Platt and Bill John. Bob Brooks, outstanding freshman tackle, tipping the beam at 210, is expected to make the grade. Another good tackle prospect is C. R. Taylor. Two regular guards from last year, Felix Caracciolo and Charles Miller, will be ably understudied by Cap Burnam, a sophomore, and S. B. Hemingway, a senior. William Stack and Ralph Millard are the leading center candidates.

Humphrey at Quarter

While the great Clint Frank will be sorely missed, the 1938 backfield should be a very effective combination. But Humphrey is at quarterback with Al Wilson and Eddie Collins at the halves. At present, Bill Snavely has the call at the fullback position; but he is likely to be pushed by H. B. Whiteman '41, who weighs 186, blocks well, and is a fine defensive player.

For replacements, Coach Pond is relying pretty strongly on last year's championship freshman team produced by Reg Root. Ray Anderson, the 1937 freshman captain and quarterback, will be tried out as an alternate for Bud Humphrey. Anderson passes and kicks well. Jim Reilly, the powerful offensive threat on the last fall's yearling team, will give Eddie Collins a run for the right-half post.

Other good new men are Jim Dern, a guard, and D. Kiputh, son of the Yale swimming coach, who is also a guard. Young Frank Kreske showed flashes of brilliant form last year as a ball-carrier on the freshman team. Choate Huffard and Jim Reid are a pair of fine young ends.

How this team will stack up against a rather formidable string of opponents on Yale's 1938 schedule remains to be seen. Reserves may be a problem, but the squad is alert, likes the game, and has the all-around possibilities to make trouble for any team. While they have no magic passer like Frank, they have a very good one in Bud Humphrey and Johnny Miller is an excellent kicker to make up for the loss of Colwell. Al Wilson is a star blocker and a fast, dangerous open-field runner. Yale's 1938 football schedule is as follows:

Oct. 1—Columbia; 8—Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia; 15—Navy; 22—Michigan; 29—Dartmouth.

Nov. 5—Brown; 12—Princeton at Princeton; 19—Harvard.

Bunrika Downs Manchou Cagers By 57-37 Score

Apparently feeling the effects of their continuous playing during the past few days, the visiting Manchoukuo basketball players did not possess their usual speed and went down to a 57 to 37 defeat at the hands of the Bunrika University quintet Friday afternoon at the National Gymnasium at Hitotsubashi, Kanda.

Especially were the visitors handicapped from injuries suffered by Guard Chang and Center Sieh, two mainstays of the team. Though they saw action, they were unable to give their usual performance.

The offensive failing to function, the Manchoukuoans resorted to long shots, some of them from the center of the floor. The result was that the Bunrika cagers took the ball from the backboard again and again and worked the ball down the floor to storm the Manchoukuo goal.

The score at half time was 36 to 17 in favor of Bunrika.

With a record of one victory and four defeats in five games, the Manchoukuo cagers were scheduled to leave Tokyo by the 11:20 p.m. train today. They finished third and last in the recent Far Eastern championships at the outdoor court of the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine.

12th For Futabayama

Futabayama, right, photographed as he shoved out Minanogawa for his 12th straight in as many days in the sumo tournament which ends today at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku.

Futabayama Clinches Title By Beating Minanogawa; Tamanishiki Is Beaten

Handsome Grand Champion Futabayama defeated Grand Champion Minanogawa, who had been expected to give him a battle royal, without much trouble Sunday afternoon in the 12th day of the 13-day "Summer" sumo tournament for his 12th straight win. The fact that Grand Champion Musashiyama registered a major upset by vanquishing Grand Champion Tamanishiki in the day's final bout made Futabayama the season's champion even if he loses to Tamanishiki in the climaxing bout today. For Tamanishiki with but one setback up to Sunday—suffered at the hands of Minanogawa on Friday—had been the only candidate with the chance of tying Futabayama.

Out For 66th Win

If Futabayama defeats Tamanishiki this afternoon, and the chances are 2 to 1 that he will, he will have established the amazing record of going through five tournaments in the official championships without a defeat and registered his 66th consecutive victory.

Minanogawa, to be the first man to stop Futabayama's winning streak, was cautious and the "shikiri" or process of getting started went to the full time limit of 10 minutes. No sooner had they stood up than Futabayama resorted to pushing with his two powerful hands. Minanogawa had not expected this. He had anticipated his opponent to thrust his right arm through for a grip on his girdle and then maneuver for a throw. Such a turn would also give Minanogawa a hold on Futabayama's girdle, and then it would be a real battle between the two. But Futabayama apparently thought it too much trouble to go to that extent. Rather than give Minanogawa a chance to attempt a throw and with a chance of success, because physically Minanogawa is the largest of all wrestlers and with the greatest brute strength, Futabayama elected to push and push to catch his opponent off balance and maneuver himself into a position to win. Minanogawa checked himself once but Futabayama was relentless in his attack and out went Minanogawa.

Tamanishiki had the surprise of his life when Musashiyama outshoved him out of the ring.

Nayoroiwa Wins

Nayoroiwa, strong stable-mate of Futabayama, placed himself as a candidate for "ohseki" or rank immediately below grand champion, by lifting Mayedayama, an "ohseki" and depositing him out of the circle. Mayedayama never had a chance with Nayoroiwa using his protruding stomach to good advantage as a lever.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

One-Hit Shut-Out Pitched By Feller

CLEVELAND, April 20—Robert W. (Bob) Feller, back in the form that made him the American League's strikeout champion, shut out the Browns with a single hit today while Cleveland's artillery swung into action to win, 9-0.

The six-foot, 19-year-old pride of Van Meter, Iowa, struck out six Browns, walked an equal number, made two of the Indians' eleven hits and drove in two runs.

The only hit off Feller came in the sixth, when Catcher Billy Sullivan beat out a tap to the box on a close decision. The Indians meanwhile clubbed big Jim Weaver and his successor Russ Van Atta, and received ten walks, nine of them from Weaver.

Mean Much to Feller

The Browns always have been momentous in the speedball king's life. The first time Feller started a professional game he struck out fifteen of them and later raised his mark to seventeen against another club. Last year, in his first time out, he injured his "million dollar" right arm as the Browns beat him, 4—3, and Feller was out of action for two months.

Feller has not displayed his dazzling speed of last year, when he won nine and lost seven, but has been pitching smarter baseball and holding runners close to their bases. Not a man stole on him today.

The Tribe went three runs ahead in the second inning and never was threatened. Trosky doubled and Keltner walked. Hemsley fouled out and Feller flied out, but Lary walked, filling the bases. Campbell's single drove home Trosky and Keltner. Campbell stole second without drawing a throw and then Lary stole home. The inning ended when Campbell was out at the plate on an attempted steal.

Trosky Gets Triple

Cleveland picked up a run in the third and in the sixth, and two each in the seventh and eighth. Trosky's triple to right brought in the last two men, and gave him three hits in four trips.

Cleveland sent Sullivan to the Browns last Winter in a deal for Rollie Hemsley, who has been Feller's "private catcher" this year.

Hosei Upsets Waseda, 4 To 3; Keio Is Winner

The rain didn't stop Waseda and Hosei from going through their second game Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium. There was a heavy downpour immediately after the curtain-raiser in which Keio turned the tables over Rikkyo, 6 to 5, but the fans failed to leave their seats, and the Waseda and Hosei nines responded. The spectators were well rewarded for their perseverance and enthusiasm as the two teams engaged in a hip and tuck duel that went to two extra frames despite the drizzle before Hosei upset the dope by emerging the winner by 4 to 3.

Meiji Back in Running

By virtue of Hosei's victory, Meiji, champions for the Spring and Fall seasons last year, is back in the running, tied for top place with Waseda with six victories apiece out of eight games played. Meiji only has to take the two games from Hosei coming Saturday and Sunday and be in a position to tie Waseda, provided the latter turns the same trick over Keio in their semi-annual baseball classic of the country on June 4 and 5. In other words, Meiji will be in a very comfortable position if it makes it two straight over Hosei.

The league standings follow:

	G.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
Waseda	8	6	2	0	.750
Meiji	8	6	2	0	.750
Hosei	8	4.5	3.5	1	.563
Keio	8	4	4	0	.500
Rikkyo	8	3.5	4.5	1	.438
Teidai	8	0	8	0	.000

Waseda came from behind to deadlock the score at 3-all in the first half of the eighth when Pinchhitter Kataoka came through with a timely hit over the second baseman's head to bat in Go, who had singled to get on and then went to second when Minamimura walked. Thereupon, hope loomed for Waseda but the latter's supporters had not reckoned with big Southpaw Akaneya, who got better and stopped the Waseda batsmen cold in the ninth, tenth and eleventh innings.

Ogusu Pulls Boner

A boner by Backstop Ogusu of Waseda, or rather a momentary lapse of his mind, won the game for Hosei in the last half of the eleventh inning. The activities of the inning: Captain Tsuruoka's grounder to third rolled for an infield hit after one out. Yoshida walked. Takeuchi dumped a grounder right in front of the plate. Ogusu picked it up and touched out Takeuchi. Apparently thinking the side had been retired, he tossed the ball away in the direction of the plate, where there was not a Hosei man in sight, and Captain Tsuruoka romped home for the winning run.

Matsui, promising left hander of Waseda, relieved Southpaw Kondo at the outset of the eighth inning. It was tough for him to lose the way the game ended.

Takagi Is Hero

The bespectacled Takagi, right handed pitcher, of Keio virtually won his own game against Rikkyo by doubling in the sixth off Ishida to bat in two runs to give his team a 6 to 3 lead. He relieved Southpaw Nakata with the bags loaded in the fourth after Rikkyo had scored one run. He issued a walk to force in a run but Kiyohara lined into a doubleplay to retire the side.

Saigo, speed ball artist of Rikkyo, was hit hard and was sent to the showers after the third when he allowed four runs.

U.S. Saber Title Goes To Huffman Of New York 'U'

By LEWIS B. FUNKE
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 27—Dr. John R. Huffman, assistant Professor of Chemical Engineering at New York University, won his fifth national saber championship last night, while two of America's leading swordsmen for several years achieved their first national indoor crowns on the strips of the converted salled d'armes in the New York A. C. before a large gathering.

The epee title went to the tall, slender, former N. Y. U. captain, Jose R. de Capriles of the Salle Santelli as a result of his one-sided conquest of his youthful opponent, William I. Randall of Yale, 10 to 3. Dernell Every, Winged Foot foilsman turned back Frank S. Righeimer Jr. of the Lake Shore A. C. of Chicago, 10 to 8, in a brilliant struggle and Dr. Huffman, representing the N. Y. A. C., scored, 10 to 8, over his perennial opponent, Norman C. Armitage of the Fencers Club.

This meeting between Dr. Huffman and Armitage, which climaxed the evening's duelling, provided an interesting sidelight. Dr. Huffman, defending champion, had won the honors four times while Armitage, his team-mate on the last U. S. Olympic team, also had four saber titles to his credit.

An Exciting Contest

The "rubber" battle that these two rivals put on was worthy of their long standing feud, an exciting contest with spectacular blades.

Both fencers, puplis of the eminent master, George Santelli, a coach of the 1936 Olympic team, fought cautiously at the start. Armitage got in the first touch and shortly after assumed a 3-to-1 advantage. Fencing with spirit and assuance, he went on to lead, 4 to 2. But Dr. Huffman, steady and deliberate, waited for his openings. When he struck he scored twice in a row to tie the match.

Armitage went ahead again by 2 points. Then Dr. Huffman managed to get back into the fray and tied the score at 6—all. Then he unleashed a beautiful beat and cut to take the lead. Now he was at his best, and he went on to 9—6. Armitage was not beaten, however. He came within a point, then lost on a magnificent exhibition of timing as Dr. Huffman feinted to the head and whipped home the winning touch to the flank.

Scores Easy Triumph

The triumph recorded by de Capriles over the Yale senior was not an unexpected one. The 26-year-old Olympian had too much experience for Randall. The youngster, who placed fifth in the recent intercollegiate championships, relied almost completely on his fleche or quick lunge, and it was not a difficult style for de Capriles to solve. The champion waited for Randall to break loose and invariably scored with a stop thrust or parry and riposte.

Every's conquest of Righeimer was as thrilling as has been seen in championship competition. Six times the battle was even as the score shifted first from one then to the other. With the count tied at 8—all, Every showed his strength. Righeimer leaped to a fleche attack only to be halted in his tracks by a lightning riposte as Every took the lead. Again Righeimer took the offensive on a well-executed attack and again Every scored, this time with a perfectly timed riposte.

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, champion swordsman in his day, presented the medal to the foils winner. Sherman Hall handed over the epee prize to de Capriles and George S. Lyons presented Dr. Huffman with his saber trophy.

Germany Takes Doubles To Oust Norway In Play

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 21—Germany today walked off with the first team victory in the second-round of this year's European zone Davis Cup competition by clinching its series against Norway by a third straight win. The outcome of three other second-round ties meanwhile remained undecided.

Germans Take Doubles

Already leading 2-0 as a result of yesterday's singles victories, the Germans took their third straight from the Norwegians at Berlin as Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa pounded out a convincing straight-set doubles victory over J. Haanes and Jenssen. The score was 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Two more singles matches remain to be played, but they will not affect the outcome.

Switzerland meanwhile dropped behind Sweden at Stockholm when the Swedish doubles pair of Karl Ohrander and Rohlsson defeated H. C. Wisher and B. Maneff, of Switzerland, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5. Yesterday's singles matches ended in a deadlock with one victory to the credit of each team.

Play meanwhile began in two other ties, France meeting Monaco at Marseilles and Britain clashing with Yugoslavia at Zagreb. Conclusion of the first day's singles matches found France leading 2-0 over Monaco, while Yugoslavia gained only one-match lead as the second match, played between Ference Puncec, of Yugoslavia, and R. A. Shayes, British player, was interrupted on account of darkness with the Yugoslav leading.

The detailed scores were as follows:

France-Monaco: Bernard Destremeau (France) defeated Medecin (Monaco), 6-3, 6-0, 6-1; Yvon Petra (France) defeated Mighes (Monaco), 6-1, 6-1, 6-0.

Yugoslavia Leads

Yugoslavia-Britain: Mitic (Yugoslavia) defeated W. D. Butler (Britain), 6-3, 6-1, 6-4, the match between Puncec and Shayes was held over until tomorrow with the score standing 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, 3-2.

Mann Knocks Out Austrian Champ In Third Round

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 25—Flooring his opponent eight times, Nathan Mann, young New Haven heavyweight, knocked out Hans Haverlick, Austrian champion, in the third session of their scheduled ten-round feature bout at the Hippodrome last night.

The finish came after 2:54 of the stanza had elapsed as Referee Arthur Donovan called and end to the one-sided proceedings. Mann weighed 193 and Haverlick 184½.

At the time Haverlick was down on the canvas, a dazed and bewildered expression on his face, listening to Donovan's count. When the toll reached seven the arbiter suddenly stopped and lifted the Austrian to his stool. Haverlick was a completely beaten and outclassed man.

Haverlick Reveals Courage

Haverlick's only assets were a long, light left and plenty of courage, which were hardly enough against the speed and hard-hitting Connecticut battler. Only once did the Austrian hurt Mann and that was near the end of the second round, when an overhand, wild right rocked the winner. But Mann was too tough and Haverlick never had another chance to get in a telling blow.

Mann, making his first local start since he was stopped by Joe Louis, showed a great left hook. It was this blow which accounted for six of the eight knockdowns. A right floored Haverlick once and a volley of punches the other time.

In the opening stanza Mann sent his rival reeling with a left hook twice, the bell saving Hans. Four times Haverlick hit the canvas in the second as Mann drew blood from the loser's nose. Then came the third and last session. A left hook drove Haverlick down in a neutral corner and a barrage of rights and left brought about the end.

Haverlick might have gotten up again, but it certainly would have been pointless. At any rate the referee had enough. Hans had enough and so did the crowd of 1,356 persons, who paid ¥2,852 to witness the one-sided affair.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Versatile Paul Revere

This patriot, politician, soldier, gold and silversmith artist, engraver, mechanic and inventor, bell-founder, industrial pioneer, did not make the ride for which he is famous. He was dispatched by Joseph Warren to Lexington and Concord to warn the "minute men" of the expedition sent thither by Gage. Revere only reached Lexington, where he was joined by William Dawes and Doctor Samuel Prescott.

According to Revere's own account, he was arrested by a British patrol near Lexington, so that he was unable to proceed. Dawes was intercepted a few minutes later and the man who really completed the ride was Doctor Prescott, who rode on to Lincoln and Concord and gave the first alarm to the "minute men." Doctor Prescott happened to be calling on a girl in Lexington on the momentous night when he met Revere. He was later captured by the British and died in captivity at Halifax.

Futabayama Vanquishes Tamanishiki Hanging Up His 5th Straight Title

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

Grand Champion Tamanishiki made a gallant stand, but he was unable to stop the winning streak of the younger Grand Champion Futabayama Monday afternoon in the concluding day of the 13-day "Summer" official sumo championship tournament at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku. Futabayama established the all-time record of winning five seasons without a defeat and at the same time hung up his 66th consecutive victory for an amazing feat that probably will not be equalled.

Futabayama's accomplishment stands out all the more when one considers that since his victory over Tamanoura, who is now performing as Ryogoku, in the middle of the "Spring" tourney in January, 1936, he has not been defeated. To go through even one tournament of 13 days without a defeat is a mountainous task, for the wrestlers are evenly matched and a grand champion has to take them all.

Tamanishiki Puts Up Fight

The chance that Tamanishiki might beat Futabayama drew a sell-out crowd from early morning. More than 25,000 rabid fans jammed the bowl and for a time feared for their very lives when the strong earthquake that came at 4:10 o'clock in the afternoon, two hours before the concluding bout of the day, shook the dome-shaped structure for several seconds that seemed a lifetime in length. But they were well rewarded for Tamanishiki gave Futabayama the toughest battle of the tourney and though he was defeated, his was a moral victory.

Here was a most crucial bout for Futabayama, but he was extremely cool. Tamanishiki, having already lost two bouts, was under no tension. They stood up quicker than expected and each thrust his right arm through the other's defense for a grip on the girdle. Futabayama lost no time in attempting a body throw but Tamanishiki checked it and in turn attempted a leg throw. It almost worked and the fans went into a frenzy. They then remained virtually motionless in the middle of the ring, cautious for an opening. Time was called to give them a breathing spell—the first time it happened to Futabayama in the tourney. After resuming the identical positions, time was called in. Each tried to grasp the other's girdle with the left hand for an advantageous hold but failed. Tamanishiki turned aggressor and started pushing but Futabayama checked him. They once again remained motionless in the middle of the ring, breathing deeply, and when it seemed as if time might be called again by the judges to allow them a longer rest and a re-bout or to deliberate to call the match a draw, Futabayama, unleashing great strength, pulled Tamanishiki toward him, then started a drive forward with his powerful legs and fell on top of Tamanishiki outside of the ring for victory. Apparently, Futabayama was afraid of a draw decision on the part of the judges and resorted to the charge that won for him.

Trophies Galore

The closing ceremonies followed with Futabayama receiving one trophy after another, symbolical of the championship. To Kashimanada, who lost but one bout, went the award for the best record of wrestlers within the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle, not including the grand champions and champions.

Grand Champion Musashiyama redeemed himself by defeating Grand Champion Minanogawa with a beautiful arm throw that sent the giant body of Minanogawa rolling on the sand. Both had won six and lost six bouts. So it was that Musashiyama succeeded in registering a better winning than losing column.

Champion Mayedayama cheered his supporters by taking the measure of the older Champion, Kagamiiwa, by lifting him outside the ring.

Nayoroiwa Wins

Nayoroiwa, young stable-mate of Futabayama, outfought Banjaku in the other principal bout of the day.

Tamanoumi, ace pupil of Tamanishiki, triumphed over Haguroyama, the other powerful stable-mate of Futabayama, in one of the best matches of the day. Tamanoumi prevented Haguroyama from slipping in his right hand through for a hold and with his powerful arms, shoved him out of the ring.

The results of the bouts after the intermission follow:

Yamatonishiki beat Banshinzan.
Tachiwaka beat Bochozan.
Onami beat Ayawaka.
Fujigadake beat Aobayama.
Akinoumi beat Genjiyama.

Conscientious

A troop of Boy Scouts was encamped on the creek bank at the bottom of Blogg's farm. The scoutmaster announced that they would have stew for dinner, and he told one of the boys to ask Blogg for a turnip.

"Do you want a fairly big one?" asked the boy.

"About the size of your head," said the scoutmaster.

Fifteen minutes later Blogg raced into the camp.

"One of your boys needs attention!" he yelled at the scoutmaster. "He's pulling up all my turnips and trying his hat on them."—Smith's Weekly.

Aha!

"Shall we have a friendly game of cards?" asked Mrs. Newcomer.

"No, let's play bridge," vetoed her husband.

Stanford Plans Much Throwing For Next Fall

Christian Science Monitor

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif.—"We'll throw that ball all over the field and why shouldn't we? We want to capitalize on our speed, and we don't intend to sacrifice power for speed. We expect to have plenty of drive."

The speaker was Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill, head football coach of Stanford University. Thornhill was discussing the prospects of the Indians' 1938 gridiron squad, which has been holding spring practice since March 28. Approximately 50 candidates reported for the session, and this group will be increased to 65 or 70 by the first of May, when gridders now taking part in track, baseball, and other sports will be available. There are four workouts a week—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday—with the traditional final Spring practice game scheduled for Saturday, June 4.

As Thornhill and his assistants start building the 1938 Indian eleven, their three major problems appear to be (1) finding a capable substitute center, (2) bolstering the guard positions which caused them most concern last season, (3) determining the most advantageous way in which to use some of the finest backs Stanford has had in many a day.

One Brilliant Center

If Tiny were sure that Tony Calvelli, regular center in 1937, could play 60 minutes of every game, there would be no concern about the pivot position. The rugged little Italian lad will rank as one of the country's best. However, with the graduation of Louis Tsoutsouvas, replacement material does not look very good. Three non-lettermen from the 1937 squad—Wally deWitt, John McDonough, and John Haffner—and two numeral winners from the frosh—John Thompson and Jack Hull—are the only other centers available and no one of these boys has had much experience.

Leo Ferko, regular guard last season, and Bob Matthews, who played nearly as much as any other guard, will be missing. Bob Dakan, Frank McMillan, Dick Sutton, Jack Walton, and possibly Ed Garnier—all lettermen—will be available. Dakan was the regular right guard last fall and McMillan appeared to be the best of them all until he was hurt in mid-season. Sutton came with a rush at the end of the year and will make a very strong bid for a regular job. Thornhill is considering shifting Ed Johannessen, 210-pound freshman tackle star to guard and this boy will land a regular job regardless at which position he lands.

Thornhill is in a real quandary as to how he will place the backs who will be at his disposal and will do a great deal of experimenting. It is entirely possible that some of the backfield candidates will be shifted to the line. Gene Coldiron, quarterback; Bill Kirsch, right half, and Bill Paulman seems to be fairly certain of retaining his position:. Al Alustiza, quarterback; Pete Fay, halfback; Fred Ledeboer, halfback, and Jim Groves, fullback, are other available lettermen.

There is little doubt that much of the Stanford attack will be built about left halfback Pete Fay, who proved himself to be one of the most spectacular and dangerous open-field runners in the game last year. Although Jimmy Coffis was considered the regular at left half, Fay played more minutes. Pete can kick, pass, run, and block, and handles the safety position beautifully. Alustiza was considered the regular quarterback for a time until injured and he will make a strong bid for a regular job again. Ledeboer got away to a great start but injuries slowed him down in late season. Groves did some splendid work at fullback and will be even better next fall, although there is a possibility that he might be shifted to end, where he played some time before coming to Stanford.

Chad Reade, Jerry Sparling, and Tom Walker, halfbacks; Rod Parker, quarterback, and Chet Patton, fullback, were members of the 1937 squad, but did not win letters. Reade is a nifty runner who should be very much of a contender this season. Sparling, a 10-second sprinter, played a spectacular game against the California Ramblers, and is looked upon as a fine prospect. Patton improved enough to indicate that he can't be counted out.

To complicate the backfield situation further, the freshman squad sends up Norman Standlee, fullback; Thor Peterson, Quentin Thompson, Glenn South, Bob Olden, and Monte Pfyl halfbacks; Stan Graff and Jim McCloud, quarterbacks. Standlee was the best freshman fullback to put in an appearance here in many years and will be hard to keep off the regular eleven. He may be shifted to right half. Peterson, a fine halfback, is an outstanding kicker. Thompson and South played beautiful ball for the frosh, while Olden, Pfyl, Graff, and McCloud are at least average prospects.

Banzai For The 5th Time In Row

City Assembly Votes Approval Of Games Budget

By unanimous vote, the Municipal Assembly close to midnight Monday approved the Olympics budget of ¥12,130,000 and a budget of ¥10,800,000 for building of roads in connection with the Games, or a total of ¥22,930,000.

Funds for the preparation of the Games facilities will be appropriated as follows:

For 1938 ..... ¥7,340,000
For 1939 3,850,000
For 1940 940,000

Funds for the road building will be appropriated as follows:

For 1938 ..... ¥6,000,000
For 1940 4,800,000

The ¥12,130,000 Olympics budget will provide for the construction of the main Olympic stadium, swimming stadium, Olympic village and training track and field grounds, all at Komazawa, the cycling stadium at the Shibaura reclaimed grounds, and indoor athletic hall at Ochanomizu. But for the cycling stadium, specifications for which already have been laid out, blue prints for the entire facilities will be completed by the end of August.

The commencement of actual construction work and date of completion follow:

Indoor athletic hall; early part of October this year and July, 1940.

Main Olympic stadium: early part of October this year and July, 1940.

Swimming stadium: early part of October and March, 1940.

Cycling stadium: June 20, 1938 and September, 1939.

Olympic village: middle part of January, 1939 and March, 1940.

It is reported that more than 200 engineers, technicians and architects will be engaged to carry out the 1940 Olympic vast plans, while the total number of workers will be reportedly 1,000,000 men.

It is expected more than 12,300 tons of iron and 170,000 tons of cement will be used for the various stadiums and tracks.

3-Nation Track Meet Will Not Be Sponsored By J.A.A.F. Next Fall

Plans that have been under way for the holding of a triangular Germany-Italy-Japan athletic meet next Fall were abandoned by the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation at its meeting Monday afternoon. The reason given was the lack of time for preparations, plus other factors.

The Federation, however, voted to make a subsidy toward the independent efforts of the Japan Amateur Track and Fieled Federation, Japan Soccer Association, Japan Wrestling Association, Japan Boxing Association, Japan Cycling Association and Japan Fencing Association in the event of materialization of negotiations for competition among the three countries named.

Pro Footballers Are Progressive Concerning Rules

By GEORGE M. R. HOLMES
Christian Science Monitor

There is no question but what those who are most interested in professional football are very progressive in their views regarding the playing of the game. They have shown this many times in years past by the way in which they have reacted to the rules of the game. Never in the past have they shown any hesitancy in making a radical change if they believed that it would tend to make the game more popular with the football public, and, as they have to depend on this popularity for their success, it is not at all surprising that they should be willing to make changes. The fact that they have in practically every case resulted in success shows just what good prophets professional football promoters are of the desires of those who pay to see their gridiron contests. Starting out operating under the college rules that prevailed at the time, it was not long before their rule-makers began to break away from these regulations, until now there are a number of differences in the two codes.

The Latest Changes

Recently the professional rules committee held its 1938 meeting, and again it showed a willingness to make changes which are quite radical. No less than five changes were made, and the committee has issued orders which show that it is seriously considering another quite radical change next year, if the data collected warrant such a move. It is interesting also to note that the professionals are just as ready to adopt a change made by the college rule makers as they are to break away from the amateur code. This applied to the 1938 changes as well as to those made in the past. Briefly, the changes made relate to the out-of-bounds kickoff, the withdrawal of players in the fourth period, penalties within the 10-yard line, deliberate roughing of a forward passer and forward passes into the end zone. And all of these changes will make the rules regarding the phases of the game affected different from the present college rules with the single exception or that relating to forward passes into the end zone, and in this the professionals have given up their former ruling in favor of the college code.

Out-of-Bound Kicks

It will be recalled that one of the changes which the college rulemakers made in their code last year was to the effect that if the kickoff went out of bounds, the ball would be put in play on the receiving side's 35-yard line. This was done in order to discourage a team from trying to kick close to the sidelines in order to keep the ball away from a star back, and thus minimize the chances of a long runback. As the amateurs did not change this rule this winter, they appear to be favorable to it; but the professionals have decided that, if the kicking side wants to kick out-of-bounds, it will have to pay more for the privilege and so the ball will be put on the 45-yard line instead of the 35. Unless I am greatly mistaken there will be less out-of-bound kicking among the pros in 1938 than there was in 1937. One of the most spectacular plays of the game has always been the runback of a kick, and believe that the pros have made a wise move in taking steps to make it more common. That they may also rule against punting out-of-bounds when kicking from within the 40-yard line became apparent when they instructed the official league scorers to keep a record of all punts originating within that point that go out of bounds. It looks as if within another year the famous "coffin-corner" kick would be a thing of the past so far as the professionals are concerned.

Roughing the Passer

In passing a rule penalizing a team for roughing a forward passer after the ball has left his hands, the professionals have given him the same protection that is given to the punter. This is a wise move, as it will take a lot of pressure off the thrower as well as tend to slow up the would-be tackler, both of which will make for better forward passing. It will also protect the passer from possible injury. Just why this protection was not previously given to the passer as well as to the punter is hard to say, as he certainly needs it just as much. This is a change which the colleges can well adopt. In fact, I believe the kickoff rule and the proposed "coffin-corner" kick would prove popular in college circles.

France, Sweden Enter 3rd Round Of Cup Tourney

Domei-Tsushin

LONDON, May 22—While England's weakest court team in years faced defeat at the hands of Yugoslavia, France and Sweden today forged their way into the third round of European Davis Cup competition by eliminating Monaco and Switzerland, respectively. Germany meanwhile polished off a clean-sweep win over Norway, and Italy led Poland by one match to nothing.

France Beats Monaco

Already in possession of two singles victories, France clinched its series against Monaco at Marseilles by winning the doubles for the third straight point. J. Bolelli and P. Pelizza overcame the Monacan combination of G. Medecin and V. Landau in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Sweden, who entered the last day of play at Stockholm with a 2-1 lead over Switzerland, meanwhile copped both concluding singles matches to end the series in a 4-1 victory. Results of the individual matches were:

Karl Schroeder (Sweden) defeated B. Maneff (Switzerland) 3-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2; Rohlison (Sweden) defeated H. C. Fisher (Switzerland) 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Resuming play at Zagreb, England was on the verge of defeat by Yugoslavia as R. A. Shayes lost to Ferenc Puncec in one of the singles matches continued from yesterday. Rain interrupted the doubles with the Yugoslavs leading two sets to nothing, thus placing them within a single set of a match and team victory.

Scores were:

Puncec (Yugoslavia) defeated Shayes (England) 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4; and Puncec and Mitic (Yugoslavia) led W. D. Butler and H. F. Wilde (England) 7-5, 6-3, 1-3 when play was interrupted.

The last day of the Germany-Norway series at Berlin ended in a clean-sweep victory for the Germans as R. Goepfert, substituting for Henner Henkel, defeated J. Haanes, and G. Von Metaxa defeated Jenssen, both in straight sets. The scores were 6-3, 8-6, 6-2 and 6-1, 6-0, 6-0 respectively.

Italy Leads

Italy meanwhile ran up an initial one-match lead over Poland at Milan, V. Canapele defeating J. Hebda in a drawn-out five-set contest by scores of 7-9, 6-1, 6-2, 7-9, 6-2. The second opening singles match had to be postponed due to rain.

What Is A Berry?

The botanical definition of a "berry" is a fleshy fruit which is pulpy throughout and is covered with a thin skin like the grape, potato, asparagus and tomato.

The strawberry, raspberry, blackberry, mulberry, yewberry, are not berries at all in spite of their name.

Dizzy Finds His Arm Is Better Than Ever

CINCINNATI, April 20—It looks as if Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean didn't change anything except his uniform after his leap from the Cards to the Cubs in exchange for $185,000 and three players.

Prone upon a rubbing table in the dressing room today, after he had paid Chicago the first dividend on the purchase price by pitching his mates to a 9-to-2 lead over the Reds in six frames, the self-styled "great one" made these startling statements:

"Well, that's one game in the bag, and now I need twenty-nine more. I'm going to win thirty this year, just to show some of those guys who said I was through.

"Charley Grimm is the only manager in baseball who would have taken me out of a game like that to give me a rest. He's the greatest manager in the game. (Monday, at a luncheon for the Reds, Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati had been Dean's "greatest manager" nominee).

"I'll be ready to start Sunday in Chicago, and will I show 'em something there? I only used my fast one twice today, and each time the catcher had it before the batter swung. Both of those pitches were for strikeouts, and the other one came on a curve—and did that curve break?

"What a ball club these Cubs are! I don't see how you can lose if they hit like that all the time. They're the greatest bunch I've ever been with. They pulled fielding plays out there behind me today that the Cardinals couldn't have handled in a hundred years. Herman (Chicago second baseman) came up with two that would have been sure hits at St. Louis."

The talkative one went on to say that his arm was in great shape, that it felt "better than since I started pitching," and that he thought the pennant was "in the bag" for the Cubs.

While Dizzy talked, Doc Andy Lotshaw, Cub trainer for the past seventeen years, kneaded the muscles in the mound star's salary wing.

"This," Dizzy announced, "is the best rub and the best treatment I've ever had. I never had this kind of stuff at St. Louis. The trouble there was that they had too many ball players and we couldn't fight our way to a rubbing table. This old arm'll be okay now; Doc will see to that.

"I knew I was right today when I I was warning up. Garbark, who was catching me, had to go over to the dugout and get a sponge for his glove, and from there on there was nothing to it. And did you see Ole Diz hit that one in the second?"

Britain Is Eliminated By Yugoslavia, 1 To 4 In Davis Cup 2nd Round

Domei-Tsushin

LONDON, May 23—Britain today experienced one of its worst defeats in international tennis competition when its weak Davis Cup squad playing at Zagreb in the second round of the European zone, met defeat at the hands of the Yugoslavian team. Italy led Poland two matches to one while France made a clean sweep of its matches with Monaco.

Misses Perry

Seriously weakened by the loss of its ace player, Frederick Perry who turned professional, and Henry "Bunny" Austin who is not playing this year, the British team after dropping the first two singles matches, lost the doubles and one of the remaining singles encounters.

In the doubles match which was called yesterday due to rain, Ferene Puncec and Mitic of Yugoslavia defeated W. D. Butler and H. F. Wilde in five hard-fought sets. The scores were 7-5, 6-3, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3. In the singles match played today, Mitic defeated R. A. Shayes in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 11-9.

Italy-Poland Tied

Playing at Milan against Poland, the Italian doubles team of V. Taroni and F. Quintavalle defeated J. Hebda and C. Schychala in a heated five-set battle. The scores were 11-9, 2-6, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5. In the one singles match played today, T. Tloczynski of Poland defeated Giorgio de Stefani. The match was tied at two sets apiece when de Stefani after pulling a muscle defaulted to his opponent.

At Marseilles, the French squad made it a clean sweep over the weak Monocan team.

Why Change Setup?

Christian Science Monitor

Just now the most popular topic in lawn tennis circles appears to be the question as to whether or not the Davis Cup competition shall cease to be an annual affair and become a biennial one. Ever since the first of these competitions was held on the old Longwood Cricket Club grounds back in 1900, the trophy has been on an annual basis. True, it has not been competed for every year since that first meeting between the United States and Great Britain; but it has been subject to yearly challenge, and with the exception of 1901, 1910, 1915, 1916, 1917, and 1918, one or more nations has sent in a challenge. The fact that no matches were played in 1901 and 1910 was simply due to the reason that no country cared to play those years. In 1901, the United States was holding the trophy, and up to that time Great Britain was the only nation interested in the competition. In 1910, the trophy was in Australia, and, as the United States had sent a team to that country in 1909 with the result that the home team won in five straight matches, the next year found Australia without an opponent. That the cup was not competed for in 1915, 1916, 1917, and 1918 was due to the World War. And so it is to be seen that, with the exception of six year, play has been annual in the quest for the trophy which a Harvard senior—Dwight Filley Davis—put up for international tennis competition.

Why Change Present Setup

As to just why there should be any need for any change in the present setup under which the competition is on an annual basis is hard to understand. That the idea of putting it on a biennial basis should have come from Great Britain is surprising. At the start of the competition it looked very much as if the competition might be confined to Great Britain and the United States; but this soon proved a wrong conjecture, as Australia soon entered the field, and now it is open to all the nations of the world. In fact, there are some 30 nations which are directly interested in the competition and which will have representatives to vote on all matters relating to the competition at the meeting in London next June. Had the competition remained solely for Great Britain and the United States, it might have been well to make it a biennial affair, the same as is the case with the Walker and Ryder Cup golf matches; but where it is open to the entire world, it should certainly be continued as an annual affair, especially as no country is obliged to challenge except in such years as it desires to compete. Let Great Britain, or any other country that may not desire to play every year, challenge every other year, and those countries will obtain the same results as if the tournament were made biennial without forcing such countries as may desire to play annually to adopt a plan they do not want. If under the present setup it were compulsory for a nation to play every year, then there might be some reason for considering the proposed change; but as constituted today, we fail to see where any change is necessary or could improve the situation.

Might Help the Pros?

In connection with all the literature that has been appearing anent the biennial plan comes an extract from a letter which Walter Merrill Hall, chairman of the U. S. L. T. A. Davis Cup Committee, addressed to the Davis Cup nations that are to meet in London in June, which says: "We believe that the development in tennis of professional competition and exhibitions affords one of the strongest reasons for keeping the Davis Cup amateur competition continuously before the public. The activities of professional and promoters would undoubtedly be strongly stimulated, particularly in the off years, by a change in Davis Cup competition from an annual to a biennial basis." While all of this may be quite true, we fail to see why any increase in the activities of the professionals should be prevented. Professional lawn tennis has now reached a stage where it is, or should be, in the same relation to amateur tennis as are professional and amateur golf. Let the tennis officials, if they want to keep a proper balance between professional and amateur tennis, recognize and hold open tournaments. By so doing they will not have to consider what effect the absence of a Davis Cup competition might have on the professional side of the game, and they will also do much to increase the popularity of lawn tennis among all classes.

The Austrian water polo coach, who is now engaging in business at Dairen, will come here at the end of this month, and will coach Japanese Olympic water polo team as well as the inter-collegiate teams at the Meiji Shrine swimming pool for two weeks beginning on June 1.

Mr. Freund has been a member of the Austrian Olympic water polo and he coached the victorious Hungarian team for the Los Angeles Olympic Games, and the German team for the Berlin Olympics.

Inada Arrives In California; To See Garland

Domei-Tsushin

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23—On a mission to promote better American understanding of the preparations now being made in Japan for the 1940 Olympics, two members of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee, Baron Masauye Inada and Makoto Den, arrived here from Yokohama aboard the N.Y.K. liner Tatsuta Maru.

Baron Inada, who is the chairman of the executive committee for the organization of the Winter Games, will confer with William Garland, American member of the International Olympic Committee, at Los Angeles or the latter's country villa tomorrow on the issue of the relations between the Olympic Games and the International Ski Federation. He will then proceed to Chicago to meet Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee.

A 15-minute speech describing Japan's preparations for the Tokyo Olympiad and the 1940 world fair will be broadcast by Mr. Den, who is also the director of the International Tourist Bureau of the Japanese Railway Ministry, over the K.S.F.O. radio network tonight. During the course of the speech, he is expected to announce Japan's participation in the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition here.

The Japanese official will make a similar broadcast over the K.Y.A. hookup tomorrow night, leaving for Del Monte the following day to see Mr. Garland at the latter's villa.

Pro Baseball League Revises Schedule

Extension of the War Victory Exhibition at the Nishinomiya Stadium, near Osaka, for the full month of June has necessitated the Japan Professional Baseball Federation to revise that part of the schedule calling for six games at the stadium on June 11 and 12.

The six games scheduled for play at the Susaki grounds here on June 11 and 12 will be moved up a day and four of the six games for Nishinomiya will be played on June 10, 11 and 12. The remaining two games will be included in the tilts scheduled for the Korakuen ball park on July 16 and 17.

The schedule as redrafted follows:

June 10: Hankyu vs. Nagoya; Senators vs. Dolfins; Lions vs. Giants, at Susaki.

June 11: Eagles vs. Tigers; Senators vs. Tigers; Hankyu vs. Giants, at Susaki.

June 12: Eagles vs. Senators; Dolfins vs. Tigers; Nagoya vs. Giants; Lions vs. Hankyu, at Susaki.

Forrest Towns Holder Of World's Hurdles Record

NEW YORK, April 14—Confusion over existing world hurdles records was removed yesterday when Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, brought back the complete list of marks approved by the International Amateur Athletic Federation at its Paris congress in February.

Forrest (Spec) Towns, Georgia's Olympic champion, holds the official mark now of 13.7 seconds for 120 yards as well as 110-meters high hurdles. Towns registered this astonishing time at Oslo, in a post-Olympic meet in 1936, over the metric course. Since 110 meters is a few inches longer than 120 yards, the time automatically went into the books for both distances.

This wiped out the mark of 14 seconds flat, for 120 yards, previously credited to Bob Osgood of Michigan. Osgood's record received I. A. A. F. approval only for the lapse of a day that it took delegates to make up their minds on Towns' performance.

"Many delegates frankly were skeptical of Towns's time," said Brundage, "but his performance was double-checked and certified in every detail. We even looked at the movies of the race, which left no doubt he was flying."

Cabled reports on the record list, Brundage disclosed, omitted a new record for three-quarters of a mile, 3:00.4 by Josef Mostert of Belgium, and eight distance running marks set by Finland's stars.

Volmari Iso-Hollo, Olympic steeplechase champion, set four of the new records, as follows: seven miles, 34:46.8; eight miles, 40:00.2; nine miles, 45:13; and 15,000 meters, 46:45.4. Others added to the books: 3,000 meters, 8:14.8, by Gunnar Hoeckert; 10,000 meters, 30:05.6, Ilmari Salminen; six miles, 29:08.4, Salminen, and 15 miles, one hour, 19:48.6, by Erkki Tamila.

Three of the great Paavo Nurmi's records were erased. Nurmi held the former marks for 10,000 and 15,000 meters, as well as six miles. Alfred Shrubb, old-time English star, formerly held the records for seven, eight, and nine miles.

Another One For Yamagishi

Cubs Paid $185,000 Cash For Dean; Owner Reveals Near-Record Sum

CHICAGO, April 18—The Cubs paid $185,000 in cash, second largest sum ever paid for a baseball star for Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean.

This was in addition to three players turned over to the Cardinals, making the deal worth $270,000. The players were pitchers Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun and George (Tuck) Stainback, an outfielder. Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, values the players at $85,000.

The amount paid for Dean was disclosed reluctantly by Phillip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, over the telephone from his Winter home in Santa Catalina Island, Calif, today. Wrigley, breaking a precedent, revealed the figure, since, he said, there appeared to be an insistent demand. He declared he had always been reluctant about injecting the "dollar sign" into baseball, believing the fans were not so much interested in what the players cost but what they delivered on the ball field.

Ruth Brought $135,000

The cash actually paid for Dean is second only to the reported $250,000, in addition to Lyn Lary, the Red Sox gave Washington for Shortstop Joe Cronin in 1934. It ranks with sums paid in other staggering deals in baseball: the purchase of Babe Ruth by the Yankees from Boston for $135,000, the reported $200,000, plus five players, which the Cubs paid the Braves of Boston for Rogers Hornsby in 1928 and deals Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, made in selling Mickey Cochrane, Al Simmons, Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx each for a reported $100,000 or more.

Total cash involved in the Hornsby purchase was never announced, but Young Wrigley said it was far below the reported $200,000. The deal was made by his father, the late William Wrigley Jr.

Said owner Wrigley:

"We have no desire to make any mystery out of the transaction which brought Dizzy Dean to the Cubs in exchange for Pitchers Davis and Shoun and Outfielder Stainback and a cash consideration.

"We have always tried to play fair with the public and give it the best team it was possible for us to put on the field and I don't believe that the fans are interested so much in what a player cost or what salary he draws as they are in what he delivers on the ball field. For this reason I have always been reluctant about injecting the 'dollar sign' into baseball.

Deal Explained by Owner

"Dizzy Dean was purchased because it was felt that he would strengthen the club and not simply for the purpose of trying to spend a lot of money.

"I don't think baseball fans look upon baseball as a dollar-and-cents proposition, and their interest in Dean is the same as ours—what will he do toward making the Cubs a pennant-winning combination?

"Since there appears to be an insistent demand to know what Dean actually cost us, we paid $185,000 and the three players named.

"We are going to do our darndest this year, as we have been doing for the past two years, to win the pennnant in the National League and then beat the Yankees."

The deal that has turned the Cubs from a solemn group of young men, hopeful but none too certain of the future, into a cocky, noisy gang, absolutely certain of winning the pennant, was started during a fanning bee Wrigley had with Manager Charley Grimm and his "brain trust"—Catcher Gabby Hartnett, Tony Lazzeri and Coaches Roy Johnson and Johnny Corriden—at the Spring training camp a month ago.

Needed Ranking Hurler

Wrigley wanted to know from them what the Cubs actually needed to make them a pennant winner. They told him a top ranking pitcher, capable of stopping the enemy, a man of the Dean capabilities, was the important factor.

"All right," Wrigley told them, "I'll worry about the money. You fellows worry about what is going on on the ball field."

Negotiations were begun at once, with a hundred or more long-distance telephone calls being made to the Cardinal training camp and St. Louis. When the deal was concluded and Wrigley confidentially advised the "brain trusters" and Manager Grimm, they were so happy they almost broke into tears.

Dean of Cubs Subdued

CINCINNATI, April 18—Jerome Dean donned a Chicago uniform for the first time today and went through a light workout at Crosley Field as his team-mates prepared for the opening game with the Reds tomorrow.

The one-time Dizzy One left his "pop-offs" in St. Louis and cautiously studied replies to questions. Predictions of his own performances to come were a careful study of understatement.

Manager Grimm showed far greater enthusiasm over the deal which brought the former Cardinal pitcher in the Cub fold. "He ought to win twenty games this season," said Grimm as he watched Dean hurl. "I know he had an off-season last year, but a pitcher can't be off every year.

"Maybe he'll win only eighteen or fifteen, but that's a lot of help. I wouldn't say that the addition of one pitcher will make us a pennant winner," he added as an afterthought, "but I'm glad he's on our side. The psychology of having a fellow like Dean around helps out."

But listen to Dean:

"I'm not doing any predicting this season; I got to show 'em I can pitch first."

Grimm said he was sure Dean's arm was in fine shape and scheduled him for the pitching assignment Wednesday. He added that Diz probably would hurl against his old team-mates in Chicago Sunday.

Chicago Clinches Soccer Crown Of United States

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, April 25—Chicago carried off its first national soccer championship yesterday as the well-balanced Sparta eleven triumphed over the St. Mary's Celtics of Brooklyn, 3-2, in a thrilling encounter witnessed by an overflow crowd of 10,000 at Starlight Park. Entering the fray with a three-point advantage, gained last week in the Windy City, Sparta captured the crown on the total-goal basis by 6-2.

To gain the victory the Chicagoans played an alert defensive game while taking advantage of the openings resulting from spells of inaccurate passing and faulty footwork on the part of the speedier Celtics. Brooklyn was in possession most of the time but the Spartans managed to strike at the right moments.

Scoring twice in the first half, the invaders virtually clinched the championship, since that meant they actually were in front by 5-0. Even when the Celtics bounded back with a pair of goals in the second half to even the day's tally, the visitors had no cause for fear. It was too much to expect the local team to count six times in one session against the airtight defense of Sparta. Later Chicago made things even more certain as little Jim McDermott accounted for his second goal.

Game Keenly Contested

The game was keenly and roughly contested, with few, if any, of the players escaping a spill. But Sparta, starting with its 3-goal edge, allowed the Celtics to be the aggressors and really opened up only when the road was clear.

Initial honors went to Chicago when Frank Trimmel booted the ball past Duncan Othen, the St. Mary's goal tender, after twenty-three minutes of play. Trimmel scored after Jimmy Wolf's rebound. Five minutes late McDermott, outmaneuvering three Celtic men, beat Othen to make the count 2—0.

In the second period, when the teams had switched goals and the wind favored the Celtics, the Brooklyn outfit showed to advantage. At the 1-minute mark Willie McEwen took a pass from his brother Johnny and turned it into a goal. After twenty-four minutes Johnny McEwan hung one up on a corner kick, which Goaltender Jimmy Silovsky deflected into the net. The tie existed for four minutes and was broken by McDermott, whose kick from 25 yards out, following a long boot by John Tomich, ended the scoring.

McEwan Brothers Excel

Particularly brilliant for the victors were Eddie Pearson, McDermott, Tomich and Tom Scott, while the outstanding Celtics were the three McEwan brothers, John, Willie and Dave, Hughie Sneddon and Jimmy Aitken.

Victory brought to Sparta possession of the $2,500 Dewar Trophy, a highly coveted prize.

Joe Triner, president of the United States Football Association and chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, kicked out the ball. Incidentally, it was Triner's father who helped organize the Sparta Athletic and Benevolent Association thirty-one years ago.

McDermott, who did so much to bring about the St. Mary's setback, was once a member of the Celtics.

In a preliminary engagement, the Eastern semi-final for the National Junior Cup, the Senate Boys of Harrison, N. J., conquered the Bay Ridge Hearts of Brooklyn, 3-0.

Pasch Reigns As Favorite In Epsom Derby On June 1

Observer

LONDON, May 1—Until the Derby is run on June 1 the main question in racing will be whether Pasch can justify the short price now being quoted about him. Among the points in favor of the Two Thousand winner is that his action is eminently well suited to the peculiarities of the Epsom track. He gallops rather too high in front for the approval of all the purists of style; yet he appears to hit the ground with the minimum of force, and his quick, almost bouncing, movement is well adapted to the hard going. It is also to be borne in mind that at Epsom he will know more about racing than he did either at Kempton or Newmarket. After his success last week Fred Darling was lost in admiration for the performance of a colt who could accomplish such a big thing with so limited experience of the stern business of racing. "It is difficult to believe," he said, "that until lately this colt has never had the advantage of having had two good horses galloping alongside him."

That Pasch did not come out last season may have been a blessing in disguise for him, though it is easy to imagine the anxiety of his trainer when the colt all but split a pastern in the Spring. Opinions differ strangely as to his conformation. A number of sound judges of the thoroughbred declare that he falls a good deal short of the ideal type of classic winner, but their criticisms of his make and shape count for nothing against his remarkable brilliance in action. The Blandfords have demonstrated in a most convincing manner their suitability for Epsom, and it now appears that the family has a first-rate chance of adding to its Derby successes. We know that the Guineas form has often been turned topsy-turvy at Epsom, but it is impossible to claim that any of the colts who finished behind the Beckhampton crack on Wednesday has a good chance of turning the tables on him at Epsom.

Pasch's Rivals

Scottish Union, a colt for whom nobody can help having a great liking, has size, length, range, and equality. To my mind he stood out as the most handsome member of the Guineas field. Undoubtedly a preliminary race would have been an advantage to him, and it is reasonable to suppose that he will come on at least 7 lb. as a result of his gallop over the Rowley Mile. At the same time, we have to assume that Pasch will also improve, so perhaps we ought to accept the Two Thousand form as it stands between the first and second. The only excuse Carslake had to make for Scottish Union is that for the greater part of the journey he had nothing to race in company with him in nearly the center of the track. Against this we have to set the fact that Pasch stared about him a lot. "He is still only a baby in racing and ran as green as could be," was Gordon Richards comment.

Mirza II ran gallantly in view of his undoubted limitations in stamina. He lost ground up the hill, as one would expect him to do, and it is not to be supposed that he will fare any better over the longer journey at Epsom. If the ground should be on the soft side there, we may get some startling changes of form. Pasch will need to prove that he is as good on soft going as he is on top of the ground. Fred Darling recalls that he had made up his mind that Manna was a top of the ground performer, but there was volumes of rain before he ran in the Derby, and that made no difference to him. This causes the Beckhampton trainer to be hopeful that Pasch will be similarly unaffected by any pronounced change in the weather conditions. Portmarnock is one who might be expected to improve considerably when the going becomes less firm. Those chiefly interested in him are under the impression that he was feeling the ground in the last two furlongs of the Guineas. "All last season," says his trainer, "he showed me that he did not relish hard ground; and though he won the Champagne Stakes during the dry spell, it must not be forgotten that the course at Doncaster had been well watered."

Portmarnock's Fitness

Boyd-Rochfort does not agree with those who imagine that Portmarnock was less forward in condition than some of his rivals. He states that the colt had done all the work that was requisite for a normal Two Thousand preparation and had acquitted himself well in his testing gallop with high-class older horses in the stable. Thus at Freemason Lodge the main hope of seeing Portmarnock reverse the placing with Pasch and Scottish Union in the Derby centers in the state of the going. Of the three Manton colts in the Guineas Pound Foolish came out best, and there is every possibility that this handsome Blandford colt will go on improving.

Three of the best brood mares of modern times, Canterbury Pilgrim, Black Cherry, and Silver Fowl, are prominent in the pedigree of the latest Two Thousand winner. Soubriquet, the maternal granddam of Pasch, has proved of higher value in the paddocks than her half-sister Fifinella despite the latter's double victory in the Oaks and the wartime substitute for the Derby. It was thought at one time that H. E. Morriss had paid a good deal too much for Soubriquet at the sale of the late Sir E. Hulton's stud, but it is now clear that his judgment was sound. In addition to the dam of Pasch the Lemberg mare produced one of the best horses of his time in Tai Yang. Altogether Mr. Morriss has had no reason at all to regret his purchase of Soubriquet, especially now that the mating of her with his own horse Manna has resulted in a classic winner in the next generation.

Apart from the two classic races, the First Spring Meeting was marred to some extent by the drought. It was sad to see such well-endowed events as the March Stakes and the Chippenham Stakes produce unworthy fields. Among the two-year-olds the best of the newcomers was Panorama, whose almost runaway victory stamped him as a colt possessing much of the great speed of his sire, Sir Cosmo. It will be of immense interest to see the first test of pace between him and Dhoti, who scored with almost equal ease earlier in the meeting. It is not to be supposed, however, that these youngsters, smart as they are, will prove themselves anything like the best in their respective stables. And this probably applies as well to the gelding Portobello, who polished off the opposition without an apparent effort on Friday.

The Fillies

Hard ground was the excuse for most of the fancied fillies in the One Thousand. It was manifest that such as Stafaralla, Radiant, and Scotia's Glen did themselves considerably less than justice. The field was commanded all through by Rockfel and Laughing Water, who alternately made the running. The Lambourn filly, finishing more stoutly than her big Royston rival, was a decisive winner. It is not without significance that the leading three had each shown her ability this Spring to "go on the hard." To Oswald Bell it is a great triumph to have won a classic race with Rockfel after the filly had opened her career last season with a most dismal failure in a selling race. At one time the dam of Rockfel was also regarded as merely a plater, but Bell, who was also her trainer, had faith in her future, and it is due to his belief that she twice returned to her breeder, Lord Londonderry, after having been sold out of selling races. It was a lucky winning ride for S. Wragg, whose brother Harry had asked to be excused the mount in order that he might ride Stafaralla. The triumph of Rockfel comes in timely fashion for her sire Felstead, who would have been much higher on the winning list last season but for the impossibility of continuing to train the unbeaten Early School. Last week's classic races seems to suggest that the fillies are a good way below the colts, who I am inclined to group as fully up to the average standard.

More than once in recent years the Chester Vase has had a bearing on Derby prospects the successes of Hyperion and Windsor Lad being cases in point. This year few Derby colts of much account will be in the field. Challenge and Cave Man would appear the best of them, though neither of these is likely to beat River Prince, who is not engaged at Epsom. Later in the week the Dee Stakes, if the going is fairly good, will give us our first glimpse this season of Khan Bahadur, who, as I have suggested all along, is likely to be the best of the Aga Khan's Derby colts. Merry Mathew has a good chance in the Ormonde Stakes, especially as Solfo is a doubtful runner. For the Chester Cup the locally trained Trevisani will be greatly fancied, though Dharampur, having finished in front of him on the same terms at Epsom recently, may do so again. In the Kempton Park "Jubilee," at the end of the week, St. Magnus won so decisively at Liverpool that I am prepared to see him carry his penalty to the front.

Tokyo Giants Fete 4th Anniversary By Beating Dolfins, 13-8

The Tokyo Giants professional baseball club celebrated its fourth anniversary Wednesday by vanquishing the Nagoya Dolfins, 13 to 8, in an exhibition game at the Yokohama Park diamond.

Pitchers Mayekawa, Kawakami and Stalphin held the Dolfins to six hits.

The Giants bombarded Shioda and Suzuki of the Dolfins for 14 hits, one of them a homerun by Right Fielder Nakajima.

Italy Defeats Poland, 3 To 2 In Davis Cup

Domei Tsushin

MILAN, May 24—Splitting the last two singles matches played today, Italy elminated Poland from this year's Davis Cup competition and simultaneously won the right to meet France in the third round of the European zone play. France had previously defeated Monaco to advance to the third round.

Italy's victory today was, however, in doubt until the final match. Although having a two to one lead, J. Hebda defeated V. Taroni of Italy 6-3, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 to even the count at two maches all. V. Canapele, however, swept through I. Tloczynski in four sets, 6-2, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2, to gain a team victory for Italy.

The third round matches between France and Italy will be held in Paris on next Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Dean Stops Cards, Yielding 4 Hits To Win 5 To 0

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, April 24—The great one, Dizzy Dean, poured it on his old mates today. The big right-handed pitcher, for whom the Cubs paid $185,000 and sent three players to St. Louis eight days ago, shut out the Cardinals, 5 to 0, with a four-hit hurling masterpiece. It was his second victory as a Cub in as many starts.

As Dean walked off the diamond, laughingly crowding his way through autograph seekers, he drawled: "Just twenty-eight more wins to go."

A crowd of 34,520 fans turned out for Dean's first start as a Cub in Wrigley Field, and Diz put on a show. He got on base twice, once on one of the two errors by Terry Moore, and again with a neat single to right, and scored two runs.

He used his fast ball sparingly, but none the less successfully. His curve had his former mates almost breaking their backs most of the afternoon—to the delight of a throng which took Diz right to its heart.

Nine Retired in Row

Dean, by his full nine-inning performance, did a great job of dispelling fears that the arm which bothered him last year hasn't returned to shape. In his first start as a Cub last week he worked six innings at Cincinnati, giving eight hits and two runs. He went the distance in old-time form today, retiring the Cards in order in the final three frames.

His triumph was achieved at the expense of a youngster making his first major league start, Max Macon, up from Columbus. Macon pitched well, allowing only eight hits. Three of them came in the third inning, however, and were largely responsible for the first two Chicago runs, which proved more than enough for Dizzy.

Gabby Hartnett started that inning with a single and Dean was safe on an error. Hack singled to score Hartnett, Dean going to third. Herman flied out but Rip Collins singled to score Dean before Frank Demaree forced Collins at second.

With one in the fifth Dean came through for about ten photographers, who crouched around the plate, by singling to right. He advanced on an infield out and scored on Bill Herman's double. The Cubs picked up single runs in the sixth and eighth with the aid of two hits, two walks and Moore's second boot.

Only One Strike-out

Dean struck out only one batsman, making heavy-hitting Johnny Mize fan with two out in the fourth. He had control, however, and walked only two Cards.

The St. Louis safeties all came in separate innings and when Macon opened the third with a single, Dean was given assistance with a fast double play.

Two veterans, Hartnett and Tony Lazzeri, paced the Cub attack with two safeties each. But it was strictly Dizzy's show when the game ended. The Cubs rushed out to congratulate him as he made Mize ground out weakly to end the contest, and for a half hour after the battle thousands of fans waited at the park gates for a glimpse of the great one.

Heffelfinger, Stagg To Head Track Officials

Christian Science Monitor

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 18—Two of the best-known personages in college athletics will head the list of officials for the National Collegiate A. A. track meet at the University of Minnesota's Memorial Stadium next June 17 and 18.

Amos Alonzo Stagg, the "Grand Old Man" of college athletics, whose record as football and track coach at the University of Chicago for 41 years established him as the dean of intercollegiate athletics, will serve as the referee for the meet, coming from Stockton, Calif., where he is now serving as coach at the College of the Pacific.

Yale Reunion

W. W. (Pudge) Heffelfinger, one of football's all-time greats and an all-America guard at Yale from 1888-91, will act as the assistant referee. He is now a businessman in Minneapolis.

The big collegiate track classic will be something in the nature of a reunion for the two former Yale greats, who were teammates on the famed Eli elevens of 1888-90 coached by Walter Camp. Stagg, who played end, was named at that position on the 1889 all-America selection made by Casper Whitney. Heffelfinger came out of the West unheralded the year previous and was picked as an all-America guard by Park H. Davis for four consecutive seasons.

Developed Stars

Although best known perhaps for his contributions to collegiate football, Stagg's contribution to intercollegiate sport in general and college track in particular comes close to equalling his influence to football. He was the track coach at the University of Chicago from 1896 until 1929, when he retired and appointed Ned Merriam, one of his star proteges, as his successor.

As a member of the original games committee for the national meet in 1921, the veteran coach had a marked influence on the development of the meet to its present ranking. The University of Chicago was the site of the meet several times during its early years and Stagg-coached Chicago entries always gave a good account of themselves.

Five times, Coach Stagg has been a member of the American Olympic Games Committee, at Athens in 1906; Antwerp, 1920; and Paris, 1924. In that capacity, he advanced his campaign for sportsmanship and high standards in amateur sports for which he has become internationally known.

Among the great track athletes he developed were James Lightbody, Binga Dismond, Ira Davenport, LeRoy Campbell and Ned Merriam. When Stagg relinquished his position as track coach in 1929 he was the oldest coach in point of service in the country.

Although more than 40 years have elapsed since he was a Yale gridiron star, Mr. Heffelfinger still maintains an active interest in college athletics. Following his graduation, he coached at various times at Minnesota, Yale, Lehigh and the University of California and continued to play football from time to time.

Keio Team Wins Doubles Title In Kanto Play

Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's No. 1 ranking tennis player, and Yasuo Tsuruta, both of Keio University, won the doubles title of the 14th annual Kanto championships at the Waseda courts at Tozuka Wednesday afternoon by vanquishing Tanaka and Takao of Waseda University in four sets, 7-5, 6-8, 6-2 and 6-3.

Tanaka and Takao put up a gallant fight but were unable to offset the brilliant play of Yamagishi, whose performance was head over shoulders above the others. On the receiving end, he broke through the Waseda team's service time and again with bullet-like returns for aces. Tsuruta, on the other hand, was decidedly off form. He netted easy returns and his backhand and volleying were made the target of the Waseda team's attack.

Tanaka showed promise of developing into a star with splashes of brilliant play. His forehand stroke and volleying were highly effective.

Other winners in the tourney which ended Wednesday were:—Jiro Yamagishi, men's singles; Marchioness Ayako Matsudaira and Miss Michiko Hara, women's doubles, and Mrs. Keiko Tomonaga, women's singles.

Lord Aberdare Wins British Tennis Crown

Times, London

LONDON, May 3—Lord Aberdare won the Amateur Tennis Championship at Queen's Club, West Kensington, yesterday, when he beat W. M. Ross Skinner in the final by three sets to none (6—1, 6—3, 6—4).

This was Lord Aberdare's second win in the event, his previous success being in 1932, and for many reasons it was a memorable one. He was born 53 years ago, and is the oldest player ever to win the title. It is 14 years since he first figured in the final, and his success this year is a remarkable tribute to his fitness. Yesterday he showed no ill-effects after the gruelling three-hour match he played against L. Lees on Saturday and was as fresh at the finish as his much younger opponent. He played very cleverly too, for, knowing that Ross Skinner revels in a hard-hitting game, he played more on the floor than usual and it was not till the third set that he made use of his favorite boosted force for te dedans.

Ross Skinner, playing in his first final, showed signs of nervousness at the beginning of the match, and made little use of one of his chief assets, his great strength. In the first set he did comparatively little forcing, and his floor strokes were not of such good length as his opponent's, nor had they so much pace over the net. Later on he played a more forceful and natural game; but Lord Aberdare showed himself, both in the firmness of his volleys and the accuracy of his stopping, more than his equal. On both sides the volleying was extremely good, and Lord Aberdare had an advantage throughout in service. He is one of few amateurs who, though he avoids the American service, can nearly always be reckoned on to cramp his opponent's first stroke.

A Good Start

Lord Aberdare began well in the first game of the match by laying down chases worse than a yard and better than two, and though Ross Skinner played chase off to the first of these, the older player won the first game to 15, and the second likewise. In the third Ross Skinner found the grille, but lost the game immediately after by serving two faults. He won the fourth, however, in which he found the grille again, but Lord Aberdare then showed that he, too, was partial to that hazard, and won the next three games in succession, in the course of which he put two shots into the grille and one into the winning gallery. This gave him the first set. He went on to 3—0 in the second set, losing five rests only in the three games, but in the fourth game Ross Skinner showed his true form for the first time. In a very long game, in which deuce and vantage were called seven times, he held his own in many long rests and finally won the game with a shot to the grille. The next seven rests, however, went to Lord Aberdare, who led by five games to one, and though Ross Skinner, playing more confidently and volleying very crisply, drew up to 3—5, the ninth game went to Lord Aberdare and the second set with it.

Ross Skinner did better in the third set and led by three games to one. He was at 40—15 in the fifth game, but then made some mishits at the easy ball which he could ill afford, and Lord Aberdare, who hereabouts attacked the dedans successfully, caught and passed him to lead 4-3. The eight game, a long one, went to Ross Skinner, but Lord Aberdare then finished the match in sparkling fashion, winning two love games. In the first of these she found the grille twice and in the second he made a spectacular shot to the winning gallery to win the set, match, and championship.

The winning hazards scored in the match were:—

Den Starts Campaign In U.S. To Promote Support Of Olympics

Domei Tsushin

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24—Here on a mission to promote better American understanding of the preparations in Japan for the 1940 Olympics and the Japanese tourist industry, Makoto Den, member of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee and director of the International Tourist Bureau of the Railway Ministry, today started a vigorous campaign getting in touch with local officials of the American Olympic Committee, the Rotary Club, and the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition.

The Japanese official expects to be host at a dinner party given at the Fairmont Hotel here tomorrow evening inviting 120 prominent Japanese and Americans including Mayor Angelo Rossi. He will leave for Los Angeles on the following morning and will return here in the middle of next month after visiting Chicago, New York, Washington, and Boston

The Homing Whale

"Old Tom," a killer whale, returned to the same place year after year at the proper season, for 88 years (1842-1930). He was positively identified by a peculiar mark on the front of a fin, by the fishermen of Twofold Bay, New South Wales, Australia. This was the first discovery that whales have a homing instinct.

In September 1930 "Old Tom" returned for the 88th and last time. His carcass was discovered washed up on the beach, to which he had been returning regularly since 1842. His skeleton has been mounted by the sentimental fishermen of Twofold Bay. It can be seen now housed in a suitable building at Eden nearby.

U.S. Navy Crew Looms As Eight To Defeat In Poughkeepsie Race

By GEORGE E. TIMPSON

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK, May 4—The crews of the United States Naval Academy now appear to be headed for complete supremacy in eastern sprint rowing, and to become favorites to give the Washington and California crews a real fight at Poughkeepsie, judging from their performances at Annapolis last Saturday, when they made a clean sweep over highly-promising crews from Cornell and Syracuse. The others were making their first competitive appearances of the season, while the Midshipmen had already scored similar sweeps over Princeton and Columbia.

Harvard also made its first competitive appearance of the season, winning all four races from the sweepswingers of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, while in the varsity race they also had the Rutgers crew, the best of the new-comers in the sport, as they appear at present, as an opponent. This was in the Rowe Memorial Regatta on the Charles.

Still another college made its inaugural appearance in rowing regattas over the week end, when Washington and Lee, which made its initial attempt at eight-oared rowing, having hitherto confined its attempts to four-oar crews, tackled Manhattan on the Harlem River. The visitors had to row in a borrowed shell, yet they showed up well, and in future years should do better.

A light-weight regatta occupied Carnegie Lake, at Princeton, with the crews of Pennsylvania making a clean sweep over Princeton, while Hun School beat the Princeton second freshmen, as well as two other schoolboy crews from Lawrenceville and Asheville, in the fourth race of the day. Another mixed regatta up at Kent, Conn, found the schoolboy crews too skilled for several other Manhattan crews, winning all three races.

In both the varsity and jayvee races on the Severn, it was the final sprinting power of the Navy crews that accounted for their victories. In both races Cornell led in the middle of the race, showing superior skill at lower strokes, and in the varsity, forcing the Midshipmen to raise their strove to 40 to the minute before the Ithacans could be passed. Neil Almgren, the new stroke of the Midshipmen, was very alert, and when his sweepswingers responded to his final call, the boat swept across the finish line with a quarter-length margin. In the jayvees, the Navy started its final dash a bit sooner, and led by more than a third of a length, while the plebe crew led all the way by slight margins, to finish three full seconds ahead.

All three Navy crews rowed in the same order they used in the Columbia race, and appear to be developing a power under the new style of rowing which Charles "Buck" Walsh is using this season, that promises well for the longer races to come.

Cornell Has Four Veterans

Harrison Sanford, now in his second year as coach at Cornell, has four of his Poughkeepsie veterans in the center of the boat. Benjamin B. Dean, at 3 in place of bow, and Edmund F. Pfeiffer, John R. Furman, and John W. Rogers, next in order, are at their former place. Two members of last year's freshmen, Van Wormer Walsh, at stroke, from No. 4, and Stanley W. Allen, Jr., again at bow, have been promoted, and two newcomers, De West Mooker, No. 2, and William Fisher, No. 7, complete the list, with the veteran George M. Holley, Jr., still in the coxswain's seat.

Young Edward Ten Eyck, who has succeeded his father at Syracuse, also has a fine varsity crew, which trailed the others by less than a length from start to finish. It is a combination of last year's varsity and freshmen, with Gerald Bradley, freshman stroke, setting the pace, backed by Howard Hadley again at No. 7. The other freshmen are John More, then at No. 3, now at No. 4, and Bernard Tainter, then a substitute, at bow. Jack Belko, of last year's varsity, has been moved from 7 to 3, with a substitute, Norton, Davey, at 2, while Edward Otis and Leslie Foster retain their old places at 5 and 6. This involved the demotion of three of last year's varsity, as John Horrocks, Gomer McNeil and Wilbur Styhlman, moved down.

Still another hero emerged out of the Penn Relays, in addition to the long list on the Horizon of yesterday, in the person of Thomas Deckard, of Indiana, who carried his team-mates to the lone relay championship they were able to retrieve out of the three they won last year. The successor to Don Lash had given a hint of his prowess on Friday by literally spread-eagling his field in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, running so easily that he hardly ruffled a hair in the effort, to complete the distance in 9m. 25.4s.; but the failure of his associates to make any headway against their opponents in their other relay performances made the four-mile event, with its wealth of star milers from other institutions, more or less doubtful. Though the North Texas Teachers College team made an effort to accomplish what it had done in the distance-medley relay the day before, this time the Rideouts had far too much distance to overcome when the third mile started, and Deckard once again showed his unruffled, smooth stride to carry his team to an unruffled finish in 17m. 26.8s.

Nihon University Wins Collegiate Ball Title

Nihon University won its first championship in nine seasons of the semi-annual series of the Tokyo Collegiate Baseball League (second division) Thursday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium by defeating Chuo University by a 4 to 1 score.

Nihon University upset the dope largely through the superb pitching of Ogino who held the Chuo batsmen to two hits. While Omiya of Chuo yielded only three hits, he had one bad inning, the fourth when he walked three men in a row and was touched for a timely hit through third and short by First Baseman Tsubouchi to allow three runs.

The summaries follow:

Yale Nine Beats Columbia, 11-10

By ALLISON DANZIG

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 4—In a free-hitting contest that found Columbia out in front by the prohibitive margin of 7-1 going into the fifth, Yale eked out an 11-10 decision with a three-run rally in the ninth inning yesterday at Baker Field.

It was the third successive victory for the Elis in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League and gave them undisputed possession of second place, With Harvard falling back a shade. It was also the fourth league triumph in a row for Munroe Jubitz, junior southpaw from Portland, Ore., who set the circuit mark for the season with nine strike-outs.

Found for eight hits and as many runs in the first five innings, in which he had ragged support, Jubitz vindicated the faith shown in him by Joe Wood when the Yale coach elected to keep him in the box after Columbia had poured four runs across the plate in the second.

Jubitz Finds Stride

Growing stronger thereafter while the opposing pitchers weakened, the Eli southpaw was unreachable in the six and seventh and he had enough left in reserve to turn back the Lions once his team-mates had solved the offerings of Jack Moller, John Cerny and Hector Dowd.

Not until the eighth did Yale draw up on even terms at 8—8, and immediately the pressure was on again as Cerny doubled and came home on Radvilas' single. But the Elis had not fought their way up from so far back to lose the game at this late stage. The defending champions drove Cerney from the box with the tying run in the ninth, and then Edward Trowbridge Collins Jr. and Gregory Doonan, who were the big guns of the Yale attack with four hits each, fell upon Dowd, and the sadly disillusioned followers of the home team all but gave up hope as Columbia came up for its last turn at bat with the score 11—9 against it.

Stoltz flied out to third, and then Sid Luckman, a mainstay in baseball no less than in football, brought the fans to their feet with his third hit of the day. Arnold singled to right, sending Luckman to third, and the crowd was yelling its head off as Art Radvilas came up.

Radvilas Seeks First Hit

A .400 batter last year, Radvilas hasn't made a hit in league competition this year. Here was his big chance to get even with fate, and the stands wanted nothing less than a home run.

The giant Columbian, who holds down an end for Lou Little in the fall, took a mighty swing at the ball and laid it down to second, scoring Luckman but forcing Arnold at second! Hicks was sent in to bat for Dowd, but with the trying run on base Jubitz bore down and struck out the pinch hitter, and the game was over.

Sato Given Rub By Dennison In Golf Tourney

Arthur G. Sato of the Hirono Club, defending champion, worked his way into the semi-finals of the national amateur golf championship Thursday at the Hodogaya course by defeating Hosokawa of the Tokyo Club, 1 up, in the first round and disposing of Dennison of the Nezu Club, 1 up in the quarterfinals of the match play. He was to take on Nabeshima of the Tokyo Club over 36 holes in the semi-finals today. In the other match of the semi-finals will be Kiba of the Abiko course and Kubota of the Fujisawa club.

Dennison put up a fine match against Sato and it was his failure to sink a short putt on the final 18th hole that eliminated him from the competition.

Kubota, considered to have a chance of unseating Sato, disposed of Sato of the Sagami Club in the first round, 2 and 1, but he had to go to three extra holes before taking the measure of Hirose of the Tokyo Club in the quarter-finals.

The results of the matches were:

First Round

Sato (Hirono) beat Hosokawa (Tokyo), 1 up.
Dennison (Nezu) beat Narimiya (Ibaragi), 2 and 1.

Grove Victor, 4-3, Fanning No. 2,000

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 3—Bob (Lefty) Grove, the Red Sox's 38-year-old ace became the sixth major league pitcher in history to pass the 2,000-strike-out mark today when he fanned six Tigers while gaining the 260th victory of his 15-year American League career. Grove pitched Boston from third to second place with a 4 to 3 triumph in ten innings.

Before starting what became his third straight triumph of 1938, Grove had fanned 1,996 batters during his years with the Athletics and Red Sox. Walter Johnson, in his twenty-one years with Washington, had 3,497 strike-outs. The others to reach the 2000-mark were Cy Young, the late Christy Mathewson, Dizzy Vance and Grover Cleveland Alexander.

Lawson Goes Route

Grove aided the winning drive by sacrificing Leo Nonnenkamp, who ran for Gene De-Sautels after the catcher had bounced a two-bagger off the left field wall. Grove had been fanned four times in a row by Roxie Lawson, who went the route for the Tigers, but Manager Joe Cronin gambled on his pitcher's bunting skill and Bob's successful effort put Nonnenkamp on third base. Then Rog Cramer batted the winning single.

Homers accounted for all the Detroit runs. Hank Greenberg blasted one of Grove's offerings over the left field screen in the second inning with none on. In the fourth, when the Tigers gained a 3-to-2 lead, the wind carried Charley Gehringer's high fly into the right field stands with Lawson on base.

Double Plays Help Grove

Grove, who won four out of six against the Tigers last season, gave them twelve hits and six passes, but three double plays pulled him out of deep holes. In the ninth, the Tigers loaded the bases with one out, but a twin killing was made when George Tebbetts grounded to Pinky Higgins.

Lawson issued nine free trips to first and was slugged for a dozen safeties, four of which were two-baggers.

Meiji And Hosei Meet In Crucial Series Saturday And Sunday

Fans of the Tokyo Six University Baseball League are in store for a rare treat Saturday and Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium with Meiji and Hosei clashing in a crucial series.

Meiji, champions of the Spring and Fall seasons last year, must take both games to be in a position to tie Waseda for first place, provided the latter wins both games against Keio in their series on June 4 and 5.

Big Southpaw Akaneya of Hosei has been rounding into form and it will be no surprise if he stops Meiji. The latter is expected to send Left Hander Shimizu to the mound.

Rikkyo is a heavy favorite to beat Teidai in the other number of the doubleheader.

Dives Through The Air With Greatest Ease

Christian Science Monitor

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4—Well She's done it again. . . .through the air with the greatest of ease! Marjorie Gestring is still this country's indoor-outdoor women's diving champion.

This 16-year-old Los Angeles Miss, whose aspirations are said to be toward the concert piano, and not the diving platform, handled herself with near perfection to win the National A. A. P. indoor title without any doubt.

It's recalled that Marjorie is also Olympic Games champion (1936) and U. S. outdoor champ as well. The blonde Angelino took her 10 dives without a hitch for a total of 135 3-5 points from a hard-hearted, strict-judging group of officials to out-point her nearest rival, Helen Crlenkovich, of San Francisco by a wide margin. Helen, who many thought would give the three-year Champion a hard evening of aerial acrobatics totaled 119.25 and was fortunate to get that as she had a bad time with two dives—a 1½ back and a 2½ forward tuck. Third was another San Francisco girl, Patty Robinson who was far back with 98.5.

One Upset

There was an upset during the evening at the Fairmont Hotel Plunge, however, and that was when John Hood, of Long Beach, diving for the Hayward Plunge took the National junior 10-foot board A. A. U. title with Ted Needham, of the local coterie doing his best which was just about two points too few to win.

Hood was "hot"—if divers can be called that when they have a particularly good evening, and managed to defeat Needham, the favorite, by 139.69 points to 137.71.

But, my-oh-my, you can have all the spectacular men's diving events you want—just let me watch the grace, and aerial ability of Marjorie Gestring and her competitors. They may not spin around as fast or girate with so much gusto as the men who bound off the board—but they seem to have that certain finesse and poise in the execution of the dives that wins an audience quicker than all of the "oohs" and "ahs" that sometimes accompany the "muscular midgets of the springboard."

Marjorie Is Assistant

Marjorie was at her best at the Fairmont. If she's as finished a performer on the piano platform as on the diving board, she's headed for a great career. It all adds up to about one thing with Marjorie—consistency.

Many an agile diver has sailed off the board to astound the judges and all witnesses for two or three dives, only to plop into the water all off-balance in a comparatively simple dive. Marjorie not only has class, and great ability, but the calm consistency in competition that indicates greatness in any really topnotch athlete.

And speak of diving—did you ever see a soccer player make a valiant attempt to bounce the ball off his head, miss and end face downward in the dirt? Well, that's one of the sights folks on the Pacific Coast who are interested in this great game of kick-the-ball are seeing these days.

Only they are witnessing some of—if not the best—soccer ever played in these United States. The Islington Corinthians of England, now touring this country, are here in Northern California after finally taking the Southern Californians into camp after one draw (in the rain) and a 4-to-1 win. It's not disgrace to lose to these foot-loose laddies who draw 100,000 fans into a British Isles Stadium almost every time they kick the ball around.

Just to show you good they are, these British champions have won all but seven games in some 86 games played, and they have been on an eight-months' world tour. This will give you some idea how poor the rest of the world is with its feet. These sturdy fellows can do everything with their feet, but paint pictures. No, I'll take that back. The pictures they draw for the opposition have the rough appearance of a large goose-egg.

A crew note: University of California has enough money to send two boatloads back to the Hudson River for the Poughkeepsie Regatta ($6,600) and for a race with Cornell June 18. Coach "Ky" Ebright said he didn't know whether he'd take his Frosh or Junior Varsity along as the second boat. It's my guess the boys and girls at Call will get together and contribute the extra money necessary to send the third boat. It's done by popular subscription up in Seattle, and Washington has had all its boats on the river each year. Why not here at California?

The Washington crew will race Wisconsin in a warm-up for the Hudson race, which comes off June 27, but will not accept the invitation to race Marietta College's varsity crew in Ohio at the Northwest Territory celebration July 2.

"No-Ride" Railroad Worker

Americo Givinetti came to America in 1889, going by boat from New York City to Cleveland. There he landed a job with the New York Central Railroad as switchtender, working 12 hours a day, 7 days a week. Until August, 1937, he held the same job, and during his 47 years of railroad service he always carried a pass to ride the trains, yet in all that time he never had the experience of a train ride. He walks, or rides on streets, and on longer trips goes by auto.

Yale Wins Blackwell Cup, Taking All Four Races

By HARRY CROSS

PHILADELPHIA, May 7—In an impressive performance of oarsmanship Yale won the Blackwell Cup on the sunny but windy Schuylkill this afternoon over Pennsylvania and Columbia with a stirring triumph, in which the big Blue crews captured all four races of the regatta. Yale's silent rowing coach, Ed Leader, did not even come out on the river in a launch to watch the races. He was in an inconspicuous spot on the river bank, a cool, stolid monument of confidence in his rowing men.

The verdant river banks in Fairmount Park were crowded with spectators to witness the first Yale sweep that the Blue Navy has enjoyed in many moons. The Yale varsity, stroked by Howard Johnson, got away from the mark rowing forty beats to the minute and in the middle lane between Pennsylvania and Columbia took a short lead. There was a brisk upstream wind which ruffled the water and kicked a cooling spray over the oarsmen.

The Red and Blue and Columbia were on even terms for the first quarter mile, both rowing in the high thirties. Yale, still maintaining a stroke of thirty-six to the minute, gradually lengthened its advantage to almost a length as they approached the three-quarter mark.

Penn Challenge Fails

Yale with a length to spare over Pennsylvania, dropped down to thirty-four as they approached the mile, the shell swinging along with a rhythm which was backed by plenty of power. At the mile Pennsylvania was fighting hard at thirty-six to cut down Yale's lead, but the challenge produced no results and Yale had slight bit of open water as the crews were a quarter of a mile from home. Pennsylvania's bid to catch Yale left Columbia two lengths in third place. The Blue and White was pressing and was unable to settle into its smooth swing.

As the crews sped along opposite Peters Island to the finish line, Johnson, the Yale stroke, set the beat at thirty-six to the minute and finished in 6:49 3-5, a good length and a half in front of Pennsylvania, which was clocked in 6:55, while Columbia was three and a quarter lengths behind Pennsylvania in 7:09 2-5.

This was a satisfying debut for the Yale sweep-swingers, for they won the junior varsity easily. This powerful crew, with several of last year's varsity oarsmen aboard, finished five lengths ahead of Pennsylvania in 7:07.2-5. The judges decided that there was about a foot between Pennsylvania and Columbia, the margin being so short that they failed to catch it on the stop watches.

Columbia Jayvee Rallies

The Columbia jayvee, stroked by John Frend, made a great recovery in this race. Going under the trolley bridge at the quarter-mile mark, Frend caught a crab and as the whole crew lost a stroke, Pennsylvania's shell shot more than a length ahead. Then the Columbia crew settled down and made up the lost ground and would have taken second place if there had been a few more yards to row.

Yale's time was 7:07 2-5 and Pennsylvania's 7:24 3-5, with Columbia in third place by some undetermined fraction of a second.

Yale's freshman crew, coached by Don Grant, scored a sensational victory over Pennsylvania, coming from behind in the last quarter-mile to beat out the Red and Blue youngsters by a deck length, ten feet. Pennsylvania appeared to have the race in hand for more than three-quarters of the Henley distance, but Yale, putting the stroke up to thirty-six, made an amazing finish and won out in 7:14 3-5. Columbia's freshmen were two lengths behind Pennsylvania in 7:22.

The Yale lightweights, coached by Bob Butler, won that event by three and a half lengths over Columbia in 7:19 3-5. Columbia's time was 7:32 3-5 and Pennsylvania was a length and a half behind Columbia in 7:39 2-5.

The first event of the regatta, an added race between the Princeton and Pennsylvania second varsity lightweights, was won by Princeton in 7:37. Penn was clocked in 7:41, a good length back.

Mr. Lehmann is scheduled to leave Naples on June 8, aboard the Terukuni Maru, and he will be here until the 1940 Olympic Games to train the Japanese Olympic wrestlers.

Meanwhile, it is understood that the German wrestling coach will be taught judo by Japanese in return during his stay here.

Shore Awarded Hart Trophy For 4th Season

MONTREAL, April 18—Eddie Shore of Boston Bruins, one of the National Hockey League's all-time greats, was awarded the Hart trophy today as the most valuable player to his club during the 1937-38 season.

At the same time Frank Calder league President, announced Gordon Drillon, Toronto's ace right winger, as winner of the Lady Byng trophy as the "most gentlemanly" player.

It was the fourth time in his 12-year career that Shore, placed on defense with Babe Siebert on the Canadian Press All-Star team, has been chosen as the league's most valuable player. He came back to lead Bruins to the American section title after a poor season in 1936-37.

Was Sparkplug

Shore was the sparkplug of the ponderous Boston defense which featured the Bruin drive to the sectional championship with 30 victories and only 11 defeats. In the play offs for the league championship, when Boston fell three-straight to Toronto Maple Leafs, Shore was an outstanding figure in defeat.

Drillon, also a "CP" All-Star, was adjudged the player best combining technical ability with highest qualities of sportsmanship in his second big-league year. He won the N. H. L. scoring championship with 52 points, half of them through goals, and led all scorers in the play offs as well.

Both awards were made in a poll of hockey writers around the circuit. Drillon, who had only two minor penalties all season, was chosen ahead of Clint Smith and Cecil Dillon, both of New York Rangers, and Syl Apps, center of the line of which Drillon is right wing.

Thompson Runner-up

Paul Thompson, left wing of Chicago's Stanley Cup champions, was runner-up to Shore for the Dr. David A. Hart trophy with Babe Siebert, Montreal Canadien defenseman, third in the voting. Siebert and Shore were Boston's firststring defense for several seasons before the former was traded to Canadiens.

The trophy was awarded first in 1923-24 to perpetuate the memory of Dr. Hart, father of Cecil Hart, manager of Canadiens. Only the late Howie Morenz and Nels Stewart of New York Americans besides Shore have won the trophy more than once.

Shore first won the award in 1932-33, gave way to Canadiens' Aurel Joliat the next season, then won it again in 1934-35 and 1935-36. Siebert won it last season while on the Canadien defense.

Drafted in the midst of the 1936-37 rebuilding of Leafs, after Charlie Conacher was injured, Drillon fitted in perfectly on a line with Apps and Harvey Jackson. He came up from Syracuse Stars of the International-American League and got 33 points in his first crack at the majors.

Until Jackson was replaced in mid-season by Bob Davidson, the trio was one of the most-powerful offensive units in the N. H. L. Drillon, native of Moncton, N. B., was not hindered by the replacement, continuing his brilliant play right into the final play-offs against Chicago Hawks.

Sato And Kubota Enter Finals Of Amateur Golf Play

Arthur C. Sato, the defending champion, and Mizuho Kubota, up and coming star of the Fujisawa Club, fought their way to the finals of the national amateur golf championship in the 36-hole match play at the Hodogaya course. They teed off at 9 this morning at the same course in the finals.

Sato was in brilliant form and downed Nabeshima of the Tokyo Club overwhelming by the score of 6 and 5.

Kubota eliminated Kiba of the Abiko course, 3 and 2, in the other semi-finals match.

Tigers Banking On Schoolboy For Comeback

By EDWIN RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, May 4—The Tigers came to Boston, settled in the second division of the American League, but an incident which occurred about two weeks ago leaves the impression that they will not be there long. The incident involves Schoolboy Rowe, the pitcher who once could beat the Yankees by throwning his glove out of the dugout.

Rowe was an outstanding pitcher when he came out of Texas backin 1933. In four successive seasons with the Tigers he won 60 games and lost 35, a winning percentage of .663. Moreover, he could stop the contenders. His high over-hand motion was particularly effective against the Yankees. As the Bengals captured pennants in 1934 and '35, the Schoolboy was a leading factor with his victories over Joe McCarthy's sluggers.

But something happened to the Rowe hurling arm last year, or late in '36. His 1937 record tells the story—one victory and four defeats. Sounds like the accumulation of a second division relief hurler. As a matter of fact, it was. The once great Schoolboy was, if anything, below that rating. He could barely throw a ball up to the plate, and when he could, there was nothing to it.

Without their ace, the Tigers came home second last year. Thirteen games separated them from the triumphant Yankees. Had the Schoolboy been available for that every fourth day, the story might have been different—much different. He won 24 in 1934, and 19 in each of the two following years. Add 19 games to the '37 Detroit record and the Yanks would have finished second.

A similar situation exists this year. If Rowe can regain his mastery, the Bengals are certain to be a contender. They have the power. Their manager is Mickey Cochrane, one of the high-ranking team leaders of modern baseball.

Stopped Indians

On April 22, against the Cleveland Indians at Briggs' Stadium, Detroit, Rowe made his first 1938 appearance after an uncertain spring training trip. It was in a relief role, when the Tribe had batted Tommy Bridges under the showers in the fifth inning. The Schoolboy walked out of the bull pen and stopped the visitors with one hit thereafter. He walked a single Indian, but offset this by striking out two.

Cochrane said after this game that his big pitcher had definitely come back. That Rowe has waited more than a week for his second opportunity, does not alter the situation. Mickey isn't taking any chances. The pitcher is too valuable in the 1938 Tiger picture to press unnecessarily.

Too much Cleveland, is the main reason why the Tigers came here in the second division. The Indians have taken five out of six from the Bengals, beating them on Monday by a score of 11 to 3. The Tribe put over 10 runs in the fourth inning. The Tigers have managed two out of four from the White Sox and two out of three from the Browns.

Mickey Cochrane is the tenth Detroit manager since the organization of the American League. George Stallings, who later brought the old Braves a world championship in 1914, was the Tiger pilot in 1901.

Stallings was followed by Frank Dwyer. Ed Barrow—the present business manager—Bobby Lowe and Bill Armour. Hughie Jennings arrived in 1907 and stayed for 14 consecutive seasons.

Ty Cobb came after Jennings, from 1921 through '26. George Moriarty, now an umpire, succeeded Cobb and remained for two seasons. Then came Bucky Harris from 1929 through '33. Cochrane has been there since.

Austrian Water Polo Coach Arrives At Moji; Confident Of Success

Domei Tsushin

MOJI, May 27—Friedrich Freund, well-known Austrian water polo coach, who was invited by the Japanese Swimming Federation to train the Japanese water polo team for the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo, arrived here from Dairen aboard the ferry-boat Fuso Maru this morning.

The Austrian water polo expert who had been engaged in business at Dairen, immediately proceeded to Kobe on the same boat.

Mr. Freund told the press; "Japan has many swimmers and good ones too. My coaching here is promised with a successful result."

He was a member of the Austrian Olympic water polo team and successfully coached two winning teams; the Hungarian team at the Los Angeles Olympic Games and, the German team at the Berlin Olympics.

Small Galleries Imperil Future Of Pro Tennis

By FRED HAWTHORNE

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, May 8—The game of professional competitive tennis has reached the point where it cannot go much farther without drastic changes in the management of the professional association. There is no question but that the professional brand of tennis is of a higher quality than all except the more important amateur tournaments produce. Yet there is a lack of spectator interest in the professional game that means the pros will not be able much longer to attract sufficient attendance at their continuance.

There appear to be several reasons for this condition, not the least important of which is the failure of the toppiners, Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry, probably the two greatest players in the world today, to enter the national professional championship tournament or the various other tournaments held in the South last winter and this spring.

Vines and Perry owe it to the game to appear as contenders in these events. It undoubtedly would add much to the interest of the tennis public if they were on opposite sides of the draw. We all like to see champions in action in any line of sport. Other players may be nearly as good as the champion, but the title has a magic effect on the box office sales.

Stars Hurting Own Game

Why do not Vines and Perry enter these tournaments then? It is a natural question, but the answer is equally logical. Vines and Perry can make more money in playing exhibition matches. In tournament play, as it at present is conducted, Vines, if he won both singles and doubles titles, might make between $500 and $1,000 for a week of continuous play. In exhibition matches his net receipts would far exceed those figures, and the same thing goes for Perry.

Another cause that has had a bad effect on attendance lies in the lack of proper cooperation between the players and the professional association itself. The latter body has antagonized Vines and Perry, among others, and placed obstructions in the path of clubs and resort tournaments. Some players have been ruled out as ineligible because they have not paid dues to the association, and clubs that have sought to promote professional tournaments have been informed that certain dues and assessments must be paid before a sanction would be granted.

The whole situation is muddled and the association has not been functioning efficiently, and the professional game has been suffering as a result. It is my opinion that drastic changes should be made. The most vital improvement that could be put in force at this time, it seems to me, would be the appointment of a general business manager and promoter, who would hold sway over the entire activities of the professionals. This would be a position corresponding to the office held by Judge Landis in professional baseball.

Harlow Favored for Job

The logical person for this place would be Robert E. Harlow, the man who raised professional golf from practically nothing to its present status.

Unquestionably, the same thing could be done for professional competitive tennis. To achieve this result, of course, there would have to be sufficient prize money at stake to enlist the interest of the professionals. Harlow has done this for professional golf and he assures me that he would be able to do the same thing for professional tennis.

German, Italian Athletes Likely To Come In Fall

Approximately 70 German and Italian athletes may be invited this fall to this country for a tri-nation all-round athletic competition under the auspices of the fourteen Japanese athletic bodies namely track and field, soccer, basketball, hockey, boxing, wrestling, yacht, cycling, shooting, weight lifting gymnastics, fencing, handball and canoe, it was learned here Friday.

The preparation committee will be organized this afternoon in order to draft the budget and other plans toward the realization to invite the foreign athletes. It is being hoped to stage the tripartite-national contest as the prelude to the forthcoming Olympiad in Japan in order to encourage public sentiments as well as to propagate the Tokyo Olympic Games throughout the world.

It is understood that the Japanese Amateur Athletic Federation will subsidize approximately ¥50,000 for the proposed athletic meet. The Federation recently voted not to sponsor the tri-nation meet due to lack of time.

Japanese Compete at Berlin

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, May 26—A series of judo matches between the visiting Japanese sports students and Berlin policemen was a feature of a Japanese-German athletic soiree given by the Hitler Youth here this evening.

Attended by the Japanese military and naval attaches as well as high German officers and officials, the meeting got under way in the Kuppel Saal of the Deutschland Halle at 6 p.m. Following the showing of Japanese scenery and sports films, the Japanese sports students gave demonstrations in judo and kendo.

Climaxing the soiree, the Japanese students then proceeded to give a series of matches with members of the judo association of the Berlin police. Most of the policemen were easily floored by the Japanese.

The meeting closed with a chorus by members of the Hitler Youth who sang special Nazi sports songs for youths.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"—by Ripley

Lives Without A Stomach

Believed to be the only case on record of a human being living any length of time after having the stomach entirely removed, Joseph Krall of Chicago is still alive, healthy and happy. Suffering severe abdominal pains in the summer of 1933, Mr. Krall went to the Cook County hospital, where it was found his stomach had mysteriously shrunk to half its normal size. Taking a long chance, doctors decided on removal of the vital organ, despite a absence of records to show a person could live without it more than a few months. However, Mr. Krall says he never felt better—some foods he could never digest before, now agree with him—and there is virtually nothing he cannot eat, although he usually confines himself to soft foods and rare meat.

Yamamoto Addresses Eucharist Congress

Domei Tsushin

BUDAPEST, May 27—Hope that Catholicism will spread further in Japan was expressed here today by Rear-Admiral Shinjiro Yamamoto, Japanese Catholic leader, speaking before the Eucharistic Congress which got under way on Wednesday under the chairmanship of Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, Secretary of State of the Vatican and the Pope's cardinal legate.

Rear-Admiral Yamamoto, who spoke in French, recalled the audience he had with Pope Pius during his recent visit to the Vatican and also emphasized the miraculous improvement of the Pope's health.

Addressing the same assembly, Monsignor Yu Ping, Archbishop of Nanking, declared that Catholics must serve the cause of peace, and develop general sentiments of justice and charity.

Rescue work is in progress at the scene of the disaster. It is believed more casualties will be revealed later.

Ugaki Still A General, Appointment Reveals

Foreign Minister Kazushige Ugaki is still a General of the Army. This fact was revealed when he was granted the Imperial Appointment Thursday evening. Not only did the document of the Imperial appointment give him the title General, but also he went to the Imperial Palace in the full-dress uniform of a General.

It is recalled that when he failed in his attempt to form a Cabinet to succeed the Hirota Cabinet in January, 1937, he declined that title of General of the Army. He held that one not supported by the Army would not be able to command the army. His wish to decline the title was submitted to His Majesty the Emperor by General Hisaichi Terauchi, then the War Minister.

But it is now revealed that on July 13, 1937, the Emperor's rejection of his wish was conveyed to the General by War Minister Sugiyama.

Kweiteh Captured

General Liu Kuei-wu, commanding two regiments, marched toward a hill northwest of Tachingshan in the eastern part of Suiyuan Province.

Before he reached his destination, General Liu was killed by Japanese artillery fire on April 19. The body of the Chinese commander is expected to arrive soon at Sian, capital of Shensi Province, by way of Wuyuan.

Big Republican Gains

day, the Institute studies indicate, the Republicans would stand to capture an average of about 128 seats to fifty-eight for the Democrats—for a net change of approximately 80 seats.

This is where the Democrats and Republicans will probably concentrate their campaign efforts—not in the South, which is still solidly Democratic, not even in the States went of the Mississippi, where the Democratic position is still relatively strong. The following table shows how the institute's present-day estimates compare with the 1936 election:

	Republican Congressional Vote Per Cent 1936	Today	Estimated Average Change in Republican Seats
New England	51	60	Gain of 9 seats
Mid. Atlantic	43	53.5	Gain of 34 seats
East Central	44	54	Gain of 46 seats
West Central	46	48.5	Gain of 4 seats
South	27	23	No net gain or loss
Rocky Mount	35	39	No net gain or loss
Pacific Coast	42	43	Gain of 2 seats

Second Gain in Six Months

Today's survey of the Congressional situation is the third conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in six months. For the third consecutive time the Institute finds increasing Republican gains. Six months ago, in November, 1937, the Institute estimated a Republican gain of about forty-six seats. Two months ago the estimated Republican gain had risen to approximately eighty-five.

But it is still six months until election day, and much can happen to interrupt the present Republican trend. Incumbent Congressmen are still at their desks in Washington, but they will be hurrying back to their districts to mend fences in the next few weeks.

President Roosevelt himself has not yet headed into the campaign, and no one can estimate his influence on the November outcome at this time. Recent Institute studies of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity, it is true, reflect a drop in the President's standing since the beginning of the business slump. But it is entirely possible that he will gain in coming months, especially if business upturn follows the government's recovery efforts this summer.

Furthermore, almost one voter in every five interviewed by the Institute says he is uncertain about his Congressional choice today. No one can forecast which side these "undecided" voters will take eventually.

If Governor Philip F. La Follette's National Progressive party becomes an active factor in the Fall campaign, the cleavages may be still further rearranged.

The last time the Republican party won a substantial number of seats in the House of Representatives was in the mid-term elections of 1930. President Hoover's administration was embarrassed by the depression and the large representation of the year 1928 was reduced to 220.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was still Governor of New York, and the Democratic opposition was much like the Republican opposition today—full of conflicting counsels but united in placing responsibility for the depression on the incumbent Administration. With such an issue the Democrats elected 214 members and actually held a majority in the House after Republican deaths.

Ironically enough, the first substantial improvement in Republican Congressional prospects since 1930 has come about during another business depression, which finds the Democrats in office this time. A majority of American voters find themselves worse off, economically, than they were a year ago, and there is a good presumption for believing that this idea affects their political viewpoints today.

Recently the Institute asked a cross-section of voters: "Are you better off today than you were a year ago?" Throughout the country nearly two persons in every three interviewed said they were "not better off."

Wedding In Tirana

in a civil ceremony marked with mountaineer simplicity, Countess Geraldine Apponyi, whose mother was an American, became the first Queen of the Albanians when she was accepted in marriage by King Ahmed Zog, on April 27 at the Albanian capital.

A salvo of 101 gunds and the tolling of church bells signalled the marriage.

The ceremony was held in an atmosphere half Oriental, half Occidental. Officiating at the wedding was Heqmet Delvina, Vice-President of Parliament, who read the conditions of marriage from the civil code in the presence of 200 guests and members of the royal family.

Countess Geraldine thus became the only Queen possessing American blood.

The ceremony took place in the flower-banked annex of the small royal palace. The walls were covered with antique firearms.

The bride, slightly taller than the King, was resplendent in bridal gown of white satin, embroidered with diamante, pearls and silver threads in flower designs. Her embroidered court train was long. A large veil of white tulle trailed from a high diadem of orange blossoms.

The King wore a sabre and colorful decorations with his uniform as Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

The King's bodyguard of 1,000 men completely surrounded the palace grounds, but admitted the crowd inside the walls where it pressed close to the palace doors.

Thousands of picturesquely dressed mountaineers—Ghegs from the north and Tosks from the south—milled about, trying to glimpse the royal pair.—Above: The King and Queen.

La Mort de Chaliapine

Feodor Chaliapine vient de mourir, à Paris, à l'âge de soixante-cinq ans. Depuis sa rupture avec la Russie soviétique, la France était devenue pour lui une seconde patrie. Il y retrouvait une atmosphère exceptionnellement sympathique, car nul n'oubliait chez nous les succès éclatants qu'il avait obtenus dans ses grandes créations lyriques du théâtre des Champs-Elysées et de l'Opéra.

La très modeste famille de Karzan qui, en 1873, vit naître cet enfant ne soupçonna évidemment pas le splendide destin qui l'attendait. Lorsque le garçonnet fut en âge de gagner sa vie, on en fit un artisan. Mais, bientôt, on lui conseilla de tirer parti de sa magnifique voix de basse.

Entré comme choriste dans un humble théâtre d'opérette d'Oufa, il parvint à se faire remarquer en doublant un artiste et put gagner Saint-Pétersbourg, où sa renommée s'établit immédiatement. Au théâtre Mariensky, à l'Opéra impérial de Moscou, au théâtre d'été de l'Aquarium et dans de nombreuses tournées de province, il triompha avec éclat et devint l'idole de la foule. Il entreprit alors des voyages en Europe et en Amérique. Les Français purent l'applaudir non seulement dans leurs grands théâtres lyriques, mais devant le Mur d'Orange, où il chanta le Mefistofele de Boïto. Les saisons lyriques russes de Serge de Diaghilew et de Gabriel Astruc consacrèrent définitivement chez nous son extraordinaire maîtrise.

Il était en Russie, en 1914, lorsque la guerre éclata. Au début de la révolution, on lui conféra le titre d'"artiste du peuple" et, pendant cinq ans, il prodigua son talent sur toutes les scènes de son pays. Mais, en 1921, lassé de cette carrière exclusivement vouée à la propagande, il voulut retrouver son grand public international et rompit avec le Soviets. Il se fit de nouveau applaudir dans tous les théâtres du monde et revint fréquemment à Paris, où il essaya même de fonder une troupe uniquement composée de ses compatriotes. Il donna aussi quelques récitals de chant, qui ont fait couler beaucoup d'encre parce qu'il prenait souvent avec ses textes d'étonnantes libertés. C'est aussi chez nous que Challapine aborda le cinéma, où il ne fit qu'une carrière assez courte. Mais le film Don Quichotte, dans lequel il fit ses débuts, est demeuré célèbre dans les annales des studios et constitue maintenant un document historique d'une rare valeur.

Challapine tenait dans l'histoire de l'art lyrique une place analogue à celle qu'occupe actuellement Toscanini parmi les chefs d'orchestre internationaux. Aucune commune mesure n'existait entre son talent et celui des autres chanteurs. Physiquement et artistiquement, il appartenait à la race des géants. Sa voix de basse, spécifiquement russe, c'est-à-dire puissante et profonde, possédait une étendue extraordinaire. Très à l'aise dans le registre le plus grave, où son timbre sonnait avec une magnificence incomparable, ce chanteur privilégié pouvait, avec la plus grande facilité et la plus grande souplesse, aborder les tessitures élevées. Il dominait de très haut toutes les difficultés de la technique vocale ou, plus exactement, il ne donnait jamais l'impression d'accomplir un effort technique pour chanter. Les notes rondes, pures, harmonieuses naissaient tout naturellement sur ses lèvres, comme si le chant était pour lui une façon de respirer. C'est ce qui donnait à sa voix une accent si profondément humain et direct. Cet homme vibrait spontanément comme une cloche d'airain.

Il joignait à cette richesse vocale, unique au monde, un tempérament de tragédien d'une puissance irrésistible. Sa haute stature, sa voix souveraine, la noblesse de son maintien, de sa démarche et de ses gestes lui conféraient déjà une autorité surhumaine, mais il possédait, en outre, un instinct dramatique d'une étonnante infaillibilité. Il a marqué d'une empreinte ineffaçable tous les rôles qu'il a abordés, qu'il s'agisse de Mefistofele, d'Ivan le Terrible, de Basile, de Don Quichotte ou du tsar Boris, qui fut sa création la plus magistrale. Il fit souvent le désespoir des chefs d'orchestre par son indiscipline légendaire d'enfant gâté du succès, à qui la foule donnait toujours raison. Il était impossible, en effet, de résister à sa splendide maîtrise.

Chaliapine a eu la plus longue et la plus glorieuse des carrières lyriques. Son nom ne sera jamais séparé de celui des plus hauts chefs-d'œuvre de l'art russe. C'est donc dans le monde entier que sera douloureusement ressentie un perte qui appauvrit l'art lyriqu universel.

Emile Vuillermoz.

Universal University

All the world can now go to college—all, that is, who know English and have access to a short-wave radio set—thanks to the World Wide Broadcasting Company (Station WIXAL). Each Tuesday evening Harvard's "World University" goes on the air with lectures on music, art, science and literature; other colleges participating in World Wide programs include Yale, Amherst, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Columbia, the Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin.

Station WIXAL was founded in 1934 by Walter S. Lemmon, who set aside part of the royalties from his radio inventions to promote international friendship and understanding, and to bring educational ideas to adults living in remote spots. Rockefeller Foundation has aided the project with funds. Words of appreciation have come from lonely cabins in the African veldt and the Australian bush, from thatched cottages in Ireland and from cities of all continents. Mr. Lemmon dreams of a Radio University with a $2,000,000 endowment.—News Week.

Britain Will Guide Arming In Ireland

Experts Of Other Countries Also Expected To Help

LONDON, April—Although the Anglo-Irish agreement will make Ireland responsible for her own protection, British experts and British war material are expected to play an important part in building up Dublin's defense forces, says the N.Y. Times.

Advice of experts from several countries besides Britain—from France, possibly from the United States and perhaps even from Germany—will be obtained before Ireland's defense program is drawn up. The problem of defending the Irish coast is similar to that of protecting Britain. The experience the British gained in constructing booms for the protection of Mediterranean parts against submarine attacks during the Ethiopian crisis will be most valuable to Ireland.

The consideration which is having even more influence on Irish authorities is the ease with which replacements of material bought in England can be obtained. It would be dangerous if spare parts for the army's armored cars or ammunition for coast-defense guns were cut off. There is less danger of a break in communications with Britain than with any other country.

It is most likely that modernization of the fortifications at the three "treaty ports," Queenstown, Bere Haven and Lough Swilly, will be one of the first concerns of the Irish Government. These, which were retained by Britain in the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921, are of great strategic importance and constituted one of the most difficult problems settled by the new agreement.

The defenses at Queenstown seem to date back almost to the Napoleonic era. They certainly could not offer effective opposition to modern battleships any more than venerable Fort Wadsworth could prevent enemy squadrons from forcing passage into New York harbor.

Small Fast Army Needed

The number of military planes required by Ireland has not been decided but it is certain a small, highly mechanized army will be required which can quickly be shifted from a central base to points where invasion is attempted. Ireland's defenses will be completed by the construction of a small fleet adapted to repelling submarine attacks or coastal raids.

All this constitutes a formidable program for a small country with fewer than 3,000,000 inhabitants. There have been rumors that Britain might hand back in war material the £10,000,000 Dublin is to pay in settlement of land annuities. But it is understood the £10,000,000 will go into the British treasury where it is also needed and Ireland's purchases will be paid for as in ordinary commercial transactions.

Despite this businesslike arrangement it is difficult to imagine Irish neutrality in any general war into which Britain may be drawn. The British Admiralty's nightmare of use of the coast of Ireland for enemy submarine bases seems to have vanished.

Ireland is determined to follow her own policy and decide for herself whether she will aid Britain. It is likely Dublin will stay out of war in the Far East involving Britain. The opposition of the Catholic population might cause Ireland to keep out should Britain fight alongside Soviet Russia. But within these limits the two countries are in a mood to work in cooperation.

Detailed plans for joint defense are not in sight, but may result as an outgrowth of the technical aid from Britain.

Hosei Bumps Off Meiji, 6-2 And Waseda Has Chance; Teidai Blanks Rikkyo, 2-0

Big Southpaw Akaneya was in brilliant form Sunday afternoon and Hosei bumped off Meiji, 6 to 2, at the Meiji Shrine stadium to make it 1-all in their series for the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league. Akaneya yielded five hits while his team-mates bombarded the offerings of Pitchers Shimizu and Yoshida for nine blows that meant runs.

As it now stands, Waseda has a chance of capturing the championship if it beats Keio two straight in their spectacular semi-annual series on June 4 and 5 at the Meiji Shrine stadium. A division of the two games and then it will be a deadlock between Waseda and Meiji and a playoff will be necessary. And if Keio springs the unexpected by winning both games, and this is not impossible for Keio always rises to great heights in its games against Waseda, then the championship will automatically go to Meiji.

Teidai Beats Rikkyo

The Tokyo Imperial University nine (Teidai) finally won a game, its last in the schedule, by taking the Rikkyo nine into camp by a 2 to 0 score. Right hander Yutani was responsible for it with his effective pitching that checked Rikkyo to five scattered hits.

Although beaten on Saturday, the Hosei bench still had plenty of confidence in Akaneya and sent him to the mound against Meiji. The latter also assigned the same starting moundsman of Saturday, Lefty Shimizu.

Meiji got off to a gala start by scoring two runs in the last half of the second inning. First Baseman Sekata started the ball rolling with a three bagger to center. Sugiura was thrown out, third to first. Kamei walked. Second Baseman Kameda came through with a Texas Leaguer to left and batted in Sakata. Backstop Kamibayashi followed with a hit through short and Kamei tallied. Meiji pulled off a double steal but Kameda was thrown out at third. Shimizu grounded out to first to retire the side.

Shimizu pitched airtight ball in the first three innings but Hosei pounced on him in the fourth to even the score at 2-all. Murakami led off with a safety to center. Tsuruoka walked. Right Fielder Yoshida singled to right but was thrown out at first in an attempt to dash to second. Murakami was held at third on the hit but he romped home on Takeuchi's Texas Leaguer to center. Tsuruoka went to third on the hit. Takeuchi stole second and on a beautiful squeeze pulled off by Ito, Tsuruoka scored to tie the count at 2-all. There was no more scoring when Akaneya grounded out to first.

Hosei Clinches Game

Hosei virtually won its game by putting over two runs in the eighth inning. It was Murakami again that started the fireworks with a hit to right field. Tsuruoka followed with another between third and short. Yoshida too nicked Shimizu for a bingle through first and short and Murakami romped home from second. Takeuchi rolled a hopper to second for a doubleplay but Tsuruoka tallied. Ito struck out.

Kodama replaced Shimizu at the outset of the ninth. Karazawa's three bagger batted in Akaneya, who had walked, and Murakami's long fly to right brought in Karazawa.

Teidai won its only ball game of the season by scoring two runs off Pitchers Saigo and Ishida of Rikkyo in the sixth inning. Nomura singled through third and S. Furukawa poled out a three bagger to center to bring in Nomura. Pitcher Saigo was sent out to left field and Ishida replaced him on the mound. Yamamoto hit one too hot for the first baseman to handle for a hit and Furukawa scored.

The standings follow:

Sugenuma, four-year-old thoroughbred, owned by Kenji Chiaki of Gunma Prefecture, captured the seventh annual Japanese Derby over 2,400 meters at the Fuchu racing track Sunday afternoon to win the prize moneys totaling ¥20,000. Jockey was Hiro Nakamura. The time was 2 minutes 33 seconds for a new record.

A neck behind was Taeyama. Fourteen horses competed.

Trosky Survives Early Season Of Batting Struggle

NEW YORK, May 7—Hal Trosky, Cleveland's clouting first-sacker, survived the early season shakeup in the batting standings on both sides of the big league front this week and remained the No. 1 hitter in the big-time with a batting average of .434.

While Chuck Klein was taking over the National League lead from the Cardinal's Mickey Owen with a .365 mark, and the rest of the first ten in each loop was scrambled from top to bottom, Trosky came through handily, although he, like the others, lost plenty of percentage points.

Hank Steinbacher of the White Sox dropped from second to a tie for seventh place in the American League, and the runner-up spot was taken over by Frankie Hayes, the Athletics' improved catcher, with a .417 mark. In the National League, Hank Leiber, the Giants' blond belter, stayed in the No. 2 slot, only one point off Klein's pace.

Newcomers in the American League "Big Ten" for the week were Ken Keltner of Cleveland, tied for seventh with .370; Doc Cramer, Boston, ninth with .362, and Dario Lodigiani, Philadephia, tenth with .56.

In addition to Klein, the new "Big Ten" members in the senior circuit were Johnny Rizzo, Pittsburgh rookie, fourth with .353; Ducky Medwick, the Carlinals ace, sixth with .343; Billy Myers, Reds, and Lloyd wick, the Cardinals ace, sixth with .339, and Jojo Moore, Giants, tenth with .338.

Sharkey, Now 64, In Home For Aged

SAN FRANCISCO, April 30—Tom Sharkey, one of the famed figures of earlier day boxing and once possessor of a fortune of $250,000, today became an inmate of the Laguna Honda Home—San Francisco's haven for the aged, infirm and destitute.

He still carries his head high, but he's broke, this old-time gladiator who came out of the United States Navy to fight them all. He'll be 65 years old next September.

Sharkey boasted he "wasn't afraid of any man alive." He fought John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett, James J. Jefferies, Bob Fitzsimmons and Kid McCoy, among others. His last match was a six-round no-decision bout with Jack Monroe in 1904 at Philadelphia.

Never a champion, the barrel-chested Irishman slashed a colorful path through the boxing ranks during a career which started in 1893.

Unwise investments, horse racing and the lure of the bright lights, dissipated his wealth. Of late years he acted as a guard at race tracks.

In 1896, he boxed a three-round draw with the late John L. Sullivan. The same year he fought what was called a four-round draw with Corbett and won on a sixth-round foul from Fitzsimmons.

Old accounts of the fights say Sharkey was giving Corbett a beating in the exhibition bout when the latter's seconds jumped into the ring.

His two most notable battles were with Jeffries. Jeffries won a twenty-round decision in San Francisco in 1898 and a twenty-five-round verdict the following year in New York.

Sharkey, an infirmary patient undergoing treatment for an infected foot, told interviewers: "I'm down but not out."

He said he hoped to get a job when he recovered.

Germans Leading Hungary, 2-1 In Davis Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 28—Germany today struggled hard to maintain a one-match lead over Hungary in the European Zone Davis Cup quarter-finals as Henner Henkel lost one of the singles matches continued from yesterday but later teamed up with G. von Metaxa to score a 4-set doubles win.

The second-day of play opened at Budapest with the German team leading 1-0, when Gabory, of Hungary, already dropping behind Henkel 1-3 in the fifth set of the singles match held over from yesterday, rallied to score a closely-contested victory to even the count. Henkel and Metaxa then defeated the Hungarian pair of Dallos and Asboth to recover the one-point lead. Results of the individual matches were:

Gabory (Hungary) defeated Henner Henkel (Germany) 7-5, 6-4, 4-6, 2-6, 5-7; Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa (Germany) defeated Dallos and Asboth (Hungary) 5-7, 6-1, 8-6, 6-3.

Play meanwhile began in two other ties in the quarter-finals, France meeting Italy at Paris and India clashing with Belgium at Brussels. End of the first day's singles found France leading 2-0 over Italy, while India won one match over Belgium with the second match postponed until tomorrow due to rain. The scores were:

France-Italy: Yvon Petra (France) defeated Taroni (Italy) 6-0, 6-2, 6-3; Bernard Destremeau (France) defeated Canapele (Italy) 3-6, 6-0, 6-2, 7-5.

India-Belgium; Mohamed Ghaus (India) defeated Naeyaetrt (Belgium) 5-7, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1, 9-7.

BUDAPEST, May 27—Interruption of the second singles match by darkness after Henner Henkel had scored an initial straight-set win today held Germany's Davis Cup team to a one-point lead over Hungary in the European Zone quarter-finals.

Opening the first day's singles matches, Henkel defeated G. Dallos, of Hungary, 6-4, 11-9, 6-0. Metaxa then clashed with Gabory, of Hungary, and was leading 3-1 in the fifth set of a closely contested struggle when play was suspended on account of darkness.

It looked as though Hungary would even the count as Gabory took the first two sets, 7-5 and 6-4. Metaxa, however, rallied to win the next two at 6-4 and 6-2, running up a two-game lead in final set before play was called. The match will be resumed tomorrow from where it was left off.

Harvard Subdues Princeton, 4 To 1

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 30—Harvard cleaned up its Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League series with Princeton today, winning, 4 to 1, on Soldiers Field behind right-hander Ed Ingalls, who allowed the Tigers only four hits and held them scoreless until the ninth inning. The Crimson collected six safeties off left-hander Dawson Farber.

Successive triples by Johns and Lupien in the first, combined with Knowle's fumble off Gannett's grounder, a base on balls to Shean and a two-base hit by Hoye accounted for the Crimson's complete total of four runs. After his disastrous start, Farber was very effective, only two Cambridge batters reaching second base during the remainder of the game.

Ingalls Reveals Speed

Ingalls had a lot of speed and control. He fanned five of them Tigers, three of them in the second frame. In the ninth the Tigers braced and got a start on Jabara's single. Hill got a base hit following an out and then Bacon played Purnell's infield tap too late to third base. With the bases loaded, pinch-hitter Tate was thrown out at first by Shean, while Jabara scored. The threat then ended.

Previous to the last session only one Princeton runner had passed first base. Both teams played well in the field. Hoye of Harvard made a sensational running catch of Hill's long fly to left field and Third Basemen Novak and Grondahl each made some fine plays and throws to first. In the eighth Harper covered a lot of ground to capture Grondahl's fly just back of second base.

John Woodruff Is Hero In Penn Relay Carnival

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

N.Y. Times

PHILADELPHIA, April 30—That marvelous bit of running machinery, Ol' John Woodruff, turned in two more extraordinary performances in the sunshine, shadows and showers of Franklin Field today as his long, graceful-like stride carried the University of Pittsburgh to the major honors of the forty-fourth annual Penn Relay Carnival.

The Olympic 800-meter champion displayed his versatility with an anchor 220-yard leg in under even time to carry the Panthers to their first 880-yard relay championship. Then he topped off the show with a dazzling 0:47.4 quarter mile that lifted Pitt to the classic one-mile throne in 3:17.8, third fastest time in the history of this jamboree.

Since Ol' John had ripped off a 1:49.9 anchor half-mile leg yesterday to give Pitt the sprint medley honors, the triple job he did during the two-day show gave the Panthers three championships in a meet where no other college took more than one.

Rain Slows the Track

It was a peculiar show today in many respects. The morning session was staged under brilliant sunlight that held until midway in the afternoon. Then dark, threatening clouds scudded across the sky and finally it came.

The heavens opened in a steady downpour that soaked that part of the gathering of 30,000 which was unable to flee under the overhang of the upper stands. The track became slow and loggy before a flicker of sunshine broke through once more right near the end.

Under conditions such as these it was remarkable that any records were broken. But the Pitt 880-yard team equaled the carnival mark of 1:26.6. In addition a surprising University of Virginia shuttles hurdles combination cracked the figures in that event. An Overbrook schoolboy relay team clipped a two-mile record and Nick Vakmanic, unheralded Penn State sophomore, flung the javelin 223 feet 10½ inches, not far from an American standard.

Holy Cross Cubs Win

Today's meet was strictly blue and gold in its color scheme. Besides Pitt the winners were Manhattan in the two-mile test, Indiana in the four-mile, Virginia in the hurdles and Holy Cross in the freshman mile. Both Jaspers and Hoosiers retained their titles.

But Ol' John was the hero of the day. His victory in the mile relay topped off a great week-end for him and his mates. The field in this test was one of the fastest ever assembled at Franklin Field. Had it not been for the weather the time might have been seconds swifter.

The Olympic champion did have the advantage of being touched off in front, it is true, but that merely meant that Ol' John did not have to hustle as quickly. Frank Ohl, Al Gerrara (who also were on both of the other winning relay teams) and Al McKee preceded the Negro giant.

They combined to hand Woodruff a seven-yard lead, with Howard Borck of Manhattan, Jim Herbert of N. Y. U. and Harley Howells of Ohio State in hot pursuit. They battled bitterly for places behind him but at the end Ol' John casually lengthened his stride a mite and there was the winner by seven yards.

Herbert, doing 47 flat himself, brought New York a second place in a blanket finish with Ohio State and Manhattan.

Pitt's victory in the 880-yard relay came close to being the most startling development of the entire carnival. That the sprint medley combination of Ohl, Ferrara, Edgar Mason and Woodruff would ever be able to win seemed beyond the wildest conjecture.

In the first place Woodruff is a half-miler who has been used as a miler in dual meets this Spring. Yet there was Ol' John letting go with a furlong anchor leg that was fast enough to lift the Panthers from a one-yard deficit to a three-yard triumph over Indiana's defending champions.

Woodruff is a wonder. That is about all there is to it. He ambled along in that tremendously long stride of his, effortless and perfectly at ease. He nailed Malcolm Hicks of Indiana at the head of the home-stretch and slipped over the cinders for a 1:26.6 clocking to equal the meet record that Texas posted two years ago.

Indiana's four-mile relay triumph was right in line with the form charts. The well-balanced Hoosiers, favorites on paper, were favorites on the cinder as well. Ralph Applegate, Jimmy Smith, Mel Trutt and Tommy Deckard spreadeagled the field from the second leg on, winning from the unbalanced North Texas State Teachers quartet by the astounding total of 130 yards.

Smith was the lad who broke the backbone of the test. The Negro junior ripped off a 4:14.6 mile and the event fell into two distinct pieces. The Indianans were, to all intents and purposes, in one race and every one else in the other.

The Rideout twins, Wayne and Blaine, pulled North Texas up from fourth place to second, but they could not do the work alone. The Indiana lead was so great that Deckard, at anchor, loafed his part of the affair and the Hoosiers' time of 17:26.8 was more than ten seconds off their world and carnival record.

Herb Cornell of Cornell was spiked badly in the preliminary rush for places at the start and sustained such a bad gash in his leg that fourteen stitches were required to close the wound—all without an anesthetic.

In the two-mile relay coach Pete Waters of Manhattan refusing to conserve any strength for the mile event, shot the works with his best team. He disregarded the fact that an Indiana quartet which had been caught in 7:38.1 a week ago was an odds-on favorite to win. The Jaspers were willing to match the Hoosiers with what they had. And it was more than enough.

Borck Gets Away Third

With Joe Moclair, Joe Zeitler and Lot Burns keeping the Green well up in the early running as the lead shuttled back and forth between Michigan and Indiana, Howie Borck was touched off in their place, four yards off the pace.

He quickly stepped into second and was content to follow Hal Daidson of Michigan to the 440-yard mark. But an odd thing happened in the backstretch of the last lap. The Jasper captain passed the Wolverine on the outside only to have Mel Trutt of Indiana pass him on the inside and thus get the pole. So Borck sprinted furiously from the lead of the homestretch to win by five yards in the sound time of 7:48.1.

The shuttle hurdles was something of a double-barreled surprise. Unheralded Virginia, with Frank Fuller outracing the intercollegiate champion, John Donovan, on the anchor leg, not only upset the Indianans but also smashed the carnival record with 1:01.2 to the old figures of 1:01.6 that Harvard established two years ago.

The freshman mile event drew so many entries that the championship had to be decided on a time basis in two heats. Holy Cross breezed in a winner in the first heat in the smart time of 3:21.3, which was enough for the title. N. Y. U. was second, Pitt third and Fordham, the second-heat victor, an eventual fourth.

The most astonishing form reversal of the day came in the 3,000-meter special invitation test. This was to have been a cat-and-dog fight between Joe McCluskey and Don Lash. The three other starters, as far as any one in the stands was concerned, were just three fellows named Joe.

But great was the amazement of the assembled multitude when an unknown sophomore from Michigan, Ralph Schwartzopf, outsprinted his two more famous rivals in the backstretch of the last lap and breezed to a thirty-yard victory over McCluskey and a forty-five-yard one over Lash.

In the mile special Glenn Cunningham won, to the great surprise of no one at all. He sprinted in the home stretch to vanquish Gene Venzke in 4:16.7.

The 100-yard dash went to Columbia's Ben Johnson in 9.8 seconds, Herb Weast taking second.

In the schoolboy phase of the competition the only record to go overboard was in the two-mile high school division, where Overbrook of Philadelphia, with Ed Morgan doing a 1:57 anchor, clipped more than five seconds off the old figures with 8:16.2. Seton Hall took the prep school division in 8:10.2.

Top honors in the mile went to Evander Childs in the high school class and to the great De La Salle quartet in the prep school division, the former with 3:23.9 and the latter in 3:24.1, with clockings made in the driving rain.

In the unclassified races James Monroe, Evander Childs and St. Augustine all took first places.

Arthur Sato Annexes Amateur Golf Title For 3 Years In Row

Arthur G. Sato of the Hirono Golf Club in the Kansai won the national amateur golf championship for the third straight year by defeating Mizuno Kubota of the Fujisawa Club by 2 and 1 over 36 holes in the final match play Saturday at the Hodogaya course.

Sato was in top form and consistently outdrove the younger challenger.

Kentucky Derby Is Won By Lawrin Before 60,000 For Dept. Store Owner

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

LOUISVILLE, May 7—Carrying his speed bravely for the full mile and a quarter, Lawrin today won the sixty-fourth Kentucky Derby before 60,000 persons for Herbert M. Woolf, Kansas City department store owner, who never faltered in his belief that his colt could do it. That Mr. Woolf and Trainer Plain Ben Jones were right was decisively demonstrated to the satisfaction of the tens of thousands of thoroughbred devotees, including many of the country's best known men and women.

Plain Ben is from Missouri, where he bred and trained this colt for Mr. Woolf, and he showed 'em! The margin was a length, with William du Pont Jr.'s Dauber, royally bred in the C. V. Whitney Bluegrass, driving and gaining, but still only second. Five lengths farther back was the Hollywood horse, Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, bred by another Whitney, John Hay, who now is a movie magnate.

With Elliott Roosevelt, the son of the President; Postmaster General Farley and Governor Chandler, as well as Kentucky belles showering congratulations, Plain Ben took Mr. Woolf's horse by the head and caressed the sweating neck. Lawrin was all out to win, but win he did, vindicating a trainer who had striven for years with indifferent horses through the West.

Value to Winner $47,050

Jones had his reward when the big bay son of Insco, who had been condemned as only a sprinter, banged his way to the front at the head of the stretch and held on to win $47,050, which was the main share of the $57,050 purse.

Lawrin, while heavily backed by his owner and the owner's friends, was indifferently supported by the general public and returned $19.20, $8.80 and $4.80 for $2 across the board. Dauber's prices were $12 and 6, with Can't Wait returning $8.20.

The public favor was divided between William Woodward's Eastern colt, Fighting Fox, and the Chicago-owned Bull Lea, the property of Warren Wright. They finished sixth and eighth, each having an excuse.

Despite the fact that it was the smallest field in many years, the race was not as truly run as had been expected. Yet nothing can be taken from the winner, who ran like a keen colt that may go on to the championship.

Lawrin finished in the modest time of 2:04 4-5 over a fast track under his scale weight of 126 pounds. Eddie Arcaro, leading jockey of the Florida season, was in the saddle for his first mount on the horse that had stamped himself the best Florida 3-year-old when he captured the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Park. Lawrin was the first Winter champion to win the Derby since Black Gold in 1924.

Future Book Favorite Out

In those days there was no Hialeah or Santa Anita, and Black Gold came up to the Derby here with a victory behind him in the Louisiana Derby. For the present renewal at Churchill Downs, Stagehand, Winter champion at Santa Anita in California, long had ruled the future book favorite, but he was withdrawn with a fever two days ago.

Whether a Winter flash can go on to be the best 3-year-old of the year remains to be seen. Lawrin is not eligible for the Preakness at Pimlico or the Belmont Stakes in New York. His next major start will be in the Arlington Classic on July 24 in Chicago and this period of rest may be just as well.

Jones ran his pride in regular racing plates. Last Tuesday he had sent him out in a bar plate, a device aimed at holding together a hoof which may sting and hurt through spreading. It may be that this minor ailment was what caused Lawrin to shorten stride on occasion and look as if he were tiring when he got past a mile. Through the stretch he bore out under the pressure Arcaro put upon him.

Heart and courage carried him through along with Arcaro's skill and power and the preparation that Jones had given him. No small measure of praise must go to the rider, for he saved ground when he could and found the clear sailing he needed. Arcaro is a veteran, under contract to Mrs. Payne Whitney, who loaned him to Mr. Woolf, since she had no starter.

Lawrin is by Insco-Margaret Lawrence, and his name is a combination of the first syllables of the dam's and sire's names. The fractional times, with Lawrin back of the pace until the head of the stretch, were 0:23 1-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:38 1-5, 2:04 4-5.

This renewal of the Derby was attended by more than the usual ceremony and the ten paraded with thousands lined on both sides of the homestretch. At the post Lawrin was the worst behaved on the rail and delayed the start four and one-half minutes.

Fighting Fox Shuffled Back

Lawrin broke smartly and cleanly. Fighting Fox was shuffled by Bull Lea as they came out of the stalls, but found his legs more quickly and soon was neck and neck with Lawrin and Menow, who broke from the No. 10 position. As Fighting Fox forged forward, Bull Lea was shuffled back in turn, and never again was a factor.

This happened in the first furlong and in the next eighth Menow and Fighting Fox were battling along for the lead, with Lawrin outrun by them. Jimmy Stout had Fighting Fox in front past the stands, but it was obvious that he didn't particularly want the lead and doubtless had instructions to rate to the speed of such a horse as Menow.

In any event he went around the first turn with Fighting Fox battling hard for his head, and evidently hot to go shoulder to shoulder with Menow. Between Menow's greater speed and Stout's determination to rate off it, the field swung into the back stretch with the Hal Price Headley color bearer a length and a half in the clear. Fighting Fox was next, with Lawrin well behind, but close to the fence and saving every inch he could.

The first move came approaching the far turn, when Lester Balaski turned loose with Can't Wait, and that fellow rushed up on the outside of Fighting Fox. Then Mountain Ridge moved up powerfully on the inside.

This placed Fighting Fox in danger of being in very tight quarters, and Stout had to go from a pull to a push. Fighting Fox didn't like this, and did not respond with the willing lick of speed that he had flashed in his Wood Memorial victory.

Lawrin Makes His Bid

Can't Wait, still gaining, soon was head and head on the outside of Fighting Fox, and the Fox could not hold him. Menow still had the lead as they approached the top of the stretch, but now Arcaro was coming on with Lawrin. Going to the outside of Menow and Can't Wait, he found plenty of racing room and laid on with the whip to jump into the lead.

With Menow at the end of his powers and Can't Wait tiring, Lawrin opened three or four lengths in the next fifty or sixty yards. He looked to be home free, when from far back Dauber turned on the same kind of a stretch run that had brought him second money back of Stagehand in the Santa Anita Derby.

From ten or twelve lengths back, Dauber gained stride by stride as Lawrin bore out, but Lawrin had more than enough left and finished with daylight between his heels and Dauber's nose.

The tired pair of Can't Wait and Menow battled bitterly for the third money, with Can't Wait getting it by a nose. The Chief, stablemate of the ill-starred Stagehand, was fifth, leading Fighting Fox, Co-Sport, Bull Lea, Elooto and Mountain Ridge, who crossed the line as named.

Crowd Lavishly Entertained

Probably no crowd in derby history had been so well entertained as this one, for there were five bands performing in the infield with all the dash and color pattern of Hollywood and Southern California football games. Bright uniforms, feminine drum majors strutting, brass blaring, thousands milling in wire enclosures all made a scene which diverted the most blase.

The wire enclosures were the result of an elaborate plan whereby the management eliminated the use of the mounted police galloping through the infield, and the night sticks of the National Guardsmen. Foot police were present in large number, and so were the National Guardsmen, armed now only with two-foot lengths of rubber hose.

Yet it was the heavy mesh of the enclosures, set on powerful posts sunk deep into earth and concrete, that eliminated the surging rushes which in other years had resulted in so many broken heads. Part of the infield was fenced off in such a manner that standees could make use of the seven terraces, each a foot above that in front. For this space the customers paid their way.

Flanking this terraced area, and also in front of the grandstand, was the performing field for the musicians, and the acts which were staged. A large tanbark area, lined to duplicate a football field, enabled the college bands to perform their undergraduate maneuvers without any disturbance to steps and motions learned on the gridiron.

Beyond both of these areas and stretching to the backstretch was the new bullpen for the gate-crashers. This new fence permitted them to come closer than in any other year, the former boundary having been the farther rail on the backstretch. But that was so distant that the mounted police galloping to and fro became amusing rather than efficient.

100 Reich, Italian Athletes To Come For Meet In Fall

The number of Italian and German athletes and officials to be invited to Japan for the forthcoming tripartite athletic meet scheduled for November 3 was reduced to 100 from 116 as a result of the second meeting of the preparation committee held at 3 p.m. Monday in the Marunouchi Building.

At the outset of the meeting, reports were made on the assumption of the chairmanship of the committee by Baron Ryutaro Fukao, president of the Football Society.

As negotiations with the N.Y.K. for ship's accommodation proved that one vessel could not afford to carry 100 visitors at once, they will come to Japan in two groups at some intervals.

Discussion on the disposal of the budget for the event set at ¥150,000 was decided to be started at the next meeting.

Table Tennis Body Asks Game Be Put On 1940 Games Schedule

The Japan Table Tennis Association Monday was in receipt of a letter from W. J. Pope, English Language Secretary of the International Table Tennis Federation, who requested the J.T.T.A. to take the necessary steps for the inclusion of table tennis in the forthcoming Tokyo Olympic Games according to the decision of the last meeting of Congress held in London on January 29.

Masaharu Numa, of the Japan Table Tennis Association, Tuesday called upon Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary-general of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee, to submit the request of the international body, however, it is understood that Dr. Nagai stated the difficulty to inclusion of the new game inasmuch as the events were already decided at the last session of the International Olympic Committee at Cairo.

The International T.T.F. is likely to commence an energetic movement for the inclusion of the table tennis for the 1940 Olympiad until the London I.O.C. session in 1939 inasmuch there would be a chance.

Furthermore, it is understood that the Japanese O.O.C. is willing to accept whatever decision that may be reached at the London conference.

Pennink Is Champion Again In English Amateur Golf Play

Observer

LONDON, May 1—J. J. F. Pennink (Royal Ashdown Forest) retained the English Amateur championship, beating S. E. Banks (Hallamshire) two up and one to play in the thirty-six holes final played on the Moortown course, near Leeds, yesterday.

Both players felt the occasion, but the champion's habit of steadying his game toward the end of the match won the day. While Pennink's play to the green was almost faultless, he must have envied many times the way in which Banks recovered with a pitch and putt; for the champion was never wholly at ease with his putter during both rounds. With twelve holes played he had putted twenty-seven times, while Banks had only required sixteen putts.

Banks was only one down on the morning's play, a position mainly due to his suddenly sneaking three holes in a row from Pennink. The Sheffield player was never ahead in the afternoon, but squared time and again. Pennink, however, as in the morning, did not falter during the last few holes, and won at the seventeenth.

Feeble Putting

The first half of the match was a story of the most feeble putting imaginable on the part of Pennink, and a brilliant short game by Banks. The fact that Pennink took thirty-eight putts for the round as against thirty-one by the Yorkshireman speaks for itself. Toward the end of the round, which he finished 1 up, the Champion regained a measure of confidence on the green.

Pennink was always superior in driving and the long second shots to the green, and had the putting been at all comparable he would have established a substantial lead. With twelve holes played the Champion had taken twenty-seven putts to his opponent's sixteen.

Pennink might easily have gone right away from the start for he won the first, a hole of 500 yards, in a 4, with two perfect wooden club shots to the green. His putting lapses began at the second, where he took three, and only halved a hole which he should have won. Both players were in serious difficulties at the third, which was halved in an inglorious 6. Pennink should have won each of the next two holes, but short putts on greens as slippery as glass frightened him.

Taking advantage of his opponent's mistakes Banks squared the match, but losing both the eighth and the ninth, turned 1 down. The scores at this stage were Pennink 40, Banks 42.

The match underwent a sudden change, Pennink losing the next three holes to be 2 down. At the tenth, 586 yards, he hooked into the heather, and after a good recovery, hit a brassie shot to the edge of the green. Banks was bunkered, but again he pitched out, and holed the putt for a 5 to win the hole. At the next he holed from off the green for an eagle 3. At the twelfth Banks chipped dead, while Pennink, still ill at ease with his putter, took three putts. But he played the last five holes in 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, to win two of them and finished the round 1 up. The respective scores were Pennink 73, Banks 79

The Second Round

Pennink in the second round only once made a slip on the greens, taking three putts to lose the twenty-first to Banks' 5. Apart from being bunkered at the twentyeighth, and putting his iron shot in a ditch at the thirty-first, Pennink was just as accurate in the long game as in the first round. He drove the longer ball, but his big advantage was in his greater accuracy in approaching the greens, and including his two 6's, he only needed 73 for the seventeen holes played in this round, as against Banks' 74.4. This time the players had an equal number of putts.

Banks with a par 5 squared at the twenty-first, but the Yorkshireman drove into the ditch at the twenty-fifth, and was bunkered at the next hole to become 2 down. Pennink was bunkered from the tee at the long twenty-eighth and took four to the green. He also lost the short thirtieth where Banks holed a four-yard putt for a 2. The Champion, however, regained his lead at the thirty-first, which was badly played by both men. Banks out of bounds from the tee and bunkered with his fourth took a shocking 7, while Pennink, in a ditch from his second, and picking out under penalty, was down in 6. Banks' last chance went at thirty-third when he topped his drive less than thirty yards into a ditch and became 2 down. Two halves in 4's followed, and that was the end.

N.Y.A.C. Gunner Captures Honors

By FRANK ELKINS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 8—Making his first appearance in big-time competition, a 28-year-old home club representative, Roger Fawcett of New York City, gave the veterans of scatter-gun shooting something to talk about when he captured the amateur championship of America at sixteen-yard clay targets yesterday over the New York A. C. traps at Travers Island.

One of the few young contenders in a star-studded field, Fawcett smashed the targets with unerring accuracy, losing only one bird in 200 attempts, thus equaling the tournament record set by Frank S. Wright in 1926 and matched by Joe Heistand in 1933.

Although weather conditions were ideal, a wind sweeping across the Sound sent the targets soaring in various directions, thus providing a severe test for the marksmen.

Fails to Handicap Winner

However, this condition was just what Fawcett has been accustomed to, as he has engaged regularly in Winged Foot tournaments and competing in the face of strong winds was nothing unusual for him. It was, though, for most of the others.

The fact that the high gun man who lost in a shoot-off for the high-over-all laurels in the preliminary handicap Friday has been inactive for the past three years and resumed gunning this season spoke highly for his achievement yesterday.

A member of the fourteenth squad in the morning, Fawcett went straight at 100, the best score in the first round. The 52-year-old Rufus A. (Fred) King of Wichita Falls, Texas was the closest to Fawcett after the forenoon competition. The former Grand American champion recorded a 99, a low target on the fifty-fourth shot eluding his shell.

In the second round the New York A. C. star had a perfect string of 25, then missed on the opening shot of the next event. He then went clean to finish with a superb 99 and a championship aggregate of 199.

As consistent as ever, King rolled off another 99 in his afternoon round. Once again a low clay caught the Southwestern marksmen off guard on the sixty-second shot, his only miss in the last four strings.

A flawless 100, the only perfect string of the day besides that of Fawcett, enabled A. J. MacDowell of Philadelphia to finish in a tie with King for second scratch honors. In the first round MacDowell broke 98 to give him a total of 198 out of a possible 200.

Crothers Scores on Toss

In the shoot-off King triumphed after three events. King and MacDowell ran straight for the first two strings, but in the third extra shoot King again broke 25 in a row, while MacDowell lost one.

S. M. Crothers of Philadelphia and Lou House of Toledo, Ohio, with 197s, finished all even for the fourth scratch award. Crothers won the toss.

Other prize winners were: Charley Young, Springfield, Ohio, who defeated four rivals in a draw for Class A, each having posted 196; Ralph Marano, College Point, L. I., who defeated Frank Storms, Goshen, N. Y., 25—24, in a shoot-off in Class B; L. G. Dana, Derrick City, Pa., in Class C with 195; E. T. Rogers, Newbury, Mass., in Class D With 193, and A. T. Murphy of New York City in Class E with 191.

Over at the Koshien stadium the same day, the Tigers lost to Nagoya 6 to 1 in the first game but rallied in the second to tumble the Hankyus by 8 to 2.

France, Germany Enter Semifinals Of European Zone

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 29—Both France and Germany advanced to the semifinals of the European Zone Davis Cup tourney today as a third straight French win in the doubles eliminated the Italians at Paris and Germany, despite giving away the final singles match, scored a 3-2 victory over Hungary at Budapest. The other quarterfinal ties remained undecided, Sweden leading Yugoslavia 1-0 and Belgium ahead of India 2-1.

Already in possession of two singles victories, France clinched its series against Italy by virtue of a straight-set win in the doubles. J. Bolelli and P. Pelizza, French doubles pair, defeated the Italian combination of V. Taroni and F. Quintavalle, 9-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Opening the last day of play at Budapest, G. von Metaxa, of Germany, gave the Reich team its needed margin of victory by defeating G. Dallos, of Hungary, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. Henner Henkel then defaulted to Gabory, of Hungary, when rain started to fall after the German took the first set at 6-1.

Belgium swept into the lead over India at Brussels as A. Lacroix won one of the singles matches postponed from yesterday and then paired with de Borman to score another Belgian victory in the doubles. The first singles match had been won by India.

Scores of the matches were: A. Lacroix (Belgium) defeated Sawhney (India) 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; Lacroix and de Borman (Belgium) defeated Sawhney and Mohammed (India) 4-6, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Sweden and Yugoslavia opened play at Zagreb with Karl Schroeder, powerful Swedish ace, defeating Josef Pallada, of the Yugoslav team, in a five-set match, 7-5, 1-6, 6-2, 6-8, 6-3. The other singles match was postponed.

8 Marks Fall As 14,000 See Drake Relays

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 30—Fourteen thousand spectators, sitting in the warmth of a bright sun, saw eight meet records go tumbling into oblivion in the finals of the twenty-ninth Drake Relay Carnival today.

The athletes, in bursts of dazzling speed, opened the meet with a record-breaking performance and continued it until the gun barked for the closing event.

Sun-tanned runners from Rice Institute, of Houston, Tex., divided the lion's share of honors with Wisconsin, each winning four events in the two days of competition, with the Texas youths setting records in three events and tying one.

Wisconsin captured the distance medley, 1,000-yard run, pole vault and two-mile events. Rice established records in the 120-yard high hurdles, the sprint medley and the 440-yard hurdles, and tied the mark for the 440-yard relay.

Cagle and Munski Score

Charles (Chuck) Fenske, of Wisconsin, champion miler of the Big Ten, and Harold Cagle, of Oklahoma Baptist, a member of the United States 1,600-meter Olympic relay team, and Johnny Munski, Missouri's great sophomore miler, also were in the spotlight of foot racing glory.

Fenske conquered the famed Archie San Romani, the pride of the Kansas State Teachers College, of Emporia, in the invitational 1,000-yard run in a record breaking performance. San Romani, who has defeated his Kansas rival, Glenn Cunningham, at least six times, wasn't even second.

Fenske, running third, took command on the far turn coming into the stretch and came on to shove his chest to the tape in 2:10.7, within a second of the world's record, and blotting out the Drake record of 2:11.2, hung up by Cunningham in 1936. Calvin Bell, of Rice, was second, six yards behind Fenske, with San Romani third, a yard behind Bell.

Cagle swept around two competitors in the stretch to set a record of 0:47.7 in winning the invitational quarter-mile. Munski, running as anchor man on Missouri's great four-mile relay, covered a sizzling mile in a duel with Gregory Rice, of Notre Dame, to enable the Missourians to triumph with a record-breaking performance of 17:34.7. Munski was timed in 4:15.3.

Freddie Wolcott, tall, rangy sprinter and hurdler from Rice, gave evidence that he will take rank as one of the greatest intercollegiate performers since Jesse Owens deserted the amatur ranks after his three 1936 victories.

Wolcott smashed the Drake record for the 120-yard high hurdles, the first event of the afternoon, leaping the barriers in 0:14.2 to blot out the previous mark made by the late George Saling, of the University of Iowa, in 1932. He did not compete in the 100-yard dash, in which he had qualified, in order to conserve his strength to run as anchor man on the winning combination that captured the 440-yard relay.

Jack Patterson, of Rice, cracked the sixteen-year-old record for the 440-yard hurdles, winning the event in 0:53.2 and eclipsing the old mark of 0:54.4, made by Ernst, of Michigan State, in 1922.

Other meet records were set in the mile university relay, which Iowa reeled off in 3:15.4, and in the two-mile college relay and the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay. The Kansas State Teachers College team, of Pittsburgh, set a new mark of 7:47.6 in winning the two-mile college event, while their rivals, the Kansas Teachers, of Emporia, won the hurdle relay with a record-breaking perfomance of 1:00.1.

Yale, Williams Defeat Holy Cross In Title Golf

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 7—Yale and Williams each defeated Holy Cross today in Eastern College Golf League matches, the Blue winning, 8 to 1, and the Sabrinas, 7 to 2.

The Holy Cross team's only point against Yale was scored by Willie Turnesa, one of the nation's leading amateurs, who defeated Meister, 2 up. Hurnesa was upset, however, in his second match of the day, losing to Schrieber, of Williams, 5 and 4.

Keio-Waseda To Meet In Pool Next Sunday

The 12th annual Keio-Waseda dual swimming meet will be held at the Meiji Shrine pool on Sunday, starting at 1 in the afternoon. Waseda is favored to make it 12 victories in a day. Considerable interest is attached to the meet as it will be the first of the season.

The fifth triangular meet between Rikkyo, Nihon and Meiji universities will be pulled off at the Meiji Shrine pool on June 12.

Japan's best swimmers are included in the five teams.

2 Records Fall As Navy Beats Duke Track Team

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 7—Two records were smashed today as the Naval Academy field and track team defeated Duke University, 73 to 53.

Don Kinzle, Duke, winner of the Penn relay high hurdlers championship, was the star of the meet. He took first in both hurdles and then leaped 22 feet 6¾ inches for first place in the broad jump. In the 120-yard high hurdles Kinzle was clocked in 14.4 seconds, breaking the Naval Academy track record of 14.7 seconds held since 1931 by Jack Keller, of Ohio State.

Parker Naudain, Duke 440 runner, set a new track record of 49.5 seconds. The old track mark of 50 seconds was made in 1910 by Midshipman Lee Carey. Carey, now a retired lieutenant commander living in Baltimore, was in the stands when his mark was shattered.

Yankees Rout Tigers, 12 To 8, For 5th In Row

By ARTHUR E. PATTERSON

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, May 8—There was a time in the distant dead-ball past when a nine-run lead was considered a margin of safety. Today you never can tell.

At the Stadium yesterday, for instance, the biggest crowd of the Yankee year, 41,070, might have been excused for sitting back and relaxing after their favorite fence-busters piled into Eldon Auker and Jake Wade for a 9-to-0 advantage behind Lefty Gomez's one-hit pitching in the first four innings, but in the end the Yankees were batting for the ball game which they eventually won, 12 to 8, from the Detroit Tigers.

Adhering most violently to their old championship custom of knocking the cockiness out of the first contender to put in an appearance at the Stadium, the McCarthy Maulers walloped the aforementioned duo and Woodrow Wilson Davis, Alton Benton and Cleutus (the Baron) Poffenberger for their biggest hit total of the year, seventeen, but if it hadn't been for the cool relief twirling of Johnny Murphy the ball game might have been won by the visitors.

Murphy Checks Rally

To bring the game to the most exciting of many thrilling moments, Murphy strode to the mound with two out in the eighth inning, the bases loaded, the score, 10 to 8, and Hank Greenberg making most warlike gestures with a rounded plank at the plate. It wasn't an inviting situation for an incoming pitcher, but it was old stuff to "Grandma." Breaking off five or six curves as a tune-up he motioned he was ready, bent another curve toward the plate and then walked off the mound as Joe DiMaggio settled comfortably under Greenberg's towering fly to center.

The back of their third courageous rally broken by that fly ball, the Tigers lapsed into a resigned state and even the mechanical man, Charlie Gehringer, committed an error on a sure-fire double-play ball stroked by Myril Hoag. This misplay, combined with two clean singles by DiMaggio and Gehrig, along with a puny infield safety by Billy Knickerbocker pushed two runs over the plate and made New York's fifth straight triumph safe for the Bronx democracy.

All this late-inning difficulty never would have arisen if Gomez was near 1937 stride. Perhaps he has been distracted in his athletic chores by the complications of his marital troubles now being aired in court. At any rate he was as hot as a firecracker in the early part of the game but as cold as a haddock when removed in the seventh.

Slipping into the fifth with his one-hitter he walked Cullenbine and allowed a single by Rogell and a triple by Fox. His removal might have come then but DiMaggio made a grand over-the-shoulder catch of Dixie Walker's bid for a triple, ending the inning and leaving Gomez astounded, the crowd hoarse and Walker drop-kicking his hat all the way to the outfield in disgust.

Gomez got by the sixth after walking Greenberg and York, thanks to a freak double play. Hoag to Knickerbocker to Gehrig, who tagged York near first, but in the seventh he was walloped out of there.

Cullenbine tripled and came home when Crosetti lost the throw-in. Rogell and Piet singled, Fox and Walker doubled and Gomez was flagged out. Bump Hadley got Greenberg to hoist a fly to left, but York's single pushed the fifth run of the inning over the plate. It was in relief of Hadley that Murphy entered the game in the eighth, but through no fault of the moundsman, Gehrig's muff on an easy grounder set up the lone uncarned run of the inning, and Hadley's wildness eventually filled all stations.

Even with such hurling and fielding ineptitude, however, it's a tough assignment to beat the Yankees the way they are cudgeling the ball these days. In the last two games they've made thirty-three hits.

A bunt by Rolfe and singles by Henrich, DiMaggio and Hoag, plus a base on balls, scored three against Auker in the first. Doubles by Rolfe and Henrich and Dickey's single drove the submarine specialist away in a two-run second and a base on balls, singles by Dickey and Gehrig and Hoag's double added four against Jake Wade in the fourth; DeMaggio's single and Gehrig's left-center triple scored the tenth run in the sixth.

Twenty-seven hits in the game and not a homer, believe it or not.

Grieve, the third umpire, was called away from duty by the death of his mother in Yonkers.

Mickey Cochrane wants to catch again, but Walter O. Briggs, the Detroit owner, says "No." . . . This was Gehrig's first three-hit game. . . . DiMaggio, making three more, now is hitting .500. . . . What a blow for spring training exponents! . . . Auker ought to tear off that No. 12 and go back to his old "13." . . . The second-base job belongs to Knickerbocker until he bogs down, according to Joe McCarthy. . . . Rolfe looked like an anti-aircraft marksman waiting for the pop files of Greenberg and York to come down out of the sun in the fourth. . . . All the Yankees, except the pitchers, made hits. . . . The mound must have felt strange to Hadley . . . before yesterday he had pitched just one inning this season.

Dean Will Be Idle At Least A Month

CHICAGO, May 4—Dizzy Dean, the $185,000 addition to the pitching staff of the Chicago Cubs, will be lost to the team for at least four weeks.

For that period he must not pitch. For at least two weeks he must not even try to throw a ball.

These were the orders of Dr. John W. Davis, the Cubs' physician, after an X-ray examination of the star's pitching arm which followed Dean's failure to complete the game against Philadelphia yesterday. Dean's trouble, according to Dr. Davis' diagnosis, is a lingering inflammation of the deltoid muscle at the point of insertion with the humerus—the bone of the upper arm.

After four weeks of rest Dr. Davis is hopeful that Dean will be able to resume his regular turn on the mound.

The Doctor's Statement

Said Dr. Davis:

"The inflammatory condition probably results from the sub-deltoid bursitis which bothered Dean last year. Rest during the Winter should have corrected the weakness, but he probably brought on the present condition by throwing too hard this year before his arm was in shape.

"The important muscles in the pitcher's arm seem to be absolutely normal and complete rest of the arm for two weeks and no hard throwing for four weeks should enable him to come back better than ever. There is no trace of injury to the bone and no trace of calcifications of the muscles."

"It will be just a case of Dean doing all his Spring training over again and it may be that he may have to be just a bit more cautious," concluded Dr. Davis.

Ol' Diz took his vacation instructions just as he takes almost everything else—good-naturedly.

"I'll still win twenty games," was his prediction after taking time out to figure that he will be a month getting back into condition.

In addition to being ordered to rest his salaried arm, Dean also was instructed to run every day and get into physical condition to enable him to pitch.

Grimm Makes Decision

Manager Charley Grimm was responsible for ordering the X-ray examination. Dizzy has persistently maintained to Grimm that his arm was not sore, but Grimm realized that Dean was not pitching naturally. After a forty-minute workout today Grimm suddenly decided to send Dean to the hospital.

"Now we know just where we stand," Grimm said. "The doctor said rest would cure the fellow. So he is going to rest. I'd rather have him in shape later in the season, when the going is tough, than to have him out there now, probably injuring himself worse as time goes on."

On the Cubs' bench, where the players had been waiting with tenseness for the physician's diagnosis, there was mingled regret and relief—regret that Dean will not resume playing for at least a month and relief that the possibility of permanent injury had at last been dispelled.

Left Foot Stance Is Subject Of Boxing Dispute

Observer

A correspondent quarrelled with a description of Jack Johnson, in a recent article, as standing with his left foot pointing straight at his opponent. That Johnson did adopt this stance is beyond dispute. I have seen him spar many times, but fortunately it is not a question of memory, for there are many photographs of the big black in existence. One in particular, to be found at p. 74 of the "Boxing" volume of the Lonsdale Library, shows the straight left foot very clearly. But what is not generally recognized in these days is that until the beginning of the present century no boxer of any pretensions ever stood otherwise. Photographs of Peter Jackson, Corbett and Mace, to name the men who by common consent are ranked as the most scientific boxers of modern days, show this, and the hitters, such as Fitzsimmons and Sullivan, adopted the same stance. In the old prize ring the straight left foot was universal.

The Turning Point

Burns and Dempsey were the first of the World Champions to stand with the left foot well turned across, and it is significant that Dempsey was a hooker and Burns made little use of the straight left. The straight left foot was very important as a help to the straight delivery of the left lead, the use of which has steadily diminished in professional boxing. It is not essential to a straight hit, for Carpentier, whose left foot was even more across than Dempsey's could use a beautiful straight left when he liked. But Carpentier's were so strong that he was a law unto himself in the things he did. Tommy Farr is the first boxer of the front rank for many years to make much use of the straight left, and his left foot, though not straight, is more so than that of the majority of boxers. So far as I have seen, no modern text book or teacher actually advocates turning the left foot across, but at the present time there is scarcely a professional to be found who does not stand with his left foot across. This is probably due to the increased use of hooks and swings, which, as anyone can try for himself on a punching bag or ball, are more readily delivered with the left foot across than with it straight.

Joe Louis, the champion, stands very much sideways, with his left foot well across and it was this stance of his which caused Jack Johnson to prophesy disaster before, and not after, the meeting between Louis and Schmeling. Writing in an American magazine, "The Ring," a month or two before the contest, Johnson pointed out that the sideways stance of Louis left him open to Schmeling's right.

Another point in which there has been a great change during this generation is one of tactics. In the Badminton Library quoted above, it is laid down, "Never, if you can avoid it, work round to your left," and in pre-war days this rule was pretty generally observed. The idea was to avoid the opponent's right. Now, however, in the great majority of contests, the boxers work round to the left. It is possible this is due to the modern position of the left foot, which makes it a little awkward to move to the right as compared with the left. That it is the modern practice to work to the left can be seen by anyone who watches professional contests.

Judges And Referee

A matter which has been much discussed is whether we ought, in this country, to fall in with the practice of the rest of the world, and have two judges in addition to the referee. Curiously enough in competitions as opposed to individual contests, the N.S.C. rules provide for two judges as well as a referee. We have in professional contests, become so accustomed to the referee alone that we do not realize we are unique in adopting this method. The frequency with which the referee's decision has, after recent contests, been booed by a section of the crowd has brought the question to the front. I do not think this point should have influence, for the booing is mostly from disappointed gamblers and from those who can only see one man in the ring. There would be even more dissatisfaction expressed were it to become known, as it probably would be, that the judges had disgreed and the referee had given his casting vote. But the referee often has so much to do in controlling the men that there is much to be said for having judges to help him. Moreover, although the referee sees more than any spectator, there are many things which happen on his blind side.

What is, somewhat misleadingly, called the "No foul" rule was discussed at the recent International Boxing Conference and it was decided to leave the matter to each country to settle so far as contests within the jurisdiction of each were concerned. It has not been proposed to do away with the rule against fouls, but only to alter the penalty, a point on which there is room for discussion. The contest between Petersen and Doyle, in which the Irishman was warned for low punches time after time before he was at last disqualified, is an example of the weakness of our present rule. Referees are loth to stop a contest and disqualify an offender, and as a result a good many low punches are ignored unless a man is obviously and badly hurt.

Keio, Waseda To Clash In 56th, 57th Games On Saturday, Sunday

Keio and Waseda are all set for their series—the most talked about baseball event in Japan—Saturday and Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Especial interest is attached to the games inasmuch as Waseda has a chance to win the championship of the spring season of the Tokyo Six University league if it takes both games from Keio. A split and it would mean a tie between Waseda and Meiji and a playoff necessary for the championship.

Keio, irrespective of its standings, is always strong against Waseda, and it will be not be too much of a surprise if it makes it two straight over Waseda. Keio did it in the Fall last year by winning 3 to 1 and 6 to 5.

The games will be the 56th and 57th clashes between the two institutions. To date, Waseda has won 29 games as against 25 by Keio. One game ended in a tie.

Harvard Sets Compton Cup Crew Record

By STANLEY WOODWARD

PRINCETON, May 1—Harvard's big varsity boat crew broke the record for the new Lake Carnegie mile and three-quarters course, successfully defended the Compton Cup and walloped Syracuse, Princeton and Massachusetts Tech before the spring house-party crowd this afternoon.

Harvard rowed the course in 9:04.2. Syracuse, which offered the only serious opposition, finished a length and a half behind in 9:09.4. Princeton, four and a half lengths off the pace, was timed in 9:18.6, while Tech, a hopeless last, struggled over the finish line at 9:37.6.

Duce to the fact that there is no way of following a race on Lake Carnegie except in one of the two official launches which are habitually jammed to the gunwales with the theoretical immortals of rowing, reporters and spectators who occupied the canvas-inclosed patch of shore at the finish had to take early developments on faith.

Syracuse Sets Early Pace

It was rumored that Syracuse took the lead at the outset and maintained it insignificantly to the mile mark, where the metronomic Harvard crew upped the power a little and drew ahead. When the crews came into view of the press box Harvard had matters well in hand, and when Jim Chase, veteran stroke, started to reach for the high thirties a third of a mile from home the Crimson stern opened water on the game of deluded swingers of Syracuse hemlock.

It is alleged that the race was between Harvard and Syracuse from the very start. To keep the paying guests in the canvas fortress informed the Princeton Athletic Association put in a loud speaker system with telephone connections every quarter mile.

The announcers soon forgot about Princeton and Tech and concentrated on the Harvard-Syracuse duel which it is reported, was keen until the big and long-geared Crimson operatives rowed out the Orange oarsmen in the first mile.

The time will stand as a record for the boathouse-to-dam course, which has been rowed since 1935. Harvard broke its own record, established last year when it won the same race in 9:07. Today's performance was rated as outstanding by those cognoscenti who were assembled on the lake shore, for the breeze, a huffy, variable agent, helped very little and the drift of water over the dam at the upper end was hardly enough to count.

It was the consensus after the race that Navy and Cornell, crews which already have established their class on Eastern waterways, will have a terrible time dealing with this latest product of Washington's Tom Bolles.

Harvard rowed just as it rowed last year, adopting the Washington leg-and-arm stroke to men of unusual height. The crew seemed to row almost without back-swing and yet preserve an admirable length in the water. It was clearing puddles at thirty-eight when it went over the finish line.

The first mile of the course was ideal for efficient rowing. The water was flat as a mirror. A quarter of a mile from the finish, at Harry's Brook, a cross wind struck the crews, but Harvard went through it without losing keel or direction.

M. I. T. Freshmen Win

The Tech freshmen negotiated a mild surprise by beating the Tigers a length at a mile and three-quarters in the opening race. Princeton hung close to the Engineers over the whole course but Tech demonstrated a marked superiority by rowing four to five strokes slower. In the early going they had some bad steering, but once they were straightened away the oarsmen did a nice piece of rowing a fickle cross-breeze. Tech's time was 9:32 1-5, Princeton, 9:35 1-5.

The Harvard junior varsity rowed well within itself in defeating Syracuse by a length and a quarter, and Princeton and Tech by four and five lengths, respectively. While the other competitors were slugging away for the lead in the early going, Harvard rowed a steady and economical thirty-two. Ultimately their rivals fell back as the Crimson came on.

Syracuse, however, put up a good fight. Rowing two to three beats higher over the course, the Orange oarsmen went up to forty at the finish, punishing themselves in a desperate bid for victory. Harvard moved smoothly up to thirty-six, however, increasing its lead by half a length in the last hundred yards. Harvard's time was 9:28.4, as against 9:33 for Syracuse.

Princeton 150-Pounders Win

Princeton scored its only victory in the 150-pound duel with Massachusetts Tech, rowing up in the clouds over the whole course and still having something left for a sprint at the finish, when M. I. T., doing its best to challenge, "upped" its own logy beat. The Tiger's time was 7:10; Tech's 7:14.4.

Schmeling In U.S. To Sign Contract Against Louis

NEW YORK, May 10—With the equivalent of four dollars in American money in his pockets, Max Schmeling arrived from Germany aboard the Bremen of the North German Lloyd Line yesterday says the N.Y. Times.

The Teuton boxer, who aspires to be the first heavyweight ever to regain the championship of his division, was accompanied by his trainer, Max Machon, and was met at the pier by his manager, Joe Jacobs, and by Mike Jacobs, who will stage the bout between Schmeling and Joe Louis at the Yankee Stadium on June 22.

Confident that his mission will be a successful one this time, Schmeling presented a picture of ease and grace as he sauntered down the gangplank at the completion of his nineteenth westward crossing of the Atlantic. Eight times since he defeated Louis here in 1936 has Schmeling left his native Germany to seek an opportunity to fight the holder of the world crown, and on seven of these occasions his hopes of getting the champion into the ring were blasted.

No Snags Appear Now

Most of the German's trips here were for the purpose of inducing James J. Braddock to fight him, but he never could persuade the latter's manager to see things his way. There appears nothing on the horizon, however, to prevent his meeting Louis, and, to Schmeling, meeting Louis is akin to beating him again.

When asked how he would subsist from now until June on his $4 bankroll, Max laughed and answered: "I guess I can always call on Uncle Mike (Jacobs). He's not exactly what you would call a poor man."

On leaving the Bremen Schmeling entertained a group of friends in his suite at the Essex House, and there he discoursed readily on his prospects of once more ascending to the top of the pugilistic heap.

The German is firm, almost dogmatic, in his belief that the defeat he once handed Louis will be the greatest factor in his turning back the Detroit Negro once more. "Louis may not even know it himself," Schmeling explained, "but he'll always be afraid of me, down deep inside. He's the kind who will always hold a man who has beaten him in some sort of superstitious fear."

Winter Bouts Cited

Schmeling went on to ridicule the suggestion that the two-year lapse between his meetings with Louis will have any effect on him. "I never felt stronger in my life," he said, most deliberately. "I've always kept in the best of condition, and my fights this past Winter have been just the thing to keep me sharp and in fighting trim."

Since last January Schmeling has fought Harry Thomas, whom he stopped in eight rounds; Ben Foord, from whom he won a decision in twelve, and Steve Dudas, whom he knocked out in five.

"Um 32. I'll be 33 in September and I must truthfully say that I consider myself a better fighter now than I've ever been." And his appearance gave authority to the statement. Trim and agile, the German, who said he weighed 198 pounds, seemed to carry not an ounce of spare flesh on him. So close to top form is he at present that he said he plans to shed only three pounds for his encounter with the champion.

Schmeling will remain in New York until Saturday, when he will go to Speculator, N. Y., to set up his training camp. Promoter Jacobs tried to prevail on him to select a site nearer this city, but the fighter insisted on Speculator to enable Bob Osborne, proprietor of the upstate site, to recover some of the losses he suffered when Schmeling trained there last year for his "phantom fight" with Braddock.

Wants to Even Score

Commenting on his plans, Max declared emphatically he does not intend to retire if he beats Louis. "I would like very much to meet Max Baer in September, even if I should lose to Louis. Baer beat me in 1933, and I should like to even matters with him."

The ex-champion added he was not at all surprised at Baer's victory over Tommy Farr, the Welshman to whom Schmeling once referred as "only a 200-pound man." When asked if Louis's performance in stopping Harry Thomas in five rounds as against his eight caused him any concern, Schmeling replied, "Of course not! I softened Thomas up, and so did Jimmy Adamick. When I fought Harry he was an unknown quantity and I was careful. Louis, who saw Thomas fight me, knew just what he had to do to win early."

Schmeling will visit the New York States Athletic Commission tomorrow, when he and Louis will sign official contracts. Louis will arrive in New York tomorrow from Stevensville, Mich.

Seven N.C.A.A. Title Holders Are To Defend

Christian Science Monitor

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May—Seven national champions vs. more than 200 of the nation's most brilliant collegiate track and field stars for some of the highest honors in American track—that's the prospect for the coming N. C. A. A. championships at the University of Minnesota's Memorial Stadium, June 17 and 18.

With the big sectional Relays at Texas, Kansas, Drake and Pennsylvania run off and with many conference meets scheduled to be held shortly, the prospective field for the big N. C. A. A. classic begins to take shape as one of the best ever to be assembled.

A check of the defending titleholders who are expected to be on hand reveals the following roster: Ben Johnson of Columbia in the 220-yard dash; John Woodruff of the University of Pittsburgh in the half-mile; Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin in the mile; Earl Vickery of Southern California in the low hurdles; Dave Albritton, Ohio State's world's champion, in the high jump; Greg Rice of Notre Dame in the two-mile, and Pete Zagar of Stanford in the discus.

Against this array of champions of collegiate track will be pitted a host of challengers, many of them sectional titleholders, whose performances to date forecast new national records if the heads that wear the crowns are to rest easy for another season. In addition, seven other championships have been vacated since last season and will be filled at Minneapolis.

All along the line, winning times of last year's meet have been shattered in dual and relay competition. Johnson won the 220 in 21.3s. last year, but he's been known to do 21 seconds flat and Stan Riserman of Stanford has a best time of 21.2s. Packard breasted the tape in 21 seconds even last season and may do it again.

Woodruff's time of 1m. 50.3s. set a new N. C. A. A. record at Berkeley, Calif., last year, but such steppers as Edson Burrows of Stanford, Calvin (Breezy) Bell of Rice, Mel Trutt of Indiana and Morse of Duke are going to make the Pitt flash step to retain his laurels.

The mile is expected to attract one of the greatest fields in the history of the meet, but the defending champion is one of the nation's best. Fenske's winning time of 4m. 13.9s., last year, may not be good enough at Minneapolis against such stars as Louis Zamperini, the Southern California ace; Jim Smith of Indiana, John Munuski of Missouri, or a half-dozen others you could name.

Another ditsance classic can be expected in the two-mile, with Notre Dame's Greg Rice defending his laurels against Tommy Deckard of Indiana, Bill Feiler of Drake, Stan Sadaj of California or Walter Mehl of Wisconsin, Zamperini, Southern California, should be run this event, to name a few.

Then in the high hurdles, Vickery of Southern California may be forced to better his 23.3s. mark of 1937 against the national field, including Tom Berkeley of U. C. L. A. who has equalled 23.3s.; Bob Lemen of Purdue, or Vern Sumner of Kansas State Teachers, who finished third last year.

A new world's record is not outside the realm of possibility when Dave Albritton, co-holder of the present world's mark, defends his crown in the high jump. Certainly, the N. C. A. A. record of 6ft. 7¼in. will be endangered, for Albritton has done close to 6ft. 10in.; Ed Burke, Marquette's IC4A champion, has done 6ft. 9¼in., and Gil Gruder of Colorado has bettered 6ft. 8in.

Similarly, Pete Zagar's winning toss of 156ft. 3in. with the javelin is likely to be bettered. Woodrow Wilson Strode of U. C. L. A. is a likely contender, having hurled the platter 168 feet.

U.S. Aviator Claims New Speed Mark In Closed Course Flying

Domei-Tsushin

OAKLAND, May 31—Earl Oatman, a Los Angeles flier, today claimed the world record for closed course speed flying after covering 18 laps over a marked course of 150 miles with an average speed of 265.539 miles per hour in the Pacific International Air Race. The airman flew a Marcoux Bromberg craft.

The previous record, established by a French aviator in 1936, was 264 miles an hour.

Bradman Arrives In Old England With Cricket Team

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK, May—If you chance to be under the impression that baseball has been getting quite a play lately in the papers and in the polite subway conversations, you just should be in England now that the Australians are there.

Or, rather, now that Don Bradman is there with the Australian "test" cricket team, because Don is so much more cricket player than anyone else that they don't bother to figure out who is second or third. Wherever cricket is played, his name is breathed reverently, like a Brooklyn fan recalling the fielding feats of Babe Herman.

Every fourth year Bradman leads the Australians on a long trip to England in quest of the "ashes" emblematic of world cricket supremacy, and it is a golden summer for England. Always the Australians win, because they have Bradman, but the English fans get to sit long hours and watch Bradman bat, and that's about all a cricket fan asks of this world.

From now until September Don's feats with his big paddle-shaped bat will occupy more front-page space in the newspapers of the British Isles than any other subject, barring a general European war. The placards worn by the newsboys will shout day after day in foot-high letters such mystic symbols as "Don's Century," "Don 204, not out," or on rare occasions, "Bradman Bowled for a Duck."

The latter, of course, represents a very unusual occurrence, about as rare for the great Don as a no-hit, no-run game in baseball, it means, tragically, that he didn't make any runs at all, and that the bowler who did it will be famous enough for the next few weeks to sign paid testimonials.

Though it undoubtedly would bore the average American to have to watch Bradman bat for five or six hours—as he frequently does—he just as unquestionaby is, and has been for the last decade, one of the world's greatest athletes. For that period, in fact, he has dominated his sport more completely than any man who comes to mind, unless it is Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., in polo.

Has Medwick Wrists

Bradman is a clean-cut, rather handsome fellow of only medium height and with no bulk to speak of, but he has arms and wrists like Ducky Medwick and his eyes are marvelously keen.

It is no cinch to clout a cricket ball when it is bowled by a man who knows his business. The bowler takes a run of 20 or 30 yards, and when a speed bowler turns the hard, red-colored pellet loose it has plenty of zip. Tests, in fact, have tended to prove that only the fastest baseball pitchers can put on as much smoke.

Furthermore, the cricket ball hits the turf just short of or about even with the batsman and has to be hit quick. A good bowler can make it take some very silly bounds, and can make you feel equally silly when you try to smite it. Yet Bradman stands up there hour after hour, wearing out relays of bowlers, and when he finally misses one it's safe to know that Australia have won, as is the correct cricket grammar.

DiMaggio Drives His First Homer But Yankees Lose

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON, May 1—Joe DiMaggio deserted his hospital cot today and parked his first homer of the year in the distant left-field bleachers. But the blow was struck in a lost cause.

Before the largest crowd of the season here, an overflow gathering of 31,000, the Yanks went down to defeat by the Senators, 4 to 3, and skidded right back to the fifty-fifty mark that has been the world champions' bugaboo since the flag dropped on the current race.

DiMaggio lost no time getting back into action. He lost no time, either, swinging back into his hitting stride, for in addition to his round-tripper the Coast fly-hawk scratched a single that figured in another Yankee run. Indeed, it seemed for a time that the matchless Joe would provide the impetus to catapult the Yankees into second place behind the Indians.

Hospital List Crows

But the pitching failed, the hitting slumped and the defense cracked wide open like a leaky old derelict taking its last plunge. Adding to the woes of the champions is a hospital list that swelled today to ominous proportions.

DiMaggio, fortunately, escaped with nothing but a head bruise as a reminder of his collision with Joe Gordon yesterday. Gordon, who also left Garfield Hospital when X-rays showed no serious damage, is on the sideline nursing a painful right shoulder. The outfield emergency over, George Selkirk returned to the task of nursing a painful right wrist, and today Red Rolfe was forced to leave the game with a charley horse in the left leg. His place was taken by Babe Dahlgren, who ran for Red after he walked in the eighth.

These developments were enough to depress the Yanks. They actually were handcuffed before the fork-hand flinging of the 34-year-old Elon Hogsett, who let them down with five hits, three of them for extra bases; gave three walks, fanned five and kept the champions from driving the ball out of the infield more than nine times, even counting hits.

Victors Cluster Safeties

Not so fortunate was Lefty Vernon Gomez as he sought his second victory in his fourth time out and his first conquest of Bucky Harris's clan. He yielded only eight hits, but he made the mistake of letting the Senators cluster five through the fourth and fifth innings. A couple of stolen bases over this span added to the trouble and an errant toss by the usually cool Bill Dickey let in the winning run.

The Yanks got off in front with a run in the first. Rolfe walked, DiMaggio scratched a single and was forced by Lou Gehrig, and Dickey scored Rolfe with a single. When the Senators gained the lead with two runs in the fourth on Buddy Lewis's single, his stolen base, Jonathan Stone's lusty triple past Myril Hoag, and a scratch single by Cecil Travis, the McCarthymen came right back in the fifth to knot the count on Jake Powell's double and a triple by Bill Knickerbocker.

The deadlock was of short duration. In their half, the Senators opened with Rick Ferrell's scratch single. After Hogsett popped out trying to sacrifice, Mel Almada scored Ferrell with a double, and promptly set off on a steal of third as Lewis faked a bunt. The bunt feint pulled Rolfe in making it impossible for him to scurry back to third in time to get Dickey's throw, made in an attempt to head off Almada. The toss went into left field and Almada kept right on going with what proved the winning run.

DiMaggio's homer arrived starting the sixth, a mighty blow in the left field bleachers, but it was the Yankees' last gesture, and by that time the Senators had enough.

Germany Leads Japan, 2 To 0 In Tennis Play

Domei-Tsushin

BERLIN, May 31—Victories by both Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa gave Germany a two-to-nothing lead over Japan in an exhibition tennis series inaugurated along Davis Cup lines at the Rot-Weiss Club here this afternoon. A doubles match will be played tomorrow and two more singles on Thursday.

Yasumine Kuramitsu, newcomer to the Japanese Davis Cup team, lost to Metaxa in the opening encounter, but only after a long five-set struggle in the first part of which the German seemed headed for defeat. Henkel chalked up the second German victory by defeating Fumiteru Nakano in straight sets.

The scores were: Metaxa-Kuramitsu, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4; Henkel-Nakano, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Displaying brilliant court coverage and a powerful backhand and baseline game, Kuramitsu profited from Metaxa's nervousness to run up a two-set lead. The German recovered in the third set, however, and was leading 4-2 when rain temporarily interrupted play.

Continuing his rally after play was resumed, Metaxa captured the set at 6-4 and went on to take the next two for a match victory.

In the second encounter of the day, Nakano proved unable to handle Henkel's powerful service and smashing drives.

Yugoslavia Enters Semifinals

Domei-Tsushin

ZAGREB, May 31—Sweeping to a decisive four-to-one victory over Sweden, Yugoslavia today entered the semifinals of the European Zone Davis Cup tourney to join France, Germany and Belgium, who have already won their quarterfinal matches.

Victories in both concluding singles matches gave the powerful Yugoslav team a wide margin of supremacy after play resumed today with Sweden trailing at 2-1.

Suffering from an injured foot, Karl Schroeder, of Sweden, virtually gave his match to Ferenc Puncec, while Josef Pallada defeated Rohlsson 7-5, 7-5, 6-1.

Semifinal ties are: France vs. Germany and Yugoslavia vs. Belgium.

On July 24, 1937, Ruth Kahl, 18, of Santa Cruz, swam the almost unbelievable distance of 303 feet under water during a performance of the plunge water carnival at the Santa Cruz Beach. Inasmuch as the best previous performance known to have been made by a woman was 165 feet, one can realize the significance of Miss Kahl's aquatic feet—almost doubling that record. She was under water for 2 minutes 47 seconds, to the amazement of the 1,500 spectators.

Litfin Is Victor Over Escobar In 10 Rounds

By JOSEPH C. NICHOLS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 5—Nat Litfin, clever featherweight from the Bronx, scored an upset victory over Sixto Escobar, bantamweight champion of the world, in the feature bout of ten rounds at the New York Hippodrome last night.

Litfin waged a crafty battle to win convincingly from the Puerto Rican titleholder, whose championship was not at stake. Referee Eddie Josephs and Judge Joe Brennan voted in favor of Litfin, while Judge Frankie Conifrey, old-time lightweight, cast his ballot for Escobar.

Opinion among the boxing writers at the ringside was heavily in favor of the Bronx fighter, who, weighing 122 pounds, had no chance to lift Escobar's title, the division being 117. Escobar also scaled 122.

It was by deft use of a left hand to the head that Litfin managed to gain the award. He kept the fighting at long range as much as he could and stabbed away incessantly with his port-side weapon.

Escobar, after a careful start, did most of the leading, but he had trouble catching his elusive foe who, while dancing backward, trained a steady fire on the head of his approaching opponent. Escobar did his best work at close range, and it was with a body bombardment that he took the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds.

Litfin showed great respect for Escobar's right hand when the fight started, and gave the Puerto Rican little chance to get set for the punch.

As the battle passed the midway mark, however, Litfin showed a disposition on occasions to trade with the champion, and actually outfought the harder hitting Escobar.

A crowd of 2,800 persons, of whom 2,639 paid $5,614, witnessed the bout.

Allie Stolz, Newark featherweight, defeated Georgie Karakella of Brooklyn in the semi-final six-rounder. The battle was fiercely waged, with Karkella giving a good account of himself after having been floored in the first round. The weights were 127 for Stolz and 126½ for Karkella.

Matt Perfetti, undefeated battler from Amsterdam, N. Y., added another triumph to his string by defeating Cyril Josephs, Harlem featherweight, in a spirited six-round fray. They slugged away at each other all through the bout, with Perfetti's sharper punching earning him the award. The weights were 128 for Perfetti and 126 for Josephs.

Vernon Cormier, Worcester lightweight, defeated Augie Gonzales of Harlem in a close six-rounder. The verdict was unpopular with the spectators and they shouted their disapproval. Cormier weighed 129½ and Gonzales 133½.

Bill Poland, 187½, Bronx, stopped Danny Ladner, 186, East Side, in 2:34 of the first round of a scheduled four. In another four-rounder, Yosoho Makamura, 122½, Japan, outpointed Cruz Roque, 122, Puerto Rico.

Cambridge Ruggers Allowed Only 6 Points In Tour In America; Amassed 216

Times, London

LONDON, May 4—The Cambridge Rugby team came back from their tour in America with what, at first sight, was an impressive playing record. In their six matches, played in rain, fog, and snow, they amassed 216 points and gave away only six, in the shape of two penalty goals.

Such a record argues one of two things—either superlative skill and resource by the touring team or very moderate opposition. As was the case in 1934, when the Cambridge team paid its first official visit to America, the object of the tour was in no way competitive, but rather educational; the Cambridge mission was to try, by actual play, to teach the ever-growing number of Rugby players in the Eastern States some of the finer points of the game and to leave behind a good example which could be copied. Therefore it may be seen that the number of points scored during the tour was not significant, but rather the manner in which those points were scored.

Narrow Grounds

Apart from the weather Cambridge's greatest enemy was the narrowness of the grounds, most of which are constructed for America Football, which demands a width of very little over 50 yards. There was also another and more dangerous embarrassment—namely, the blocking and interference practiced by the American teams. Blocking and interference, which amount to obstruction, are two phases of attack and defense in American Football which demand more attention from coaches and players than almost anything else in the game; it is therefore natural that a player coming straight from American Football to Rugby should fall back upon such tactics until he learns, from force of habit, that they are not part of the Rugby game. There was never any "intentional" obstruction, but it proved an obstacle to the Cambridge backs. Until such tactics can be completely eliminated it will be impossible to teach teams in the Eastern Rugby Union of the United States anything about constructive defense.

At the moment their tendency is to concentrate solely on the man with the ball, or, to be strictly accurate, on the area immediately round the man with the ball. Thus their knowledge of covering work behind the three-quarter line, or of corner-flagging, is very sketchy; this meant that when a Cambridge player had penetrated the first line of defense he had, to all intents and purposes, scored a try, particularly as the positioning of the fullbacks was generally a matter of some conjecture. Against this lack of defensive "tactics" must be set the magnificent tackling of the American players when they managed to come to grips with the Cambridge attack. It stands to reason that if the majority of the defense concentrate on an area in the center of which may be found the ball-carrier—to adopt an expression from the American game—there will be occasions when the defense wins; on such occasions it was privilege of the Cambridge players to be tackled as hard and with just as much purpose as is consistent with the policy of shock tactics. Those Cambridge players who opposed Princeton will not easily forget the consistency and strength of the tackling which they met that day. Summing up, one may say that given some idea of tactics the defense of the American teams would constitute a danger to all but the very first attacks. At the moment their tacklers thrive on straight runners, but are less at home against the side-stepper, and scorn any covering work.

A Lack of Leadership

It is less easy to speak with certainty about their attack since the teams which played against Cambridge saw practically nothing of the ball. On the rare occasions on which they hooked it from a tight or loose scrum, the backs were far too prone to give and take their passes standing still, and to run as individuals with little or no thought for their colleagues. It was seldom therefore that they developed any sort of combined attack, and when all else failed the ball was invariably kicked, or fly-hacked, hard up the ground with nothing behind the kick save hope. In a word, they lacked football sense. The fault lies possibly with the forwards, who in the regular inter-club games tend to take matters into their own hands and generally heel slowly with the inevitable results. In other phases of the game the forwards showed more promise than the rest of the team; their loose rushing, although a little wild, had considerable drive about it, their close marking was generally safe, and in the lines-out they held their own comfortably with the Campbridge forwards. Their real want is competent leadership and such leadership can only be given by a real footballer; that, in its turn, demands coaching and example, such as only further touring teams can supply.

It was apparent that since 1934 the standard of play in the East had not noticeably improved, though more people were actually playing Rugby, and the organization had been take over by an enthusiastic and thoroughly competent Rugby Union. This body, the Eastern Rugby Union of the United States, includes 11 clubs, at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and around New York, and is responsible for the entire organization of the game. But, as has been hinted, while it may carry through the routine duties efficiently, it cannot, without help, produce mature Rugby players. This is the responsibility of the parent Union to which new and struggling clubs in this country so often turn. The cry, then, is for more touring sides, and for the first one to go at the next available opportunity; when, and if, another side does go out it will find that most of its work will lie not in playing a series of matches and scoring quantities of points, but in coaching the many enthusiastic and promising players in the fundamentals of the game. After that tactics can be discussed, and familiarity and correct interpretation of the laws must be sought. Then, and not till then, will the results of Rugby teams, touring in America become significant.

Yamagishi To Meet Matsumoto For Title In Kanto Net Tourney

Jiro Yamagishi of Keio University, Japan's No. 1 tennis player, entered the semifinals of the singles of the Kanto students championships Thursday afternoon at the Waseda courts by disposing of Kokichi Kagitomi of Keio in three straight sets, 6-2, 6-1 and 6-3.

Medwick Lashes Triple To Help Cardinals Win

By ROSCOE McGOWEN

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, May 9—Today's Cardinal-Dodger affair resembled nothing so much as a battle between two wild-swinging boxers, with the outcome depending upon which one was able to survive the many knockdowns.

Burleigh Grimes's battlers finally took a count of nine in the eighth when the greatest knockout artist in the National League, Jersey Joe Medwick, rifled a triple down the third base line to drive in two runs and give the Cardinals the decision, 9-7.

As an indication of the sort of game the ladies' day crowd of 3,543 saw, Curt Davis pitched to only two men, allowed a single by Johnny Hudson that scored two to tie the count in the upper half of the eighth—and still became the winning pitcher.

Blow Comes With Two Out

Buck Marrow faced six men in the same inning and Medwick's three-bagger after two were out made him the losing hurler. Jimmy Brown and Enos Slaughter were on base via a pair of singles when Medwick smashed the ball to left.

Prior to that the game was tied up three times. Bill McGee started for Manager Frank Frisch and lasted until he had two out in the eighth. He was charged with thirteen hits and all seven Brooklyn runs.

Freddy Fitzsimmons stuck to his pitching task until the end of the seventh, in which frame a home run by Don Gutteridge with one on put the Red Birds 2 up. Freddy was responsible for a dozen hits and seven runs.

In addition to his game-winning triple, Medwick banged a double and a pair of singles in five trips to the plate, while Gutteridge, who got on base four times, added a single and double to his collection. He was safe the first time on Leo Durocher's error, a costly one, too, as it gave the Cards two unearned runs in the second.

Three-Bagger by Koy

Ernie Koy put the Dodgers out ahead in the first when he followed singles by Goody Rosen, Hudson and Buddy Hassett with a roaring triple to right center.

A double by Fitz and Rosen's single sent the Dodgers in front again in the fourth but the Cards met that bid and doubled it in their half to get a 4-5 lead. Not until the seventh did Brooklyn come even again and an error by Brown helped them then. Jimmy dropping Mickey Owen's throw that should have caught Rosen stealing.

Rosen, incidentally, enjoyed a perfect day at bat with a double, three singles and a walk, scoring twice and driving in one run.

Brown Out on Single

Koy's alertness and good throwing saved at least one run in the third. He took Brown's pop fly single on a short hop and, when Jimmy rounded first, lined the ball to Hassett to pick off the runner.

In the fourth Ernie came close to nailing Gutteridge When Don rounded second on McGee's single.

Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinal organization, said today there would be no trade with Brooklyn on this trip. "If there is a deal later," he added, "it will be one of proportions." He didn't want to discuss Van Lingle Mungo, but said he was always in the market for a good pitcher—"and Mungo is a good pitcher."

Singing Sam Breadon, president of the club, referring to reports that Medwick would be in a Cardinal-Dodger deal, said: "Wouldn't we be crazy to let Medwick go for anybody! And we're not crazy."

20-1 Shot Wins English Derby; Pasch Is Third

Domei Tsushin

EPSOM DOWNS, June 1—Romping home a full four lengths ahead of his nearest rival, Bois Roussel, a 20-to-1 shot, today won Britain's great turf classic, the Derby, over a field of 22 horses.

Conceded little chance of victory, the winner turned the tables by streaking across the finish well in front of Scottish Union, while the favorite, H. E. Morriss' Pasch, came in third by two lengths. Bois Roussel was ridden by Elliot.

Betting odds on Scottish Union and Pasch were 8-to-1 and 9-to-4 respectively.

SEATTLE, June 1—Holding a ticket on Bois Roussel, winner of the English Derby, an unidentified person in the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha office here was today believed to be the recipient of a £30,000 first prize in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

The prize-winning ticket was held under the fictitious name of "Black Sheep," gave his address as 1024 Exchange Building. Since this is the office of the Mitsui Bussan's Seattle branch, the winner is believed to be an employe of the company though neither the Japanese nor American officials would reveal his identity.

Red Sox Homers Rout Indians, 15-3

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 9—The Red Sox on a combination of eleven hits and twelve bases on balls, rode to their second straight victory over the Indians today, this time by a score of 15 to 3. The defeat dropped Cleveland into a second-place tie with the Yankees, who were idle.

Jimmy Foxx, with two homers, and Manager Joe Cronin, with one, led the Boston assault on three pitchers. By the time Foxx clouted his four-baggers, in the sixth and seventh innings, Boston already had enough runs to win.

The Sox drove Dennis Galehouse from the mound in the first, when two walks, a single, wild pitch and Cronin's homer brought in four tallies. Rookie Bill Zuber who followed Galehouse, gave up a run in the fourth on two walks and Doc Cramer's double and finally way yanked after filling the bases on passes with none out in the fifth.

Lefty Al Milnar got out of that hole with only one run scored, but Foxx's first homer, with two on, was the big blow in the six-run sixth inning, and his second accounted for two of the three runs the Sox got off Milnar in the seventh.

Young Jim Bagby Jr., although having trouble with his control, shut out the Indians until the seventh and went on to win his second decision of the season. The rookie right-hander turned back the Yanks on opening day. He issued seven walks today but held the Indians to six hits, five in the last three innings.

Cheaper Prices Sought For General Admission To 1940 Olympic Games

So that the masses may be able to take in the events of the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940, indications are that Tokyo Municipality will request the Olympic Organizing Committee to make a reduction in the general admission tickets.

The movement was started at a meeting of the Municipality on traffic facilities in connection with the 1940 Games on Thursday.

Based on the past Olympic Games, the admission for third class tickets would be from 2 yen to 2.50 yen, and it is believed too high for the purses of students and the general masses.

The Municipality will propose that the seating accommodations, now projected for 100,000 at the main Olympic stadium to be built at Komazawa, be altered to provide for 110,000 persons.

Kansai Gridders Taking On Keio In Tokyo Today

(Special to The Japan Times)

KOBE, June 2—The Kansai University gridiron stalwarts who tasted victory for the first time since the innovation of American Football four years ago when they stampeded over the over-confident Hosei gridders by an overwhelming score of 55 to 8 two weeks ago at the Koshien ground, are to meet the Keio eleven in their third post-season game on June 3, at the Keio ground in Mita, Tokyo.

After celebrating two days of their first win, the Kansai team have since been going through intensive drills daily despite the hot weather, and are expected to be in top shape for this contest.

Last year the Keio eleven took the local gridders into camp by a score of 21 to 7, however, the Kandaites are fairly confident that they will not go down to a defeat as easily as in the past, and if any, the tide may turn in favor of the local team this year for the first time.

The Kansai team will be lead by Captain Hamamoto, who holds the guard berth, and in the backfield Tsuboi and Yamauchi will lead the attack. Tsuboi is the only triple-threat man on the team, while Yamauchi will do his share again in packing the ball. Yamauchi got off for five touchdowns in the game against Hosei, all of which were over 50 yards, while Tsuboi streaked the sidelines for two lengthy runs.

Iwai, former captain of Kandai will be in charge of the team in Tokyo.

Kuramitsu Beats Henkel For Only Win By Japanese

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, June 1—Play in the exhibition tennis series between Japan and Germany, opened yesterday at the Rot-Weiss Club ended today in a German victory of four matches to one after Yasumine Kuramitsu, brilliant newcomer to the Japanese Davis Cup team, scored the invaders' only point by upsetting Henner Henkel.

The Germans, who led 2-0 at the close of yesterday's play, added two more victories as Fumiteru Nakano lost to G. von Metaxa in the singles and Beuthner and Goepfert defeated Nakano and Tamio Abe in the doubles. Kuramitsu, however, won an unexpected straight-set victory over Henkel, thus preventing a clean sweep for the Reich. Scores were:

Metaxa defeated Nakano, 6-0, 2-6, 6-2; Kuramitsu defeated Henkel, 6-2, 9-7; Beuthner and Goepfert defeated Abe and Nakano, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5.

Harvard Spring Football Practice Pleases Harlow

Head Coach Dick Harlow of the Harvard varsity football squad completing five weeks of spring football practice yesterday expressed himself as satisfied with the results obtained and the development of a number of inexperienced players. The freshmen attended 30 practice sessions and upper classmen 22. The squad played two practice games, the second of which showed hard tackling and hard hitting, comparable with the spring practice games of a year ago.

Different than was the case last spring when Harlow strove to develop team work and hard hitting, this practice was primarily planned to develop individuals for positions vacated by graduating seniors. Particularly was it necessary to develop tackles, guards and fullbacks as the result of the loss of Al Kevorkian, Capt. Russ Allen, Joe Nee, George Klein, Vernon Struck and Ralph Pope, among the key players of the 1937 varsity team which defeated both Princeton and Yale.

Harlow was pleased with the attitude and consistency at practice of such squad veterans as Don Daughters, end; Ken Booth, tackle; Dave Glueck, guard; Tim Russell, center; Frank Foley, Austin Harding, Bob Burnett, Ben Smith and Torbert MacDonald. MacDonald was given no contact work during the spring practice because of his contemplated track sprinting which ended when he pulled in the New England Relays.

"Foley, Harding and Burnett in scrimmages and practice games definitely looked better than a year ago," Harlow said, "while the progress of four players, Ben Smith, Joe Gardella, Bill Bailey and Mike Cohen, indicated that the battle for the fullback position will be among them next fall."

In the line, Nick Mellen and Charlie Snyder, junior varsity guards a year ago, and Don Lowry, Bill Brown and Tom Lacey, freshman guards, indicated that they will be foremost contenders with Glueck for the guard positions next fall. Tim Russell stood up very well through the hardest kind of scrimmaging and has the edge for the center position.

Neither Clif Wilson, veteran blocking back, center, and guard, nor Chief Boston, veteran blocking back, were able to attend all spring practice sessions, but Harlow is counting heavily upon them next fall.

Harlow said he expected to have a smaller varsity squad than usual next fall and indicated that he would keep three teams. He listed 51 players who, as a result of previous play on Harvard squads and their spring practice play could be considered foremost candidates. They are, listed by positions:

Ends—Captain Green '39, Daughters '39, Jameson '39, Koufman '41, Perkins '41, Longcope '41, Haydock '41, Maguire '40, Hoar '40, Keily '40.

Gibbon the historian was one day attending the trial of Warren Hastings in Westminster Hall. Sheridan, having received him there, took occasion to mention "the luminous author of 'The Decline and Fall.'"

After he had finished, one of Sheridan's friends reproached him for flattering Gibbon.

"Why what did I say of him?" asked Sheridan.

"You called him the luminous author."

"Luminous! Oh, I meant vo-lum-inous!"

Gehrig Connects As Yanks Win, 7-3 From White Sox

By JAMES P. DAWSON
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 9—The Yankees said it with homers yesterday before 28,440 highly excited fans at the Stadium, where they served up an appropriate greeting to the White Sox.

Hitless through three innings of superb pitching by Bill Dietrich, the world champions finally broke the spell in the fourth. They touched off their best home-run barrage this season and won, 7 to 3, to stretch their winning streak to six straight and advance to a half game behind the leading Indians in the American League race. The McCarthymen ave still in a second-place tie with Bucky Harris' Senators.

Lou Gehrig, rounding out his 1,985th consecutive championship game, led the way. Battering Lou, having hit first homer inside the park on the recent visit of the Browns, finally got the range of the right-field stand and parked No. 2 there in the fourth inning to propel the Yankees into the lead.

Dietrich Is Removed

Tommy Henrich slapped his No. 4 into the same region to open the sixth and immediately afterward Joe DiMaggio boosted his No. 4 into the distant lower left-field stand to give the Yankees their first day with three round-trippers, influence the hurried recall of Dietrich and give Charley (Red) Ruffing his fourth straight conquest.

Aggravating the depressing influence of this first 1938 visit to the Bronx for the White Sox was an accident that robs the team, already handicapped by the loss of Luke Appling, of the services of Joe Kuhel for at least a week. Trying to steal second after opening the sixth with a single, Kuhel stumbled as his spikes caught in the ground near the base, where Frankie Crosetti was waiting to put the ball on him. Kuhel had to be carried from the field and for a time it was feared he had broken a bone in his right instep.

An examination at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, to which Kuhel was removed for X-rays after the game, revealed no broken bones, but a wrenched ligament.

Ruffing was nicked for a run on a pass to Kuhel and Marv Owen's double in the second and saw another skid home in the third on a pass to Mike Kreevich, Hank Steinbacher's single and DiMaggio's errant toss right into the Yankee dugout.

Sends Yanks to Fore

But the McCarthymen discounted these runs in the fourth when Crosetti walked, DiMaggio hit a sharp single, Bill Dickey doubled home a pair of runs and Gehrig poled his homer to send the Yanks to the fore.

In the fifth Ruffing still was having difficulty. Lou Berger opened with a single and Kreevich followed with his second one-base blow, chasing Berger to third. The latter came in after Steinbacher's long fly, but Hoag backed almost to the left field box-fronts for Gerald Walker's fly to end the inning. Ruffing proceeded to master the Sox thereafter. In the ninth he fanned three to round out nine strike-out victims.

Meanwhile the Yanks pressed their assault on Dietrich. In the sixth Henrich opened with a homer into the lower right-field stand. DiMaggio slapped another into the left field seats, Dickey singled and chased Dietrich right out of the pastime. Gehrig greeted Bill Cox with a single that sent Dickey to third, where he was trapped later, and Lou tallied the final run.

Coach Romney At One College Nineteen Years

LOGAN, Utah.—Specialization has hit the coaching business, along with practically everything else these days, but it hasn't bothered debonair Dick Romney.

Dick, who signs the initials "E. L." to his personal checks, goes right ahead with the job he was signed to do at Utah State college 19 years ago—coaching the football, basketball and track teams.

"Coached the baseball team, too, for three years, until the Utah colleges dropped it," says Dick. "Maybe we'll take it up again one of these days."

Quite a Chore

"It's quite a chore," coaching three major sports. He believes he's the only coach at a college the size of Utah State—enrollment about 3,000—who does it.

Nineteen years in one spot indicate Romney doesn't have to pay much attention to the alumni that plague the coaching ranks. A look at his record tells why.

In the 19 years his football teams have played 150 games, winning 90, losing 48 and tying 12. His teams won the Rocky Mountain Conference grid title in 1921 and 1936 and tied with Colorado in 1935. They have finished second three times and in ties for second three times more.

The Aggies captured the basketball crown in 1926, 1930, 1935 and 1936, won the National A.A.U. junior championship in 1925 and advanced to the New York trials of the Olympic tournament two years ago.

Won Four Titles

Dick's track-and-field teams won four consecutive conference blue ribbons from 1924 to 1927.

"Coaching can be fun," he says, "if you don't take it too seriously.

"Most coaches wouldn't take it too seriously—and they'd keep a young viewpoint, working with young men—if it weren't for this ridiculous outside pressure that's on them constantly."

Rose Bowl Player

Coaching's greatest recompense, Dick says, "is working with a fine young fellow, one who has a true conception of the value of athletics, getting to know what he thinks and how he feels."

Competed for Utah

Romney has had his share of thrills in actual competition as well as in coaching. At the University of Utah he was an all-Conference halfback, a stellar basketball guard, ran most of the shorter distances on the track team and caught on the baseball team.

He was a halfback on the Camp Lewis eleven which lost to the U. S. Marines in the Rose Bowl in the war days of 1918. Perhaps Romney's greatest competitive thrill came from playing on the Utah team which beat the highly favored Illinois Athletic Club quintet, 27-26, in the finals of the National A. A. U basketball tournament in Chicago in 1916.

Illinois A. C. was a decided favorite to win and with the team one point ahead, Clyde Packer, a Utah forward, took a long shot, the gun went off with the ball in midair and it slipped through the basket.

Young Konoye Delays Return To Play Final Golf As Princetonian

Domei Tsushin

PRINCETON, N.J., June 2—Fumitaka Konoye, eldest son of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye of Japan, who was recently voted by his senior classmates as one "most likely to succeed," has decided to postpone his departure for Japan until the sailing of the Tatsuta Maru from San Francisco on July 14, because he was unable to refuse participation in a golf tournament for the last times as a "Princetonian," it was revealed here today.

In an exclusive interview with Domei, Young Konoye said that he had planned to leave for Japan on the Taiyo Maru in accordance with his father's request that he return at the earliest possible date, but that he had delayed his departure because he was unable to refuse participation in a golf tournament that would be his last as a "Princetonian."

It is understood that the son of Japan's Premier is now cramming strenuously for his last two examinations.

Trosky Abandons Trying To Knock Down More Walls

WASHINGTON, May 6—Hal Trosky renounced his home run aspirations today. He suggested the reason he leads American League hitters with a fat .434 average is because he hasn't tried to hammer down the right-field walls every time.

Oscar Vitt, Cleveland manager, induced Trosky to experiment and the left-handed batter has changed from a "strictly pull hitter" to one who clubs to all fields.

"I'm not going to break any home run records this year," said the tall first baseman from Norway, Iowa. "Instead of 38 or 40 I'll be satisfied with around 25 or 30. But I'll get more hits."

In his five previous years, Trosky swung hard for right-field, but Vitt "thought I could do myself justice by hitting to left as well as right," Trosky explained.

"Now it's tougher for the pitchers. If you're a pull-hitter they can pitch to certain spots and make you hit where they want you to. I changed my stance at first, but I'm back in the old one now and hitting to all fields."

Trosky also picked out a shorter and heavier bat which he can handle easier. "I can hold back and still punch the ball if it's good. You get more balls to hit and don't go after as many bad ones."

Despite his refusal to try for a four-bagger every time, Trosky has collected three homers this season. The one he's proudest of is the 400-foot drive he parked into left-field stands of Cleveland Stadium, a difficult drive for a left-hander and a tough place to get round-trip blows.

As Trosky, a consistent .300 hitter in his previous major league seasons, eyes the American League batting championship, he adds:

"Cleveland should be one-two all year if we don't have any injuries or trouble. We have great pitching, plenty of power and a great manager. That's a setup! And there's no doubt that the Yankees are the team to beat."

Wilson Of Red Sox Checks Feller, 5-0 Before 33,000

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 8—Jack Wilson, the big Red Sox right-hander, shut out the league-leading Indians, 5 to 0, with four hits in the series opener today to give Boston its third straight victory.

A crowd of 33,100 turned out to see Bob Feller, the Cleveland pitching star, try for his fourth straight triumph but the former schoolboy didn't have his stuff. After yielding four runs in the first three innings, Feller was removed for a pinch-hitter.

John Humphries, a rookie up from New Orleans making his major-league debut, let Boston down with two hits and one run the rest of the way, Feller being charged with the defeat.

Wilson was in rare form as he chalked up twelve strike-outs and won his first game. He repeatedly forced the Cleveland batters to pop up, and was so effective it wasn't until the ninth inning, when Pinky Higgins tossed out Ken Keltner at first, that Boston registered its only assist of the game.

Hal Trosky was Wilson's chief source of annoyance, registering a double and single in four times up. Bruce Campbell and Keltner made the other Cleveland hits.

Manager Joe Cronin celebrated his return to the Sox line-up after a two-day absence by clouting a homer and a double in four times up, while Jimmy Foxx's triple sent in two runs in the first inning. His total of runs batted in now is twenty-nine for the season.

Rollie Hemsley was stunned by a bouncing ball in the first inning but resumed catching.

Two major league fielding records were tied in the game. The mark for fewest assists by one club, a single chance, was equaled by the Red Sox. The record for fewest assists by both clubs in a game, eight, also was tied.

Seams In Red Feature New Style Of Ball

By GEORGE E. THOMPSON
Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK—An innovation in baseball is always interesting, so that the test of such an improvement, especially one of real importance to the game, calls for more than passing notice. Such an improvement was tried out recently, when a new style of ball was utilized in an actual game, between two good college teams—Columbia and Fordham—in their metropolitan championship scheduled game.

The new ball, according to its inventor, Frederick H. Rahr, a New York engineer, will have a far better visibility than the usual ball, with its white cover and seams, and in the view of the members of both teams, this seems to be justified, though many more tests are likely to be necessary before the new scheme can be finally adopted. The ball is similar in all respects to the new National League ball, with one important exception. The cover is colored a vivid spectrum yellow, with the seams in red.

The main purpose of the change, according to the inventor, is to promote the safety of the batsman, by enabling him to see the approaching pitch more easily. He was present last summer at the Yankee Stadium, when Mickey Cochrane, of the Detroit Tigers, was felled by a pitched ball. This set him to thinking how to improve the visibility of the sphere, so that it might be more easily avoided, and the present color scheme is the result.

Choose Spectrum Yellow

The choice of this spectrum yellow was determined on as the result of extensive tests by the government and automobile authorities, as well as the American Automobile Association, to determine just what color should be utilized for safety signs, traffic markers, airport markings, and all government specifications where the need of protecting human life must be considered. These tests proved that spectrum yellow, such as is used on this ball, has a higher visibility at high speeds than any other, so that now all these signs are in that color.

On the other hand, white is one of the most difficult colors to see in motion, due to its blurring tendency, which is exceeded only by black.

The inventor also claims for his ball several other advantages which will make for greater interest. He says it should promote hitting; not longer but more frequent. Fielding should be sharper, as the ball will be more visible both on the ground and against the sky. The batsman will also gain an advantage by reason of the visibility of the ball against the white or gray uniform of the pitcher, thus permitting a right-handed batter to be more effective against a right-handed pitcher, with the same result in the cases of southpaws. The umpires will profit by obtaining more accuracy on balls and called strikes, while the spectators will be able to see the course of the ball in fast plays much more easily. In this respect, the views of the players were that the new ball made little difference to the fielders, but that this would require more tests.

Plan Further Tests

The test came about through the interest of Andy Coakley, the veteran coach of the Columbia team. As soon as the color was determined Dr. Rahr showed a sample ball colored according to the new plan, to Coakley and the latter, after examination, decided that a test might be interesting. So he arranged with Dr. Rahr to have a set of balls made, and with the Fordham game approaching, took up the matter of testing the new color with Jack Coffey, another old-time baseball star, who is the coach of the Fordham team, in game. Coffey agreed, and though the final decision was not reached, it was agreed that the plan had merits, and further tests will be arranged during the balance of the intercollegiate season.

One-Finger Nut-Cracker

John Strocco says that never in 35 years has he met anyone who could equal his strange stunt of cracking hazelnuts, pecans and walnuts with a mere snap of the middle finger. Truly I was amazed when he took a handful of tough nuts from a sack, handed me a few for inspection, and then mashed them all in his strange manner on the desk. His fingers are very large-boned and muscular, and he snaps down on a nut with the power of a hammer.

A Fast Balloon

Dan Judd, service station operator in Sapulpa, Okla., released at 3 p.m. on February 5, a small balloon, to which he attached a note offering a free grease or wash job to the finder. At 12:10 p.m. on February 6, Jesse P. Lietz of Southampton, L. I., N. Y., saw the balloon light on the beach sand dunes and roll down into the water, where he retrieved it. To make good on his promise, Mr. Judd sent Mr. Lietz $1.00 to have his car greased. The balloon had been carried 1,200 miles in a little over 20 hours.

Semi-Pros Barred In Olympic Play

PHILADELPHIA, May 8—The executive committee of the United States Amateur Baseball Congress today banned all semi-pro players from competing for the 1940 Olympic team.

The committee, which is affiliated with the American Olympic Association, adopted a resolution reading: "Any player that has ever played for money is ineligible. This means what is called semi-pro."

Leslie Mann, former major league player and secretary of the committee, said: "This eliminates all members of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Association."

Financial Aid Cited

The committee also declared ineligible "any college player receiving financial aid from any professional club." Another resolution barred the college player in whose behalf "any parent or guardian receives financial assistance."

As a forerunner of a national tourney to pick the 1940 team, the committee approved plans to divide the United States into two sections and hold a tourney in July. The winner of the Eastern section will tour England from Aug. 3 to Sept. 8; the winner of the Western section will tour the Hawaiian Islands from Aug. 5 to Sept. 8.

The division was fixed by drawing a line from the eastern edge of North Dakota south to the Gulf of Mexico.

Finals at Philadelphia

The Eastern finals will be played in Philadelphia during the last week of July. Mann said he would announce the date of the Western finals from his Miami office within a week.

Eight teams will compete in the Eastern finals. The Penn A. C., as host team, is one. The others are the New England district champion; State winners from Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio; the winner of South and North Carolina; the winner of Virgina, Maryland and West Virginia, and the winner of Far Southern States.

Bromwich Wins N.S.W. Tennis Championship

ADELAIDE, S. Aust.—For the third time, John Bromwich of New South Wales won the singles tennis title of South Australia at the annual tournament. He is the 19-year-old Davis Cup player, and defeated his teammate, Les A. Schwartz, 9—7, 6—4, 6—1. Schwartz has appeared in the final of this event on four occasions and it was satisfactory to note how he had improved in speed and technique.

Bromwich and Schwartz won the doubles championship from G. A. Holland and C. Long of Victoria by superior all-round courtcraft, and Sadie Berryman, another 19-year-old player, won the women's singles after a hard game against N. Chitty (both of Victoria). The women's doubles championship of South Australia was won by N. Chitty and C. Coate of Victoria, who beat Gwen O'Halloran and J. Walters of South Australia.

Keio Vanquishes Waseda, 7 To 5 In 58th Contest

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

Rallying from their 10 to 1 defeat on Saturday, Keio University's baseballers played heads-up ball to down Waseda, 7 to 5, Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine Stadium to put their series of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University league on an even basis. It was the 58th contest between the two rival teams since the inauguration of their dual encounter back in 1903. The record now stands 30 victories for Waseda as against 27 for Keio. One game ended in a tie.

Waseda to Play Meiji

By virtue of Keio's vcitory Sunday, the league schedule terminated with Waseda and Meiji deadlocked for the top position with seven wins and three defeats each. As the result of an extraordinary meeting held by the league directors immediately after the game, Waseda and Meiji will meet at 2 p.m. next Sunday at the Meiji Shrine Stadium in a one-game playoff for the championship.

The standings are:

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Waseda	10	7	3	0	.700
Meiji	10	7	3	0	.700
Hosei	10	5	4	1	.550
Keio	10	5	5	0	.500
Rikkyo	10	4	5	1	.450
Teidai	10	1	9	0	.450

Sunny weather prevailed from early morning and a capacity crowd of more than 50,000 turned out to witness this the concluding game of the series which is the classic of the sport in this country.

Coach Tanaka of Waseda assigned young Matsui, a promising left hander, to the mound instead of Southpaw Kondo who had checked Keio to three measely hits on Saturday. Whether he had a bit too much confidence in the hitting ability of his team is to be ascertained, he kept Matsui in the game up to the latter part of the eighth frame although Keio kept registering runs to lead 6 to 4 at the end of the seventh inning.

Narita is Star

Coach Morita of Keio on the other hand elected to send Right Hander Takagi to the mound, whom he had saved from the Waseda barrage on Saturday. But Takagi's control was poor and he was sent to the showers in the first inning when Waseda, not a bit disheartened by the two runs scored by Keio in the first part of the first frame, sent three men across the plate on three hits and a bad error by shortstop Odate. Narita, who chucked the best ball of the three Keio pitchers on Saturday, was sent to the hillock, stopped the Waseda lads from further scoring in the inning, and finished the game a hero. The best Waseda could do was to register two runs off him during the rest of the encounter, one in the sixth when Minamimura banged out a three bagger and came in on Ogusu's deep fly to left, and the other in the ninth when Pitcher Kondo, who had relieved Matsui in the eighth, smashed out the day's longest drive, a three bagger to mid-center, to drive in Nakamura, running for Tsujii who had walked.

Despite the few opportunities he had been given to work on the mound this season, Narita hurled scintillating ball against the heavy hitting Waseda team. Center Fielder Asai, for instance, who had poled one into the left field bleachers on Saturday to provide the necessary stimulant for Waseda, failed to hit in three trips to the plate, and was replaced by a pinchhitter in the ninth.

Keio Scores

Keio won the game by coming through with timely hits off Matsui in the third and fourth innings, registering two runs in each. Sakurai singled to right after one out, went to second on Odate's bingle through short. Then the two runners pulled off a double steal. Uno rolled a grounder between first and second. Neither First Baseman Go nor Second Baseman Takasu went after it and the ball rolled to right field for a hit as Sakurai romped home. Odate tallied on Kusumoto's fly to center.

Center Fielder Mizuno started the fireworks for Keio in the fourth with a clean hit to right. Narita sacrificed him to second. Miyazaki was thrown out, short to first, Mizuno going to third on the play. Honda walked and stole second. Sakurai got off a slow grounder toward third and beat it out to first for a hit. Mizuno tallied of course and the quick footed and alert Honda dashed all the way home when the Waseda infield momentarily fell into a daze through Sakurai's infield hit.

Keio definitely clinched the game in the eighth when Odate, leading off, tripled to center and came in after two outs on Haiyama's timely hit to center.

Yankees Topple St. Louis, 12-10; DiMaggio Homers

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 6—Being no respecters of that noble principle of never hitting a man when he is down, the Yankees toppled the hapless and last-place Browns for a clean sweep of their series at the Stadium yesterday.

The score was 12 to 10 in a free-hitting, free-wheeling engagement where the New Yorkers pounded out sixteen safeties for an American League season record of twenty-nine bases, while the St. Louis contingent followed as closely to the pace as it could with twelves hits for twenty-one bases.

The Yankees were sailing along serenely with a 10-3 lead as late as the fifth inning. There was not a cloud on the horizon until Ethan Allen was brash enough to smack a triple with the bases full in the eighth. That chopped the margin of the Ruppert Rifles to 10 to 9 but along came Fordham Johnny Murphy to win the ball game.

A Clambake Ball Game

This fray was in the wrong setting. Instead of in the Stadium, it belonged in some annual clambake. The hired hands of Marse Joe McCarthy flailed away at four pitchers from the opening gun. Steven Sundra handled the throwing chores for the New Yorkers and fared indifferently at best. This was his debut of the campaign and he managed to last as long as seven and one-third innings. By that time he had been touched for nine hits.

He was lifted to make way for Murphy with one out in the eighth and the bases full. The Fordham alumnus retired one man on a force at home for the second out and pitched carefully to Mel Mazzera, who was pinch-hitting for Don Heffner. But Mazzera's shot hit the plate and bounced so high it went for a single and a run. Then Allen cracked the ball past Myril Hoag for a triple and the Browns were within a run of a tie before the side was retired.

Extra Bases Galore

It was then that Murphy followed a single by Hoag and a double by Billy Knickerbocker with a two-base effort of his own. But there had been plenty of extra-base shots to set the example. Joe DiMaggio, still striving to reach his batting form, lashed a triple almost to the center field bleachers, followed that with a home run into the left-field stands and wound up dismally with a mere single.

Tommy Henrich cracked a homer into the lower right-field deck in the opening inning with Red Rolfe on base, while on the other side of the fence Billy Sullivan hit one with no one one base and Beau Bell with one man ahead of him. But that poor DiMaggio! He drove in only four runs.

Even Lou Gehrig got into the spirit of the occasion with a single and a double, out of his slump at last Knickerbocker had a double, triple and single as the Yanks teed off on Ed Linke, Les Tietje, Lefty Mills and Julio Bonetti.

Fan Takes Star's Cap

Autograph hunters hold no terrors to DiMaggio from now on. A fan snatched Joe's cap off his head at the end of the game and dashed for the exits with it. DiMag let him get away with it. Hero worship certainly takes strange turns.

Perhaps it is just a coincidence, but the facts are these: Since DiMaggio returned, the Yankees have won five games and lost only one.

Waseda Gridders Starting Spring Training Today

Eighteen veterans and 14 freshmen have responded to the first call of Player Coach Richard Fukuda of the Waseda varsity football squad to start Spring training from today at the Waseda Athletic Association grounds in Higashi-fushimi.

The freshmen, most of whom have never played this game before, have been coming out to learn the fundamentals, rules and other good points of the game since May 25. Coach Fukuda expressed satisfaction over the new crop of players and said that he has a few promising prospects to fill in the vacancies left by the graduates this March, of such players as Player-Coach Masa Shimoda, Co-Captains Obayashi and Nouchi, Blackie Uyeno and Terry Yoshimoto. He expressed confidence in repeating the championship again this season for the third consecutive year for the same stone-wall line is being retained.

To Hit Dummy

This spring training will be devoted to rigid workouts in dummy hitting, plowing and blocking for the linesman. The loss of Blackie Uyeno, last year's all-star guard will be felt quite badly, but the addition of Fat Nakadate, who is pretty big and an old timer at this game, ought to strengthen the line considerably.

Coach Fukuda will take care of the center position himself. At guards are Fujioka and Fukushima, two quiet but hard hitting men who never let any ball carrier pass through them. "Iron man" Gori Nishioka and Diamond Shimomura, the life of the team, will be back as tackles. Both men are big and fast and they never stop charging until the whistle blows. The veterans "Long-John" Nomura and Tabo Murayama will be called upon to repeat their brilliant playing again at ends.

To Rebuild Backfield

The backfield will have to be completely reorganized with the absence of three veteran backs. Kojack Naito, key man of the maroon eleven and last year's selection as the most valuable player in the league, will be back in his favorite position at fullback. It will be recalled that in the championship game last year against Meiji, he played a most spectacular game through three full quarters with a crippled arm. He is completely recovered now and is as peppy as ever. Kojack's running mate "Doc" Noguchi will be shifted from Half to Quarterback. Doc's speed will liven the backfield considerably. The new captain, Nakayama, will alternate with Doc. to call signals and will also play at Halfback. The berths vacated by Co-Captains Nouchi and Obayashi at halfback, will be filled by Larry Kunimoto and "Bear" Miyamoto, two newcomers from Hawaii who are plenty hot at this game.

To Stress Speed

According to Coach Fukuda, speed and teamwork will be stressed for the backfield in this Spring training.

The squad will hold 25 training sessions this Spring and will pitch camp in the University Athletic grounds at Lake Kawaguchi, near Mt. Fuji for their Summer training, according to Manager Shingu.

Keio Duo Beats Waseda To Cop Doubles Crown

Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's best tennis player, and his partner, Yasuo Tsuruta, both of Keio University, won the doubles title of the 18th annual Kanto Students championships Sunday afternoon at the Waseda courts by defeating Tanaka and Takao of Waseda in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-2 and 6-3.

It was a case of too much Yamagishi, who in the opinion of Baron Gottfried von Cramm, world's No. 2 ranking player for 1937, is within the first five players in the world.

Yamagishi won the singles championship on Saturday by running roughshod over Takao Matsumoto of Hosei University, losing but four games. The score was: 6-1, 6-1, 6-2. It took Yamagishi only 45 minutes to dispose of his opponent.

Control System In Boxing Hailed By U.S. Official

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 6—Notwithstanding New York's "hands off" policy toward the newly-formed International Boxing Association, working machinery has been set in motion to bring about the closest approach to universal pugilistic control since punch-tossing was legalized anywhere.

This was the word brought back yesterday by Edward C. Foster of Providence, R. I., executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, from the Rome conference that resulted in establishment of the I. B. A.

Foster not only hailed the new international set-up as "the greatest thing that has happened for boxing's benefit in twenty-five years" but quickly took issue with the negative attitude of Major Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Phelan Is Contradicted

Phelan also was at Rome but his participation, Foster asserted, consisted principally in banging the conference table with the book containing the New York Commission's fistic regulations and insisting, "there's the law, gentlemen, and we propose to stand by it."

Foster not only confirmed that agreement was reached on the world championship list, exactly as now recognized in this country, but contradicted Phelan's assertion that two other major objectives of the United States delegates were not reached.

"The conference adopted the 'no-foul' rule, with the exception that England agreed, for the time being, only to advocate use of the foulproof cup," Foster explained. "Agreement also was reached upon fifteen rounds as the standard for all world championship matches, except where existing national regulations specify differently."

Foster added that South Africa, where twelve rounds now is the limit, soon would seek a twenty-round law and, in addition, apply for associate membership in the National Boxing Association of the United States. The N. B. A. now represents thirty-seven States in this country, as well as the boxing control organizations of Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

To Use Consensus Method

The most important stabilization move made at Rome, in Foster's belief, was to set up a "world professional boxing championship commission." Its purposes are to standardize title recognition, already achieved, and to list championship contenders by the consensus method, on a monthly basis.

The seven-man membership of this commission originally included three Americans, Phelan, Foster and Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, who was represented by proxy at Rome by Arch Ward, sports editor of The Chicago Tribune. Phelan has already served notice of his withdrawal. Colonel Middleton, the British delegate, was elected secretary and will be the clearing house for fistic ratings of the commission.

"It looks as though we will have to do the best we can without the support of Phelan or the New York Commission," commented Foster. "Phelan went to Rome without authority to act. His attitude contrasts with that of the representatives of twenty-one nations, all seeking and achieving agreement on matters of basic importance to boxing."

Minamimura Is Best Hitter In Tokyo League

Third Baseman Fukashi Minamimura of Waseda won the batting honors of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league, schedule of which ended Sunday, with a .480 mark, the result of 12 hits in 25 times at bat in 10 games.

His three hits on Sunday in the game against Keio, including a rousing three bagger, put him on the top over Pitcher Saigo of Rikkyo and Center Fielder Asai of Waseda who were first and second after Saturday's game with marks of .476 and .467 respectively.

Asai, who poled out a homer on Saturday and crashed out a single as well, had the chance to capture the honors but he failed to get a hit out off Newcomer Narita in three trips to the plate on Sunday.

Saigo eventually placed second in the batting race with a .476 mark, the result of 10 hits out of 21 times at bat. Asai placed third with a .394, or 14 hits out of 33 times at bat.

Failure of Tokyo Imperial University to win but one game can be seen immediately from the fact that not a single player managed to hit over .250.

Banner Season For Swimming Looms In Britain

Observer

LONDON, May 15—There is at least one reason why the present season should come to be noted in swimming history as an outstanding one. For the first time, the European championships, second only to the Olympic Games in importance as an international aquatic festival, are being held in this country.

Empire Pool Picked

The meeting will take place at the Empire Pool, Wembley, from August 6 to 13, and upwards of twenty nations will be represented by several hundreds of their finest swimmers, divers, and water polo players, many of them Olympic finalists and several of them world champions.

The championships were last held at Magdeburg in 1935, when the Germans gave a display of efficiency in organization which was surpassed only by their efforts at the Olympic Games in the following year. The Amateur Swimming Association is anxious that their efforts shall not suffer by comparison with Magdeburg, and for months past they have been busy on the work of preparation. Mr. Paul Herbert, the manager of the Empire Pool, who has many times proved his worth as a promoter of international swimming functions, is the secretary of the organizing committee.

In fact, the Empire S.C., of which also he is secretary, is arranging an international gala at Wembley on the 28th of this month, which, to some extent, will be a rehearsal for the August meeting. Several leading Continental swimmers are to compete in company with many of our own champions, while a German water polo team will oppose the Empire Club side.

The Amateur Swimming Association's championships meeting, at which the bulk of the national events are decided, will take place this year at Great Yarmouth, between July 18 and 21. Quite probably, the final selections of the English representatives to compete in the European championships will depend on the results of this meeting.

The inter-country speed swimming contest between England, Scotland and Wales, usually held at the tail-end of the season, has this year been brought forward to July 8 and 9, when the Wembley Pool will stage another fine program, including also the men's and women's diving championships of England, a swimming match between the Empire S.C. and the Universities Athletic Union, and the final trial in a series of matches for the selection of the British water polo team to play in the European tournament in August.

Cause and Effect

This series of polo tests represents a striking innovation in the activities of our water polo selectors. Hitherto, they have pursued somewhat haphazard methods in choosing the players for international events, and no attention whatever has been paid to coaching a team once it has been selected. In consequence, this country has deteriorated from the position it formerly held of being the world's leading water polo nation, and in recent years British teams have cut rather a sorry figure when opposed to such countries as Germany and Hungary. In an effort to alter this very unsatisfactory state of affairs a scheme has been put into operation, despite a good deal of opposition, to comb the country for likely players, and subject them to fairly rigorous training during the next two or three months. The main object is to secure a team which will not be subject to criticism in respect either of speed or stamina, two factors in which teams from this country have been found sadly wanting in recent years.

A "basic" side will shortly be chosen to play a series of matches against teams representing various parts of the country. In these matches the best fourteen players will be noted to comprise the teams for the final trial on July 9 after which the British team for the tournament will be selected. That team will then have about three weeks in which to play matches for the improvement of combination and the evolution of its schemes of attack and defense. Every member of it will have to be capable of certain minimum speeds and will be expected to have mastered certain actions in which British players have proved inferior to the foreigners, e.g., emerging waist high from the water to intercept passes, and gathering passes and shooting at goal in one unbroken movement.

Iwanaga To Be Named Head Of Press Body

Yukichi Iwanaga, President of the Domei News Agency, will be nominated head of the Nippon Olympic Press Association to be organized by the sports writers of all Japanese newspapers at the inauguration meeting of the body to be held at the New Grand Restaurant on June 8.

The advisory council will include all editors-in-chief of the Tokyo journals including the Domei News Agency. Meanwhile, the heads of sports department of journals will conduct the actual activities of the newly organized association.

The purpose of this body, it is said, is for publicity abroad on the forthcoming Olympic Games, and above all special considerations and facilities will be given to all visiting foreign sports writers during the Olympic Games in 1940.

Pennink Captures Challenge Cup With Record 142

Observer

LONDON, May 15—J. J. F. Pennink won the Champion Grand Challenge Cup with the record score of 142 at Royal St. George's, Sandwich, yesterday, with rounds of 70 and 72. C. Ross Somerville, the Canadian champion and a former winner of the American title, was second with 144, while L. G. Crawley was third with 145.

In his round of 70 Pennink had six birdies and one eagle. His outward half of 33 was helped by a couple of 2's. Playing with extreme steadiness he was never in any major trouble. After starting the next round with a three at the second and another two at the eighth, there was never any serious doubt about Pennink's success. Coming to the last hole he had a five to win, but he made doubly sure by putting his second shot six feet from the flag.

Brilliant Iron Shots

Playing his iron shots brilliantly, Ross Somerville started the second round with 4, 3, 3. Everything went well until the fourteenth, where he went from bunker to bunker and took a 6. The Canadian thus lost his chance of overhauling Pennink. Crawley set the pace with two rounds of 71 and 74, respectively. The first round included nine birdies, and an unfortunate 6 at the ninth hole, where his drive was bunkered. Hitting long distances he reached the fourteenth, a hole of 520 yards, in a drive and mashie shot. Though putting well Crawley did not play quite so confidently in the second round. Some of the second shots went astray, but he often recovered magnificently and holed the putt.

D. H. R. Martin, who has won the trophy for the past two years, had a first round of 73, which left him within striking distance of the leaders. Out in 34 he had a remarkable inward half. With an eagle 3 at the thirteenth, Martin was then two under 4's. Then came a major disaster, at the long fourteenth, where he drove out of bounds and took a 7. Martin made some amends by getting an eagle 3 at the fifteenth, but he took three putts at the short sixteenth and lost a stroke at the next. In the second round Martin met with another disaster, this time at the short sixth, where pulling his tee shot into a bunker he took 3 to get out and ran up a 6. Even so he finished in 74 for a total of 147. At two holes he threw away 5 strokes, which destroyed his chance of winning the cup for the third year in succession.

Bad 14th Hole

The fourteenth was responsible for ruining many a promising score. With twelve holes played, C. J. H. Tolley was shaping for a great round, but the next three holes cost him 16 strokes, including a 6 at the fourteenth, where he topped a brassie shot into the canal. He finished in 75 and repeated this score in the second round despite starting with a 3. J. B. Beck, British Walker Cup team captain, also had two rounds each of 75 for an aggregate of 150. All was well until the fourteenth where a brassie shot was tapped in the canal. Beck was one of a number of players who took a 7 for the hole. R. Sweeny, the amateur champion, was far below his form. He took 163, 21 strokes more than the winner.

Rumania Will Send 1,000 Here To See 12th Olympic Games

From Rumania will come 1,000 persons to take in the 1940 Olympic Games in Tokyo, according to word received by the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee.

After the close of the Games, the visitors will go on a sightseeing tour of the country.

To make certain their trip, the 1,000 persons are saving 100 leis a month, equivalent to 3 yen 14 cents, the information said.

The desire was also expressed that facilities would be arranged by the O.O.C. so that they could embark aboard a Japanese liner at the Rumanian port of Constantza and travel direct to Yokohama.

The O.O.C. has also been requested to forward pictures and publicity matter on Japan.

Fist Fly As Tigers Check Red Sox, 7-5

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 5—The first fistic outbreak at Fenway Park a baseball crowd has witnessed in eighteen years incited the Tigers to come from behind and defeat the Red Sox, 7—5, today in the series finale.

After Boston made four runs against Vernon Kennedy in the fifth, fiery Ben Chapman took a third strike. When he questioned Umpire Joe Rue's judgment, George Tebbetts, the Detroit catcher, taunted him. The players then engaged in a heated verbal exchange, during which Chapman challenged Tebbetts. The latter ripped off his mask and grappled with Chapman. Umpires separated them and expelled both.

The last fist fight during a ball game here was held back in 1930, when Umpire George Hildebrand, now retired, struck Bob Shawkey with his mask as that pitcher rushed at him.

The quartet of Boston runs resulted from Jimmy Foxx's fourth homer of the season, a 450-foot drive over the left-field wall with two on, Doc Cramer's triple, Joe Cronin's double, singles by Joe Vosmik and Pinky Higgins and Kennedy's wild pitch.

In the sixth Hank Greenberg and Rudy York of Detroit drove successive homers over the left-field barrier. They tied the score in the seventh on a pass from Fritz Ostermueller, a sacrifice and a single and pulled ahead in the eighth after Greenberg singled ahead of York, who blasted a second drive over the left-field fence.

Displaying steadiness and power, Nakano overcame the American Davis Cup star with the loss of only one set, taking the other three in easy fashion. The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0.

Kuramitsu lost to Destremeau, French Davis Cup ace, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-1, 6-3.

Columbia Beats Cornell, 5 To 3; Harvard Winner

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 7—Mike Stehnach fielded two Columbia sacrifice bunts with neatness and dispatch in the third inning of the Cornell-Columbia Eastern Intercollegiate League battle at Baker Field yesterday. But he tacked on two prodigious throws to right field on the end of each of them, the batter scoring a "home run" on the first and reaching third on the second.

And by the gift of these unearned runs from the Ithaca twirler the Lions upset the league-leading Cornellians, 5 to 3, and pushed them out of first place in the standings, Harvard and Yale advancing to the top. Had it not been for the two tosses, this would have been a tight-pitching battle.

Columbia found a hurler at last who could go the distance, Jack Moller lasting to the end and limiting Cornell to seven hits. But Stehnach yielded only five in six innings, Larry Halprin giving none in the last two frames.

The Red combination tallied one run when Jack Lozier doubled after Ken Brown had walked in the second. Two more rode in the eighth on a homer over the centerfield fence by Frank Howe with a runner on the paths ahead of him. But Columbia had the ball game in its grasp from the third inning on.

Jack Desmond opened that session with a walk. Jack Naylor bunted and when Stehnach let go with his outfield throw both runners crossed the plate. When Bill Stickel singled and Bob Stoltz sacrificed, the Cornell pitcher duplicated his earlier toss, Stickel scoring and Stoltz reaching third. From there he came home on Dean Arnold's safety. The fifth tally was produced as the result of a hit by Moller, a sacrifice and a hit by Naylor an inning later.

Harvard 10, Penn 9

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 6—Pennsylvania twice overcame a Harvard lead today in its second Eastern Intercollegiate League game against the Crimson, but was finally beaten, 10 to 9. Leading, 9 to 7, when Harvard entered the last half of the ninth, the Philadelphians seemed due to win their first game of the championship race.

However, Jack Conway, who had hurled Penn to its leading edge, had given way to a pinch hitter in the ninth, and Lynn Frawley, who pitcher the final frame, was rapped for a double, three singles and a final two-bagger. They were contributed by Captain Lupien, Gannett, Grondahl, Fulton and Soltz in order, the result being three runs and victory.

Kameda Pitches Eagles To Win, 3-2 Over Tigers

Behind the flossy pitching of Tadashi Kameda, latest ball player imported from Hawaii, the Eagles nosed out the league leading Osaka Tigers, 3 to 2, in Sunday's games at the Koshien Stadium, near Osaka, of the Japan Professional Baseball Federation.

The Tigers scored their two runs in the first inning before Kameda could be sufficiently warned. The latter checked the usually hard hitting Tigers to four hits. At that Nishimura of the Tigers also chucked a good game as he yielded but five hits.

Kameda Effective

So effective was Kameda that after the second inning, only the following Tigers reached first: Fujimura and Iganye after two outs in the seventh when they lashed out hits in succession, and a Tiger man who walked in the last inning.

The Eagles won the game in the sixth inning when with the bases loaded and only one away, First Baseman Nakagawa banged out a hit to left field to deadlock the count at 2-all. And an infield hit by Second Baseman Nomura brought in the winning tally.

In the other two games at the Koshien Stadium, the Tigers topped Nagoya 5 to 4 while the Lions bumped off the Nagoya squad by 5 to 3.

The Tokyo Giants slipped in the standings by suffering two defeats in the tripleheader at the Korakuen Stadium here, at the hands of the Senators by 5 to 3 and 6 to 5 by the Osaka Hankyu.

Dolfins Win

A three-run rally in the last half of the ninth won for the Dolfins 6 to 5 over the Senators in the other game.

The league standings follow:

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Armless Contest Winner In Penmanship

Although, 10-year-old Edward Higgins, of Pueblo, Colorado, was born without arms, he not only can do practically everything with his toes that the average boy does with his fingers, but in some cases he does things even better. This was shown recently when he won a national award in penmanship against a field of skilful competition.

When Edward was very young, his parents, instead of pampering him, decided that the thing to do was to treat him just as they would a youngster who had both arms, so that he would not develop an inferiority complex and become shy and timid. He went in for the same activities and rough and tumble as any other healthy growing youngster and had the average crop of bumps and bruises.

Besides being an expert penman, Edward shows artistic talent and enjoys sketching with his toes. He is also an adept with carpenter's tools and wants to be a mechanic when he grows up. He has his own set of tools which he uses in doing odd jobs around the house and in making useful objects.

Hosei will go through a schedule from July 16 to 23, starting at Dairen and ending the tour at Dairen.

Princeton Downs Cornell On Track By 77-58 Score

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., May 14—Princeton's track and field team closed its dual meet season undefeated by downing Cornell, 77—58, in Palmer Stadium today and established itself as the major contender for Ivy League honors when the annual Heptagonal games take place here next week.

One meet record fell and another was tied in spite of a steady rain which made the track heavy and footing bad for the weight men. The Tigers just beat Cornell in first places, taking 8 to the invaders' 7.

Wilson Takes Century

Bill Wilson, Tiger sprinter, turned in one of the best performances of the afternoon by flashing 0:09.8 in the 100-yard dash to nose out Jim Pender of the Ithacans. The time tied a Princeton record held jointly by three old-timers and the meet record set by Frank Jarvis, Princeton, in 1899 and tied in 1932 by Dick Hardy of Cornell.

Wilson also took a second in the 220 and tied for second in the broad jump for a total of ten points, tying with his captain, Pete Bradley, and Al Van Ranst of Cornell for high scoring honors. Pender beat Wilson in the 220 in the fast time of 0:21.6, winning by three yards.

Bill Lynch of the Tigers tossed the hammer to a new meet record, his 167 feet 4½ inches bettering by one-half inch a mark set in 1909 by L. J. Talbot Jr., Cornell.

Wins Two Weight Events

Van Ranst tossed the discus 127 feet 3¼ inches and the shot 46 feet 5¾ inches to win both events. Ham Hucker, Big Red captain, turned in 0:24.2 for first place in the 220-yard low hurdles after failing to place in the highs race. Howie (Wreck) Welch showed a terrific sprint in the two-mile race as he ran his fastest time of the year, 9:33.1, and won easily from Nassau's Art Gilkes.

Yale Track Team Beats Harvard In Annual Meet

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 14—Yale defeated the Harvard varsity and freshmen in the annual dual track and field meets on Soldiers Field today. The Eli varsity finished with 71 5-6 points to 63 1-6 points for the Crimson, while the Bulldog yearlings won by 77 to 58.

Both meets were marked by fine performances and several records were broken. Captain Alexander Northrop of Harvard was the outstanding star, establishing new meet marks in the mile and the half mile. Ted Day was the only Yale athlete to break a meet record. He topped the 120-yard high hurdles in 0:14.7. This was three-tenths of a second better than Eugene Record's mark for Harvard in 1932. In the shot put the record was broken by George Downing of Harvard, who achieved 48 feet 9⅞ inches.

Bob Owen of Yale won both freshman dashes and was second in the high jump, while Don Donahue of Harvard not only set a new yearling mark in the high hurdles of 0:15.1, but was first in the low hurdles, landed third places in the 100-yard dash and pole vault and finished second in the broad jump.

Cubs Beaten

CHICAGO, May 15—The Pirates won their second, successive extra-inning battle with the Cubs today, 4 to 3, in eleven innings, although the Cubs pounded three pitchers for thirteen hits and received eight bases on balls.

The victory enabled Pittsburgh to displace Chicago in the National League runner-up spot.

Johnny Dickshot's single with Arky Vaughan on second base in the eleventh produced the winning run after Johnny Rizzo had tied the score with a home run in the sixth.

Bryant Out at Plate

The Cubs almost won the game in their half of the ninth, but a brilliant throw by Lloyd Waner to Catcher Al Todd caught Pinch Runner Clay Bryant at the plate as he tried to score from second on Stanley Hack's single to center, with two out.

The Cubs, with Billy Herman and Carl Reynolds, another new face in the changing line-up, leading the attack, disposed of Jim Tobin in the sixth and drove Mace Brown from the mound in the eighth. In neither case, however, could they score. After Bill Swift took over for the Pirates he permitted but one hit in the last four innings, but walked three. Seventeen Cubs were left on the bases.

Nine Hits for Victors

The Pirates made only nine hits off Bill Lee, Jack Russell and Charlie Root, but two were home runs. Bill Brubaker preceded Rizzo's wallop with one in the fifth with one on base.

Reynolds, last year with Minneapolis of the American Association, got three hits, one a double and another a triple. Herman also got three safeties.

Japan Out To Win Cycling In Olympics

A 30-kilometer road race will be held on Sunday morning under the auspices of the Japan Cycling Federation in order to commemorate its membership in the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation, it was announced Tuesday.

Although Japan is the most bicycle using nation in the world, she has never been represented in this sport in the previous Olympic Games.

The J. C. F., however, is enthusiastically anticipating to surprise the world with the remarkable advance in Japan in this particular field of sports.

New York Native Cops Metropolitan Golf Title Again

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON

NEW YORK, May 15—A local boy made double good in the metropolitan open golf championship at the Fresh Meadow Club, near Flushing, yesterday when Jimmy Hines of Lakeville won the event for the second year in succession. He was the first to repeat a victory in the tournament since Walter Hagen turned the trick in 1920.

Starting his last round deadlocked with Ralph Guldahl, present holder of the United States open crown, and three strokes in front of any one else, Hines pounded out a 72 in a steady downpour of rain to win by three strokes with a seventy-two-hole total of 287.

As he stood on the eighteenth green twenty yards or so from the pin after his second shot, the 33-year-old Long Island-born pro had two putts left to equal the course record, made by Gene Sarazen when he won the national open there in 1932. But Hines muffed it by taking three putts.

Second Slides Past

His first one was hit all right, dead on line but not quite firmly enough, and the ball, slowed by the wet grass, stopped twelve or fifteen feet short. For a moment or so it looked as if he would hole the next one for a par 4, but his ball slid past the side of the cup and stopped two feet beyond, giving him a 5 for the hole.

Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., pro, who trailed Hines home in the same event at the Forest Hill Field Club last year, finished second with a score of 290 and Guldahl was third with 292.

Snead, who trailed Hines by three strokes going into the final round, might have tied him except for a bad break on the No. 7 hole. By starting with two bidries in the first three holes of the last swing, Snead picked up two strokes on the sandy-haired Lakeville pro but his second shot at the seventh bounced through the fence, out of bounds.

That meant a 7 and a death blow to his chances of catching the steady-going Hines. Despite the fact that he equaled the score made by the winner in the final whirl around the drenched course, second place was the best the West Virginian got.

79 Kills Smith's Chances

Horton Smith, who led the field at the half way mark with a count of 139, hit the ceiling yesterday and was practically out of a contending position when he vaulted to a 79 in the third round. He finished fourth with a total of 295.

There was a tie at 296 for fifth money between Tony Penna of Dayton, Ohio, who played the best two rounds of the day, and Walter Kozak, formerly of Pomonok. Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., where the Professional Golfers Association championship will be played this year; Ben Hogan, former Texas ace, who is now located at the Century Club and Paul Runyan of the Metropolis Club tied for seventh at 297.

The only others to break 300 were Ted Turner of Pine Valley and Willie Klein of Wheatley Hills.

Today's Sundialette

The milk dray collided with a motor lorry, and many bottles of milk were broken. A crowd gathered.

"Poor fellow, you will have to pay for this accident, won't you?" asked a sympathetic man.

"Yes, sir," said the driver.

"Thats too bad," was the reply. "Here is a quarter toward it, and I'll pass the hat for you."

After the crowd had contributed, the driver said to a bystander: "That's the boss.—Vancouver Sun.

Teidai Quintet Routs Kandai By 63-28 Score

Tokyo Imperial University's basketball team ran roughshod over the visiting Kansai University quintet by 63 to 28 Tuesday afternoon at the former's courts. The score at half time was 33 to 16.

The Kansai team was unable to penetrate the effective guarding of the Teidai combination and its offensive was stopped cold. On top of it, the visitors suffered heavily with the loss of Captain Yokomichi at center, who was discharged because of the maximum of four personal fouls, and Forward Osaki was forced to retire because of injury. This completely threw the team out of gear.

The score might have been even larger had Teidai sent in its first string combination. Instead what was done was to experiment a combination of regulars and newcomers throughout the game.

Freshmen Due To Bolster Up Princeton Eleven

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., May 10—Six weeks' Spring training for the Princeton football forces, recently brought to a close by a 6-to-0 victory for an all-Freshman eleven over the upperclassmen, has established one promising fact of interest to followers of Nassau football—the 1938 team will be greatly strengthened by this year's yearling recruits.

The mediocre record turned in last fall by the 1941 eleven led to the conclusion that little help could be expected from that quarter to bolster the 1938 varsity; but the Cubs showed plenty of enthusiasm and eagerness in practice this Spring and even Coach Tad Wieman confessed that they came along a lot faster than he had suspected they would.

This doesn't by any means mean that the Freshmen are going to run away with next year's varsity positions. The Tigers will miss only three consistent starters and both '39 and '40 have experienced men to offer.

Certain Yearlings Sure

But certain yearlings in particlar are definitely granted possibilities of crashing the Tiger line-up that starts against Williams next fall and the whole 1941 section promises old Nassau abundant reserve strength.

The end positions are the most likely to be filled by Freshmen. Princeton was weak at these spots last year and the arrival of four outstanding cub wingmen in Howie Stanley, Jim Aubrey, Thatch Longstreth and Chuck Winston is fortunate.

Described by Wieman as having "more range, weight and height than we've had in the past few years" these new players are going to push such veterans as Mac Raymond, Johnny Meyerholz, Bob Bayer and Jack Daniel. Daniel, who will be a senior, has been a back for the past two years; but Wieman plans to send him up to a wing as a strategy move.

The graduation of Capt. Charley Toll will leave a big gap both literally and figuratively at one tackle spot; but two yearlings, Chico Alley and Hooker Herring—who is built on the same order as Toll—will be fighting to step in at the post. As far as the guards and center go no frosh candidates seem likely now to oust the veterans on hand.

The loss of Jack White, hard-hitting Bengal star for three years, will leave next year's team without a stand-out back; but six or eight behind-the-line men whom Coach Wieman described as "better than average" promise to take care of the loss.

Capt. Tom Mountain should definitely appear at one halfback position, but a wide-open race for the other backfield posts seems likely. Bob Hinchman, Dick Wells, Marty Tiernan, Brud Harper, Bill Lynch and Jack White's brother, Dick, are out front in the running.

Such freshman backs as Stan Pearson, Dave Allerdice and Bob Jackson are good fast men, but rather light, and they will have a pretty hard time breaking into the starting lineup in the face of the experienced material on hand.

Waseda, Meiji Training Hard For Titular Tilt

Chief interest this week in sports circles is the game on Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium between Meiji and Waseda which will decide the Championship of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University League. This is an extra contest for when Keio turned the tables over Waseda last Sunday, Waseda was thrown into a tie with Meiji for the lead with seven victories and three defeats each.

Strenuous Workouts

Both teams are going through strenuous workouts this week in preparation for the championship clash. And it is a bit more enthusiastic in the Meiji camp for the reason that the team had been going through half-hearted workouts the past week on the resigned belief that Waseda would make it two straight over the weaker Keio squad and accordingly clinch the title. But it was a 50-50 affair in the two-game series and there is hope born anew among the Meiji players. Meiji supporters are convinced that this very factor will carry the team through victory on Sunday and thereby win its third championship in a row.

On the other hand, Waseda is not too much excited over the coming battle because it setback Meiji in the two games played this season, and is confident of turning the trick again.

But Kondo, the Waseda pitcher who chucked airtight ball against Meiji on two successive days, is reported ill—the reason why Coach Tanaka elected to start Lefty Matsui, a newcomer, against Keio on Sunday and kept him up to the eighth inning despite frequent Keio tallies—and the odds will favor Meiji if he doesn't recover sufficiently to be able to pitch. Matsui is a promising pitcher but he has not the sharp breaking drop that Kondo has, and which proved a Tartar to Meiji's batsmen.

Shimizu To Start

Lefty Shimizu, who virtually hurled Meiji to the title in the Spring and Autumn seasons last year, has not been going so good this season, with a decided drop in his control, but he will undoubtedly be assigned to the mound in the attempt to down Waseda. If he is in any form, his effective indrop, that is for right handed batters, should give Waseda plenty of trouble.

Rather than Shimizu, the more reliable pitcher this season for Meiji has been Right Hander Kodama, who now and then plays at first when not pitching. His relief pitching won the majority of the seven games for Meiji this season. He will be ready to relieve Shimizu when the going becomes a bit too dangerous for Meiji.

Meiji, with Sakata at first, Kameda at second, Kamei at third and Sugiura at shortstop, appears to have a better infield than Go, Takasu, Minamimura and Murase in the respective positions for Waseda. The doubleplay combination of Sugiura and Kameda is without a peer in the league. But Waseda is the superior in the hitting. Minamimura, for instance, was the leading hitter for the season with a grand .480 mark. And Go, who blasted out two homers in one game recently against Hosei, was seventh in the batting honors with a healthy .333 mark.

Waseda Catcher Better

Waseda has a much better catcher in Ogusu than either Tsukakoshi or Kamibayashi of Meiji, both of whom are playing their first year in the league. The backstop position is Meiji's weakest spot and one of the reasons why the team had not captured the championship outright without going to the length of a playoff. It is likely that Waseda will take advantage of this situation and be bold enough to attempt stealing second base time and again to rattle the Meiji catcher. Then Ogusu is a more effective hitter than either Tsukakoshi or Kamibayashi.

Waseda has the better hitting outfield. Center Fielder Asai was third best hitter in the circuit with a .394 average, Left Fielder Miyoshi in eighth place with a .326 and Right Fielder Nagata registered a creditable .297 mark. For Meiji, Captain Yoshida, who elected to play center field rather than pitch, hit a .345. Kitazawa and Kato in left and right hit .290 and .273. Ito may be sent to left field and he is a dangerous hitter in the pinch.

To sum it up, Waseda has a better hitting team but Meiji appear stronger in the pitching with Kondo on the sick list. And Meiji looks a bit better in the fielding end. It should be a battle royal with the breaks deciding the winner.

Montreal Nips Newark, 3 To 2

MONTREAL, May 14—Marius Russo, Newark left hander, pitched two-hit ball for six innings today, but the Montreal Royals fell on him in the seventh and eighth for half a dozen blows and a 3-to-2 victory, which squared the series at one game each.

Newark jumped ahead in the first inning, when a wild pitch was sandwiched between singles by Schulte and Keller. Keller also drove in the other Bear run in the sixth, when he followed Jim Gleeson's triple with a long fly to center, but that was the best the Bears could do against Ed Chapman, who twirled a smooth six-hit game.

Three singles in the seventh gave Montreal its first tally, and three more, coupled with a sacrifice and a walk, produced the deciding markers in the eighth. Bill Schuster drove in the winning run.

Brazil To Send 100 Athletes To Olympics, O.O.C. Is Informed

Assuring an enthusiastic support, Brazil has promised to send a strong delegation of 100 athletes to the 1940 Olympic Games, according to a letter received Wednesday by the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee.

Brazil sent about 50 athletes to Berlin. This time she will put more efforts in every field particularly in swimming to defeat the Japanese aquatic team, it was learned.

"On to Tokyo in 1940" is a slogan among Japanese residents in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo. It is now estimated that more than 500 Japanese in Rio de Janeiro alone are looking forward to visiting their homeland in the Olympic year, and daily savings are being encouraged among the Japanese, it was revealed.

Baseball Title Won By Texas In Southwest

Christian Science Monitor

AUSTIN, Texas, May 12—Although two weeks of play remain, the Texas Longhorns were proclaimed 1938 Southwest Conference baseball champions this week after they triumphed over Texas Christian for their 11th consecutive victory. Decision of Southern Methodist to cancel two games, one of them with the Longhorns, that has been postponed because of bad weather, speeded the announcement. Texas has three more games scheduled. The nearest competitors, Texas A. & M. and Baylor, have lost four games apiece.

Oddly enough, in winning over the Horned Frogs to clinch the crown, the Longhorns scored fewer runs than in any game this season. Held in check by Durward Horner '40, Texas Christian pitching ace who gave up six hits, the Longhorn sluggers, who have scored 10 or more times in five of the 11 victories, managed to win by the bare margin of 3 to 0.

The Mustangs decided to hang up their baseball togs for the season when rain caused postponement of the second Texas-S. M. U. game. Texas won the first game, 10 to 3. The other game cancelled was with Baylor.

Budge Seeking A Grand Slam

NEW YORK, May 13—A grand slam in tennis, something not even Big Bill Tilden achieved in his prime, is the goal of Don Budge.

The California star, in town with the world's foremost tennis armament confessed he cherished an ambition to become the only player in history to hold at one time all four titles—American, British, Australian and French.

Budge has a fair start, for since last July he has captured the championship of the United States, Great Britain and Australia and now would like to add the French crown to his trophy room.

If he competes in the French tourney, Don should be a heavy favorite. The French have some fair young players, but no one capable of extending the Californian.

Besides being a triple-champion, Budge is the mainspring of the defending Davis Cup team. The Trophy is not often out of his thoughts, for one of the first things he did when he arrived in company with his doubles partner, Gene Mako, was to predict that Sidney B. Wood Jr., would make a strong bid for the Cup team.

"Wood is playing awfully good tennis," said Budge, who has practiced with Wood on the coast and watched him in several tournaments. The champion added that if the blond New Yorker played the same way in the eastern tournament he would find a place on the team awaiting him.

Wood has played little top-flight tennis in the last two years; but he is rated one of the most brilliant of contemporary players. Friends say he would be receptive to a Davis Cup team berth. All he has to do is prove he is superior to Frankie Parker, Bobby Riggs and Bitsy Grant, the three players most often mentioned in connection with the second singles berth.

Dauber Clinches Preakness Stakes To Win $51,875

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

BALTIMORE, May 14—The pennon of victory went to the Pennant colt Dauber, whose dam is Ship o' War, as 25,000 huddled in the wind and rain to see the forty-eighth Preakness Stakes at historic Pimlico today. It was not even close as William du Pont's 3-to-2 favorite came from far off the pace to score by seven lengths at the end of the mile and three-sixteenths and thrust himself further forward as a leading candidate for 3-year-old honors.

Mr. du Pont was not present to see his $29,000 purchase of last Fall gallop home with the $51,875 that was the winner's share of the purse, which grossed in all $69,500. The Woodlawn Vase was presented to Trainer R. E. (Dick) Handlen by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, a leader in the Maryland Jockey Club.

Second at the wire was Cravat, now carrying the colors of Townsend B. Martin, and an outsider in the betting. Cravat was something of a surprise as an entry, but much more so as a competitor. He and Dauber came from last and next to last and went past the seven others with a whoop and a splash over the sloppy track. Cravat was up to take the place by a nose from Menow, who made all the early pace, just as he had in the Kentucky Derby.

Cravat Earns $10,000

Both Dauber and Cravat were purchased out of the C. V. Whitney dispersal at Pimlico last Fall. Cravat's sale price was $10,600 and his second money today way $10,000. Thus these two colts have done remarkably well for their new owners.

Counting his second money in the Santa Anita and Kentucky Derbies, Dauber has won $69,175 this year, and is second on the list of money winners. The leader is Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, another powerful candidate for the 3-year-old championship.

Dauber left nothing to the imagination as he won the hard way. He was handled by Maurice (Moose) Peters, his regular jockey, and was much the best. It seems clear that he can handle himself like a first-class colt no matter what the footing, and much more than this one can hardly ask.

The time of 1:59 4-5 was unusually fast considering the going, and the manner in which he finished indicated that Dauber could go on as far as horses run. This seems certain to make him an outstanding choice for the mile and a half of the Belmont Stakes on June 4. From the manner in which he toyed with his scale weight of 126 pounds and his eight rivals, it would seem that the Pennant colt has a bright future.

Can't Wait Runs Fourth

In order back of the first three the horses were Can't Wait, Sun Egret, Bull Lea, Fighting Fox, Hypocrite and Bull Whip. This placing would seem a fair measure of their ability, as the race was truly run with no apparent excuse except the going for any that failed. And the ability to run in any footing is the measure of a champion's ability.

One development of the race moved Cravat up to a higher place in general consideration. While this son of Sickle was a disappointment in Florida, he has been brought back to racing trim with great patience. He ran over tired horses, but it did appear that this colt and Dauber were the only stayers in a field of sprinters.

Cravat, who returned $35.20 and $13 for $2 place and show tickets in the mutuels, was backed by Mr. Martin, who was present with friends. Menow's price for third was $4.50 and he turned the tables on Can't Wait, who had edged him into fourth place in the Derby, which was a sixteenth of a mile longer.

Keio Nine Will Play Twinbill At Koshien

Keio University's baseball team which lived up to its reputation by splitting its classic series with Waseda last Sunday by winning 7 to 5 will leave Tokyo Station by the 1:30 p.m. train on Saturday to play a doubleheader against the Kwansei Gakuin and Kansai University teams at the Koshien ball park on the next day, beginning at 1 p.m.

15,000 M. Canoe Race To Be Held July 24, The First In Japan

More than 60 Japanese canoe paddlers will participate in the first canoe race in this country to be held on July 24 on the rapid stream of the Sagami River under the auspices of the Japan Canoe Association, it was announced Wednesday.

The proposed canoe course is approximately 15,000 meters long and plenty of thrills are promised. The race will begin at Atsuki, in Kanagawa-ken, and the finishing point will be Shonan-Ohashi.

Formerly the Japan Canoe Association was affiliated with the Japan Amateur Rowing Association, but the canoe body became an independent organization in view of the forthcoming Olympic Games.

Much Optimism At Minnesota Over Grid Work

Christian Science Monitor

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 13—A growing optimism in the University of Minnesota football camp brought on by a week-by-week improvement in the caliber of the spring performances will be tested for its soundness next Thursday, when the Gophers will give a public review of their spring programs in Memorial Stadium.

With the big spring squad divided numerically into the Maroons and the Golds, Coach Bernie Bierman will send the two groups against each other in the annual spring game, the last formal item on the spring training program.

Northwest football fans will have the opportunity of getting a preview of some dozen prospective sophomores who will play a part in Minnesota football next fall and will also see their old favorites in action for the first time since the Wisconsin game closed the season last November.

New Ends Needed

Making their initial public appearance will be close to a dozen line candidates who hope to fill the positions left by the graduation of four regular linemen. Five sophomore ends will be in the lineups of one team or the other during the afternoon, among them Bob Fitch, the rugged St. Louis Park graduate; Bill Johnson of Slayton; Bob Bjorcklund and Judd Ringer of Minneapolis and Dan Hritzko of Wilpin. All will be aiming at the two regular end jobs vacated by Ray King and Dwight Reed against such veterans as John Mariucci of Eveleth, Earl Ohlgren of Cokato and George (Butch) Nash of Minneapolis.

Only four lettermen tackles remain from last year's varsity squad in Charles Schultz, Bob Johnson, Warren Kilbourne, and Win Pederson. With plenty of berths to be won in this department a number of promising first-year men will be out to make a good showing in the annual spring contest, among them Urban Odson, a 210-pound husky from Clark, S. D.; Bill Kuusisto of Minneapolis, Neil Litman and Carl Magnuson of St. Paul and Phil Schiedermayer of Carleton.

Replacements will also be necessary in the ranks of the guards, where Capt.-elect Francis Twedell, Horace Bell, Allen Rork and Ken Filbert remain. Contesting the reserves for these varsity positions will be Don Twedell, almost the counterpart of his brother in looks and actions; Fred Grewing of St. Paul, who was out of action last season, and Bill Morgan, also of St. Paul.

Quarterback Needed

With Vic Spadaccini gone from quarterback and Andy Uram, Rudy Gumitro and Bill Matheny no longer running at halfback, much of the attention of the spring game audience will be centered upon the new backfield candidates and upon several reserves from last season who saw no action in games.

Leading the sophomore halfback parade will be Joe Jamnik of Aurora and Bob Paffrath of Redwood Falls, a pair of stocky speedsters who have shown considerable ball-carrying ability thus far this spring; plus Stuart MacDonald of Shakopee and Gene Newton of Minneapolis.

George Franck, the Davenport (Iowa) halfback, a former high school sprint champion, has also risen to the ranks of the top left halfbacks after seeing no action last season. Franck, who is a 70-yard punter, has become the chief understudy to Harold Van Emery at left half. Leland Johnson, a reserve in 1937, is also very much in the halfback picture.

With only two lettermen available at the important quarterback post, considerable attention will be given to Orville Freeman and John Bartelt of Minneapolis, who will carry a part of the signal calling duties on May 19 along with George Faust and George Gould, both lettermen.

Several experimental shifts of players from one position to another may be carried out by Coach Bernie Bierman during the course of the game. Larry Buhler, the big fullback, may run at right half for a spell and Harold Van Emery may move over from his regular spot at left half to try the blocking back assignments.

Maehata Pool Is Completed At Wakayama

WAKAYAMA, June 8—Commemorating the victory by Mrs. Hideko Maehata Hyodo in one of the most sensational race in the 200-meter-breaststroke at Berlin in 1936 during the 11th Olympic Games, a 25-meter swimming pool was completed here recently. Construction was started on December 1, 1937 at the estimated cost of 10,000 yen along the Kino River under the auspices of this city. It will be called the Maehata Pool.

Even when Mrs. Hyodo was a pigtailed small school girl, she was earnestly practicing in the Kino River with a dream of a world crown. She had been repeatedly beaten by a slight margin in Hawaii and again at Los Angeles in the 10th Olympic Games in 1932, however, the greatest victory finally came to her at the Berlin Olympic Games.

The inaugural ceremony of the newly constructed swimming pool will be held some time this month as soon as the Japan Amateur Swimming Association officially recognizes the pool.

Mrs. Hyodo will be honored as the first mermaid to swim in the clear water for the opening of the pool at the ceremony, then the All-Japan Women's Championship meet will follow.

Miss Kazue Kojima, Japan's best freestyle swimmer from the city who placed sixth in the 400-meter freestyle swim at Berlin in 1936, and was the first Japanese girl to enter the finals of a freestyle event, will also be honored at the opening ceremony.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

"Thumbs Down"

When a gladiator was defeated, it rested with the spectators to decide whether he should be slain or whether he should live. If the spectators wished him to live, they turned their thumbs down. If they wished him to die, they turned their thumbs up. Therefore, thumbs down does not mean condemnation, but exactly the opposite. The confusion is due to a mistranslation of the proper passage in Plinius and Juvenal.

Haiyama Quits Keio Ball Team Over Street Row

Too much celebration over his team's victory over Waseda last Sunday has cost First Baseman Motoaki Haiyama not only the captaincy but membership in the Keio baseball squad. Drinking a bit too much liquor Sunday night, Haiyama was engaged in a fight with a taxi-driver. And with him was Katsuichi Iizuka, a pitcher.

Both regretted their conduct as unbecoming members of the Tokyo Six University Baseball and on Thursday tendered their resignation from the team. It was accepted after deliberation on the part of the university authorities.

Considerable sympathy is being expressed in sporting circles for the two players, for the reason that their cases would have been dismissed with only a reprimand if they were mere students and not ball players, and because of their prompt decision in quitting.

Both players too had been model students in conduct, it is said.

As successor to Haiyama, Catcher Toraji Sakurai was elected captain. He is without doubt the best catcher in the league today, a reliable hitter and one of the fastest man on the bases.

No advance tickets will be sold for the championship game between Meiji and Waseda Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium. The game is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock.

Foxx's Long Drive Wins For Red Sox

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 14—Jimmy Foxx topped off a wild-hitting ball game today with a long-range homer into the center-field bleachers in the eleventh inning that gave the Red Sox a 10-to-9 triumph over the Senators and boosted the Sox into first place in the American League.

Overcoming Washington's early lead, which had been compiled by old man Al Simmons, who clouted two homers, a triple and a single and drove in six runs, the Sox tied and ball game with a three-run outburst in the ninth and won in the second extra frame on Jimmy's jolt.

Seventh Victory in Row

The victory climaxed a triumphant week-long drive by Tom Yawkey's gold-plated hose, stretched their winning streak to seven straight, and bounced the Senators out of the league lead by half a game.

There were six homers altogether. In addition to Foxx and Simmons, Gene Desautels, the Sox catcher; Joe Vosmik, outfielder, and Joe Cronin, shortstop-manager, each sent one out of the lot.

The Sox collected sixteen hits for thirty-one bases and the Senators belted fifteen for twenty-five bases. With that kind of an assault on both sides, the game developed into a parade of pitchers, from bullpen to box to showers. Elon Hogsett, who entered in the tenth, was charged with the defeat, and Rookie Lee Rogers, up from Little Rock, who pitched the eleventh frame, drew credit for the victory.

Drives in Three Runs

Foxx had a double and single, as well as his homer, and drove in three runs. Cronin also batted three across with his four-bagger and a single. Vosmik and Chapman each had three hits.

But the batting hero of the day was Simmons. His first homer came in the opening frame with the bags empty. His second was a pay-off wallop with the bases loaded in the fifth, featuring a five-run splurge. His triple in the ninth came with a man on second.

Jacobus Wants To Classify Pro Golfing Ranks

NEW YORK, May 11—A sharper cleavage in the ranks of professional golfers, putting the tournament troupers on one side of the fence and the teaching pros on the other, was recommended today by George Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers Association.

Jacobus made his recommendation as contestants gathered for the annual Metropolitan open championship, which starts tomorrow with more than the usual array of touring stars. The group includes Harry Cooper and Sam Snead, Jacobus' co-favorites to succeed Jimy Hines as champion; Horton Smith, Jimmy Thomson, and Lawson Little.

U. S. Open Champion Ralph Guldahl also is in the field, but he recently took a job in the Metropolitan area and cannot be considered a touring pro for this event.

If Jacobus' suggestion were followed, the top-notch pros who really dominate competition winter and summer would stick to that and to exhibition matches. They would not be permitted to have club affiliations. The others, except for occasional tournament appearances, would make it their business to handle club jobs properly.

"Expansion of the summer and winter circuits in recent years," said Jacobus, "has helped stimulate golf interest throughout the country. But it also has drawn pros away from their club jobs to such an extent that more and more club officials and members are complaining.

"It's part of his job for a pro to play in enough tournaments to prove to his members that he's worth his salt. It's something else again to have him play in so many that members who want instruction have to get it from assistants.

"Sooner or later that's going to hurt the pro himself."

Meanwhile Jacobus was unable to decide between two of the top troupers, Cooper and Snead, as his choice for the three-day, 72-hole Met open, the event that each year gets the summer season under way.

It will be played at Fresh Meadow, where Gene Sarazen won the U. S. open in 1932.

"Both Harry and Sam were hitting the ball more consistently than any of the others this winter," Jacobus supported his choices. "Both are really mechanical marvels. One reason I'd like to see Sam win, though, is because he had such a disappointment in this event last year, when he shot a record 65, then saw it rained out."

In addition to Cooper and Snead, crack contenders for Hines' crown are the defending champion, Guldahl; Smith, Thomson, Little, Paul Runyan, Vic Ghezzi, North and South winner; Frank Walsh, Frank Moore, and Ben Hogan, young Texan who, like Guldahl, is making his tournament debut as a Metropolitan district pro.

Yale Set Back By Holy Cross

N.Y. Herald Tribune

WORCESTER, Mass., May 14.—Holy Cross set down Yale today, 9 to 4, in their annual ball game before a crowd of 4,000. Art Kenney, Crusader southpaw, allowed the Bulldogs seven scattered hits and struck out eleven. Moe Jubitz, Yale ace, had an off-day, walking six and yielding eleven hits. Kenney also issued six passes.

Holy Cross scored three in the opening frame on two singles and a triple by Blasser. Three singles and a triple by Joubert netted three more runs in the second and sewed up the game.

Two singles gave Yale a run in the first. An error, two walks and a balk scored two more for the Blue in the second. A double by Marcus and Tibbetts's second blow of the game registered the final New Haven tally in the eighth.

Penn Crew Cops Historic Cup On Lake Carnegie

By ROBERT F. KELLEY

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., May 14—With a cold rain drenching the few hardy hundreds who huddled on the banks of Lake Carnegie, light and heavyweight oarsmen spent today racing over the placid waters. Records were shattered in the morning and, when the gray day drew to its close, the heavyweight varsity of Pennsylvania and the 150-pound varsity of Yale shared the major honors.

To the Philadelphians went the historic Childs Cup, by right of their clean-cut victory over Princeton and Columbia in that order. To the Yale lightweights went the Joe Wright Cup, symbolic of the college championship in that branch of rowing. Yale, in this event, came through a full day of competition against seven other colleges, defeating Harvard, Massachusetts Tech and Princeton in that order in the final heat which brought the day of racing to its close.

Rowing conditions, through the day, were ideal for racing but poor for the spectators. During the heats for the Joe Wright Challenge Cup this morning the Henley distance mark was broken four times as the four finalists were decided. It fell three times in the other 150-pound racing in the morning. The wind rose a bit in the afternoon, however, and conditions were slower. Penn's winning time in the Childs Cup varsity contest, 9:37.2, was considerably over the record, but the crew was not pushed hard and rowed a careful, well planned and executed race.

Score a Brilliant Victory

The Philadelphians took two of the races in the Childs Cup regatta for their junior varsity scored with a bit of open water to spare over Columbia and Princeton in that order. The freshman race, which opened the Childs Cup division, saw a brilliant victory scored by the Columbia youngsters, who fought their way into the lead three-quarters of a mile from home and came on nicely to win by a length and a half over the Red and Blue, with the Tigers again in third place.

The heavyweight varsities, despite the fact that the officials had been wrestling with bad weather and a very full shedule, went to the line almost on the dot of starting time. The veteran Julian Curtiss had them away in a perfect start. They appeared as one crew against the darkened water. For the better part of the first quarter-mile they hung together, all three in the high thirties of their racing start. Princeton, for a few fleeting strokes, stuck the nose of its shell in front, with Columbia, in the middle, dropping back.

Penn was the first to come down from the racing start and Frank Bosco had the Red and Blue swing long and nicely in the low thirties. The Philadelphians stuck there most of the race, going up to about 36 or 37 at the finish. After the first quarter-mile, they went to the lead and stayed there until the end.

Open Water at Mile

For the first mile of the race, the Tigers stayed within striking distance and Columbia held to the stern of the Princeton boat. Princeton was rowing almost stroke for stroke with Penn, the latter going to a lead of three-quarters of a length at the end of the first half-mile. For a shade in there the home eight rallied and came back a bit, but then slumped and Penn went away to have open water at the finish of a mile.

The Lions challenged Princeton for quite a while for second place. Rowing a bit higher, they once moved up until it seemed they had less than a half length to catch the Tigers. But in the final drive, Princeton went away from them to take second place with a convincing margin.

The final for the Joe Wright Cup was a high-stroking and tight fight, as all lightweight races are. All four crews were away nicely and when they had a mile left to row, the order was Yale, Tech, Princeton and Harvard. They held that order, still banging away at a high stroke, for another quarter mile, when the Elis had a half length. The Crimson began coming then and moved past Princeton in the next quarter mile and continued on to pass Tech, though it couldn't bring back the Yale shell which had set the pace most of the way.

That race, which made the 150-pound Elis the successors to Tech as the outstanding lightweight crew of the country, finished a day of racing which has been unmatched in the history of 150-pound rowing. Eight colleges started and in the first heat this morning Harvard and Yale qualified, the Crimson blazing a time of 6:58 and the Blue saving second place by a bit more than a length from Penn. Columbia, in fourth position, failed to qualify after racing almost level with Penn. Princeton and Tech qualified in the second.

That second heat was a terrific battle, Princeton winning in the superb time of 6:54.9, a half length ahead of Tech, which had a quarter length on Cornell. Manhattan was in fourth place. It was great rowing under fast conditions.

Has a Length to Spare

Harvard won the junior varsity lightweight event from Princeton. Yale and Penn in that order, having about a length to spare. Cornell had the consolation of a good victory in the freshman lightweight event, winning over Penn, Yale, Columbia and Princeton, also with about a length to spare.

The afternoon racing started with a third heavyweight varsity race over the Henley distance, in which Yale scored over Penn and Princeton with open water and cleared the way for the start of the Childs Cup regatta.

The old Henley time of 7:01.2 was bettered seven times in the morning racing, when conditions were extremely fast.

Japan-Manchoukuo Track Meet Proposed

A Japan-Manchoukuo athletic meet has been proposed to be held in July in Manchoukuo to commemorate the admission of Manchoukuo to the International Amateur Athletic Federation, it was learned here Thursday.

Approximately 30 Japanese athletes, will invade the new State to seek pre-Olympic crowns, it was also revealed.

Harvard Splits Double-Header With Columbia

Herald Tribune

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 14—Early-inning bombardments decided both games as Columbia and Harvard split an Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League double-header at Soldiers' Field today.

Columbia won the first game, 6 to 4, while Harvard blasted seven runs across the plate in the first inning of the second game and continued to a 12-to-7 decision. Both were seven-inning games.

The quick-breaking slants of Jack Moller baffled the Crimson for most of the first game, and two rallies, in the fourth and seventh innings, could produce only two runs each.

Columbia chalked up four runs in the second and third innings as the result of sloppy Harvard fielding. Two errors, two stolen bases, a passed ball, a sacrifice and two scratch singles opened the scoring with a pair in the second, while two passes were sandwiched among three scratch singles for two in the third. Two singles in the sixth off the delivery of Ulysses Lupien, first baseman who took a turn on the mound, produced the two-run margin.

In the second game Columbia was without an effective pitcher, and Harvard combined ten well placed safeties with eight free bases for its twelve runs.

Columbia's biggest scoring effort in this game came in the fifth inning, when Bill Stickel, first baseman, clouted a homer with the bases filled. Bob Stolz, for Columbia, and Lupien, for Harvard, also collected circuit wallops.

Eddie Ingalls went the route for Harvard in the second game, and although allowing nine hits, held the Lions in check with men on bases. He contributed three singles to the Crimson attack. The score:

Rikkyo And Nihon Battle On Sunday For Swim Honors

The fifth annual triangular swimming meet among Rikkyo, Nihon and Meiji universities will be held Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine pool.

Indications point to a nip and tuck battle between Rikkyo and Nihon universities for the championship. Having lost Ishiharada and Ito, both Olympic swimmers through graduation, Meiji is not in the running.

Nihon University has lost Masanori Yusa, erstwhile sprint champion of the Orient, also through graduation, but it has Sasaki, who has been swimming the 100 meters in 59 seconds, and Tetsuo Hamuro, world's best breaststroke swimmer today.

Rikkyo has Udo, Taguchi and Arai, Olympic freestyle swimmers, and will be out to win its third straight title.

The events are:—
300-meter medley relay.
800-meter freestyle.
200-meter freestyle.
200-meter breaststroke.
400-meter freestyle.
100-meter backstroke.
100-meter freestyle.
800-meter relay.

Harvard Varsity Outrows Cornell

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, May 14—Harvard's smooth-stroking varsity crew today sprinted from behind in the last quarter mile and outdistanced Cornell's powerful and heavier eight by a length and a quarter in a quadrangular race with Syracuse and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the Charles River.

The unbeaten Crimson covered the mile and three-quarter course in 9 minutes 10.8 seconds, against 9:15.4 for the Ithacans. Each of the four varsities held the lead at one time or another.

Stroke Jim Chace worked the Harvard beat up from 32 to 37 to pull even with the Cornell shell and then hoisted it to 39 to gain the winning edge during the last 200 yards.

Syracuse was third, two lengths behind Cornell, in 9.26.4, and M. I. T. trailed the Orange by almost four lengths in 9:43.

The Syracuse junior varsity finished three-quarters of a length ahead of Harvard, with Cornell third.

The Crimson freshmen opened the intercollegiate part of the merged American Rowing Association regatta by sweeping to a three-length victory over three rivals. Syracuse was second, followed by M. I. T. and Cornell. Harvard's time was 10 minutes 23 second.

Has Only One Rival

Joe Burk of the Penn A. C., Philadelphia, the national and Canadian singles sculling champion, retained his American Rowing Association title by defeating Roger Bates of the Cambridge Boat Club, his only rival, by 66 seconds in a mile and five-sixteenths race.

Burk, who plans to compete in the Diamond Sculls in England this Summer, led from the start and officials estimated his margin over Bates as "more than fifty yards." Burk was timed in 7 minutes 56 seconds and Bates in 9:02.

The race became a two-man affair when Joseph Anygal of the Ravenwood Boat Club, Long Island, withdrew. He qualified for the championship singles by winning this morning's association event from four rivals.

The first of the regatta's Henley distance races for eight-oared crews, the interclub event, was won by the Eliot House crew from Harvard, which had a length on the Crimson's Lowell House eight. Eliot's time was 7:54.

Union B. C. is Third

The second-place crew finished a length ahead of the Union Boat Club's second eight, and the other entries were the M. I. T. third varsity and Kirkland House from Harvard.

Three entries started in the quad race for the Puritan Challenge Cup, and that competition was an all-Union Boat Club affair with Robert Warner, George Kerry, Edward Watson and George Merrill pulling away to a two-length victory over four clubmates and a four-length margin over the Riverside Boat Club four from Cambridge.

The winning time for the mile-and-five-sixteenths race was 7 minutes 42 seconds.

Harvard's third varsity crew won the eight-oared Stewards' Challenge Cup, beating the Union Boat by a quarter length. Harvard's time was 8:05 and the Union Club was caught in 8:06.3.

Korbel Home First

Ivan Korbel of Harvard won the intercollegiate singles sculls by two lengths over Francis Kinney of Princeton in 9:08. Kinney had that same margin on the third finisher, Peter Cunningham of Harvard. Two other Crimson entries, Nicholas Satterlee and Thomas J. Darcey Jr., trailed.

After spotting two rivals about a length until the half-way mark, Darcey and Harvey Picker of Harvard had a length and a half margin on the Union Boat Club's Edward Watson and Russell Codman at the finish of the mile and five-sixteenth doubles sculls for the Schuylkill Challenge Cup.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

The Oldest Village In U.S.

Far to the west of the Rio Grande river, seemingly placed there to be farthest from the most likely spot in the country where water and life are synonymous, are three of the largest and most important pubelos of New Mexico—Acoma, Laguna, and Zuni.

High up on a rocky mesa, lying along the surface so closely as to be almost indistinguishable, is the peublo of Acoma, the oldest continuously inhabited village in the United States. For centuries—so long that the Indians themselves have no idea how long—the Acomenos have descended the narrow rock passageway from their safe eyrie and farmed their lands below, returning to the safety of their sky-dwelling at nightfall. The materials for the houses of Acoma and the huge Mission church were carried up the cliff on human backs. The great vigas, or beams, were dragged from forests forty miles away. Even the earth for the burial ground has to be painfully brought up from the plain below by countless thousands of baskets-full.

Laguna is the newest of the Indian villages. It was built by Acoma and Zuni Indians who were friendly to the Spaniards in the years following the Pueblo Rebellion of 1680 and the reconquest of the territory by de Vargas.

Brundage Challenges Action Of Bingham In Boycotting Tokyo

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, June 10—Japan's right to be the host of the 1940 Olympic Games regardless of the fact that she is waging war on China again drew strong support from Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, in a statement made public here today.

Openly challenging action taken yesterday by William H. Bingham, Harvard University athletic director and chairman of the American track and field committee at the Berlin Olympics, who announced that he would have no connection with the 1940 Games if held at Tokyo, Mr. Brundage declared that sport and politics must remain apart.

"Relations between the United States and Japanese Governments," he asserted, "are in the hands of the State Department, not the American Olympic Committee. Members of the A.O.C., like all civilians, abhor war but unfortunately can do nothing about it."

Re-emphasizing that the Olympics are an international event, Mr. Brundage concluded, "Because the Games happen to be held in Japan, it does not make them a Japanese event."

Three-Year-Olds Dominate Racing On French Turf

PARIS, May 21—If the three-year-old situation dominates all others it is due to two reasons. First, two-year-olds do not run in France before the beginning of June except in selling events, and there is talk of suppressing these early-season selling races in the future so small have been the fields this Spring. Secondly, as there are no big handicaps, as in England, and a general paucity of valuable races for older horses, few good animals are kept in training after their three-year-old careers, many being sold for abroad and others, if showing any aptitude, being put over jumps, where many valuable prizes are to be picked up.

More Enlightened

We are gradually becoming more enlightened in regard to the classic generation, and with the French Derby only three weeks ahead, it is possible to draw up a short list of colts which should include the winner of the Chantilly classic. The Guineas are over, not that they signify much. The winner of the colts race was Gaspillage, but his victory was just as lucky as his defeat by Astrologer in the Prix Daru was unlucky. If Tranquil had not swerved last Sunday and thrown Lady Granard's Cavallino out of his stride the latter would certainly have scored. Gaspillage's limit seems a mile, and I doubt whether he will be started at Chantilly, but Cavallino is reserved for our Derby.

Astrologer was fourth in the Guineas, and seemingly we now have a reliable line as to his form and that of other horses that ran in the Prix Juigne. But Mr. J. E. Widener need not despair for he has a better colt than Astrologer in Castel Fusano, who, running for the first time this season, was second to Royal Gift and in front of Cillas in the Prix Hocquart, and this week has shown his real mettle by winning the Prix Matchem at Le Tremblay, beating Eclair au Chocolat with two or three pounds in hand.

The last-named horse is one of Baron Edouard de Rothschild's classic hopes, with Royal Bitt, Bougainville, and Anchois. Bougainville has run only once, when he gave a brilliant display, and tomorrow, at Longchamp, he will be seen again, accompanied by Anchois, in the Prix Noailles.

M. Boussac's Cillas, who was so brilliant in the Prix Greffulhe and disappointed so badly in the Prix Hocquart, is expected to rehabilitate himself in the Prix Lupin a week tomorrow. His two-year-old form showed that he is somewhat erratic, running well one day and badly the next time.

My list of the good colts includes those I have mentioned with Six Avril and Antonym. Six Avril, it may be remembered, beat Royal Gift in the Prix L'Esperance. He is still engaged in the Prix Noailles tomorrow. Antonym, who last month finished two lengths behind Royal Fift in La Bourse, has come into the limelight by winning the Brussels Grand Prix. He there defeated Blue Star, a very fast French filly, who has no classic engagements, but is undoubtedly among the best of her sex at the age.

Outlook Clearer

In regard to the fillies, the outlook is much clearer. Feerie won the French One Thousand Guineas with such ease that she is an obvious favorite for the French Oaks in a fortnight's time. Gossip, who was having her first race of the season, was second, and Shrew third, and both should improve, but Feerie has now the general vote as being the champion. There was considerable interest in the Prix La Rochette at Langchamp on Thursday, when La Sultane, winner of the Prix Thomas Bryon at the end of last season, made her three-year-old debut. But she failed to beat Asheratt, whom you have seen in England. Neither Asheratt nor Blue Star was entered in the French Oaks, but Feerie will have a worthy opponent in Ma Normandie, who, in the Guineas consolation prize on Sunday showed courage to win in a very close finish. Her time for the mile, however, was four-fifths of a second longer than Feerie required.

The Prix Noailles is the fourth of the five produce stakes, and the restrictive clause is that it is confined to French-bred three-year-olds sired by foreign-born stallions. It is over the Derby distance of a mile and a half. The issue seems to lie between Bougainville and Cinq Avril. The latter showed rare courage in his last two victories, and I expect him to succeed again.

The following are the probable starters and jockeys in the Prix Noailles:—

Flicker .....G. Duforez
Ksar el Srir .....C.-H. Semblat
Cinq Avril .....F. Herve
Anchois .....C. Bouillon
Bougainville .....P. Villecourt
(All carry 9st. 2lb.)

Anchois and Bougainville coupled in the betting to win.

Meiji, Waseda Nines Set For Sunday Game

The championship clash Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Meiji Shrine stadium between Waseda and Meiji seems a toss-up as both teams are evenly matched and are rarin' to go.

Meiji will undoubtedly send Lefty Shimizu to the mound, and if he is any form, Waseda will be in for a tough afternoon.

On the other hand, Waseda may be without the services of Southpaw Kondo, who defeated Meiji in two straight games earlier in the season, because of illness. In that case, Matsui, another left hander pitching his first season in the circuit, will have to twirl and upon his showing will depend Waseda's chance of winning.

Canada To Send Skating Teams To 1940 Games

A decision to send a group of speed and figure skaters besides a strong ice hockey team to the 5th Winter Olympic Games at Sapporo in 1940 by the Canadian Skating Federation was revealed here Friday.

The Canadian skating body sent a letter of inquiry to the National Skating Union of Japan in regard to the weather condition and other technical preparations by Sapporo.

The Japanese skating body promptly responded to the Canadian organization in giving details on the Japanese preparations for the 5th Winter Olympic Games.

The incorporation of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee was formally decided Friday at its 27th regular meeting at the Peers' Club, which was attended by all executive members, Noboru Ogawa, Foreign Vice-Minister's proxy, and officials concerned.

It is understood that the incorporation will soon be applied to the Welfare Ministry for sanction.

The inclusion of glider competition which was left up to the O.O.C. by the International Olympic Committee was virtually decided to be eliminated in view of the initial stage of the event.

In so far as the Olympic fire relay is concerned, the question how to execute such a long-distance relay from Athens to Tokyo will be given further studies, it was decided.

The O.O.C. also discussed an Olympic bell to be rung during the opening and closing ceremonies in 1940, however, it will not be constructed like the Los Angeles Olympic Games.

Some amendments were made to the regulations of the O.O.C. to the effect that the Sapporo Winter Games will be under the control of the Sapporo Winter Games executive committee.

Furthermore, Lt.-General Hideki Tojo, newly appointed War Vice-Minister, was officially recognized as a member of the O.O.C. to succeed the outgoing War Vice-Minister Yoshijiro Umezu.

The Maehata Pool

To commemorate for all time the feat of its home town heroine, Hideko Maehata, now Mrs. Hyodo, who won the 200-meter breaststroke championship at the 11th Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936, this pool has been built at Hashimoto-machi, Ito-gun, Wakayama Prefecture. It will be opened officially sometime this month after formal approval by the Japan Swimming Federation, and Mrs. Hyodo will be the first to plunge into the pool.

Nornay Saddler Best Of 700 Dogs In N.J. Show

By KINGSLEY CHILDS
N.Y. Times

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., May 14—Another notable victory in his enviable chain of best-in-show successes was recorded by the smooth-haired foxterrier Ch. Nornay Saddler from the Wissaboo Kennels of Old Westbury, L. I., today to climax the Orange Kennel Club's fifth annual all-breed exhibition at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Put down in superb condition by his handler, Leonard Brumby, this stylish-moving imported dog carried off the top honors for the seventeenth time in his career. Nine of these triumphs have been tallied in Saddler's last eleven ring appearances.

Dr. Samuel Milbank of New York judged the final which brought together a classy field of group winners.

Duke Champion in Field

Five of the division rulers came into the arena with American best-in-show decisions to their credit and the only other contestant seeking the premier laurels was the handsome blue-belton English setter, Bayldone Buccaneer of Prune's Own, an international champion owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. Biddle Duke of Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

With this fine array before him, Dr. Milbank was faced with a difficult task, and he looked them all over carefully before designating Saddler for the major prize. The foxterrier cavorted in grand style and gave a splendid performance just as he had done in capturing the chief award at the Bryn Mawr event last Saturday.

In order to qualify for the finale, Saddler earlier in the afternoon scored his thirty-first terrier group success after he defeated the wire-haired bitch C. Boarzell Brilliance, owned by Mrs. H. H. Swann of Santa Barbara, Calif., for the breed honors.

Boarzell Brilliance was in fine fettle and, under the guidance of Tom Gately, impressively topped a good array of wire-haired specimens.

Leads Milson Top Notcher

The light-marked, heavily coated English setter exhibited by Charley Day's gained his third group victory for Mr. and Mrs. Duke, shading the veteran campaigner, Ch. Milson Top Notcher, an Irish setter from the Milson Kennels of Harrison, N. Y., in the competition for gun dogs. Top Notcher went best in show at Trenton last Sunday.

Others seeking the principal prize included the attractive white standard poodle Ch. Blakeen Jung Frau, from the Blakeen Kennels of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman R. Hoyt of Katonah, N. Y., a consistent winner this year. She was shown by Mrs. Hoyt and had many admirers at the ringside.

Another contestant was the bound group victor, the well-proportioned beagle dog, Ch. Meadow Lark Draftsman, owned by the Foxcatcher Beagles of Bellevue, Del., and handled by Nate Levine. The German shepherd, Ch. Dewet von Der Starrenburg, from the Giralda Farms of Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge of Madison, N. J., also paraded before Dr. Milbank.

Tops Breed for 13th Time

Rounding out the field of finalists was the rich red sable pekinese Ch. Kai Lo of Dah Lyn, shown by her owner, John B. Royce of Brookline, Mass. Kai Lo earlier headed the Pekes for the thirteenth time and then went on to achieve her eighth verdict in the toy division.

Representatives of sixty-one breeds were among the 700 dogs on the benches.

Rain started in midafternoon and the late phases of the judging were held under the shelter of tents.

Waseda Fencing Team Off For United States

Waseda University's "kendo" Japanese fencing team of 12 members, including Coach Takano and Manager Nakajima, left on the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Hiye Maru from Yokohama at 4 p.m. Friday en route to the United States.

The team will appear in exhibitions throughout the Pacific Coast region.

It is the second Waseda team to go to America.

Women's Tennis Gaining Strong Hold In Britain

By F. R. BURROW
Observer

LONDON, May 22—If proof were needed of the increasing hold women's tennis has upon the popular imagination, the first day of the grass court season, when the Surrey championships began at Surbiton, supplied it to the full.

All the afternoon, on the two center courts of the club, women's single followed women's single, without any man except the umpires being allowed so much as to enter the sacred enclosure. Twenty years ago such a happening would have been impossible. Then, it was the men whom the crowds thronged to see at Surbiton—G. L. Patterson, Pat O'Hara Wood, H. Roper Barrett, M. J. G. Ritchie, Sir George Thomas, S. N. Doust, R. W. Heath, R. Lycett, L. Raymond, B. I. C. Norton, F. M. B. Fisher, all of them names to conjure with. This was in 1919, in the first tournament to be held in this country after the war; and men's play was what people came to see.

What a difference today! And the reason? Well, Mlle. Lenglen had not yet appeared in England; she was to make her sensational debut five weeks later at Wimbledon. And it cannot be denied that the advent of "Suzanne" was the beginning of the increased desire among women to play the game, and that it was to see her play that the crowds became far too big for the old Wimbledon to hold. Ever since then women's tennis has become more and more the attraction, at the "gate;" and men's tennis, except at Wimbledon itself, seems to be receding into the background.

But in any case there was every excuse for the principal courts being given over to the women at Surbiton last Monday. Seldom indeed, except at Wimbledon itself and sometimes at Beckenham, has there been such a gathering of "star" players. It was, indeed, almost a Wimbledon entry, except for Mme. Mathieu, Fru Sperling, and Mlle. Jedrzejowska, and the fact that the American players did not reach England in time to play, with the exception of the greatest of all of them Mrs. Helen Wills-Moody. Her entry alone would have made the tournament memorable; when it was supplemented by Senorita Lizana, reigning champion of the U.S.A., the Australian women's team, the South African Women's team, headed by Mrs. Miller, who, as Miss E. L. Heine, played her first match on a grass court at Surbiton in 1927, and, moreover, won the singles, and most of the best of our own home players, it was little wonder that the first day's spectators were not dissatisfied that they had no men to watch, unless they went farther from the club-house.

One of the things which the ranked players, on the occasion of their meeting with the Council of the L.T.A. early in the year, were particularly anxious should be granted to them was the eight-weeks'-expenses concession. By this rule, in force in many countries, players may have their expenses at tournaments for any period not exceeding eight weeks in the year paid by—well, by those who may be anxious to pay them.

Whether this concession should be granted to them or not was debated at a recent Council meeting, the result being that, while the principle—that blessed word!—was approved by a majority of one vote in a very full meeting, it was decided that so small a balance in favor was insufficient to submit a resolution to adopt the rule to a general meeting of the L.T.A. So the status quo remains, for the present; though it is open for any representative at the annual meeting in December, having given due notice, to move a resolution to give these players what they want. It would be, at any rate, interesting to know what the annual meeting thought of such a proposition.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

The Charango

John Greene purchased his Charango in 1930, and for 8 years he has had to give it a "hair cut" annually. It is a lutelike instrument consisting of 8 strings. The native Quechua Indians of Bolivia and Peru play it as we play a ukelele or guitar, and its music is very plaintive. The body of the instrument is made of an armadillo shell, which grows hair constantly. The hair grows about 2 inches and then is cut off. If it doesn't get its hair cut, the shell sheds the hair naturally when it gets too long.

Tax On Monkey Business

Even the anthropoid paid income tax. On March 15, 1934, the Internal Revenue Office in Detroit received an income tax report on their standard from 1040-A, filed by one Jo Mendi, an orang-outang in the Detroit Zoo. The return was prepared by John Millen, showing $3,800 earned in monkey business during 1933, with $2,000 exemption claimed for Millen, his dependent. A tax of $72 was paid in full. The return was duly signed by the orang-outang by a cross—his mark.

Laziest On Earth Thriving In Maine

Eating, Smoking And Sleeping Enlivened By Molasses-Stealing Bears

BANGOR, Me.,—As the last of the logs swirl down the swollen streams of Maine in the next few days, the laziest and yet the loneliest men in the world will start six months of forest exile as keepers of logging camps deserted by their crews until the leaves turn in the Fall, according to the N. Y. Times.

Few men, only those who are natural hermits, want this job of doing nothing for fair pay and a good living. Sometimes one of the crew is willing to stay behind when the others set out with a whoop for Bangor, but more often the logging operators hire one of the strange sons of the forest, for the most part French Canadians, who were born in the woods and know nothing of towns.

From their boyhood these "Canucks" have worked occasionally to get money for rifles, ammunition, traps, tobacco and whisky, but they have spent most of their time fishing, hunting, trapping and, most of all, doing nothing in particular. The camp keeper's job provides them with a home, plenty to eat and smoke and, at the end of the off-season, when they need hunting and trapping outfits, a handful of money—not much, but enough.

Ruler of Untenanted Realm

Throughout his sojourn in the log cabin domain bereft of its lumberjack denizens, the camp keeper is monarch of all he surveys. He has his pick of a variety of provisions left over from the Winter stores and dropping a line in a brook will bring trout for breakfast.

He falls heir to all the lively literature, pipes and other odds and he has his choice of a hundred bunks for sleeping. But his only chance of seeing another human being is the rare passing of a timber cruiser or a far-wandering fisherman.

While protecting the camp against fire, he must also guard the axes, cantdogs, sleds, harness, blankets, kitchen outfits and provisions, such as pork, flour, molasses, beans and canned goods. He needs his rifle. For nothing edible is safe from the most expert of all burglars, the bear.

The skill of the bear at breaking and entering, larceny and general destruction is amazing. Bruin can smell molasses half a mile and will exert himself mightily to get it. He will smash in the head of a barrel with one blow of his paw and will smear himself with the sticky mess.

Then, if bruin can find some flour, his cup of happiness overflows. He has a grand time scattering it over the premises and bedaubing himself, mixing it with the molasses in his fur until he looks the part of the "phantom bear" that romps through many a North Woods tale.

Mystified by Mathematics

So, always mindful of bears, the camp keeper eats, smokes, sleeps and, if he can read, peruses his literary legacy. More than likely he is illiterate and most of his tribe are blissfully ignorant. They are especially untutored in arithmetic, keeping time and accounts by notches on a stick or on the brim of a hat.

One Canuck, employed by a Bangor lumberman known for sharp practice, let two seasons go by without a settlement. When he asked for his money, the bookkeeper began reading "offset" items, such as "three pairs of gum boots, $24." To his protest that he had had only one pair the bookkeeper replied:

"Why, there it is in black and white, the pair you had, the pair you didn't have and the pair you ought to have had."

The dazed Canuck finally admitted that the book must be right.

There are men like him who stay buried in the woods so long that, as Con Murphy, boss logger, used to say, "the world could come to an end without their knowing it."

To Study Farm Incomes To Check Price Rise

The Welfare Ministry will make a survey of the incomes, expenditures and savings of laborers, farmers and the middle-class preliminary to work out plans to cope with the advancing prices.

The Ministry will also investigate the conditions of public markets to forestall further rising of prices. As the result, it is expected that a new market law, which has been contemplated for months, will be enforced.

Sun Fo Denies France Gave Credits To China

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, June 11—Reports that France has concluded an arrangement with China whereby the latter is to receive credits for prolonging her war against Japan were vigorously denied here today by Dr. Sun Fo, Chinese emissary to Moscow and Europe. It is understood, however that Dr. Sun has discussed the question of credits with French officials, but nothing concrete has developed.

The Chinese Ambassador to London, Quo Tai-chi, left the British capital last night for Paris presumably to meet Dr. Fo.

Death Of Redfern Now Held Proved

Waldeck Says He Has Found Scene Of Fatal Crash

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana—Positive proof that Paul Redfern, United States aviator lost ten years ago on a flight over South America, had crashed and died was held by Theodore J. Waldeck, New York sportsman who led an expedition into the hinterland of British Guiana in search of the long missing flier, according to the New York Times.

Details of the evidence could not be given out immediately, Mr. Waldeck declared after he had rested from the strenuous trip back to civilization recently.

"We are convinced Redfern is dead. We located the place where his plane crashed and have positive proof Redfern is dead," the leader of the expedition said.

Mr. Waldeck gave no further details of his discovery, saying first he must forward a report to Dr. Frederick C. Redfern of Columbia, S. C., father of the flier.

The four members of the party suffered terribly on the daring venture into the jungle, and Dr. Frederick John Fox of New York died far from help, stranded at Devil's Hole Isle, on the Cuyuni River, after being unconscious for two days.

The expedition encountered its first difficulties at Devil's Hole Isle, and Mr. Waldeck, his wife, Dr. Fox and William A. Chanler of New York were marooned on the island when their native porters deserted, leaving only a few supplies.

"Fox complained of a chill Friday afternoon, Dec. 31, and took some medicine which he prescribed for himself," the party leader said. "He died Jan. 6. I conducted a funeral service and the Indians dug a grave, lining it with thatch leaves.

"Fox died like a brave soldier. At no time was he left alone. We took turns watching at his bedside. He was unconscious for two days before he died and because he was always so genial and the life of the party, his death threw gloom over all of us.

"We were thirty-three days on the island and two days before the relief boat arrived we actually succeeded in making a dugout canoe out of a tree trunk which we tried and which floated well. It was to be our last effort in case the food ran out."

The three surviving members of the expedition were taken to a village near the Venezuelan border, but when Mr. Chanler became ill he was brought back to Georgetown late in March an returned to New York.

On Aug. 25, 1927, Paul Redfern, then 27 years old, in a single-seater monoplane, took off from the airport of Brunswick, Ga., on a planned non-stop flight to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Although a steamer reported the plane passed over the Caribbean, Redfern was never seen again.

Since then many reports that Redfern was alive, living captive among savages, have come out of the Amazon jungles. Thirteen expeditions have sought to find him. The last, the Waldeck expedition, started up the Essequibo River from Bartica, British Guiana, on Dec. 13.

Dionne Quintuplets And Rest Of Family To Reside Together

NORTH BAY, Ont., May 20—The Dionne family, including the quintuplets and the seven other little Dionnes, at last are to live under one roof as one family, says the Christian Science Monitor.

Thus will be ended the cause of much difficulty as the senior Dionnes have wanted their famous five at home with their other children since the quintuplets became wards of the King and set up house in their own nursery.

Plans are to be drafted at once by an Ontario Government architect for a new home at Corbell, five miles north of the present house and the nursery at Callander. It will house all the Dionnes and should be ready by September.

Almost millionaires with earnings from their movie and advertising contracts, the quintuplets are to pay for their new abode.

Mr. Dionne has been opposed to public exhibition of his children, but showings will be held this summer and the decision for next year will be reached later.

The agreement between guardians and parent was the outgrowth of an unsuccessful effort by the father last month to get a judicial investigation of the management of the quintuplets' affairs.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Sleep Gong

Carl Brown of Columbus, Ohio, saw a dire need for something to keep sleepy drivers awake at the wheel, and help reduce the terrific toll of life and limb in auto accidents. His very inventive mind conceived his "Doz-No-Mo" sleep gong—a bell similar to a bike-bell, with clamps on the back to slide under one's collar, and a large release button that fits under the chin. At the first sign of sleepiness, the wearer's chin hits the release button, the bell rings, and the driver wakes up. One winding of the gong is good for 200 rings.

La Belle Maison De Fenelon

Les Nouvelles Litteraires

Une manifestation pittoresque et touchante s'est déroulée dimanche, 8 Mai, dans le sud de la province de Hainaut (Belgique) aux confins des communes de Paturages et d'Eugies. Il y a là, à l'orée du bois de Colfontaine, propriété de l'Etat belge, devenue bien domanial à la suite d'une vigoreuse campagne faite il y a trente et un ans, une maison simple et avenante que les gens du pays ont baptisée: "La Belle Maison" et qui fut habitée par Fénélon. Le Hainaut appartenait alors du diocèse de Cambrai. Quand Fénelon venait en tournée pastorale au pays de Mons, notamment pour y combattre, le jansénisme et l'héresie protestante, il descendait dans cette maison d'Eugies, que, selon une tradition locale, les habitants de ce village lui offrirent pour....pouvoir être confirmés. Cette grande maison blanche, à un étage, est coiffée d'un joli toit d'ardoises à la Mansart qui se trouve aujourd'hui dans un piteux état.

L'immeuable apparetient à une "tontine" de cures. Une école froebelienne et cinq ménages ouvriers y vivent entassés. Il est question de les en déloger pour installer à leur place une auberge de jeunesse, après quelques amenagements. Voilà précisément où le bât blesse. On peut craindre que sous d'ensellissement, la maison soit défigurée, que son aspect extérieur en soit bouleversé.

C'est pourquoi nous reclamons le classement de la maison comme monument historique. Sur un simple appel, nous avons réussi à grouper trois à quatre mille personnes, dimanche, en plein air, a proximité de la maison menacée. Rien n'était touchant comme de voir dans cette foule les rudes mineurs du Borinage, qui sans doute, n'ont jamais lu une ligne de Fénelon, écouter avec attantion et applaudir les discours des organisateurs. On a plu leur rappeler qu'après l'auteur de Télémaque, qui passe pour avoir soigné là des blessés de Malplaquet, durant la retraite de Bouffiers sur Le Quesnoy, la maison a donné asile, au moment de la Révolution, anu célèbre brigand, Moneuse, chef de bande qui terrorisa pendant plusieurs années tout le Hainaut.

Nous avons évoqué aussi le souvenir d'autres grands hommes qui illustrèrent la région: de Vincent Van Goh qui fut missionaire évangéliste dans le village voisin de Wasmes, avant de devenir un des plus grands peintres de son temps; de Verlaine qui "longtemps habita le meilleur des châteaux," à Mons, la ville voisine; de Verhaeren au Caillou-qui-bique.

Les milliers d'auditeurs votèrent à mains levées à l'uanimité un ordre du jour adjurant les propriétaires actuels de la maison Fénelon de pourvoir de toute urgence à son entretien et réclamant le classement à titre de monument historique.

Lous Piérard
député de Mons.

Never Mind The Weather!

The heavy rain all day Sunday did not prevent holding of the 5th Annual Meiji-Nihon-Rikkyo Universities swimming meet at the Meiji Shrine pool. Photographed are the three teams at the opening ceremony.

Nihon University Wins Swim Meet, Defeating Rikkyo By 85-58 Score

The rain not only did not stop the fifth annual Meiji-Nihon-Rikkyo universities triangular swimming meet from being staged Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine pool but three records of the meet were shattered. With two newcomers coming through with victories in three events to assist Captain Tetsuo Hamuro, Olympic 200-meter breaststroke champion, Nihon University sprung a surprise by winning the meet for the first time in three years, unseating the favored Rikkyo squad. The scores were: Nihon University, 85 points; Rikkyo, 58 points, and Meiji, 7 points.

Weather conditions were far from ideal. The temperature was 71.6 degrees Fahrenheit and that of the water, 68 degrees, a bit too cold for swimming.

Nihon Takes Medley

In what some of the experts considered the deciding event for either a Rikkyo or Nihon victory, the 300-meter medley, the very first on the program, the Nihon University trio, comprised of Komei Sagitani, backstroke, Captain Hamuro, breaststroke, and Takeshi Sasaki, freestyle, won it in a new record time for the meet in 3 minutes 24.8 seconds. Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo, Olympic freestyler, was expected to cut down the two-meter lead given by Captain Hamuro to Sasaki, but the latter held it to the surprise of the crowd that braved the heavy rain. Rikkyo's time was 3 minutes 26.4 seconds, also under the old mark. The team was made up of Koichi Sakamoto, Seichi Oura and Arai.

Toshihiro Taniguchi of Nihon University won the 100-meter backstroke in 1 minute 11.6 seconds for a new record in the annual competition. Sakata and Sagitani of Rikkyo and Nihon respectively also shattered the old mark in times of 1 minute 12 seconds and 1 minute 12.8 seconds respectively.

The other record to be shattered was the 800-meter relay which was won by Rikkyo in 9 minutes 15.2 seconds. On the team were Arai, Shunpei Uto, Masaji Taguchi and Honda. Nihon University was second in 9 minutes 23 seconds.

Amano Is Star

Tomikatsu Amano of Nihon University won both the 800 and 400-meter swims with ease, in time of 10 minutes 9 seconds and 4 minutes 58 seconds.

Sasaki of Nihon University showed his heels to Arai in the 200-meter freestyle swim with a last minute spurt that put him ahead of Arai in the 180-meter mark. The time was 2 minutes 15.4 seconds. The two staged a thrilling duel in the 100-meter freestyle. They appeared to have finished in a dead heat but the judges picked Arai the winner. Both were clocked at 59.2 seconds.

Hamuro won easily in the 200-meter breaststroke in 2 minutes 45.8 seconds.

The points were split as follows:

	N	R	M
300-m. medley	5	3	1
800-m.	14	7	7
100-m. backstroke	14	7	1
200-m.	12	10	0
200-m. breaststroke	14	5	3
400-m.	14	8	0
100-m.	9	13	0
800-m. relay	3	5	1

Waseda-Meiji Clash Is Postponed By Rain

Galento Kayoes Mann In Second Of 10-Rounder

By JOSEPH C. NICHOLS

N.Y. Times,

NEW YORK, May 14—Tony Galento, who hopes to get into the ring with Joe Louis one day, made a long stride in that direction when he knocked out Nathan Mann of New Haven at Madison Square Garden last night.

The pudgy Galento, who looks like anything but a contender for the world's heavyweight championship, stopped the Connecticut battler in 2 minutes 4 seconds of the second session of what was scheduled as a ten-round bout.

In stopping Mann so quickly the Orange, N. J., bartender improved on the performance of champion Louis, who, last February, required three rounds to dispose of the New Haven entrant.

A crowd of 10,000 fans saw the battle which, short as it was, was packed with action. Galento was the short-ender in the betting—the odds against him went as high as 4 to 1 at ringtime—and from the way things went in the first round it seemed that the figures were justified, for Mann clearly outfought the pudgy puncher from across the Hudson, and once came within a whisker of knocking Tony down.

Mann Hits the Canvas

The beating he absorbed in the initial session made little impression on Galento, though. He came out for the second eagerly, and in a few seconds floored Mann with a prodigious left hook to the jaw. The latter fell on the side of the ring farthest from the timekeeper, and it was not until the count had reached eight that Referee Arthur Donovan could reach him.

Mann took what could be called a "long-nine" on his knees, Donovan hesitating to call ten, aware that he had taken so long to apprise Mann of the count.

Mann seemed fresh on arising and prepared to fight Galento at long range, which was perfectly all right with Tony, for he released a right-hand punch that described an unbelievably wide arc before landing squarely on Mann's chin.

Once more Mann went to the canvas, this time near the timekeeper, and at the count of four he was on his knees. Donovan counted up to ten and the New Haven fighter did not move from his position.

At the conclusion of the count Mann arose and made as if to resume fighting. Donovan stepped in front of him, however, and directed him to his corner, to which the dazed Mann walked readily enough.

Tony Confuses Himself

At the outset Galento sought to confuse Mann by fighting out of a crouch, but he succeeded only in confusing himself. He did manage to land a heavy left to the jaw, but after that he did everything wrong, flailing away at his opponent, who slipped Tony's murderous swings with ease.

In addition to making Galento miss, Mann sprayed his rival with a withering two-hand fire. He staggered Galento with a crashing left hook to the jaw, and then clipped the New Jersey battler with a solid right smash to the mouth, splitting his upper lip and almost dropping him.

Tony forgot all about such strategic devices as the crouch when the second round started. Instead he stood up straight, and looked Mann right in the eye. The gaze probably hypnotized Nathan, for he made no move to block a round-house left hook which bounced off his chin and sent him through the ropes.

Galento weighed 232 pounds, most of it around his waist, while Mann scaled a trim 191¾.

The paid attendance was 9,190 and the receipts were $25,669.

Military Arts Hall To Be Built At Aoyama Site

A movement to establish a Butokuden (hall for military arts such as fencing, judo and archery, belonging to the Dai-Nippon Butokukai) at Tokyo, which has for the past 10 years been pushed by Baron General Sadao Araki, General Nara, former president of the Dai-Nippon Butokukai, General Takashi Hishikari, chairman of the Japan Students' Fencing League, Isei Otsuka, a member of the House of Peers and vice-chairman of the Japan Students' Fencing League, and others concerned, has recently come to take shape.

The movement is now to be brought into realization by the Tokyo Prefectural Office which is reported to have decided to establish the hall as one of the memorial works of the 2,600 anniversary of the Empire Foundation, the Nichi Nichi says.

The cost is estimated at ¥2,000,000, and a hall site has been selected on the site the Aoyama Normal School. The prospective hall will be of wooden construction in case ferro-concrete construction is rejected by the Government in application of the building regulations. The construction work is to be started as soon as the bill for the establishment of a hall, which has been drawn up by the managing staff of the Prefectural Office with the advice of Mr. Otsuka passes the meeting of the Prefectural Assembly to be held in July, and is expected to be completed by next Spring.

On completion of a hall, it will become the headquarters of the Dai-Nippon Butokukai, the present headquarters being at Kyoto.

Still Powerful Is Mrs. Moody In Tennis Play

Observer

LONDON, May 22—What a difference surface makes! Or is it simply that "form" is all upside down?

Three weeks ago yesterday H. W. Austin and Kho Sin Kie fought out the final of the Hard Courts Championships at Bournemouth. Neither reached the final at Surbiton, beaten respectively by E. J. Filby and J. S. Olliff, neither of whom had even reached the last eight at Bournemouth. So those who had looked forward to seeing, yesterday, a "return" of the Hard Courts final had to put up with their disappointment and enjoy a wholly unexpected program. Not a bad one, either, for the biggest crowd that had assembled at Surbiton for nearly twenty years. Cloudless skies, dry courts (for a wonder!), and some very interesting play made up a good afternoon's tennis.

Filby and Olliff's single started first, and from the start it looked as if there was only going to be one man in it. Filby sprang, literally, into his game at once, attacking vigorously, and scoring with neat cross-volleys, and those shut-down whipped drives forced into the corners which he has learnt from Perry. Olliff oculd do little, and though he saved five set-points in the eighth game, he lost it, and the set.

Losing the First Set

But early in the second set his suave and scientific shots began to pay him; the ill-luck which had often come his way in the first set passed off, and, after 4-all, he was out at 6—4. Filby by this time had lost his concentration, and in the third set Olliff went quickly to 5—1. Then Filby, for two games, played as he had done in the first set, and won them both but Olliff was not to be denied, and finished the match with as lovely a pass off the service as anyone could wish to see. He is playing very well this year and has apparently discovered a receipt for winning his matches—to lose the first set.

Before this match was over Mrs. Wills Moody and Miss Margot Lumb came on to the adjacent court for the final of the Women's Singles. There seemed every prospect of a close game when all the first four games were at duce two or three times, but Mrs. Moody, though rather bothered with Miss Lumb's kicking service, won three of them. Then Miss Lumb ran her about so hard that she was forced to defensive lobbing, and the score was three-all.

Mrs. Moody was steady as a rock on her backhand, but never used her "big" forehand drive; without its aid, however, she took the next three games for the set—the ninth to love.

Home hopes revived when Miss Lumb took the first two games of the second set, mainly by some good driving and dropshots; but her backhand ground-strokes were unsteady, and she was missing her volleys as well. Mrs. Moody proceeded to take five games in a row, and was in sight of home. Miss Lumb saved a matchpoint in the next game and won it, to loud applause, which was redoubled when she then took Mrs. Moody's service, to make the score 5-4 against her.

But Mrs. Moody was not in the least worried; she won the final game, as she had done in the first set, to love, and so became Surrey champion for the first time. Her game does not look quite so powerful as it did when she was last over; but she has not yet unsheathed her most aggressive weapon. Anybody who can beat her at Wimbledon will need luck as well as skill.

Men's Singles.—Final: J. S. Olliff beat E. J. Filby, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Women's Singles.—Final: Mrs. H. Wills Moody (U.S.A.) beat Miss M. E. Lumb, 6—3, 6—4.

Women's Doubles.—Final: Miss N. Wynne and Miss T. Coyne (Australia) beat Mrs. H. C. Hopman and Miss D. Stevenson (Australia), 6—4, 6—8, 6—4.

Surbiton Men's Singles.—Final: J. K. Hamilton beat A. Morhig, 6—4, 6—2.

Surbiton Women's Singles.—Final: Miss O. V. Cooper beat Miss P. M. Burghes, 6—0, 6—2.

It is the first time that a winner of the open crown has repeated his triumph, since Bobby Jones did the trick in 1930.

Pro Loop Plays Three Contests Despite Rain

Never mind the weather! So said the mogus of the Japan Professional Baseball Federation Sunday and they pulled off a three-game schedule at the Susaki grounds.

The first game between the Eagles and the Senators was called off at the end of the ninth inning with the score standing at 6-all. The Senators were lucky to deadlock the count in the ninth.

Behind the good pitching of Nishimura, who yielded eight scattered hits, the league-leading Osaka Tigers downed the Dolfins, 3 to 1, in the second game.

The rain turned into a deluge and the third tilt of the day, that between the Giants and Nagoya, was called off at the end of the sixth inning with the score 3 to 0 in the Giants' favor.

Skater Katayama Passes Test For Army Service

Toshiichi Katayama, peerless Japanese figure skater and Japanese Olympic representative to the IVth Winter Olympic Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen in 1936, will soon be a soldier as he passed a military examination recently, it was reavealed here Sunday.

Miss Etsuko Inada, who was the youngest constestant in the 4th Winter Olympic Games in Germany in 1936, will soon come to Tokyo from Osaka in order to skate to the melody composed specially for her by Herr Water Peters, a German composer, who was very much impressed by the young skater when she invaded Germany in 1936.

The German-composed skating melody, "Rising Sun" was recently recorded by a certain Japanese recording concern with an orchestra.

Oxford Defeats Cambridge In Tennis Tourney

Observer

LONDON, May 22—Oxford did not have long to wait for their victory over Chambridge in the University match at Fenner's yesterday. L. E. King, leading for Oxford, beat G. Nicolaidis, the Chambridge first string, in the third single to be completed, and that was the decisive addition to Friday's formidable lead of 10—2.

Cambridge, as was the case last year, might have been able to fight a way out but for their unexpected failure in the doubles on the first day, when they lost five matches out of six, as they had done at singles. But Oxford with four new men since last year, were certainly the better team; on the average they were at least a head taller than Cambridge, and were good enough players to make use of their inches in service and smash.

It is by no means unusual to have been from overseas as the foremost players at the Universities, and what turned out to be the deciding match of the nine—between King (Australia) and Nicolaidis (Greece)—contained strokes of Wimbledon standard. Cambridge, with two quick victories on other courts, were at least attempting the impossible, and had Nicolaidis managed to hold King, Oxford might have lost their heads. Up to four—all in the first set the match was very open. King had the more powerful strokes—his service and backhhand drive were extremely good—but one sensed his nervousness from his mistakes, and Nicolaidis, who uses top spin and knows where the lines are, is the more experienced matchplayer.

But King saw daylight when Nicolaidis lost his service for a second time to put him into the lead at 5-3. His own strong serve carried him out in a love game, and increasing his pressure all round against an opponent who had become diffident he was soon at 4-0 in the second set. A brief halt made no difference to the finality of King's volleys and passing shots. He is a player of uncommon promise, and Oxford had carried the day.

F. M. P. Knott, the captain, and K. H. C. Lo did all they could to redress the fortunes of Cambridge by winning the first two singles against J. R. Briggs, and S. M. Ali respectively. More of this Cambridge zest for the volleys would have been invaluable on Friday. Now it was to be too late, for even though the Oxford captain, M. J. Condon, met with his second defeat, this time in two splendidly played sets against P. D. Elman, he had in R. G. Sturdy another Colonial player who, like King, could win two singles. Sturdy is from Jamaica, and has a service and volleys of American pattern. They had little to spare in the third set against the workmanlike drives and occasional volleys of J. N. Dhamija.

The last round of doubles matches remained to be played, and Oxford won in the end by 14 victories to 7. In the two days play Oxford won 8 singles and 6 doubles and Cambridge 4 singles and 3 doubles.

P.D. Eeman (Cambridge) beat M. J. Condon (Oxford), 9—7, 7—5; R. G. Sturdy (Oxford) beat J. M. Dhamija (Cambridge, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4; J. B. Gibson (Oxford) beat D. M. Mackenzie (Cambridge) 6—3, 6—1.

Doubles.—G. Nicolaidis and P. D. Eeman (Cambridge) beat M. J. Condon and L. E. King (Oxford), 4—6, 6—1, 9—7; J. R. Briggs and R. G. Sturdy (Oxford) beat F. M. P. Knott and J. M. Kantawala (Cambridge), 6—0, 6—2; D. H. Mackenzie and S. N. Follwell (Cambridge) beat J. B. Gibson and S. M. Ali (Oxford), 6—2, 6—3.

K.R.A.C. Defeats Kwansei Gakuin At Water Polo, 3-2

(Special to The Japan Times)

KOBE, June 12—In the opening season of water polo, the local K.R. and A.C. team scored a well earned victory over the well trained Kwansei Gakuin squad yesterday by 3 to 2 at the Boat house pool, located near Mikage, owned by the K.R. and A.C.

The game started with the students scoring first, and looked for the time a strong aggressor and a winner, and due to lack of any practice to speak of the Kracsmen looked poor until late in the first half. The clubmen broke the net two in a row when Captain Fleercamp and Down scored respectively to lead the students by 1 point at the end of the first half.

In the second half the Gakuin boys scored again to tie the score at two all, but the tie was short-lived, as E. Jungers scored a neat one for the foreigners to regain their lead of 1 point. It was this score that won the game for the local foreign five.

Captain Tazaki and Shoda starred for the losers, while Captain Fleecamp was the spearhead of the foreigners' attack, and C. Arab, E. Jungers and Down also starred for the winners.

Yamagishi Sails Wednesday For Davis Cup Play

Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's No. 1 tennis player, will leave Tokyo Station at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday to board the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Taiyo Maru from Yokohama at 3 the same afternoon in quest of the Davis Cup.

Yamagishi

He is scheduled to join the three other members of the Japanese Davis Cup team, Captain and Manager Tamio Abe, Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu at New York on July 11 to take on the Canadian team from July 29 at Montreal in the first round of the American zone matches.

Fourth Trip Abroad

It is Yamagishi's fourth trip abroad as a member of the Japanese Davis Cup team. Due to his studies at Keio University, he was unable to leave together with Abe, Nakano and Kuramitsu in April on their goodwill tennis tour to Italy and Germany.

Yamagishi is expected to win two points without trouble in the singles against Canada and give the Australians a run for their money in the finals of the American zone. Australia is a cinch to win from Mexico in the other match of the opening round.

"I shall be competing for the last time as a university student and I am determined to do my best," said Yamagishi Monday. "I regret very much not having been able to go along with the other members of the team to Europe for one or two reasons. This year, Mr. Abe will look after the routine matters to be attended to (taken care of by Yamagishi in the past few years because of his experience) and freed from these details, I shall be able to concentrate entirely on the matches.

"As for the doubles against Canada on the second day, whether Mr. Abe and I will represent Japan, or whether Mr. Abe will be paired with Mr. Nakano, will be decided after the singles matches on the first day. However, I am confident of scoring two points in the singles.

"Next is the match against Australia in the finals of the American zone. There is not a weak player on the entire Australian team. I played Quist at Wimbledon once but isn't he a superb player?

Handicap Abroad

"Nakano and Kuramitsu have been playing in exhibition tours in Europe, but having to perform on grass courts, they cannot play as well as in Japan. Then the environments of the courts are entirely different from Japan, and this is a factor too that must be coped by the player from Japan, and it is one that can be realized only by those who have actually appeared on the European courts.

"I am determined to cooperate to the best of my ability with my team-mates and take on the Australian team."

Yamagishi has been in top form this spring, winning the singles and doubles titles of the Kanto students championships without trouble.

Japan was eliminated by the United States, 5 to 0, in the opening round of the American zone last year at San Francisco. The same American team, with J. Donald Budge of California as the keyman, went on to win the Davis Cup.

Tokyo Is Advised By Lord Aberdare To Postpone Games

From Lord Aberdare, British member of the International Olympic Committee, has come a letter to Count Michimasa Soyejima, Japanese member of the I.O.C., under recent date, suggesting that because of the China situation, Tokyo postpone organization of the Olympic Games until some more opportune time than in 1940—in other words that it shift the 12th Olympic Games to some other city, according to Domei.

Lord Aberdare said it would be most unhappy if the China Conflict should continue to 1940. And should Tokyo hold on to the 1940 Games too long, and the time comes when it becomes inevitable for the city to abandon the Games, the blow to the young sportsmen of the world is inestimable, Lord Aberdare pointed out. Such might mean the death knell of the Olympic Games, he said.

Had the late Professor Jigoro Kano, who was Japan's chief delegate to the last general meeting of the I. O. C. at Cairo in March, declared then that the thoroughly unforeseen conflict in China had made it necessary for Tokyo to abandon the 1940 Games, the I. O. C. certainly would have assigned the 1944 Games to Tokyo, was the opinion expressed by Lord Aberdare.

Deep anxiety over Japan's situation of facing a protracted war with China was voiced by Lord Aberdare.

Regretting the death of Professor Kano, Lord Aberdare recalled a number of incidents at Cairo meeting with the Japanese delegate as the central figure. He said Professor Kano appeared tired and his walk was slower than usual.

Lazzeri Crosses Up Father Time In Role Of Cubs' Clean-Up Hittre

CHICAGO, May 14—He a hard man to put down, this "poosh 'Em up" Tony Lazzeri.

For a ball player whose active playing days were supposed to have been counted out by Old Father Time, Signor Lazzeri is doing a bang-up job of proving to the Chicago Cubs that he still is a mighty handy man to have around.

Last October Tony was unconditionally released by the New York Yankees after starring for the Ruppert Rifles for more than a decade. Within two weeks he was signed by the Cubs, precipitating one of the hottest arguments of the winter hot stove league season.

The fans argued (1) that Tony would take the managership away from Charley Grimm (2) that he would become assistant manager, (3) that he'd be used only as just another pinch hitter and coach and (4) that P. K. Wrigley was letting sentimentality get the better of his baseball judgment.

The fans agreed on one point: that Tony was just about through as a player or the Yankees never would have let him get away. On this point and every one, the fans have been neatly "crossed up" by the taciturn Italian-American veteran.

Thus far Grimm still is manager; Tony isn't the assistant manager; he isn't just another pinch hitter or coach, because he's been almost a full-fledged regular and he's making Wrigley look good as a judge of diamond talent.

Always known as a great "money player," at his best when the going was hardest, Tony has filled in at second base, shortstop and third base and played brilliantly. His hitting during the few weeks of the season was largely responsible for getting the Cubs away to a good start. And when the team slumped, Grimm fell back on the dependable Lazzeri and his .350 plus average by making him clean-up man in the batting order.

In his first appearance as No. 4 hitter, Tony banged out two hits in four trips. The next day he hit "four for four" to drive in five runs and almost single-handedly snap a Cub losing streak of three games. On Friday his fifth homer of the season, which has him up among the circuit leaders in that department, kept the Cubs in their ball game with Pittsburgh until the Pirates won in the tenth. In addition, he fielded well.

The only person Signor Tony appears to have failed to cross up is Wrigley, who obtained him because he'd always liked Tony's aggressiveness with the Yankees. Old "poosh 'em up" is doing a good job of not letting the boss down.

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, May 22—Dr. G. Randolph Manning, for more than twenty-five years president or an officer of the United States Football Association, the organization which controls amateur soccer here, has resigned as a member of the American Olympic Committee because he is opposed to the staging of the 1940 Olympic games in Japan, it was learned yesterday and verified by Frederick Rubien, secretary of the A. O. C.

Dr. Manning, a prominent New York physician and an Army surgeon during the World War, tendered his resignation in a letter to the U. S. F. A., declaring that he felt that a state of war actually existed in Japan and that he is not in sympathy with going to a spot for the Olympics when there was a war going on.

Rubien, in confirming the resignation at the American Olympic committee meeting yesterday at the New York A. C., declared that "We all regret the stand Dr. Manning has taken, but we are trying to carry on the Olympics no matter where they are scheduled to be held."

Dr. Manning also took part in the heated debate surrounding the question of America's participation in the 1936 games in Germany, but he refrained from voting in the A. A. U. convention that settled that issue, although he was the representative of the football association, which is an allied body of the A. A. U.

"I do not see how an allied body can interfere in this internal problem of the A. A. U.," Dr. Manning said at that time. "It is preposterous that the vote of the allied organizations should alter the vote of the A. A. U. associations themselves."

It was the vote of these allied bodies that swung the vote toward participation in the games.

The meeting of the American Olympic Committee itself, which, after a luncheon that was attended by seventy-five persons, was broken down into sessions of thirteen sports committees, produced only the officers of those committees, who were elected in separate conclave yesterday. The officers elected were:

Women's swimming—Charlotte Epstain New York, chairman and A. O. C. representative; Mrs. Ada Taylor Sackett, Atlantic City, vice-chairman; Mrs. A. Van Aken, Schenectady, secretary.

Fencing—Harold van Buskirk, New York, chairman; Dr. John R. Huffman, New York, secretary.

Ice hockey—Rufus J. Trimble, New York, chairman; Walter A. Brown, Boston, vice-chairman; John A. Thomas, secretary; Professor Albert I. Prettyman, Clinton, N. Y., A. O. C. representative.

Canoeing—Ralph Britten, New Britain, Conn., chairman and A. O. C. representative; W. Van D. Clausen, New York, secretary; Walwin Barr, Washington, treasurer.

Gymnastics—Roy Moore, New York, chairman and A. O. C. representative; Dr. D. L. Hoffer, Chicago, vice-chairman; Charles W. Graydon, New York, secretary.

Bobsledding—Elwood S. Kerr, Lake Placid, N. Y., chairman; Edward F. Egan, New York, vice-chairman; William M. Leonard, Schenectady, secretary; Donna Fox, New York, A. O. C. representative.

Women's track and field—Dee Doeckman, Chambersburg, Pa., chairman; Mrs. Irene Jones, Chicago, vice-chairman; James M. Roach, New Haven, secretary and A. O. C. representative.

Cycling—Harold J. Diblee, New York, chairman; Frank K. Sencer, Newark, N. J., vice-chairman; Walter Bargett, New York secretary; Walter Simonson, Chicago, representative.

The following elections were tentative, contingent upon a mail vote:

Weight lifting—Dietrich Wortmann New York, chairman and representative; Robert Hoffman, York, Pa., secretary.

Field handball—Dietrich Wortmann, New York, chairman; Charles L. Diehm, New York, secretary and A. O. C. representative.

Field hockey—Henry K. Greer, New York chairman; Leonard F. O'Brien, Boston, secretary; Alexis Thompson Chicago, A. O. C. representative.

Britain Defeats U.S. In Walker Cup Annual Play

For the first time since 1922, Britain trimphed over the United States in the annual Walker Cup golf match at St. Andrews, Scotland, on June 3 and 4 by 7.5 to 4.5 matches, according to Domei. The British golfers led 5 to 3 in the singles and 2.5 to 1.5 in the doubles.

The American team was considered the strongest sent to Britain for the annual play, according to the New York Times' article of May 11, which follows:

Led by Captain Francis Ouimet of Boston, who has been a member of every team that has competed against the British, playing in all except one of the nine previous matches, the side chosen to represent the United States this year is rated as being the strongest amateur team ever sent abroad.

On it are other veterans with previous Walker Cup experience—Johnny Goodman of Omaha, present holder of the national amateur title and a member of the last two teams; Johnny Fischer, amateur titleholder in 1936, who was on the 1934 and 1936 cup teams; Charley Yates of Atlanta and Reynolds Smith of Dallas, members of the team that shut out the British at Pine Valley two years ago.

The four freshmen are Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., runner-up to Goodman in the national amateur last year; Marvin (Bud) Ward of Tacoma, a semi-finalist in the last amateur championship; Fred Haas Jr. of New Orleans, former Canadian and intercollegiate champion, and Charles (Chuck) Kocsis of Detroit, former national intercollegiate titleholder and runner-up in last year's Western amateur.

Ouimet Discusses Prospects

Despite the fact that only he, Goodman and Fischer have had experience abroad, Captain Ouimet was in an optimistic frame of mind as he discussed the team's prospects at the headquarters of the United States Golf Association yesterday afternoon.

"In my judgment, it is the strongest team we have mustered for the matches," said the 45-year-old veteran, whose triumph over Harry Vardon and Ted Ray at Brookline in 1913 gave golf its first great impetus in this country. "That, of course, doesn't necessarily mean we are going to win, for golf, as any one who plays knows well, is a game in which anything can happen.

"The conditions we are apt to meet at St. Andrews are totally different from anything we have to face in this country. For that reason I'm not willing to make any predictions."

"What about yourself? Are you going to play?"

Ouimet was non-committal when it came to answering that question.

"I've been playing a bit this year," he said. "Some rounds have been good and some not so good."

Captain of the last three teams that have swamped the British, Ouimet has a record of four victories, two halves and two losses in the singles and five triumphs and three losses in the foursomes.

Goodman has yet to meet defeat, having won both his singles and foursome matches, while Fischer has two victories in the singles to his credit. He has not played in the foursomes.

Smith and Yates Unbeaten

Smith and Yates, who had their baptism of Walker Cup play at Pine Valley two years ago, have yet to taste defeat. The former won in the singles and foursomes and the latter registered in the singles and got a half in the foursomes.

The members of the team were guests of honor at a dinner at the Union Club last night, following a broadcast.

The team is the youngest ever sent into the competition, Goodman being the oldest member outside of Ouimet. The Nebraskan is 28, Fischer and Smith are 26, Ward, Yates and Kocsis are 25, Billows is 24 and Haas 22.

The players are due in Southampton on May 16 and will go direct to Troon, where they will play in the British amateur from May 23 to 28. Following that event they will go to St. Andrews for the Walker Cup event. They will return on June 14, leaving Southampton on the Aquitania of the Cunard White Star Line on June 8.

None appeared to be downcast at the draw for the British amateur, which places so many of them in the same section.

"According to my way of figuring," said Goodman, who doubtless will be a strong favorite in the British event, "that might work out to our advantage. The same thing happened the year Jess Sweetser won."

Australians Making Fine Show In Britain

Observer

LONDON, May 22—The successes of the Australians so far during their tour have been somewhat overwhelming, and up till the M.C.C. match at Lords, which was unfortunately ruined by rain, they gave every appearance of being well nigh invincible. The match at Lords, however, put a different complexion on the matter, and for the first time since their arrival in England certain weaknesses have appeared in the Australian ranks, which might easily grow to disastrous proportions. The situation of the game at Lords when the rain put an end to hostilities revealed that on certain wickets and weather conditions there is an element of doubt as to whether the batting strength of the Australians is as great as was thought. One might mention Bradman as compiling more than half the score, but still he is one of the playing eleven, and it is his job to make as many runs as possible for his side. But when the matter is reviewed in the light of Bradman falling for a modest contribution occasionally—and he is human after all—and of wickets which do not resemble Australian but more closely approach those to be expected in England during a normal summer, then the general batting does not inspire confidence.

There is, of course, the strong possibility that with more practice and experience of these conditions the new Australian batsmen will make greater scores on them for the benefit of the side. S. J. McCabe, for instance, is one of the most entertaining batsmen in the world. He commands all the strokes of the batsman's art, and for effortless stroke play has no superior in cricket today. But he is not compiling the runs that his ability demands. Badcock and Hassett have yet to experience the real slow, turnable pitch, common to England, which demands a different approach to the ball than when it comes through fairly rapidly and meets the bat in a manner similar to wickets in Australia. J. H. Fingleton disclosed at Lord's that he is capable of holding the fort for some considerable time with his characteristic play, and his defensive batting, allied to confidence and determination, is a most valuable asset to the Australian batting on wickets of a normal English character.

The Best To Come

W. A. Brown, until his display at Northampton, had not reached his best form. Hitherto he has been the victim of a want of confidence. That, of course, can only be properly overcome by playing his natural game—that of aggressive stroke play, of which he is quite capable. The experience enjoyed in 1934 by A. G. Chipperfield should enable him to overcome any difficulties. Nevertheless, should wickets for the future important matches resemble that met at Lord's last week-end the batting strength of Australia will not equal that indicated by the gigantic totals amassed during the first fortnight of the tour, when Australian conditions prevailed for batting. Furthermore, an improvement in bowling attacks on those of Worcester, Oxford, Leicester, and Cambridge, is to be anticipated, and this will increase the difficulties when allied to the normal English wicket. The touring team require more pitches of the character of Lord's if they are to be fully equipped for the important contests to come.

The bowling strength of Australia has performed satisfactorily as far as results are concerned, but, on a closer view after the work at Lord's, there are grounds for concern. It appears that the bulk of the work will rest on the shoulders of W. J. O'Reilly and L. O'B. Fleetwood-Smith. The speed attack of Australia, as represented by E. L. McCormick, has not yet justified itself. First of all, the no-ball disease which McCormick contracted in the first match of the tour has not entirely disappeared, although he has eliminated it to a large extent. The no-ball fault, however, is still worrying him—so much so, that he has shortened his run; and he has been so obsessed with the idea of completely eliminating the fault that his control and speed have suffered to some extent.

A Fall From Form

At any rate, McCormick is not yet the fast bowler he was in Australia last summer, nor does he worry the early batsmen as he should—the main requisite of a speed bowler. M. G. Waite has performed satisfactorily with his bowling, even if his successes have not been great; but he must improve still further if he is to be a penetrating force to the opposition. E. S. White, to date, has had no bowler's conditions on which to work, nor has he enjoyed sufficient bowling to perfect him for any big events. He is still in the studying stage of English conditions, and although very accurate, he has not had the chance to develop his bowling on the lines required. Perhaps the next few matches may help considerably. F. A. Ward has bowled well at times, and there are few who can impart the spin to the ball that he does.

But on several occasions I have noticed that his pace from the pitch is so little that his turning of the ball would not greatly worry good batsmen. This attribute may return to him, but it is unlikely that Ward will be included in the same side with Fleetwood-Smith for a Test match. Of course, circumstances may demand his inclusion, but normally, with all varieties represented, Ward would be an absentee. The two bowlers, therefore, who are much more likely to pierce the armor of the English batsmen are O'Reilly and Fleetwood-Smith. The former can be safely labelled the outstanding bowler of the world at the moment, for his accuracy, clever concealment of change of pace, and spin, make him the man who has to be closely watched by the opposition. Fleetwood-Smith only needs to bowl with reasonably consistent length to be a danger. Occasionally his length may forsake him, but so far on this tour he has bowled with remarkable steadiness as compared with a few years ago. McCabe and Chipperfield will do reasonable relief work, but neither should be employed as stock men, excepting under extreme pressure.

The bowling, therefore, as a great driving force, has nothing to spare, and every man must pull his weight in the big encounters, otherwise trouble may ensure. As things are at present, it would appear that Bradman must provide a certain quantity of runs for safety, while on two bowlers rests the onus of dismissing the opposition. In my opinion, England is far from being out of the picture.

Meiji Stages Comeback

Meiji University's baseball team that won the championship of the spring season of the Tokyo Six University league Tuesday at the Meiji Shrine stadium by beating Waseda, 4-0, in the playoff game. Waseda's splitting of its traditional two-game series with Keio had put it into a tie with Meiji. Top, Sugiura, Meiji shortstop, right, scoring from third on a bunt by Kameda in the sixth inning.

Meiji Beats Waseda, 4-0 In Playoff Game To Cop 3 Championships In Row

Revenge was sweet to Pitcher Hideo Shimizu of Meiji University Tuesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium for he checked Waseda to three hits and aided his team to win the championship of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University league in the play off contest by a 4 to 0 score. Incidentally, Meiji set a new record in the circuit annals by winning three seasons in a row.

Shimizu Comes Through

Beaten twice earlier in the season by Waseda, Southpaw Shimizu was nevertheless assigned to pitch in the all-important game, postponed from Sunday to Monday, and from Monday to Tuesday because of rain. Heavy clouds hung over Tokyo all morning, and there was a drizzle for a while too, and it was a big question mark whether the game would be played. Shimizu was in fine form. The Waseda batters were prone to look over too many strikes to be thrown into a hole at the plate, and then swing the third strike at the left hander's sharp breaking drop. The consequence was that he sent eight men back to the bench via the strike out route.

Kanemitsu Kondo, Waseda left hander who had sent Meiji to defeat in the two regularly scheduled games of the season, pitched a good game, allowing only eight scattered hits, but he couldn't win a ball game with his team-mates coming through with only three hits.

Bunting Game Effective

The soggy condition of the infield also dealt Kondo a tough blow. For Meiji's first two runs in the third inning, which gave the team the necessary stimulant for victory, came directly from two bunts on the slow and slippery field. Of course, due credit must be given Meiji for taking advantage of such a situation. Tsukakoshi walked for Meiji to start the inning. Shimizu bunted in front of the plate but Kondo fumbled it and he was safe. Captain Yoshida laid down a bunt alongside the third baseline and it rolled for an infield hit, to load the bases without a man out. Ito's grounder to short forced out Tsukakoshi at the plate but Kato came through with a timely hit through short to bat in Shimizu and Yoshida. There was no more scoring when Sakata grounded to second into a doubleplay.

Bunts again played a major part in Meiji's two runs in the last half of the sixth which definitely clinched the game. Hard hitting Sakata started the fireworks with a Texas Leaguer to right field but was forced out at second on Sugiura's bunt. Kamei hit one too hard for Second Baseman Takasu to handle and Sugiura advanced all the way to third as Takasu attempted a throw to first. The squeeze play was called with Kameda at bat. Pitcher Kondo scooped up the bunted ball that rolled to his left but his peg to the plate was poor and Sugiura tallied. Then on Kondo's wild pitch, Kamei romped home from third for the nal score of the game.

Minamimura Doubles

Waseda had a chance to score in the second inning when Third Baseman Minamimura, first up, smashed a double to center. But his poor base running stopped a possible rally. He was caught between second and third on Asai's hopper to Shimizu and run down.

Waseda's best chance was the fifth frame. Asai gained life at first on Sakata's error at first. Murase walked. Ogusu's attempt to bunt was a foul fly that Backstop Tsukakoshi caught. Kondo walked to clog the bases. Captain Takasu, in lead-off position, had a chance to become a hero, and he is a dangerous man in the pinch, but all he could do was to ground sharply to short into a doubleplay to retire the side.

Meiji proved too powerful for Waseda in the last inning. Go got his first hit of the day, a bingle through second, and Nakamura was sent in to run for him. But Minamimura and Asaki, two of the best hitters on the team, were victims to Shimizu's drops. And then Nakamura was picked off first by Backstop Tsukakoshi's quick throw to end the game.

Harvard Defeats Dartmouth, 13-9

Herald Tribune

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 21—Harvard's baseball team tightened its hold on first place in the Eastern Intercollegiate League by outslugging Dartmouth, 13 to 9, before 2,500 spectators this afternoon.

Eddie Ingalls scored his fifth consecutive pitching victory as Harvard registered its seventh triumph in nine league games. Ingalls weakened in the eighth, and was relieved by a sophomore, Tom Healey, who finished the game.

Harold Wonson went the route for Dartmouth, although he had pitched four innings against Pennsylvania yesterday. Harvard touched Wonson for thirteen hits.

Dave Shean and Jo-Jo Soltz, each with two singles in four trips to the plate, and Art Johns and Bob Fulton, each with two singles in five times at bat, led the Harvard attack. Johnny Johnson and Brade Jenkins, each with two hits in five time at bat, paced Dartmouth.

Dartmouth scored three runs on thre hits and a base on balls in the third, but Harvard retaliated with four runs on one hit, three passes and two errors in its half of the same inning.

Harvard then built up a 12-to-3 lead, scoring five runs on five hits in the sixth inning, and three runs on three hits in the seventh. Dartmouth rallied to tally six runs in the eighth on four hits, two passes and an error. Harvard closed the scoring with one run in the eighth.

Penn Upsets Yale Nine In Eleventh By 5 To 4 Score

Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, May 21—George Rusznak helped win his own game by smacking a triple in the eleventh inning as Penn scored a 5-to-4 surprise victory over Yale in an Eastern Intercollegiate League baseball game on Franklin Field this afternoon.

With the score tied at 4-all going into the last half of the eleventh, Rusznak, the Quaker pitcher and first man up, hit one of John Crosby's pitches into deep right-center field and pulled up at third base. Bernie Sacns flied out to Doonan in right, but Chuck Diven laid a bunt along the first-base line and the Red and Blue pitcher came in with the winning run.

It was the first victory for Penn in the league after dropping six straight games.

Rusznak allowed only five hits and struck out nine men. He walked six, but was effective in the pinches. Penn made fourteen hits off Monroe Jubitz and Crosby.

Penn tied the score in the eighth inning, pushing across two runs. Ogden walked and took third on Charley Morris's single. Bob McDonald brought Ogden in with a double into the right-field stands and Morris scored on Bill Dignan's sacrifice.

Carnegie Cup Record Is Set By Yale Crew

By STANLEY WOODWARD

N.Y. Herald Tribune

ITHACA, N. Y., May 21—Yale's mighty crew completed a clean-up of Cornell's spring day regatta by winning the postponed varsity race against Cornell and Princeton, and thus successfully defending the Carnegie Cup, on the strangely placid surface of Lake Cayuga this noon.

Beating Cornell by two lengths and Princeton by six, Yale returned the fastest time for two miles ever made on the lake. The Elis rowed the course in 10:23.4, smashing to atoms the record of 10:32 made by Pop Courtney's last Cornell crew in the intercollegiate regatta of 1920 against Columbia, Syracuse and Pennsylvania.

Cornell Also Beats Old Mark

Cornell, in the process of taking its third defeat in three races, a condition attributable wholly to the fact that it has raced the east's three fastest crews, also broke the record, finishing in 10:29. Princeton, never a factor after the first mile, finished in 10:42.

The setting and the meteorology today offered a direct contrast to the wild conditions of yesterday when the rolling waves of Cayuga forced postponement of the varsity event and swamped two of the crews when they attempted to row back to the boathouse.

A gentle breeze was blowing down the course, barely ruffling the surface of the lake. The sky was gray and the atmosphere chilly. Gone was the panoply of the previous day, when the water swarmed with boats and the shore was crowded with people.

This race was rowed in comparative privacy but the lack of spectators affected not at all the work of the rangy Yale crew, which rowed a race that was mechanically and tactically flawless from Edgecliff to the abandoned salt block.

Yale Takes Lead Early

After a preliminary and hopeless flurry by Princeton, Yale seized the lead and never gave it up thereafter. Cornell was unable to close on this Yale crew as its junior varsity and freshman eights had closed on their New Haven adversaries the day before.

Coffee and Cream Tree

A very useful tree is the Carnauba palm, grown in the provinces of Ceara, Parahyba and Prauhy, Brazil. Through its trunk courses a white sap from which Brazilian women concoct a beverage that looks like milk. The fruit too is edible, and from its seeds a coffee substitute is brewed. Believe It or Not—coffee and cream from the same tree! The roots of this tree are used as a tonic or flesh builder—the trunk also provides excellent durable wood for building purposes and fiber for weaving baskets and fish nets—the leaves are used to thatch huts and as a material for making hats and brooms—and most important of all, commercially, is the 16,000,000 pounds of wax taken from these palm groves each year.

Klingeberg Is Pessimistic On '40 Skiing For Sapporo

There is no hope for the formation of a new international skiing federation, and the prospects for the skiing end of the competition for the 5th Olympic Winter Games scheduled for Sapporo in 1940 are thin, according to Werner Klingeberg, technical adviser from Germany to the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee.

Grieved Over Kano's Death

Mr. Klingeberg returned Wednesday afternoon to Yokohama aboard the Scharnhorst from Germany, after attending the last general meeting of the International Olympic Committee at Cairo in March, when he contributed much toward the favorable vote of the I. O. C. in sustaining its decision of 1936 in selection of Tokyo as the site for the 1940 Summer Games and definitely awarding the Winter Games to Sapporo. Upon arrival at Yokohama, he said he had been much grieved to learn of the sudden passing of Professor Jigoro Kano, who was chairman of the Japanese delegation to Cairo, while homeward bound from Seattle.

The Scharnhorst was held off port Wednesday night for quarantine but Mr. Klingeberg was given special permission to land and he arrived at the Imperial Hotel here about 9:30 p.m.

All indications point to great difficulty for the staging of the ski events at Sapporo, according to Mr. Klingeberg, who said the F.I.S. (International Ski Federation) and the I.O.C. are as far apart as ever in their contention over the eligibility of coaches, that a compromise seems impossible. Even if Japan or Germany should take the initiative for the formation of a new F.I.S., the membership would be limited to these two countries, Italy and Poland, and under such conditions, there would be little chance for recognition by the I.O.C., according to Mr. Klingeberg. The United States would probably not come under the colors of the new federation, if formed, and inasmuch as Canada is a member of the Dominion States of Britain, she too would demur, he thinks.

While he said he still feels that the climate and facilities at Sapporo are fully adequate for the skating and skiing events, Mr. Klingeberg expressed the opinion in favor of abandoning the 1940 Games and concentrating on its organization in 1944.

Finland a Candidate

Sweden and Finland are still hoping to organize the 1944 Winter Games, according to Mr. Klingeberg. Should Finland become the sponsor, there is a chance for formation of a new F. I. S., regardless of the fact that Norway, her rival in sports, might not participate, for it seems a foregone conclusion that Britain, Canada, France, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Germany and Italy will compete, putting it on an international basis.

Mr. Klingeberg said it was good news to hear that actual work on the construction of the main Olympic stadium and other equipment will commence in the Fall, because the O. O. C. is dutybound to do so, in view of the assurances given the I. O. C. at the Cairo meeting. The work must be carried on with top speed to insure completion in the next two years, he stressed.

Necessary liaison work with the various sports federations was done by Mr. Klingeberg after the I. O. C.'s meeting at Cairo. The field hockey and soccer federations desire competition in the form of tournaments. The basketball federation is opposed to have the games played on different courts, favoring one hall, according to Mr. Klingeberg. The rowing federation is desiring more information on the Todabashi course, he said.

Roosevelt Sees Harvard Defeat Navy On Severn

By ROBERT F. KELLEY
N.Y. Times

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 21—With President Roosevelt watching from up forward on the admiral's boat, the crimson tips of the varsity crew from his alma mater remained in the front rank of rowing when they glinted in the sun on the Severn tonight and brought Harvard home a scant length in front of Navy. The Crimson still is undefeated.

No regatta all season has seen cleaner cut, better rowing than all three races displayed today, with Harvard winning the freshman and varsity, Navy the junior varsity and Penn, far from disgraced, remaining in the parade, though in third place in each contest.

The loud-speaker on the finish boat tonight brayed that Harvard had taken the Eastern sprint crown, but miles away from here, on the storm-swept Cayuga, an ancient friend of Harvard had risen to dispute that.

Yale, Too, Unbeaten

Yale, finishing its print season, heads undefeated for the race with Harvard on the Thames. The Crimson pauses once more en route to its ancient rendezvous with Yale; she will race Columbia on the Harlem next Saturday.

As the brilliant array of spectator craft picked their way downstream and the President headed out for his week-end cruise, there was no lingering doubt as to which was the better of the first two varsity eights tonight. The Crimson won, neatly and well, with a masterful display of rowing.

Penn was only a bit more than a length behind Navy and the three crews furnished a fine finishing touch to a good day of racing.

In other races this year Navy jumped to the command at the outset, but tonight Harvard stayed right alongside her through a punishing first minute of rowing. Then, inch by inch, the Cantabs went to the lead, and in the last half-mile drove home rivets in their triumph. It was a well-planned and well-executed victory.

Row Under Hot Sun

Summer at last greeted the oarsmen today and there was a hot sun and gentle breeze for them when they paddled to the start of the regatta, led by the silver-haired Julian Curtiss, veteran referee.

The fact that both Harvard and Navy had been undefeated and that the President was to attend attracted a big gathering on the shore and a fleet of yachts in the river that looked like a miniature of the huge flotilla that comes each year to New London.

There could have been no improvement in conditions. When the freshmen went from the stake boats they had a strong tide and almost completely flat water, with a slight following wind. Tide and wind both fell by the time the varsities rowed, which accounts for the great difference in time of the races.

Feller Tumbles Gomez To Win By 3 To 2 Score

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 13—Oblivious of the fact that juggling is a lost art, the Yankees went in for juggling in one inning of their game with the Indians at the Stadium yesterday and it cost them a victory. With Bob Feller locked with Lefty Gomez in a pitching duel, the New Yorkers bowed to the 19-year-old boy wonder, 3 to 2, and lost their hold on first place in the American League.

Not only did the world champions fall from the lead but they saw their seven-game winning streak stopped.

This was a gorgeously waged struggle that held a crowd of 19,782 enraptured to the end. Gomez, the singular senor, who was having a good day at the wrong time, held Cleveland to four hits while his youthful rival, in almost equally parsimonious fashion, yielded only five.

But in the fatal sixth inning the Yankees resembled a team of oldtime vaudevillians as the Tribe pushed over three runs to nudge the Ruppert Rifles out of the lead, Washington climbing back into first place and leaving the New Yorkers and Clevelanders uncomfortably situated on the second rung of the ladder.

Campbell Starts It

For five innings Feller and Gomez allowed a hit each. In the sixth strange things transpired. Bruce Campbell hit a shot to left that Myril Hoag partly caught near the stands but finally dropped. It went for two bases. Bad News Hale attempted a sacrifice but Bill Dickey pawed around for the handle without even finding it. That meant runners on first and third. Julius Solters lined to left. Again Hoag reached the ball but could not hold it as one run scored.

To make things even more complicated at this stage, Solters went half way to second, Dodger style, only to find Hale there ahead of him. But, after a lot of wild firing, no one was put out. Earl Averill singled to center to send in Hale, Joe DiMaggio bobbling the ball as each runner advanced an extra sack.

Hal Trosky slashed a grounder to Frankie Crosetti, only to have the Yankee shortstop fumble momentarily before throwing him out. Meanwhile, however, a run scored.

Henrich Scores on Wallop

In the Yankee half of the sixth Tommy Henrich cracked a liner to right, the first solid shot the Yanks had all day. Then, after both DiMaggio and Dickey had been retired, Lou Gehrig hit his third homer of the season into the rightfield stands for two runs.

And that was the end of the scoring. Both Feller and Gomez pitched beautifully before and after the sixth. The Clevelander, artfully mixing a quick-breaking curve with his fast ball, fanned nine and allowed only three walks. Gomez struck out five and walked as many.

Both were in trouble on various occasions but escaped nicely. The big thrill came in the ninth when Gehrig singled for his second hit of the day and then was thrown out in going to second when Hoag struck out and Rollie Hemsley dropped the third strike. A perfect throw caught the Iron Horse as he slid into the bag.

Fourth Defeat For Gomez

Feller's victory was his fourth of the year, against only one defeat, and his strike-out list mounted to forty-five, tops for the season. Gomez, the hard-luck king, now has only two triumphs and four setbacks.

DiMaggio went hitless for the first time in this campaign after having batted safely in nine straight games.

Three of the four Cleveland hits came in the one inning that the Yanks elected for their two errors.

Will Harridge, president of the American League, was at the game and so was Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, who must have wanted to see how the other half of the world lives. It looked like a National League fray to him.

Eagles Triumph Over Nagoya, 3-2 In Pro Circuit

The Eagles moved up closer to the league leading Tigers, runner-up Giants and third-place Hankyus in the professional baseball circuit by nosing out Nagoya, 3 to 2, in the only game played Wednesday afternoon at the Korakuen stadium.

The winners clinched the game by scoring one run in the fourth and two more in the sixth. A Texas Leaguer by Backstop Harris filled the bags in the fourth without a man away. And as Nakagawa grounded to short into a doubleplay, Nomura romped home from third. Three hits paved the way for the two runs in the sixth.

Nagoya's only two runs came in the eighth off Pitcher Kameda, who had relieved Furukawa in the sixth, when he forced in both on walks. But he struck out Osawa and Shiraki and Kuramoto grounded out to third to retire the side.

Jiro Yamagishi Sails For Davis Cup Play

Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's No. 1 tennis player, sailed aboard the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Taiyo Maru from Yokohama at 3 p.m. Wednesday, San Francisco bound, to join the other members of the Japan Davis Cup team in New York on July 21.

By virtue of Yamagishi's presence, Japan is a heavy favorite to eliminate Canada in the first round of the American zone at Montreal.

It is Yamagishi's fourth jaunt abroad as a Davis Cupper.

7 Meet Marks Set As Princeton Wins Ivy League Crown

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., May 21—While others collapsed around them, Princeton's trackmen hewed to the line today and discovered that it was the straight line that led them to their first heptagonal meet championship. The Tigers, meeting totally unexpected competition from Cornell, took the lead at the twelfth event and coasted the rest of the way.

The final point standing left the Ivy League members in this order: Princeton, 59¼; Cornell, 53 1-6; Columbia, 34½; Harvard, 33 11-12; Yale, 29 5-12 Dartmouth, 15 5-12, and Penn, 14 1-3.

The crystal globe gazers had picked Yale and Columbia to press the sons of Old Nassau, but the Elis stumbled all the way and never really entered the fight. The Lions, with Captain Ben Johnson ailing in the college infirmary, lost all their ammunition and did very well to take third place.

Had it not been for Cornell this would have been a breeze for the pupils of Matty Geis, who went through their dual meet season unbeaten and can lay claim to being the best team in the East. The Tigers were hotter today than the weather and it was nice and warm beneath a steady sun in Palmer Stadium.

Princeton had only four winners but all four were record-breakers. Seven meet standards were erased in all and two tied, the biggest assault in the four-year history of the games.

The new records were these: Pete Bradley of Princeton with 1:52.7 in the half, Alex Northrop of Harvard with 4:16.5 in the mile, Bill Lynch of Princeton with 168 feet 8½ inches in the hammer throw, Frank Ryan of Columbia with 50 feet 9¼ inches in the shot-put, Anson Perina of Princeton with 24 feet 2 inches in the broad jump, Princeton with 0:41.8 in the 440-yard relay and Bill Harding of Yale with 13 feet 10¼ inches in the pole vault.

Unbeaten in Dual Meets

Lester Murdock of Cornell cleared 6 feet 3½ inches for a high jump record tie and Cornell's mile relay did 3:19 for the other tied mark.

Plenty of Action

This was a good meet from start to finish. It was closely waged as Princeton led from the third test until the eighth, when Cornell took command. Then the disciples of the veteran Jack Moakley held fast until the twelfth, when the Geis youngsters stepped out ahead for the last time.

When Columbia arrived here without Johnson, form chart forecasters were observed tossing their selections out the nearest window. It was every man for himself after that. To add to the complications favorites were bowled over right and left.

Of eight defending individual champions only three came through. They were Ryan in the shot, Harding in the vault and John Herrick of Harvard in the discus throw. As for the others John Castle of Yale was second in the hammer, Bob Haydock of Harvard tied for second in the high jump, Eliott Hooper of Cornell was third in the javelin, Jack Donovan of Dartmouth, four times an intercollegiate champion, was last in the high hurdles, and Arnold Sharpley of Penn was unplaced in the broad jump.

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 15—Donald J. Budge, of the United States, who already holds three of the world's major tennis crowns and this year hopes to make it a grand slam, has again been seeded to win top honors in the annual Wimbledon tourney opening here on June 22, it was announced today.

Seedings made public simultaneously with the official draw showed that the lanky Californian has been picked to repeat his last year's victories in both the singles and the doubles, the latter of which he will defend together with his Davis Cup teammate, Gene Mako.

Seeded Players

Other seeded players in the men's singles are, in the order of their rating: Henry "Bunny" Austin (England); Roderick Menzel (Czechoslovakia); Henner Henkel (Germany); Frantisek Puncec (Yugoslavia); D. Mitic (Yugoslavia); Ladislas Hecht (Czechoslovakia); and Kho Sin-kie (China).

Budge, it was revealed, is also seeded first in the mixed doubles, where he and Miss Alice Marble, of the United States, will defend the title which they won last year.

Seeking to regain the crown which she held seven times up till 1935, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of the United States, was seeded first in the women's singles, followed by Miss Marble, Miss Jedrzejowska of Poland, Mrs. Sperling of Denmark and Madame Mathieu of France. Miss Dorothy Round, the titleholder, is not defending.

Seeded sixth, seventh and eighth, respectively, in the women's division were Miss Katherine Stammers of England, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of the United States, and Mrs. Margaret Scriven of England.

3 Japanese Entered

Three Japanese players, not including Jiro Yamagishi, 1938 Davis Cup captain, are entered in the men's singles. Yasumine Kuramitsu drew a berth in the top quarter with Austin and Mitic, meeting Ellmer of Switzerland in the first round.

Fumiteru Nakano, in the same quarter with Henkel and Hecht, was paired against G. Medecin, of Monaco, and Tamio Abe will play his first-round match against D. H. Williams, of England, in the third quarter. Seeded players in the latter quarter are Menzel and Puncec.

Cunningham Takes Mile Run In 4:12.9

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 23—Glenn Cunningham ran the mile in 4:12.9 yesterday in winning an exhibition race which featured the athletic program of the German Sport and Field Day at Randalls Island. The transplanted Kansan entertained a gathering of 6,000 spectators with his performance.

Competing against Cunningham were Gene Venzke of the New York A. C., Howard Borck of Manhattan, Ernie Federoff of the Millrose A. A. and Joe McCluskey, former Fordham star, now wearing the colors of the New York A. C.

Venzke made the pace through the greater part of the race, but finished second to Cunningham by about ten yards. At the start the flying Kansan took the lead, and he showed the way to his rivals at the quarter, where he was timed in 1:04.6. Venzke then forged ahead and held that post at the half mile, for which his figures were 2:09.8. At the three-quarters Venzke still led, in 3:13.9, but he was unable to meet Cunningham's closing bid, and the latter romped home to a decisive triumph. Borck finished third, Federoff fourth and McCluskey fifth.

Frank Conforti of the German-American A. C. was the standout performer in the events closed to German groups. He competed in the 800-meter run and the 3,000-meter grind, and captured both.

The program was conducted by the German-American Sports Alliance, the American Turner Bund and the German-American Athletic Union.

Giants Up Closer To Osaka Tigers In Pro Ball Loop

The Tokyo Giants crept up closer to the league leading Osaka Tigers in the professional baseball circuit by vanquishing the Lions, 11 to 5, Thursday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium. They are now only two games behind the Tigers in the standings.

The Giants clinched the game by scoring eight runs off Pitcher Kikuya in the second inning and incidentally overcoming a 4—0 lead. Chiba started the fireworks with a hit to right after Ito had struck out. Mizusawa was hit by a pitched ball. Yoshiwara banged a hit over first to score Chiba from second. Both Stalphin and Go walked to force in Mizusawa. Shiraishi lashed a double to center to clean up the bags. Mizuhara followed with a hit to right to bring in Shiraishi. Nakajima singled through second to send Mizuhara to third. The latter scored on Ito's Texas Leaguer to center. Chiba walked again to fill the bags. Nakajima taillied the eighth run as Mizusawa grounded out to second.

Kondo relieved Kikuya on the mound in the fifth and was scored upon two times before he retired the side.

Stalphin pitched the entire game for the Giants, allowing nine hits.

A homer by Second Baseman Karita, the first man up, gave the Senators plenty of encouragement and they tumbled the Dolfins, 6 to 2, in the other tilt of the doubleheader. Kaneko chucked for the Senators up to the ninth when he was sent to the showers when two Dolfins batsmen crashed him for successive blows. Asaoka was sent to his relief and retired the next two batters, the first grounding into a doubleplay.

Senators Break Indians' Streak In 12th, 6 To 4

N.Y. Herald Tribune

CLEVELAND, May 21—Kendall Chase outlasted Earl Whitehill in an extra-inning battle of southpaw pitchers today, and Washington edged to a 5-to-4 decision in the twelfth frame to halt the winning streak of the Cleveland Indians at five games.

The Indians retained first place in the American League as the Boston Red Sox lost at St. Louis.

The failure of Lewis, third baseman, to bunt in two sacrifice attempts resulted in the victory for the Senators. Bluege had reached first on a walk to open the twelfth, and Galehouse replaced Whitehill on the mound for Cleveland. After trying twice to lay down a sacrifice, Lewis singled through the box and Bluege went to third.

Simmons grounded out and Bluege was held at third, but he scored a moment later on Bonura's fly to right. Stone singled but Lewis was out at the plate on a fine throw by Campbell.

Chicago Defeats European Boxers By 5 To 3 Score

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, May 18—The largest crowd ever to witness amateur boxing indoors, 22,234 spectators, saw the Chicago Golden Gloves championship team triumph over the European champions, 5 bouts to 3, in the Chicago Stadium tonight.

Three National A. A. U. titleholders, Dan Merritt, Cleveland heavyweight; Jimmy O'Malley, Chicago welterweight, and Bill Eddy, Flint, Mich., featherweight, went down to defeat in bristling three rounders.

Herbert Runge of Hamburg, Olympic heavyweight champion, conquered Merritt by outjabbing him and counter-punching with right uppercuts. The big German, knocked out in the international bouts a year ago, showed vast improvement against the Cleveland Negro.

Ireland, Poland and Germany each won one bout in the eight classes.

The most impressive puncher was Antoni Kolczynski, Polish welterweight champion, who dropped O'Malley five times in the first round.

America was off in front when Walter Cavalieri of Chicago got the decision over Olli Lehtinen of Helsingfors, Finland, in the flyweight class. The Chicagoan came on in the closing round to connect solidly with rights to the chin.

Frank Kainrath of Chicago outscored Ulderico Sergo of Fiume, Italy, to win the closely fought 118-pound bout. The Italian Olympic champion, who had defeated Kainrath a year ago, forced the fighting, but his punches were wild and ineffective.

Saunders, from Dublin, won in the 126-pound class when the judges voted against Eddy, a 21-year-old blacksmith helper, despite two clean-cut knockdowns he scored in the final round, because of Eddy's hesitancy in breaking.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP SUMMARIES

Flyweight—Walter Cavalieri, 112, Chicago, outpointed Olli Lehtinen, 112, Finland, three rounds.

Bantamweight—Frank Kainrath, 118, Chicago, outpointed Ulderico Sergo, 117½, Itay, three rounds.

Featherweight—Johnny Saunders, 125, Ireland, outpointed Dil'y Eddy, 124½, Flint, Mich., three rounds.

Lightweight—Milton Bess, 133½, Indianapolis, outpointed Herbert Nurnberg, 135½, Germany, three rounds.

Welterweight—Antoni Kolczynski, 146¼, Poland, stopped Jimmy O'Malley, 146¾, Chicago, in first.

Middleweight—Booker Beckwith, 159¼, Gary, Ind., outpointed Adolf Baumgarten, 159¼, Germany, three rounds.

Light-Heavyweight—Linto Guerrieri, 175½, Rock Falls, Ill., outpointed Richard Vogt, 174½, Germany, three rounds.

Heavyweight—Herbert Runge, 200, Germany, outpointed Dan Meritt, 185, Cleveland, three rounds.

N.C.A.A. Accepts 29 Swim Records

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 24—The National Collegiate A. A. has accepted for registration twenty-nine swimming records established this year, according to the official list issued yesterday by Philip S. Harburger, chairman of the record committee. Varsity contestants bettered five marks and equaled another, college freshmen accounted for sixteen and preparatory school students for seven.

Harburger pointed out that the list hardly afforded a true idea of the progress made, as some of the old marks were clipped more than once, while several record feats of unquestionable merit were lost because of inaccurate pool measurement.

Lane's Unusual Record

Under the latter heading is a 400-yard relay race in the splendid time of 3:35.8 by boys of Lane Technical High, Chicago. This feat, the greatest of scholastic achievements, eclipsed the national high and preparatory school standards of 3.47.7 and 3:41.4, but went into the discard when the pool was found to be a few inches short of the required twenty-five yards.

The Princeton medley relay trio of Albert Vande Weghe, Richard Hough and Hendrik Van Oss gave the best varsity performance. They covered 300 yards in 2:53.6, shading not only Harvard's intercollegiate record of 2:57.4, but the world mark, 2:54.9, held by the Lake Shore A. C. of Chicago.

Tyler School Star

The outstanding star in the scholastic ranks was David Tyler of Mercersburg. He cut the national preparatory school short course marks for 100 yards free style from 0:53.4 to 0:52.6, besides teaming with Gills, Follansbee and Johnson to lower the standard for the 400-yard relay from 3:41.4 to 3:36.

Oxford Centipedes Regain Title In Universities' Track Meet

Observer

LONDON, May 22—The general standard of performances was well above the average in the Universities' Athletic Union championships, which were concluded at the White City Stadium, yesterday. Oxford Centipedes, numerically stronger than most of their rivals, led throughout in the team championship, and, with an aggregate of 79 points, regained the title they last won in 1936. London, who were successful in 1934, were runners-up with 41½ points, and Cambridge Alverstone, the holders, who were without several of their best men, were third with 33 points. Oxford were represented in each of the fifteen events and failed to score in only three—the hammer-throw, the one mile, and the three miles.

One record was beaten yesterday when G. Brown was an easy winner of the quarter-mile in 49 sec., to clip 1 sec. off G. N. Blake's record which had stood since 1934. Brown was moving with such ease that had he been pressed, it is conceivable that G. L. Rampling's British record of 48 sec. might have been equalled, if not improved on. As it was, Brown won, easing up, by six yards from N. F. de Vere (Trinity, Dublin), who previously had won the half-mile in 1 min. 57.5 sec. Over the longer distance de Vere's strong finish proved too much for the Oxford runner, J. O. Moreton.

The high jump record of 6 ft. appeared likely to be beaten, for both R. K. I. Kennedy (London) holder, and A. W. Selwyn (Oxford) were jumping faultlessly when they tied at 5 ft. 11 in. In the end Kennedy cleared 6 ft. to equal the previous best, while Selwyn failed to improve on his earlier efforts.

A. C. Franks (London), again won the mile, although it was touch and go with D. H. McNiel, the long-striding Dublin runner, the lead having changed twice between the pair in the last 200 yards. G. M. Carstairs retained the three miles title by a comfortable margin, beating a fellow Edinburgh runner in J. W. Martin after the pair had "left" the rest of the field with a half a mile to go.

The American, J. H. Schniederman, of Glasgow, was much the most prominent in the field events, adding the weight-putt to his successes of the previous day. In all Schniederman scored 18 of Glasgow's total of 23 points.

England Defeats France By 4-2 In Soccer Game

London Times

PARIS, May 26—England beat France by four goals to two in the third, and last, match of their brief Continental tour at the Stade Colombes, on the outskirts of Paris this afternoon. It is three years since the two teams met in this country, and the occasion was marked by an attendance described as one of the largest, if not the largest, ever recorded at a football match in France.

The visitors received a warm welcome, and were applauded heartily when the game was over. Five of the goals were scored before half-time. The other came from a penalty kick by Bastin five minutes before the end. Although the first half was so productive of goals, the best football was seen after the change of ends.

England Loses Toss

England lost the toss and kicked off in the face of what little wind there was. They attacked strongly, and after five minutes' play Broome, at outside-right, was able to seize upon a faulty clearance by di Lorto, the French goalkeeper, and to score the opening goal. Ten minutes later Broome found the net again with a high shot from the edge of the penalty area, which dropped behind the goalkeeper's upraised hands, but the referee disallowed the goal on account of some technical offense by Drake that was not apparent from the stand.

Then France in turn attacked strongly, and Courtois, on the right wing, sent in a shot from short range which would have met a better fate had it not been for a magnificent save by Woodley, and shortly afterwards Heisserer, and then Brusseaux, both miskicked when within an ace of scoring. France continued to press and were rewarded by a corner from which Jordan headed a goal.

England regained their advantage a minute later through Drake, but lost it again immediately, Nicolas, the French center-forward, scoring with a fine drive from several yards out. England's third goal was the result of what was, perhaps, the one mistake made by di Lorto, who otherwise played magnificently. On this occasion he came a little too far from his goal in an effort to intercept Drake, who was running through, but was only partially successful, and the ball rolled past him with just sufficient impetus to carry it to the corner of the net.

Up to half-time the football had been good, but not unusually so, and the score was a fair reflection upon the play. After the interval, however, England were clearly on top and for the greater part France were hemmed in their own half. Goulden, Bastin, and Drake played beautifully together and their failure to score from the many openings they made for themselves was due only to the fact that they finished badly, sending the ball over the crossbar time and time again. Throughout this trying period the French defense appeared to be badly overrun, although Disgne, left half-back, was a tower of strength. Indeed the few French breakaway were usually the result of fine clearances by him, but the English defense also was thoroughly sound and Hapgood had a way of bringing the French efforts to nothing.

As time went on play in front of the French goal became increasingly vigorous, and with five minutes to go Drake, who had been engaged in a mild passage of arms with the opposing backs, was brought down when about to shoot from short range. A penalty was awarded against France; Bastin took the kick and with it finished the day's scoring, although England continued to press strongly until the final whistle. With this one exception the game was unmarked by incidents and was contested in a thorough sporting spirit.

The French owe their defeat in a large measure to the failure of their half-back line to feed the forwards, who were always dangerous when given an opportunity, while the English forwards might have had a heyday had they been able to bring their supremacy in the second half to its logical conclusion by good shooting.

The teams were:—

ENGLAND—Woodley (Chelsea), goal; Sproston (Leeds United) and Hapgood (captain) (Arsenal), backs; Willingham (Huddersfield Town), Young (Huddersfield Town), and Cullis (Wolverhampton Wanderers), halfbacks; Broome (Aston Villa), Matthews (Stoke City), Drake (Arsenal), Goulden (West Ham United), and Bastin (Arsenal), forwards.

FRANCE—Di Lorto (Sochaux), goal; Cazenave (Sochaux) and Mattier (Sochaux), backs; Bourbotte (Fivés), Jordan (Paris Racing), and Diagne (Paris Racing), half-backs; Courtois (Sochaux), Brusseaux (Sete), Nicolas (Rouen), Heisserer (Strasbourg), and Aston (Red Star), forward.

Schumacher Wins For Giants, 3 To 1 From Cardinals

By JOHN DREBINGER

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 26—Embellishing his own high-grade pitching performance with a home run that soared even higher, Prince Hal Schumacher added still further to the woes of the once merry Onkel Franz Frisch by hurling the Giants to their second straight triumph over the invading Cardinals at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

Jo-Jo Moore also modestly contributed a homer, his fifth of the year, and the result was a 3-to-1 victory wrenched from the left-handed Cards looking more worn and thumbed than ever.

In fact, Onkel Franz's woes reached rock bottom as early as the second inning, when Umpire George Barr waved him clear into the clubhouse for protesting with greater violence than caution against the calling of a third strike on Pepper Martin, who did not exactly keep himself tongue-tied either.

Cardinals Draw Even

Despite the absence of their banished chief, the Cards really did make a much sterner fight of it than on the previous afternoon, and as late as the first half of the fifth had the score deadlocked at 1—all when Don Gutteridge stroked a homer into the lower right tier. That matched a tally the Giants had picked up in the third on a trio of singles by Schumacher, Jimmy Ripple and Mel Ott.

But scarcely had the Red Birds finished pluming themselves on the strength of this achievement than Schumie, in the last of the fifth gave the crowd of 4,829 the last look it was to get at the ball in play at that particular moment by belting it right over the roof of the left field stand.

In the sixth the Giants fell victims of a bad break when, with runners on first and second, Mickey Haslin slammed a single to center that should easily have scored Johnny McCarthy. But Johnny, in rounding third, fell flat on his face and the inning ended a moment later with the bases still full.

Jo-Jo Eases the Tension

In the seventh our nimble Jo-Jo eased the tension with a smash against the upper balcony in deep left and that proved more margin than Prince Hal needed in hanging up his third victory of the year against three defeats. In fact, it was Schumie's best effort since getting floored by a blow in the solar plexus on May 7 in Pittsburgh. Coming on the heels of Clydell Castleman's splendid comeback on Tuesday, Colonel Bill Terry now has the assurance of a five-star pitching cast.

Schumie allowed the Cards only six blows, issued no passes and kept the Gas House Gang's heaviest slouters, notably Muscles Medwick, well blotted all the day. Muscles Joe, indeed, never got the ball out of the infield in four tries.

Olympic Official Is Summoned To Serve On Front

Makoto Mihashi, director of the Japan Basketball Association and who was coach to the Japanese basketball team at the 11th Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936, has been summoned to the colors, according to a Domei report today.

While a student at the Seijo Higher School, Mihashi was a member of the Japanese quintet that competed at the 9th Far Eastern Championships at Manila. He was later captain of the Kyoto Imperial University team and then its coach after his graduation.

At present, Mihashi is an assistant to the athletic division of the Welfare Ministry. He is the first of the Olympic officials to be summoned to the colors for duty in China.

Previous to his departure, Mihashi said he had gone to the front during the Manchurian Incident in 1931 and this will be his second, and he considered it a great honor to be able to serve his country.

Michigan Wins Big Ten Track

N.Y. Herald Tribune

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 21—Paced by husky William Watson, who turned in his second straight three-event "grand slam," the University of Michigan's powerful squad rolled up 61½ points today in the thirty-eighth annual Western Conference track and field championships to retain the title it has held sixteen times since the turn of the century.

Wason "cashed in" again with victories in the discus, shotput and broad jump, along with a third place in the high jump.

Three records were written into the books, but it was lanky Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, who stole the show.

Mehl turned the two-mile run into a sprint as he tore 9.4 seconds off the conference mark with a startling 9:10.4 effort. That time also was 2 of a second under the national collegiate record. Don Lash, the former Indiana "Great," set the collegiate mark of 9:10.6 and the conference record of 9:19.8 two years ago.

The two-mile was easily the day's highlight, Mehl being forced to the limit by Ralph Schwartzkopf, Michigan sophomore, and Tom Deckard, the Indiana veteran.

Albritton Sets Jump Record

Dave Albritton, Ohio State's lanky jumper, turned in a leap of 6 feet 7¼ inches in the high jump, shading the old conference record of 6 feet 6⅝ inches set last year by Mel Walker, also of Ohio. Walker and Albritton are joint holders of the national collegiate mark of 6 feet 9¾ inches.

Watson turned in the other record, his heave of 52 feet 11½ inches in the shotput eclipsing his own mark of 50 feet 10¾ inches set in 1937, the first year he swept through his three specialties.

Wisconsin, scoring in eleven of fifteen events, pulled up second with 37 points, while Ohio State was third with 31½. Indiana scored 27; Iowa, 21; Illinois, 18; Purdue, 11; Chicago, 11; Minnesota, 6, and Northwestern, 1. About 3,500 fans braved a rain to witness the meet.

The Wolves, displaying great all-around strength, racked up 35½ points in the six field events, and the other 26 by scoring in six of the nine track fixtures.

The much-heralded attempt of Glenn Cunningham, New York Curb Exchange miler, to approach the record in a paced exhibition event failed to provide any thrills. The Kansan ran the distance in 4:11.7, or .3 second slower than the time Charley Fenske, of Wisconsin, turned in while annexing the Big Ten mile a few minutes earlier.

Fenske also entered the dual-winner class by taking the half mile in easy fashion in 1:52.9, .7 second from the Conference record.

The summaries:

One-mile run—Won by Charles Fenske, Wisconsin; M. Trutt, Indiana, second; J. T. Smith, Indiana, third; T. Deckark, Indiana, fourth; A. P. Knapp, Purdue, fifth.

Wins National Soccer Title

The Waseda University soccer team that won the national championship Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium by beating Keio, defending champions, 4 goals to one.

Waseda Defeats Keio, 4-1, To Cop National Soccer

Sorely missing the absence of Captain Harima at right inside to lead the attack, Keio University's soccer team went down to a 4 to 1 defeat at the hands of the Waseda eleven Sunday afternoon at the Meji Shrine stadium in the final of the 4th annual national championships.

Keio had been strongly favored to win its third straight title but the fans had not reckoned with Harima's sudden illness that kept him on the sidelines.

Keio Scores First

At that, Keio was first to score after five minutes of play in the first half and there were those, seeing the smooth functioning of the team that kept pressing the Waseda goal, of the opinion that the goal had virtually decided the winner. But Waseda not in the least discouraged deadlocked the count at 1-all in 14 minutes and then forged into the lead in 20 minutes when Watanabe bounced the ball off his head into the net.

At this stage of the game, Keio tried desperately to even the count before the interval and turned into an all-offensive game only to let Waseda come through with another tally in 26 minutes. A long boot by Kamo from the 30 yard line took an irregular bound and made goal for a 3 to 1 Waseda lead at half time.

Over-anxious, Keio's passing virtually went to pieces in the second half. Neither team failed to do much, the ball being alternated from one zone to another, until Waseda, registered the final goal of the game just before closing time. Sueoka took a pass from Watanabe and scored a clean shot from the center 20 yard line.

Fighting Spirit Wins

Rather than individual efforts, the fighting spirit of the entire team was Waseda's primary winning factor.

The line-ups were:

Waseda: Mitsutani, Sueoka, Kamo, Watanabe and Takahashi, forwards; Shibata, Miyake and Sasano, halfbacks; Yoshida and Soda, fullbacks; Fuwa, goalie.

Keio: Shiozaki, Watanabe, Ninomiya, Obata and Inomata, forwards; Takajima, Ishikawa and Sahara, halfbacks; Kato and Miyakawa, fullbacks; and Tsuda, goalie.

Night Games Soon For Ebbets Field

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 23—Night baseball will be played at Ebbets Field within the next thirty days.

Larry MacPhail, who introduced the nocturnal game to the major leagues while directing the Cincinnati club and who now is executive vice president of the Dodgers, announced yesterday that a complete lighting system in the Brooklyn park "will be ready for operation about June 15."

While the statement said no decision had been reached as to which baseball or football games will be scheduled at night, it is practically certain Flatbush fans will not have to wait longer than June 17 to see their first night game.

The Reds will pay a four-day visit to Brooklyn beginning Tuesday, June 14, and a night contest doubtless will be scheduled during that stay. Six more such games will be played thereafter, with the Giants probably the only club that will not accept an evening date.

Contracts, already let, call for seven steel towers to be erected on the roof of the stands and approximately 700 floodlights will be mounted on nine towers at about 120 feet.

The system, engineered by the General Electric Company, which has made more than 100 installations for night baseball, including that in the Cincinnati plant, will cost about $10,000. It will be the largest and most modern for night sports in the world, the announcement said, the intensity of the light on the field being much greater than has ever before been attempted—about six times as much as is provided indoors for basketball or hockey.

Oxford Athletes Beaten By A.A.A. By 75 1-2 To 50 1-2

London Times

LONDON, May 26—Oxford was decisively beaten by the team of the Amateur Athletic Association on the Iffley Road Sports ground yesterday afternoon, but it had its consolations. The scoring was 75½ points to 50½ in favor of the A.A.A. The outstanding achievements, on the other hand, belonged to the University, both on the track and in the field.

The meeting was opened by the 100 yards, in which A. W. Sweeney promised to be an almost certain winner, quite conceivably in some record time, for there was a stiff wind at the backs of the sprinters. Sweeney did win, but only—one says only, for these are record-breaking days—in the even time of 10 sec. What surprise there was in this race lay in the fact that K. T. Jenkins, and not P. J. Wells, finished an excellent second to Sweeney. Wells had won the 100 yards and Jenkins the 220 yards at the U.A.U. meeting last Saturday, but on this occasion Jenkins carried off Oxford's share of the honors in both events. Jenkins finished very strongly in the 100, no more than a yard behind Sweeney.

Later on, in the longer sprint, he finished still more strongly and fairly and squarely beat Sweeney, if only by inches. Jenkins began to gain on Sweeney in the last 20 yards. He was level about five yards from the tape, and it required courage and a rare balance and follow-through to beat so determined a finisher as Sweeney. Jenkins' time of 21.7 sec. beat the Oxford and track record set up by A. Pennington last year. If Pennington had been able to run yesterday there must have been an even finer race. One might add that in the 100 yards Wells beat M. M. Scarr, the A.A.A. second string, into fourth place—which did not count in the scoring—while in the 220 yards C. H. Kearny kept Scarr out of a place.

An Old Record Goes

J. O. Moreton, the Oxford miler, also did remarkably well to lead all the way and to beat J. V. Powell by three yards in the half mile. Here the time was not so impressive, but the wind had its snags as well as its advantages in the longer races. It was in the field, however, that the two really outstanding feats were accomplished, in each case by an Oxford man. With his second long jump R. A. Powell broke the 45-year-old Oxford record standing to the famous name of C. B. Fry. Powell jumped 23ft. 9in., which was 2½in. farther than Fry's best. Unfortunately, Powell then hurt a knee, and after one most painful effort, withdrew. This left the field to W. E. N. Breach and J. F. Lockwood, who represented the A.A.A. Both jumped over 23ft., so that the standards were remarkably high, even allowing for the following wind. Lockwood, who will become one of Oxford's athletic assets in the autumn, was the first schoolboy to compete against the University.

Then there was the magnificent javelin throwing of R. E. M. Blakeway, who won the event for Oxford with a cast of 202ft. 4in. This easily beat the English, Oxford, and ground records. Blakeway may yet join the select Olympia clan of javelin throwers.

Almost needless to say, there was no one seriously to press D. O. Finlay in either of the hurdle events. The one man who might have done so, J. N. Irwin, of Oxford, did not run in the 220 yards race over low hurdles. It was something that F. V. Scopes finished second, while A. W. Selwyn, who was a substitute for Irwin, gallantly kept E. J. C. Higgins out of a place. Higgins had finished second to Finlay in the 120 yards hurdles, in which Finlay, apparently with ease as well as his usual perfect technique, clipped a tenth of a second off the Oxford and ground record shared so far by Linsley and C. F. Stanwood.

The University was at their unhappiest in the mile and three miles. In the former, they had no one to upset the teamwork of D. B. Pell and P. A. Dee. The three miles developed into a "conversation piece." R. V. Draper and A. E. J. Etheridge were soon in a comfortable and unhurried lead, and they amiably conspired to finish a breast. In the quarter mile, however, which was the last of the track events, Oxford produced a strong runner in Kearny, who, as already mentioned, had finished third in the 220 yards. In the quarter, after A. C. Emphy had set a cracking pace that killed himself, Kearny challenged J. G. Barnes, passed him, and, by a great effort, just managed to stay in front.

R. K. I. Kennedy won the high jump for the A.A.A. at 6ft., but A. W. Selwyn, who made fewer mistakes than C. A. Walker, occupied the second position at 5ft. 10in. In the pole vault, two A.A.A. men shared the first place with A. Yielden, of Loughborough, who was appearing as a substitute for F. R. Webster. The A.A.A. also did most of the scoring in the discus, but H. Mertz gave Oxford the weight.

Budge Expected To Win 2 Titles At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 18—Accorded top honors in last Wednesday's seedings, Donald J. Budge, of the United States, is likely to repeat his last year's victories in both the singles and doubles at the annual Wimbledon tennis tourney opening here on Monday. He will team up with Gene Mako, his Davis Cup teammate, in the doubes.

This year's meeting of the famous tourney will be marked by the absence of such star players as William Tilden, Frederick J. Perry, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, and Henri Cochet, but there are some strong female participants including Mrs. Helen Wills Moody of the United States, Miss Alice Marble, and Miss J. Jedrzejowska, of Poland. The event is likely to be blessed with fine weather.

Tigers Vanquish Yankees, 7 To 3 On Four Homers

N.Y. Times

DETROIT, May 25—Rudy York and Hank Greenberg, Detroit's devastating home run duo, put on a supercolossal exhibition of their specialty act today to the delight of 17,000 rooters, but very much to the distress of the Yankees. Each hit two, York his seventh and eighth, and Greenberg his ninth and tenth, and between them they drove in every run by which the Tigers sent the staggering champions down to their third straight defeat, 7 to 3.

It was an attack which struck early and with such explosive force that it blew young Joe Beggs, the rookie righthander from Newark, right into the shower room in the fifth, and left the Yankees who remained on the field too dazed to catch up. They had numerous opportunities, but they were shell-shocked and they wound up with twelve runners stranded.

Greenberg Takes Cue

The first salvo by the tandem terrors was touched off in the third inning. With Dixie Walker on first base, Pete Fox on second and two out, York responded with a drive into the lower left-field stand. This was Greenberg's cue, and he took it, following with a similar clout that appeared to go through the wire screen fronting the left-field stand and into the seats.

In the fifth the act was repeated by popular demand, the setting this time being Charlie Gehringer on second and one out when York fired into the upper tier in distant left. It was this blow that convinced Joe McCarthy young Beggs was not having a good day, and Ivy Paul Andrews, the veteran knuckleball manipulator, was brought in. Greenberg hammered Andrew's first pitch into the lower stands in left, this time clearing the screen by a good margin.

Gill Hurls Full Game

Against this long-distance clouting the Yankees matched a pecking attack of singles, spiced with a triple by Red Rolfe in the fifth and a double by Frank Crosetti in the ninth, which annoyed George Gill, one of the younger Tiger right-handers, but didn't seriously interfere with his progress through a complete game. The New York forces collected twelve hits altogether, the same as the Tigers.

The Yanks picked up a run in the first when Rolfe beat out a hopper to second, stole second and went to third when George Tebbetts, the Tiger catcher, threw into center field. He scored on Joe DiMaggio's single to left. In the fifth, they added another when Rolfe followed Crosetti's single with a triple to left center.

They didn't score again until the ninth when Crosetti led with a double and Rolfe scored him with a single to left, his fifth straight hit. Tom Henrich kept the desperate rally moving with a single to right, but DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey went out in order. There were two Yankees left in each of the last four innings.

Ruth Becomes Coach Of Brooklyn Dodgers

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 18—Babe Ruth, one-time Swat King, today accepted the position of a coach for the Brooklyn Dodgers for a reported salary of $15,000 for the balance of the current season, it was learned here. It is said that he will probably hold job as a manager also.

Since he quit the Boston Braves in 1930 as a coach Ruth devoted his spare time to golfing and fishing, rejecting offers from the minor leagues. The Brooklyn's offer came as a surprise yesterday.

White Sox Record No. 200 For Lyons

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, May 22—Ted Lyons, 37-year-old right-hander, who came to the White Sox from Baylor University fifteen years ago, scored his 200th American League victory today in defeating the Senators, 9 to 2.

The knuckleballer yielded nine hits, one a homer by Jonathan Stone in the eighth inning, but after pitching himself out of jams in each of the first three frames he had little difficulty. It was his second triumph against no defeats in four starts this season.

Held hitless for four innings and Lyons's mates battered Wes Ferrell for five runs in the sixth and added two off Harry Kelley in each of the seventh and eighth innings.

Approximately 20,000 attended the series opener.

Kameda Pitches Another 1-Hitter To Beat Dolfins

Ted Kameda, Eagles' pitcher from Honolulu, established a record in the professional baseball circuit by pitching two successive one-hit games when he turned the trick against the Dolfins Sunday afternoon at the Koshien Stadium, winning 2 to 0. On the previous day, he had shut out the Hankyus at the same stadium, 2-0, yielding but one hit.

The Honolulu moundsman got off to a bad start by walking Third Baseman Gomi, lead-off man for the Dolfins, on four straight pitches, and it was a curve ball on his seventh pitch that finally cut the plate for a strike, but he regained his form in time to have the Dolfins at his mercy throughout the nine innings he worked. Right Fielder Kobayashi was the only man to nick him for a hit and this came in the first inning. The same Kobayashi was the only Dolfins player to reach second.

It was Kameda himself, who although a pitcher bats in clean-up position for the Eagles, who banged out a hit to bring in the Eagles' first run in the first inning.

The Giants moved up closed to the league-leading Tigers by winning two games at the Korakuen Stadium here, routing the Lions, 7 to 1, and nosing out the Senators, 7-6, while the Tigers split their two games at the Koshien Stadium. They ran away from the Dolfins, 18 to 7, but were blanked by the Hankyus, 7 to 0.

Best Performers Listed In British Figure Skating

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Looking back on the British figure-skating season just ended, I list among the best-remembered characters King Charles II, Megan Taylor, Samuel Pepys, Cecilia College, H. Graham Sharp, Nell Gwyn of Old Drury, Mollie Phillips, Freddie Tomlins, the Civil Service Skating Association, and the Lord Mayor's Boy Players. Which remarkable circumstance can be attributed to Miss Gwen Lally and the severe frost on the Thames River in 1683.

In that year, as you may or may not know, London's river froze so stiff for a couple of days that the good citizens of the capital used it as a highroad. In fact they had a very big time on it. Jostling about for "all the fun of the Fair," roasting oxen, and skidding around from booth to booth in the most hilarious manner.

A colorful scene, you may think. And that is what Miss Lally, famous British pageant-organizer, thought, too. Bringing her special talents to bear upon the subject, she produced, at the Earl's Court rink here, a living picture of the scene as she imagined it, with a cast of 2,000 performers from many walks and grades of London life.

Provide Own Costumes

All these people—rich, poor, factory workers, clerks, typists, shop assistants, society folk and the rest—provided their own costumes, made monetary contributions to cover the cost of production; and the profits were devoted to the Greater London Fund for the benefit of the sightless. A number of the costumes I would add, were extremely beautiful and the total effect was all very pleasing. No part of it more so than the exhibitions of figure-skating given in the Entr'acte by Britain's brightest skating stars.

There were no such things as skating stars at the time when the Thames was frozen over. So to avoid anachronism Miss Lally had the commentator, Samuel Pepys, fall asleep over his laborious diary and dream some very pretty and prophetic dreams. The most remarkable of which brought to view Megan Taylor, Britain's new champion of the world. To anyone of Restoration times she would have seemed an inexplicable, as well as a beautiful, phenomenon. For she was attired, not in the costume of that period, but in the light abbreviated frock of the present-day woman figure-skater, a costume balanced exquisitely and designed to give the wearer the utmost degree of limb-freedom.

As Miss Lally explained to me when we were chatting together before the show, a figure-skater of 1938 could not possibly go through her program in the garb appropriate to 1683.

World's Champion

Figure skating is a fine art. And acclaimed as the finest exponent of it among the women amateurs just now is our Miss Taylor, Manchester-born daughter of the well-known Canadian professional dare-devil-on-skates, Phil Taylor. Her victory in the world's championship at Stockholm this year came as the realization of an ambition she has cherished since she was 11 years old. At which tender age she first won the English women's championship.

Megan was runner-up to Sonja Henie, Norway's Queen of the Ice, in the world's championship of 1934; but after that she retired for a short while. When she "came back" Cecilia Celledge, her great English rival, had become national champion. Miss Colledge, after becoming runner-up to Sonja in the 1936 Olympic championship, went on to win the world's championship in 1937. Henie had by then turned professional—and it was generally expected that Cecilia would retain the honor this year.

This anticipation looked like being borne out when Cecilia led by a point at the conclusion of the first half of the 1938 competition—for compulsory figures. But Megan gave such a brilliant exhibition of balance, variation and inventiveness in the free-skating, that the judges found in her favor and she headed the standing for the combined test with a total of 1,997.6 points against Cecilia's 1,990.0. Third and fourth places were taken by Miss Hedy Stenuf, Austrian-born skater now resident in the United States, and Gladys Jagger, England, respectively. Daphne Walker, 13-year-old English girl, was seventh.

Megan is now out to regain the English championship held by Cecilia. And future contests between the two girls are eagerly awaited by the British skating community.

Other Champions

Of the men skaters here, the best is H. Graham Sharp, who gave a much appreciated display at the "historical ice festival." He also gave a much appreciated display in the 1938 world's championship for men at Berlin; but Felix Kaspar, of Austria, was again too good for him. Sharp gave a superlative exhibition in the set figures, leading Kaspar by 1.7 points, but this advantage was offset by Kaspar's mastery of free skating. The pairs championship of the world was won once more this year by the celebrated German couple, Ernst Baier and Mexie Herber. Erik and Ise Pausin, Austria, were second. With Inge Koch and Guenther Noack, Germany, third, and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. T. Cliff, Great Britain, fourth.

Tall, elegant Sharp has been England's champion since 1934 and since 1936 he has always had as his closest rival her Freddie Tomlins, a young man of sturdy build and exceptional muscular power. His speed, vigor and breath-taking toe-spins went down very well with the crowd at the ice pageant. As did the grace and charm of Mollie Phillips, who superintended the arrangement of the skating in the show. She was one of the English champion pair in 1933, runner-up in the English women's championship of 1936 and was on the British Olympic teams of both 1932 and 1936.

All these people we have been talking about are specialists in the "international" style of skating. There is another style here—less ornate, governed by close restrictions of posture—called the English stye. This year the national championship at it was won for the first time by a man possessing a gold medal for the "international" method—J. Wilson, of the Manchester Skating Club. The Challenge Shield for teams of four was won by the Manchester Skating Club (Dr. A. Johnstone, J. Wilson, H. McKenzie and Mrs. Thompson) and the junior championship went to A. D. Davidson. The Hand-in-Hand event resulted in a victory for Mrs. Thompson and McKenzie, and the Bear Cup for teams made up on the spot, was gained by the Bear Club four—A. D. Davidson, H. H. Sherwood, S. P. Jordan and Mrs. Chaffin.

And that, in sketchy outline, is our review of the events of major British interest in figure skating, during a season rounded off by the first ambitious pageant ever presented here on a rink. Pageant-Master Lally—busy this summer on the production of other spectacles—has often been able to give us moderna unforgettable glimpses of Britain's past. Under her touch, pages of history leap into life. She has, indeed, a master hand for.

Students Equestrian Meet Slated Aug. 14

The 10th annual national students equestrian championship will be held this year at the Korakuen Stadium at Suidobashi on August 14, beginning at 7:30 in the morning, according to announcement by the Japan Students Equestrian Association.

A number of mounts from the Army Preparatory Officers' Training School and civilian circles will be used by the contestants.

In view of the 10th anniversary of the association as well as the Sino-Japanese hostilities, especial attention is being given to the tournament.

Columbia Beaten By Penn Nine, 7-2

PHILADELPHIA, May 28—Behind the airtight pitching of George (Lefty) Rusznak and Walt Shinn's batting Pennsylvania gained an easy 7-2 victory over Columbia in an Eastern Intercollegiate League baseball game on Franklin Field today. The yellow ball was used here for the first time and was found effective.

Rusznak, who beat Yale a week ago, held the Lions to six scattered hits, struck out the same number of batters and walked only one.

Off Jack Moller and John Cerny, the Red and Blue made fourteen hits, Shinn getting a homer and single. Moller drove a home run into the center-field stands in the seventh. Cerny pitched the last two innings.

Columbia put over a run in the second. Sid Luckman singled and was forced by Arnold. Moller was safe when Diven, Penn captain, dropped Sachs's throw on the pitcher's roller. After Desmond struck out, Naylor singled to center, putting Arnold across.

In the third Penn pulled ahead with two runs. Arnold made a two-base wild throw on Rusznak and Sachs sacrificed. Captain Diven's singled scored Rusznak. Trexler walked, took second on Ogden's single, and a run counted when Shinn's single bounced off Murphy's glove.

Cachs's double into the right-field stands, Ogden's triple and Walt Shinn's home run to deep center accounted for three more runs in the fifth.

Penn tallied twice in the sixth on singles by Dignan and Rusznak, Diven's single over third and Trexler's fly to Stoltz.

O.O.C. To Spend Y500,000 For Publicity Abroad

The publicity committee of the Olympic Organizing Committee at its meeting Monday voted to spend ¥500,000 for publicity abroad on the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940, and efforts will be concentrated next year.

Special publicity men will be sent abroad and pamphlets and posters will be distributed to show the preparations, according to the O.O.C.

Publicity headquarters will be established in important cities in America and Europe for distribution of information on the Games.

The O.O.C. has decided that a model of the facilities be exhibited at the International Exposition to be held in New York in 1939.

For the erection of the proposed Memorial Gymnasium for the late Dr. Siichiro Kishi, Iichi Kishi, eldest son of the late sports leader, Monday donated ¥100,000 in addition to his previous ¥800,000 donation, it was revealed Monday.

The Kishi Memorial Gymnasium will be constructed at Surugadai in the very near future. Furthermore, it was revealed that nearly 80 persons have donated toward the institution some ¥35,000,000.

Schedule Regretted

Domei Tsushin

PRINCETON, N. J., June 19—Hope that "circumstances" will not interfere with the holding of the 1940 Olympic Games, somewhere, somehow, was expressed here today by Asa Bushnell, director of the central office for Eastern Intercollegiate Athletics.

"Attendance at the Games," Mr. Bushnell emphasized, "constitutes an enviable experience, one which shouldn't be missed by the athletes." He added, "More important, Olympic ideals, sportsmanship, and international amity, too often overlooked, deserve emphasis."

Referring to the forthcoming games at Tokyo, Mr. Bushnell declared, "The present schedules devised for the Olympics at Tokyo is an unfortunate one for American college athletes. With the competitions set for September on the other side of the world, many of them will be obliged to forego membership of the United States team in order to avoid trouble with the dean's office."

Georgetown Tops Princeton By 5-2

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., May 28.—Georgetown's baseball team scored all its runs in the first four frames to down Princeton, 5—2, on University Field today. Mike Petroskey gave the Tigers only seven well-spaced singles to record his twenty-third victory in twenty-five starts over three years of varsity hurling.

The visitors pummeled Dawson Farber out of the box at the end of the fifth frame with their seventh hit. Three singles, a double and four Princeton errors produced three runs in the third frame, and two more tallies came across in the fourth on a brace of singles. Bob Riddle held the invaders scoreless in the last four innings.

Hitting honors were divided among Georgetown's John Cavadine and Joe Morgan and Princeton's Dick Purnell, each of whom got "two for four." Tony Barabas's second-inning double was the only extra-base hit of the day.

$100,000 Race Off; Seabiscuit Not In Condition

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 25—The $100,000 special race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, scheduled next Monday, was declared off yesterday at Belmont Park because Seabiscuit's legs were bothering him and he probably would not have been able to do his best. Owner Charles S. Howard met with officials of the Westchester Racing Association and the State Racing Commission and it was decided that the public interest would be served best by canceling the race.

Thus, for the second time, a meeting between these two champions went a-glimmering. Last Fall an effort was made to bring them together at Pimlico by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, but Owner—Samuel D. Riddle suddenly retired War Admiral after his colt had raced poorly in a lucky victory over Masked General. Now Seabiscuit, hero of two years' hard campaigning that has earned $250,000, has prevented the meeting.

The possibility of a meeting still exists, however. Chairman Herbert Bayard Swope of the commission indicated in a statement that it might be set for the Fall. If the meeting occurs, it probably will be on far different terms.

Mr. Howard Gives Views

Mr. Howard, in his conversations with C. V. Whitney and with Algernon Daingerfield of the Jockey Club, said he felt under obligation to all who had been so kind at Belmont Park and that he would be glad to race under their auspices on a sporting basis merely or for a much reduced purse.

Mr. Howard has weakened not at all in his opinion that Seabiscuit is War Admiral's master, and is willing to bet Mr. Riddle a substantial sum on the side. Mr. Riddle, while not available yesterday, is just a unfaltering in rating War Admiral the best in the country and it is probable that he will not flinch from any offer of a wager.

This sort of talk brings the matter around to the sporting attitude that prevailed a generation ago when men who held opposite opinions raced their horses for no purse at all, but with a bet on the side. Such terms would remove all possibility of criticism and contain no taint of commercialism.

As a matter of fact the Jockey Club rules provide that a "match" race must be for no purse or prize. This is the reason the War Admiral-Seabiscuit event was called the Belmont Special and never officially designated a "match" race. Now the chance of a genuine match exists.

The Altar Of Faith

A synagogue in Wolpa, in the government of Grodno, Poland, nearly 300 years old, was built entirely of wood in the year 1643. Even the tools that were used in the building were not of metal. It was built entirely without nails. Repairs necessary at various times were made without any iron implements.

There is an old Jewish tradition, according to which the synagogue was created in order to lengthen the days of man, since iron shortens the days of man, and never shall that which shortens life be raised over that which lengthens it.

Indians, Giants Still Leading In Major Loops

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 20—Although dropping four games this week, the New York Giants were still leading the National League as the American major league baseball swung into the ninth week. The Chicago Cubs, losing five games, maintained a close second place.

In the American League, the Cleveland Indians, with four wins and two losses, continued to head the standings, while the Boston Red Sox after a week of heavy hitting, pushed the Yanks out of a second place.

The St. Louis Browns, in the American League, and the Philadelphia Phillies, in the National loop remained in the cellar position. Standings of the teams, including games played today, were as follows:

Greenberg Homers

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, May 27—Vernon Kennedy, wiry screw-ball hurler, came back today to the diamond where he pitched for three years and, with the aid of a timely offense by the Tigers that included a 440-foot park-record homer by Hank Greenberg, defeated his old White Sox mates, 5 to 2, on six hits for his seventh consecutive victory.

Greenberg's homer, his eleventh of the season, was the first ever hit into the center-field bleachers since the stands were erected in 1927. The drive, at the expense of Frank Gabler, former National Leaguer, who was making his Chicago debut, cleared the fifteen-foot wall 440 feet from the plate and landed in the front rows. The blow was hit with none on in the third inning.

Greenberg, who returned today to his old clean-up spot in the batting order, also hit two singles to lead Detroit's ten-hit attack.

His homer gave Kennedy a 3-to-0 lead. Greenberg and Charley Gehringer scored on Pete Fox's first-inning double.

Kennedy, facing his former mates for the first time since wildness forced him to retire without a decision in the seventh inning April 20, didn't let a man get past first until the sixth.

In the sixth and seventh innings he walked five men but with the bases filled in the sixth, he retired Rip Radcliff and Mary Owen on pop-ups. In the seventh he settled for two runs, driven in by the third of Hank Steinbacher's three singles. His mates added two off John Rigney in the ninth.

The victory lifted the Tigers into fifth place in the American League standing.

Harvard Oarsmen To Row In Henley

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 24—Harvard's 150-pound varsity crew, winner of the Goldthwaite Cup in last Saturday's triangular regatta with the Yale and Princeton lightweights on the Charles River, will compete in the Royal Henley in England in July. William J. Bingham, athletic director, said he would cable the crew's entry tomorrow.

Since the 150-pound oarsmen will pay their own expenses abroad, they will represent the Harvard University Boat Club instead of the university. Their coach, Bert Haines, will accompany them as a rigger, for the Henley regatta rules prohibit professional instructors.

It will be the third Harvard eight to seek honors in the famous Thames regatta. In 1914 Harvard's second varsity eight defeated the Union Boat Club of Boston in an all-American final for the Grand Challenge Cup, and seven years ago the Crimson's third varsity eight, stroked by Johnny Lawrence, was beaten in the first heat by the London Rowing Club's representatives.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 24—The Yale 150-pound varsity crew, champions of the American Rowing Association, will sail June 15 to compete in the Royal Henley.

The Elis, captained by Roger Newberry of Cleveland, will be accompanied by Coach Bob Butler. Malcolm Farmer, Yale athletic director, said he would cable the crew's entry tomorrow.

Yale won the Rowing Association title by annexing the Wright and the Blackwell Regatta Cups this season. It lost only to the Harvard 150s in the Goldthwaite regatta last Saturday.

The Kent School of Kent, Conn., long prominent in scholastic rowing circles, also will send a crew abroad for participation in the regatta on the Thames. This will mark the sixth time that the colors of the school will be seen on the famous course.

Kongo Slated To Fight Guzman Saturday Night

Boxing fans of Tokyo are in for a rare treat Saturday night at the Hibiya Park amphitheater for Iwao Kongo, protege of Kintaro Usuda and one of the best flyweights in Japan today, takes on Fighting Guzman, premier bantamweight of the Philippines, in a 10-round battle.

Kongo will resort to his windmill rushing attack that has stopped many a local fighter but the question is whether it will be able to offset the ring generalship of the Filipino. All indications point to a humdinger of a scrap.

Matsuo Amino, welterweight, who is scheduled to leave for Hawaii early next month, will meet Tomiro Tojima of the Usuda Boxing Club in the semi-final over eight rounds.

There will be two other six rounders and three four-round preliminaries on the card.

Evans Announces Plans To Retire From Major Golf

CHICAGO, May 26—Charles (Chick) Evans, the only man ever to win the national open, national amateur, western open and western amateur golf titles, said farewell yesterday to major competitive golf.

Evans announced he will never again play in the national or western championships, either open or amateur, and will restrict his tournament activities to Chicago events.

"When I remember I played good golf some 33 years ago and still was playing good golf in 1937, I guess it's time I was stepping out," he said. "The most you get out of that grand game, I've come to believe, is the companionship of great fellows, a lot of memories that can't be taken from you and a lot of thrills you never are able to forget."

The record book shows that Evans, connected with a Chicago brokerage firm, has had his share of thrills and triumphs to counterbalance the disappointments he encountered through the long years of battling par.

He tried for his first major title in 1905—when many stars of the modern sport's era had not been born. From that year through the 1937 summer campaign, when he bid gallantly for the national open, his play ranked him as one of the greatest figures the sport has produced.

In 1916, with just seven clubs, he won the United States amateur and open championships. He set a mark of 286 in the open that was not bettered until Tony Manero turned in a 282 in 1936, although Gene Sarazen tied Chick's 286 score in 1932. In 1920 he won the national amateur again, at Engineer's on Long Island. He won the western amateur eight times. When he captured the western open in 1910 he was the first amateur to win a major open title in America—the only amateur to win the western open in any of its 38 years.

In his bid for the national amateur last summer at Portland, Ore., Chick gave Johnny Fischer, defending champion, a great battle, only to lose when he three putted the 18th green.

The Tokyo Giants are only a half-game behind the leading Osaka Tigers in the professional baseball league as the result of their 4 to 3 victory over the Lions in the nightcap of the doubleheader Tuesday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium.

Yale Bunches Hits To Top Amherst

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 28—Although outhit, the Yale varsity nine conquered Amherst, 7 to 5, today, bunching blows in the sixth and seventh innings to snap a fourgame losing streak.

Crosby pitched effectively for the winners except in the seventh, when Balme smashed a triple with the bases full for the Lord Jeffs.

Effective pitching by Captain Joe Wood enabled the Yale freshmen to down the Harvard cubs in their annual game, 8 to 3.

Wood allowed only six singles and fanned eleven. His temporary wildness in the sixth led to two Harvard runs.

Roger Hazen's three-bagger, scoring Kreske in the fourth, was the longest hit. Desse and Schroeder fielded brilliantly.

A.O.C.'s Faith In Tokyo To Hold Games Unshaken

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 20—Belief that the official opinion of the American Olympic Committee regarding the Tokyo Olympics was not affected by the recent editorial in the New York Times suggesting non-participation in the Games, was expressed by well-informed Japanese quarters here today.

The political aloofness of the A.O.C., they declared, has not been shaken by "such minor local opposition."

These quarters added, however, that Tokyo must make more wholehearted efforts and show more satisfactory progress in the preparations for the 1940 Games. Sufficient demonstration of its faithfulness to its own pledges given at Berlin and Cairo, they said, is necessary to keep executives of the A. O. C. comfortably at rest away from intriguers who are eager to find a chance to draw sports into "political sentimentalism."

It was pointed out on the other hand that the Japanese appear to be over-enthusiastic about the forthcoming Japanese-Italian-German Games, to be held this fall, which some American Olympic officials reportedly consider untimely because they may be interpreted as an attempt to combine sports with politics.

Trojans Clinch Track Honors

N.Y. Times

BERKELEY, Calif., May 28—In a meet sparkling with outstanding individual performances and "iron man" stunts the University of Southern California rolled up 64 3-5 points today to win the Pacific Coast Conference track and field championship.

The victorious Trojans displayed the same crushing power that has swept them to the top in every meet this season. Stanford trailed in second place with 40 7-10 points.

Third place went to the University of California with 35 1-10, with other team scores as follows: Washington State, 29; University of California at Los Angeles, 23; Oregon, 22; Washington, 9; Idaho, 1 3-5. Oregon State College and Montana failed to tally.

Share Individual Honors

Individual honors were shared by a pair of Stanford athletes, Edson Burrows and Ray Malott.

Burrows gave the crowd of 8,000 fans its greatest thrills with a decisive victory in the mile run, coming back later to capture the two-mile grind from fresh competitors.

Burrows set a new Conference record in the mile, at 4:17.9, and, doubling the distance an hour and a half later, he was timed in 9:32.9 for the two miles. The old mile record was 4:21.7, set by Gillette of Montana in 1926.

Runs in Mile Relay

Malott's feats were nearly as spectacular. He won the quarter-mile in the exceptionally good time of 46.9 seconds and raced off with the half-mile an hour later to post a clocking of 1:54 in an event in which he had had but little experience previously. As a final gesture, he ran the last lap in the mile relay to give Stanford third place in that event.

Besides Burrows's mile record, a new Conference javelin throw mark was set by Chuck Soper of Southern California. He threw the spear 217 feet 7¾ inches.

Abe And Nakano Win First Play At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 20—England's outstanding annual tennis classic, the Wimbledon Championships, which brings together the cream of the world tennis players, began today in the presence of hundreds of rabid tennis fans.

Of the three Japanese players entered in this year's tournament, two came through the first round's play with flying colors. Yasumine Kuramitsu was the only one who was eliminated.

Kuramitsu Lacks Punch

In an uninspiring baseline duel in which both players consistently attacked the other's backhand, Kuramitsu took the short end of the match, Ellmer winning in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4. The Japanese led in both the first and final sets, but lack the punch to take advantage of his lead.

Playing with remarkable accuracy, Tamio Abe, non-playing captain of the Japanese Davis Cup team, defeated Williams in straight sets, 6-0, 8-6, 6-3. While Williams was erratic, the Japanese player showed precision in his services and drives which many time nicked the baseline.

Although Williams led 6-5 in the second set, Abe rallied with beautiful volleys and tantalizing chops to take the set at 8-6. The Japanese played coolly and carefully to take the final set 6-3.

Fumiteru Nakano, one of the mainstays of the Japanese Davis Cup squad, played championship brand of tennis to defeat the Monacan star, G. Medecin.

Showing strength in all departments of the game, Nakano dropped only four games to eliminate Medecin. The fine play of the Japanese star featuring perfectly timed baseline drives and powerful overhead smashes, evoked the admiration of the crowd that watched the contest. The scores were 6-1, 6-1, 6-2.

Austin Beats Filby

Among the seeded players who saw action today was Henry "Bunny" Austin, England's topranking star and seeded No. 2 in the current tourney, who narrowly missed being eliminated in the first round by Filby, up and coming English player.

Playing on Wimbledon's famous Center Court, Austin was forced to show his best brand of t mis to overcome the stubborn opposition put up by the young English player. At that, the match was a long drawn-out five-set affair.

Displaying a powerful service and forceful returns, Filby threw the veteran Austin out of stride. In the fourth set, Filyby led 3-1 and was within an ace of defeating the English champion, but Austin braced with beautiful cross-court drives and passing shots. The scores of the match were, 4-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Austin winning.

Chinese Players Wins

Another seeded player, Kho Sinkie, of China, who is ranked fifth, defeated Charles Hare, British star, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. Kho's neat rhythmic strokes shattered his opponent's morale, the only weak point in the Chinese player's game being his service.

Other first round results were as follows:—

Ferenc Puncec (Yugoslavia) defeated Jacques Brugnon (France) 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

D. Mitic (Yugoslavia) defeated Weston (Australia) 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

G. Von Metaxa (German) defeated F. H. D. Wilde (England) 4-6, 6-3, 9-7, 7-5.

J. Pallada (Yugoslavia) defeated Fischer 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Y. Singh (India defeated Ho (China) 6-1, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

Choy, (China) defeated Hamburger 6-4, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The official list of new marks was issued recently by Philip S. Harburger, chairman of the record committee of that organization. Among the marks approved are five new varsity and one equalled; 16 new freshman marks and seven for preparatory-school swimmers.

Twelve regulars and eight substitutes have been selected by the Japan Amateur Wrestling Association as members of the All-Japan team to take on the American team that is scheduled to arrive here this Summer, according to announcement today. The selection was made on the results of tryouts held on Tuesday.

Including Eiichi Kazama of Waseda, Japan's hope to capture the welterweight title in the 12th Olympic Games here in 1940, Kin Sho So of Meiji, welterweight, and Seizo Ishiguro of Senshu, bantamweight, Olympic candidates, the team is considered the best available in the country. These three grapplers, as well as Toshio Hiramatsu of Meiji, did not compete in the tryouts because of injuries.

New Play-Off Plan Proposed For Hockey Loop

By WEB MORSE
Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON,—Art Ross and Weston Adams offer a new version of "what should be done regarding hockey play-offs." Their solution, version, interpretation, or attempt to justify the playoffs, probably is merely the forerunner of many proposals to come. The league meeting is scheduled in Chicago shortly.

In the Boston plan the National Hockey League championship automatically goes to the team finishing the regular season schedule with the highest number of points. The play-offs will decide the winner of the Stanley Cup and the schedule is arranged to prevent early elimination of the top teams.

The second and third-place teams battle two-out-of-three, home-and-home, with third game to second-place team ice, for the right to meet first-place team. Series B, two out-of-three decides the division winner and the division survivors then enter series C for the Stanley Cup, a four-out-of-seven affair.

Choice of Ice

In the final series the team finishing the regular schedule with the most number of points will have choice of ice for first, second, fifth and seventh games. Also in the final series only two sudden-score periods of 20 minutes each will be played in the event of tied score. If no decision has been reached then the game is called a draw and replayed in the same city.

The National Hockey League champions receive 15 per cent of the players' pool exclusive of any further amount the team may earn during the play-offs. According to the Ross-Adams estimated figures the division of the players' pool would be as follows:

15% to go to N.H.L. champions....$9,000
5% to go to losing teams in series A 3,000
10% to go to losing teams in series B 6,000
22% to go to losing teams in series C 13,500
32½% to go to winning teams in series C 19,500

Players share in the first two games of series A and B and the first four games of series C. There is a possibility that receipts of tie games in final series may be turned over to some charitable cause.

Depend Upon Play-offs

Since the play-offs definitely are not to be conducted purely for a championship purpose and since the league governors confess that the very existence of major league hockey depends upon play-offs, some sort of play-off such as the above will be adopted as at least an improvement over the present existing system.

Under such a system the Bruins, this year, having finished with the greatest number of points, would be N. H. L. champions today and would not have been eliminated in the first round. Chicago and Rangers would have battled in series A with the winner facing the Bruins. In the Canadian division, Canadiens and Americans would have battled for the right to meet Toronto.

'Big 6's' Fall Season To Open September 10

The Fall season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball League will commence on the second Saturday in September, or September 10, it was decided by the league directors at their meeting Wednesday night at the Seiyoken Restaurant at Marunouchi.

50,000 Attend Outdoor Dog Show In U.S.

By ARTHUR E. PATTERSON

MADISON, N. J., May 28—A rumbling, woolly old English sheepdog, Champion Ideal Weather, owned and bred by Leonard Collins, of Toronto, Ont., and handled by Alf Loveridge, moved to the summer pinnacle of America's show world this evening when, before the enthusiastic remnants of a crowd of 50,000, he was declared best in the twelfth Morris and Essex show by Harry T. Peters, the Long Island squire.

"I brought the first bobtail into this country years ago," quoth Peters vehemently immediately after the photographers had finished with him, "and I never have seen a better one than this one. He is massive behind and has a marvelous coat—a real one if I ever saw one. His only fault, and a slight one, was the fact that he was a bit off in the mouth; but there wasn't a classy mouth in the final lot."

The most frank statement by a best-in-show judge was almost as surprising as the breed from which he selected his top dog, for the victories of old English sheepdogs are all too few. In the ring with Ideal Weather were five outstanding champions. Most heralded, of course, was Champion Nornay Saddler, James M. Austin's smooth fox terrier which had been sweeping through the eastern shows and had marked up twelve such triumphs in his last fourteen shows.

"I thought him a bit coarse," was Peters's curt critique.

Then, too, there was the Orange Belton English setter, Maro of Maridor, litter brother of Daro, the Westminster winner. What a story would have been concluded by a victory for this one. It was here that their illustrious sire, Champion Sturdy Max, climaxed his career by going best a year ago. After his Garden triumph Daro fell ill and went out of coat, unable to show. But Maro carried on right up to the threshold of the complete triumph, moving through several crack imported English setters and then stepping to the top of the sporting group—a gay, free-moving bird-dog man's dog. But the story was not to have its climax today.

"A bit light through the middle when you get your hands on him," said Peters. "The bobtail was worth a carload of his type."

Mrs. Sherman Hoyt's glamorous white poodle, Champion Blakeen Jung Frau; Mrs. Vincent Matta's imported Pomeranian, Champion Sealand Moneybox, and Louis J. Murr's stately white Borzoi, Champion Vigow of Romanoff, seventy-five times best of his breed, never beaten and four times best of breed at Morris and Essex, rounded out the final class. None was unknown to the dog public, for they have been consistent winners. They created a dramatic finale to a show which was a record in every way.

Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge and her able show generalissimo, A. McClure Haley, deserved nothing but praise for the manner in which this event was conducted. Disposing of the complete judgment on 4,213 dogs within the single span between sun-up and sundown is no easy matter, but with these two at the helm this was done with hours to spare on both sides—and done well. Truly this was the exhibitors' show.

Yates Is New British Amateur Golf Champion

By W. F. LEYSMITH
N.Y. Times

TROON, Scotland, May 28.—Charley Yates has won the British amateur golf championship and joined the masters by beating the powerfully built, bespectacled Irishman Cecil Ewing, 3 and 2, in the final.

Yates's victory today was not perhaps achieved with the devastating brilliance of his American predecessors, Walter Trabis, Jess Sweetser, Bobby Jones and Lawson Little, whose names are inscribed on the coveted trophy, but the Atlantan played sufficiently good rough and ready golf to hold his hard-punching opponent over most of the critical stages of the long journey and keep intact that remarkable record of American Walker Cup teams in taking the amateur crown home with them also.

Yates, with his light-hearted play and good sportsmanship, had already won the hearts of the critical but enthusiastic Scottish galleries and this afternoon, after he had dropped a nasty wriggling putt for victory on the thirty-fourth green, the police only just rescued him from being "thrown sky high."

"Dog-Gone Lucky" Says Yates

The police carried him through the cheering, seething mob of 7,000 to a side road where he was pushed into a girl's sports car and driven by a roundabout route to the safety of the clubhouse. Here, on receiving the cup, he said he had been "dog-gone lucky."

"I am mighty happy to have my name on the cup with Jones, Thomson and the others," he added simply. "I think Scotland has the finest galleries in the world. I had lots of fun and will be glad to be with you again."

British authorities are agreed that Yates won because he is a better striker of the ball than any of his opponents and, like Jones, is a quick player, wasting no time with "spirit levels on the greens." He tackles a difficult shot swiftly and does not let a bad shot stay long in his mind.

Today against a longer hitter—Ewing hits the ball a terrific crack with a stiff left arm—Yates was never once tricked into pressing from the tees. Rather he hung back and gave his opponent "something to shoot at" with accurately played seconds dead on the line.

Poor Start by Atlantan

No more than 1,000, a comparatively small crowd judged by the galleries of the earlier days, followed the first round of the 36-hole final.

Yates, playing tired and erratic golf, three-putted to lose the second. Then he cut his drive at the third and failed to get the hole back from Ewing, who was through the green. The American cut his drive into the face of a deep trap at the fourth and, passing a hand wearily across his brow, just managed to hoist the ball into the rough and bang went that hole to put him 2 down.

He got one back at the short fifth, where Ewing three-putted from twenty feet. They halved the next four holes.

The American lost a good chance of winning the sixth through missing a 3-foot putt, which was not like Yates of yesterday. His 25-foot approach putt finished on the lip of the hole on the seventh green and, seeing another long one pulling up short a few inches from the cup at the short eighth, Yates said appealingly: "Little hole, please help."

Hooks Tee Shot at Tenth

At the blind and heavily guarded ninth it was Ewing's turn to let his opponent escape punishment for a bad shot, because he was within three feet of the cup with Yates well over the green. Yates, still outside Ewing with his chip, holed his putt and then Ewing missed his glorious chance by cutting his putt.

A man running disturbed Yates on the tenth tee. He hooked the ball badly and took three to reach the green, losing the hole against Ewing's par figures.

To this point Ewing had been playing the much steadier golf of the two. However, Ewing was trapped from the tee on the twelfth and Yates had him back 1 up. Then the Irishman had to sink a bold ten-footer to halve the thirteenth.

Yates now removed his jumper and waterproof slacks and placed a beautiful tee shot to the center of the short fourteenth green. With Ewing cutting the ball off the tee Yates won the hole to square the match.

Yates slipped back again at the fifteenth, three-putting from twenty yards, then drew even again at the next hole when Ewing topped his second into the stream running across the course. Ewing's ball trickled off the short seventeenth green into a trap and for the first time in the round Yates was able to get his nose in front. The American made no error on the eighteenth and ran his thirty-yard approach putt stone dead for a half.

It was still anybody's game when they went to lunch. Yates had three-putted twice and been in trouble six times off the tee and his friends thought it was about time he'd gotten rid of all those bad shots.

Workers Throng Course

When the factories and offices closed at lunch time, between 7,000 and 8,000 swarmed on the course. Flags hung limp to their masts in the close and thundery air.

The gaunt figure of James Maxton, fiery Clydeside politician, was in the front rank at the nineteenth green, and he joined in the cheering as Ewing quickly squared the match by sinking a fifteen-yarder for a birdie 3. Yates just lipped the cup from six feet. Ewing threw away the twentieth by three-putting from fifteen feet.

From this point onward neither player was allowed to see his shot land, the crowd tearing in from the sidelines like wild horses loosed from a corral.

Ewing then started to slice and Yates won the twenty-second and twenty-third through these lapses. At the twenty-second the Irishman was 100 yards in the rough.

The police had a big struggle with the crowd at twenty-fourth, a huge "amphitheater" green, and Yates, now leaving nothing much undone, kept his 3-up lead to the twenty-seventh. Here Ewing failed to punish him for being trapped with his second in a pot bunker to the right of the fearsome blind green and missed the easy four-footer needed to win the hole.

The twenty-eighth always has been Yates's hoodoo hole and he lost it, not quite getting hold of his drive, taking three to reach the green and then, irritated by a spectator's remark, missing his putt. This was the only occasion in all of his rounds here that the Scottish wags among the crowd were able to get under his collar.

He cut his drive into the heather at the twenty-ninth, then regained his poise and shot a hearty one to the middle of the green, getting a half. He had Ewing 3 down again at the thirtieth, where the Irishman's cut drive was badly trapped. The American was slowly wearing Ewing down.

Ewing made Yates sink a foot putt for a half with the crowd moving from the thirty-first green. It only just crawled in and there was a long wait at the short thirty-second where the crowd, already massed twenty-deep around the large green, had to be shifted.

Ewing, off the green from the tee scraped through to a lucky half and then on the thirty-third pulled Yates back to 2 up with a courageous 8-foot putt for a birdie 3. It was only a flash in the pan.

At the thirty-fourth—two full woods and a No. 5 on a calm day—Yates pitched his third within seven feet of the cup. Ewing, taking four to reach the green, had holed an 8-footer for a 5, and as the crowd held its breath Yates won the crown by dropping his curly putt into the center of the cup for a birdie. It was a grand shot to wind up the championship.

Kuramitsu, Nakano Win Doubles Tilt At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 21—Favored by perfect weather and prospects of excellent court play, hundreds of tennis enthusiasts today gathered at the Wimbledon courts to witness the opening day's play for women's singles and men's doubles.

All four seeded women players who appeared on the courts won their matches. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, who was seeded first, did not see action today.

Mrs. Sperling Wins

Mrs. Svend Sperling, the former Miss Hilde Krahwinkel of Denmark, defeated the young Yugoslavian star Miss Hela Kovac in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2. Miss Margaret Scriven, of England, defeated Miss T. Jarvis, also of England, 6-2, 6-4. Miss Margot E. Lumb of England, defeated Miss Olive Craze, of South Africa, 6-0, 6-3. All were first round matches.

In the three second-round matches for women, Miss Katherine Stammers, seeded eighth, defeated Mrs. Mitchell, 6-3, 6-2. Miss R. M. Hardwick of England defeated Miss Joan Hartigan, of Australia, 6-4, 6-2 and Mrs. Rene Mathieu, of France, defeated the strong Chilean contender Miss Anita Lizana, 6-4, 6-4.

In the men's doubles, all three Japanese entered in the tourney survived the first round, Yasumine Kuramitsu and Fumiteru Nakano, Japanese Davis Cup pair, defeated Watkins and Weston, of Australia, in four sets, 9-7, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Although the Japanese led almost throughout the contest, they were forced to fight hard owing to the remarkable fine play of young Weston who was the outstanding player on the court.

Both Japanese players excelled in vollying, their fast shots nipping the corners of the court. When Weston came up to the net, the Japanese lobbed steadily to drive him back.

Abe's Team Wins

Tamio Abe, non-playing captain of this year's Japanese Davis Cup team, who paired with Kenneth C. Gandar Dower, defeated Hessemer-Clark and Foldham, in five sets, 6-4, 2-6, 8-10, 6-2, 6-0.

Much of the credit for the victory belonged to Abe whose clever interceptions at the net and crisp volleying repeatedly caught the opposing pair off guard.

Other results were as follows:—

F. Kukuljevic and J. Pallada defeated Choy and Ho, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Kho Sin-kie and Lyttleton Rogers defeated Delpford and Jones, 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

Ho Ah-ing (China) defeated Middleton, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

Zamperini Case Offers Lesson To Be Studied

Christian Science Monitor

LOS ANGELES—L'affaire Zamperini may or may not be the case to jar loose an exhaustive investigation of the way "amateur" athletics are conducted. Whether it is or not, it will always stand as an unfortunate exhibit of the way the system sometimes works.

For those who may have come in late, here's the early summary: Louis Zamperini, who graduated from Torrance (Calif.) High School to earn his way to eighth place in the 5,000-meter run in the 1936 Olympics, this year as a sophomore miler at the University of Southern California became the fastest middle-distance runner the Far West has ever had in collegiate competition.

Winning with ease in the dual meets of the current season, he naturally pointed to four meets ahead: the Pacific Coast Conference at Berkeley this week end, the IC4A at New York the following week end, the NCAA at Minneapolis on June 17-18, and a meet the next week end at Evanston, Ill. He had already entered and won one invitational meet, the fast-running Fresno (Calif.) Relays, and he was approached for his entry to the now-famous Compton (Calif.) Junior College invitation meet, promoted by its track coach, Herchel Smith, himself a Trojan athlete of a decade gone by.

Eager to do right by their local talent, the newspapers seized upon this latter meet as a "natural" to establish the superiority of the West over the East (or Middle West) by having Louis beat Don Lash of Indiana. Lash arrived, night fell, the announcers called for the starters, and—no Zamperini. In quick succession came confounding statements:

Troy's coach, Dean Cromwell, is quoted as admitting that Louis had never signed an entry blank, but that just a few hours before, he, as coach, had ordered Zamperini to compete. Promoter Smith is quoted as saying that, in an earlier conference between the missing athlete and himself, expense money, $200 perhaps, was demanded and refused as exhorbitant.

Coach Cromwell then announced that Zamperini had been dropped from the squad for not running. When Zamperini was finally reached for a statement, he was quoted as denying the Smith charge and declaring that the subject of money never came up in the conference. He "explained" that a week before the meet he had instructed the team manager to refrain from including his entry, on the grounds that, inasmuch as the meet was merely invitational, he wanted to rest and pick-up weight for the grinds ahead. He is quoted as saying that it was customary for the athletes to decide in which invitation, as distinct from collegiate, meets they would appear, and that he hadn't seen his coach all week, although admitting that the coach "assumed I was" going to run. The only subject in the Smith conference he had the day of the meet was said to be on why his appearance should be advertised when he hadn't signed.

Disregarding the merits of the various statements which have been made regarding the above incident, it seems as if there were a lesson to be learned, and it is to be hoped that those in charge of intercollegiate athletics will take such action as will not let such a thing happen again. Perhaps it would be best in future to see that college athletes compete only in regular college events during the college season, and that they be not permitted to take part in "special" or "invitation" events. If such a system had been in vogue, the regrettable instance which has resulted in Zamperini being removed from the University of Southern California track team at the time when it is facing its biggest meets of the year could never have happened.

Nakano Survives Second Round At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 22—No upsets in either the men's or women's divisions marked the third day of the Wimbledon tennis championships today as play began in the second round of the singles despite threatening weather. Rain interrupted some of the matches, while others had to be postponed.

Abe Beaten

Despite the elimination of Tamio Abe by J. S. Olliff, former co-holder of the British indoor doubles crown, Japanese colors continued to fly in the men's singles thanks to a straight-set victory by Fumiteru Nakano over Tuckett, of England. Five seeded players, including Donald Budge of the United States, won without difficulty.

Though won in straight sets, Nakano's match against Tuckett unexpectedly dragged out to two hours after the Japanese had sailed through the first set at 6-2. Rain slowed up the contest during the later stages, and Tuckett's hard-hit baseline drives extended Nakano to 22 games before he could take the final set.

The Olliff-Abe match was marked by erratic playing on both sides at the start, but after trailing 3-4 in the opening set, the Englishman steadied down and remained in control for the remainder of the three-set contest. Abe repeatedly tried to storm the net on drives to Olliff's backhand, only to be surprised by passing shots.

Budge, playing his first match of the tourney, dropped five games to H. Billington, of England, in the first set, but thereafter hit his stride and virtually blasted the Englishman off the court with withering drives and services. H. W. "Bunny" Austin, seeded second, allowed four games in each set to Darkin, promising young English player.

Other seeded men players who won their matches were Henner Henkel of Germany and Kho Sin-kie of China. The rising Chinese player, who upset C. D. Hare on Monday played spectacular tennis to eliminate G. von Metaxa, of the German Davis Cup team, without the loss of a single set.

Roderick Menzel of Czechoslovakia, seeded third in the men's division, was having serious difficulties against W. C. Choy, another Chinese entry, when a heavy downpour necessitated postponement of the rest of the match. Starting brilliantly, Choy ran up a 5-2 lead before Menzel recovered to win the first set, and postponement found the players deadlocked at two-all in the third set after the second was captured by the Chinese.

Mrs. Moody Wins

Seeded first in the women's division, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody of the United States entered play today by eliminating Mrs. H. Hopman of Australia in a second-round encounter. The seven-time Wimbledon champion, who is reseeking the title after two years' absence from competition, won in straight sets with the loss of seven games.

Miss Alice Marble, second-seeded compatriot of Mrs. Moody, emerged ahead of the field by winning the only third-round match of the day from Miss Sheila Piercey of South Africa. Other seeded players to win their second-round matches were Mrs. Sarah P. Fabyan of the United States and Miss J. Jedrzejowska of Poland.

Miss Helen Jacobs of the United States, 1936 Wimbledon champion who failed to be seeded in this year's tourney, fainted in her dressing room while preparing to meet Miss Joan Ingram of England. The English girl, however, sportingly agreed to a postponement instead of taking the match on default.

The individual scores of today's matches were as follows:

Donald Budge (U.S.) defeated H. Billington (Eng.) 7-5, 6-1, 6-1.

Negro Armstrong Clinches World Welterweight Title

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 1—He's a great little fighter, this Henry Armstrong from Los Angeles.

He beat a great little fighter in true fighting style last night in the Mandison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City to become the first ring warrior in pugilism's long history ever to hold the world featherweight title and the world welterweight crown at the same time.

Armstrong was the world featherweight titleholder entering the ring. He became the welterweight monarch too when he lifted the crown from the furrowed brow of stout-hearted Barney Ross of Chicago, the defending champion, in fifteen rounds of vicious, savage fighting that was so one-sided as to make the result a foregone conclusion midway in the battle.

Like a human tornado, Armstrong cut down Ross. There was no resisting force. Henry just pounded the gallant Ross tirelessly, pitilessly through every one of the fifteen rounds, winning thirteen and losing one of these thirteen on a technicality, until at the end awarding the decision that made a new, unparalleled champion, was a mere formality.

Referee Arthur Donovan and Judges Billy Cavanaugh and George Lecron collaborated in the decision, which was unanimous. No other verdict was possible. And there was none in the gathering of 30,000, paying $160,861 for the privilege of witnessing the battle, who disputed the award.

It was announced also from Promoter Mike Jacob's office that the paid attendance was 26,430 and the net receipts $136,016.

Lacking in Reserve Strength

An examination of the three official balloting slips gave Armstrong a lopsided score which reflected clearly by what a wide margin the Californian earned his twin title brackets. The lowest vote gave him ten rounds. The highest gave Armstrong twelve. The other gave him eleven.

In a word, Ross had not a chance, because he was unsuited to the style of the young Negro who hammered him out of his title and because he had not the stamina, the resistance, the reserve strength to come on against youth.

Referee Donovan's voting slip showed twelve rounds for Armstrong, two for Ross and one even. Judge Lecron voted eleven rounds for Armstrong, two for Barney and two even. Judge Cavanagh gave Armstrong ten rounds, Ross four and called one even. And one of the rounds on which all three bout officials agreed on for Ross was the seventh, a session which Armstrong won off by himself but in which he was penalized under the State Athletic Commission rules for an unintentional foul.

The battle in its change of ring titles ran true to Garden Bowl tradition. No titleholder ever has successfully defended his crown in this jinx-ridden ring, an experience with which Ross was familiar before last night, since he lost the welterweight crown to Jimmy McLarnin there on September 17, 1934, under conditions somewhat similar to those which obtained last night.

Professional Start in 1929

When he relinquished the welterweight crown to McLarnin on that occasion, Ross underwent the experience of four postponements in eleven days. Last night's battle was originally scheduled for last Thursday night and was postponed twice because of rain. When it went through to completion, another champion was shorn of his laurels, and the champion was, for the second time, Ross.

After the battle was over and he had the relaxation of his dressing room, where there was mourning instead of celebration, Ross's retirement from the ring was announced. He has been through ten years of ring campaigning, dating back to the start of his professional career in 1929. Judged strictly of his performance last night, Ross is "through."

None in the crowd which saw last night's slaughter—and it was that on a moderate scale—will dispute the fact Ross has reached the end of his fistic rope. And in that gathering were Federal, State and city officials who must have sympathized with Barney as he made his futile defense of the title he had defended twice before, so gloriously last September against the devastating punch of Ceferino Garcia.

Postmaster General Farley was among the notables present. Past and present champions of the ring were there, including Joe Louis, the ruling monarch of pugilism; baseball players and club executives, polo players, representatives of the race track, bankers, financiers, commercial and industrial leaders.

None to Dispute the Award

There were also figures of society, representatives of the arts and of the professions. And there was none among them, as there was none in the distant reaches of the vast bowl where sat the $1.15 admission ticket-holders, who disputed the award for Armstrong.

There was no room for doubt. Armstrong saw to that. He was the hero of a betting upset that should have been no upset at all. Because he demonstrated, almost at the opening gong, that his style, his strength, his inexhaustible supply of stamina, perseverance, his grim determination, in short, his singular fighting stock in trade, were too much for Ross.

It had been thought in advance that the man who withstood the punches of McLarnin, Petrole, Garcia, Canzoneri and such hitters, would have the resistance and the counter-offensive to withstand and offset the awkward style of Armstrong.

The new champion is not the finishing hitter that were some of those named. Indeed, Armstrong is a sloppy hitter—a punishing puncher, and nothing more. If he were a finishing hitter, he would have knocked out Ross in ten rounds last night. After the tenth, it would have been merciful to stop the contest.

Ross plugged along on his nerve alone. Referee Donovan, seeing the plight of the defending champion, his right eye closed tightly, his nose battered and bleeding, his lips bruised and gory, his spirit wilted, his resistance practically gone, queried Ross's corner apprehensively from the tenth round, wondering if the fading champion's handlers wished to call it quits.

Protect Hollow Distinction

Before the start of the eleventh session, then before the twelfth round got under way, the arbiter stepped to Ross's corner and asked him how he felt. He intimated to the Chicagoan's handlers that he wanted to relieve Barney of the punishment he was taking. But Ross had never had the stigma of a knockout charged against him and it was plain his advisers wanted to protect this hollow distinction even though the sacrifice might be great.

Through the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth rounds he fought spasmodically, feebly, instinctly, as if to demonstrate to Referee Donovan that he was "all right" as he claimed. But his best was but a gesture against the attack of Armstrong.

Davey Day, Chicago lightweight, won the decision over Norment Guarles of Hendersonville, N. C., in the eight-round semi-final. Each weighed 136½ pounds.

In the six-round bouts, Dem Wakerlis, Boston, 153¾, outpointed Frankie Plair, Camden, N. J., 155½, and Phil Siriani, Bronx, 135½, took the award over Young Chappie, Albany, 134¾. Sammy Julian, Brooklyn, 138¾, won from Johnny Rinaldi, Bronx, 138, in one of the four-rounders and in the other Jimmy Liddell, Los Angeles, 130¼, and Frankie Aiello, East Side, 128¾, fought a draw.

Joe Louis Kayoes Max Schmeling In First Round

Domei Tsushin

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, June 22—Eighty thousand fight fans, some who paid as high as $100 for a ringside seat, were given a shock of their lives tonight as Joe Louis, the Alabama Assassin, successfully defended his year-old world heavyweight title, by knocking out Max Schmeling, of Germany, in 2 minutes and 4 seconds of the first round of a scheduled 15-round bout here.

The negro champion, never in snappier or finer form, technically kayoed the challenger in one of the shortest bouts in boxing history. Abandoning all caution, Louis, at the opening sound of the bell, sprang at the German contender like a jungle cat, and hit him almost at will after the first hot exchange of gloves.

Floors Schmeling

Louis floored Schmeling three times with a barrage of hard rights and lefts. Never were the Brown Bomber's punches harder, snappier, or deadlier. Louis hit Schmeling approximately 20 times, missing only two swings; each time, he shook the giant German heavyweight as if he had been kicked by a horse.

Louis floored the German for a count of three in the first minute of the bout, and then again chopped Schmeling down for a count of one, 30 seconds later. The third and last time that the negro slashed Schmeling, the German's seconds threw in a heap of towels, climbed into the ring, and halted the massacre before the referee reached the count of eight.

Schmeling left the ring dazed, shattered and bleeding. His lips were cut, his eyes bruised, and his body, especially the mid-ribs, were as red as a turnip. Louis appeared not a bit exhausted by the apparently tireless jabs he handed the challenger.

Million Dollar Gate

Ring conditions were ideal. The night was partly cloudy and cool. A crowd estimated at 80,000 jammed the stadium, bringing promoter Mike Jacobs his long-sought million-dollar gate.

Louis, who has become a more perfect fighter since he won the crown from the hands of James Braddock exactly a year ago tonight, has fought more than a dozen fights since losing to Schmeling in June 19, 1936. Schmeling tonight went the way of Bob Pastor, Nathan Brown, Tommy Farr, Harry Thomas, and James Braddock, but in much worse form. The last fight which Louis had was with Harry Thomas on April 31, but it took the champion four rounds to cut down his opponent.

Louis Kayoes Schmeling

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 22—Joe Louis, negro heavyweight boxing champion of the world, tonight defended his title successfully for the third time by knocking out Max Schmeling, of Germany, in the first round of a scheduled 15-round battle at the Yankee Stadium. The Brown Bomber floored Schmeling for the count after only 2 minutes and 4 seconds.

Famous 'Poker-Face' Missing

Noticeably missing is Mrs. Helen Wills Moody's (left) famous "poker-face" as she received congratulations from Margot Lumb whom she defeated recently in the women's singles finals at the Surbiton Club in London. Mrs. Moody is presently out to regain her championship at Wimbledon after several years' retirement.

Gehrig, The 'Iron Man' Of Baseball, Now Looks Ahead To 2,500 Games

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 1—Back in 1925—June 1 was the exact date—the late Miller Huggins, then managing the Yankees, sent Lou Gehrig in to pinch hit for Pee Wee Wanninger. He hasn't stopped playing since. Yesterday, almost to the day, Columbia Lou played the 2,000th contest in his most remarkable consecutive game string, adding to a record which probably never will be surpassed.

Throughout fourteen years of baseball warfare Gehrig has continued to compete against all comers, never wilting in the face of physical ailments. Several times injuries made it appear that the streak must end but each time Lou refused to call a halt.

It seems that Gehrig has set his goal at 2,500 games. When asked about taking a rest, Lou yesterday answered: "There's no point to it. I like to play baseball and if I were to sit on the bench for a few games the worrying and fretting would take too much out of me." So the "Iron Man" stunt is likely to continue for a while.

Long ago Gehrig shattered the previous mark of 1,307 straight games played by Everett Scott, former Yankee. At the moment there is none within at least 1,500 games of him. Furthermore, every day Lou plays he sets a new record, so that by the time he decides to take a rest he will be the possessor of more marks than any other man in the game, past or present. As a matter of fact, he is that now.

Interesting, indeed, are the statistics of the consecutive game streak. In the 2,000 contests he has come to bat 7,455 times, scored 1,785 runs and made 1,785 hits for an average of .343. To his credit are 506 doubles, 155 triples, 468 home runs 1,897 runs batted in and a total of ninety-seven stolen bases. These figures do not include the games he played in prior to June 1, 1925, nor world series activities.

Gehrig left Columbia University in 1923, was signed by the Yankees and was optioned to Hartford in the Eastern League. The next year he was recalled and sent back again and the following year he returned to New York, where he has been ever since.

He was named the American League's most valuable player in 1927.

Landis Order Seen Aimed At Chain Systems

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, May 28—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball high commissioner, has "fired another broadside at chain-store baseball," "The Post Dispatch" says, with an order that major league clubs discontinue that practice of signing players to unpromulgated contracts.

The Commissioner backed up his order with notice that a fine of $500 would be imposed for any violation.

Signing young and untried propects to contracts which are pigeonholed and never filed with baseball's headquarters has been the customary practice, the newspaper explained.

At this time of the year, player lists of major-league teams and their farm clubs usually are full. The unpromulgated contract enables them to hold a player, without releasing any one, until he can be given a trial next fall or spring. If he makes good then, he is given a regular contract which is filed with Landis' office.

The St. Louis Cardinals at one time had 150 unpromulgated contracts the story said, and every major-league club had at clast fifty. It asserted the order had resulted in the curtailment of scouting activities.

A baseball official told "The Post-Dispatch" that Landis' ruling was intended apparently to hamper the operating of farm systems and leave the independent major league teams with a clear field among untried players.

Japanese Ousted From Doubles At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 23—Japanese players entered in the mixed-doubles contests of the Wimbledon Championships fared badly today as both Fumiteru Nakano and Tamio Abe, with their respective partners, were eliminated in the first round of play.

Nakano and Miss E. H. Harvey, of England, played indifferent tennis against their superior opponents F. H. D. Wilde and Miss Mary Whitemarsh. The Japanese player, however, volleyed and served well. Miss Harvey was unable to cope with the hard service of Wilde and Nakano was forced to cover much more than his own share of the court.

Fails To Hold Lead

Although Nakano and Miss Harvey led 4-2 in the second set, they were unable to convert their lead into a victory. The scores were 6-4, 6-4.

Abe, non-playing captain of the Japanese Davis Cup squad, playing with Miss Wilson, of England, lost to the strong combination of Josip Pallada, of Yugoslavia, and Miss A. G. Curtis, of England, by the scores of 6-4, 6-4.

Although losing in straight sets, the match was much closer than the scores indicated. Most of the games were deuced several times before the winning points were scored. Abe served brilliantly, but was weak at the net.

In the two men's singles matches played today, Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, barely managed to defeat the rising Chinese player C. W. Choy, in a match postponed from yesterday due to rain, while R. A. Shafes, of England, defeated his compatriot F. G. Lysaght.

Menzel took five sets to eliminate the Chinese player. The match was all square at one set apiece and the third set at 2-2 when play was called yesterday. Continuing, Menzel today dropped the third set, but won the last two. The scores were 7-5, 3-6, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6. Shayes defeated Lysaght in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Jacobs Wins

Two women's singles matches were also played today, Miss Helen Jacobs winning over Miss Joan Ingram, 9-7, 6-3, in a second-round match postponed from yesterday due to a sudden spell of illness which overtook Miss Jacobs in her dressing room, and Miss Margaret Scriven, of England, defeating Miss Valerie E. Scott, also of England, 6-3, 6-4.

Obviously unwell and looking deathly pale, Miss Jacobs barely managed to play through her match with the English girl who sportingly agreed to postpone the match yesterday.

In one of the shortest mixed-doubles matches of the day, Donald Budge, Wimbledon Champion, and his teammate, Miss Alice Marble, defeated Donald McPhail, of Scotland, and Mrs. M. R. King, 6-0, 6-0.

R. A. Shayes and Miss J. Saunders, of England, won a hard-earned victory over Gene Mako, of the United States, and Miss J. Jedzrejowska, veteran Polish star. The scores were 6-3, 6-2. Both matches were second-round encounters.

The individual scores of today's matches were as follows:—

Men's Singles (Second Round)

Roderick Menzel, (Czech.) defeated C. W. Choy (China) 7-5, 3-6, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6.

R. A. Shayes, (Eng.) defeated J. F. G. Lysaght (Eng.) 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

(Third Round)

Henner Henkel (Ger.) defeated Christian Boussus (France) 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Donald McPhail (Scot.) defeated E. R. Avory (Eng.) 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

Gene Mako (U.S.) defeated Henderson Brooks (Eng.) 6-2, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

Ladislas Hecht, (Czech.) defeated Nigel Sharpe (End.) 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1.

Kho Sin-kie, (China) defeated I. G. Collins (Scot.) 8-10, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

F. Cejnar (Czech.) defeated Ghaus Mohammed (India) 6-2, 6-4, 11-9.

Women's Singles (Second Round)

Miss Helen Jacobs, (U.S.) defeated Miss Joan Ingram (Eng.) 9-7, 6-3.

Miss Margaret Scriven (Eng.) defeated Miss Valerie E. Scott, (Eng.) 6-3, 6-4.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) defeated Miss J. Jedzrejowska (Pol.) and Miss M. A. Thomas (Eng.) 7-5, 6-3.

Mixed Doubles (First Round)

F. H. D. Wilde and Miss Mary Whitemarsh (Eng.) defeated Fumiteru Nakano (Japan) and Miss E. H. Harvey (Eng.) 6-4, 6-4.

Josip Pallada (Yugo) and Miss A. G. Curtis (Eng.) defeated Tamio Abe (Japan) and Miss Wilson, 6-4, 6-4.

Jean Borotra (France) and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody (U.S.) defeated Roderick Menzel and Miss Howard, 6-3, 6-4.

German-Japanese Track Meet Next Fall To Be Non-Point Exhibition

The German-Japanese track and field meet to be staged here next Fall will be in the nature of a friendly exchange affair, according to a decision reached by the Japan Track and Field Federation.

If Japan desires a dual competitive meet, the arrangement would have to be one contestant each from either side in 10 events, according to Germany's wish, the Federation was notified by its representative, Jiro Takahashi, in Berlin.

The Federation thereupon reached a decision to make it a non-point affair. In addition to the athletes for the track events, Germany will be asked to send an athlete each for the hammer throw and high jump, instead of the javelin throw and shot put, 400-meter hurdles and 10-kilometer walk.

Hankyu Blanks Nagoya By 6-0

Behind the good pitching of Takahashi who yielded but two hits, the Osaka Hankyu nine bumped off Nagoya by 6 to 0 in the only game played Friday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium. Rain caused postponement of the scheduled game between the Eagles and the Giants at 4 p.m.

Nagoya got its two hits in the fourth frame. Masu singled through short after one out and Osawa banged out a hit through second. But Shiraki grounded to third into a double play to retire the side.

Center Fielder Horio's hit down the left field foul line brought in the Hankyu's two runs in the third frame. The Hankyu squad scored four more times in the first half of the ninth.

The summaries follow:

Hankyu	002 000 004	6	9	1
Nagoya	000 000 000	0	2	5

Batteries: Takahashi and Ohara; Shigesato, Matsuo and Miura.

K.R.A.C. To Select Water Polo Team For National Play

(Special to The Japan Times)

KOBE, June 24—The K.R. and A.C. water polo team which started out with a bang this season by registering one victory and tying one, is to have an inter-club match at the Mirume Boathouse, on Saturday at 3:30 p.m., for the purpose of selecting a team to compete in the All-Japan water polo tournament to be held at the Koshien pool during August.

Mr. Freund, the famous German water poloist who is here to train the Japan Olympic candidates, will select the members for the local foreigners to compete in the national competition, and it is rumored that the local team has fine chance of attaining the trophy.

The K. R. & A. C. aequatic team took on the strong Kwansei Gakuin quintet, one of the Olympic hopes of Japan, coached by Mr. Freund, and tied them at 4 all in their battle last weekend at the Mirume pool. The game provided some excitement in the second half when the students rallied to tie the score when they were behind the foreigners 4-to-1 until the last ten minutes of the game.

Had the foreigners practised more, the result would have been in their favor as they began to weaken during the last stage of the second half.

No Foul Blow By Joe Louis, Jacobs Affirms

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 23—Max Schmeling, who last night took one of the worst beatings in his ring career from Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, suffered a fracture of the third and fourth vertebrae and also hemorrhage of the lumber muscles during the two minutes four seconds he was in the ring with the "Brown Bomber," it was revealed here today.

Although he was treated at the hospital, physicians declared that his condition was not serious. Although Schmeling's handlers insisted that Louis had landed a foul blow, Promoter Mike Jacobs disclaimed all charges that the "Bomber" had hit low over Schmeling's kidneys.

Despite the doctor's advice, it was learned that Schmeling will sail for Germany on July 2. The German contender, it was disclosed, has announced that he will fight again, but boxing quarters were skeptical about Schmeling's comeback.

Meanwhile, Max Baer, former world's champion who is attempting to stage a comeback, said that he was going to visit friends in New Jersey for a few days, but would return to sign contracts for a September title match with Louis. The latter, it is understood, has agreed.

Bois Roussel, 20-1 Wins Epsom Derby

By ROBERT P. POST

N.Y. Times

EPSOM, England, June 1—Close to 500,000 persons converged upon the historic Epsom Downs course today to see the Derby won by Bois Roussel, bred in France but owned by Peter Randolph Louis Beatty, son of the British admiral of Jutland fame and grandson of Marshall Field of Chicago.

The French horse won going away by four lengths in a driving rain, which started a minute or two before the horses left the post, and paid 20 to 1. Behind him was James V. Rank's Scottish Union, 8-to-1 second choice, while the show horse was H. E. Morriss's Pasch, the 9-to-4 favorite.

Gordon Richards, who has led all British jockeys for many years in victories, but never has booted a Derby runner home first, rode the favorite. Yet even his expert ride was useless before the drive and stamina of the colt christened "The Frenchman" by spectators despairing of pronouncing his name.

Queen Elizabeth and King George as well as the Queen Mother and other royal personages, were among the thousands upon thousands who came to Epsom in one of the United Kingdom's most characteristic fetes. The entire British Empire was on the qui vive, even though many of those who jammed the tiny valley where the Derby was run for the 159th time, riding out from London by train, car, bicycle and bus in a tide which started long before dawn, could not see more of the race than a quick flash of jockey's silks.

Result Flashed Everywhere

One court trying a case of alleged fraud in betting adjourned especially so that the jury could see the race; in a hundred others discreet clerks whispered the result to bewigged judges. And in thousands of overseas clubs, drinks of infinite varity were lifted as the magic name of Bois Roussel flashed to every corner of the globe.

For the Derby is a British institution almost rivaling that of monarchy, and there hardly was a stenographer in the entire Empire who did not have her sixpence on the race. This is one reason why the Derby is a difficult problem for professionals, because persons who do not place another bet from one end of the year to the other regard a flutter on the Derby as almost a patriotic duty.

Because of this feeling, Derby Day struck observers who never had seen it before right between the eyes. It was not primarily a horse race, it was a completely spontaneous festive occasion on which the tophatted, bespatted gentry got inextricably mixed up with every clerk and cockney who had managed to get the day off.

The confusion of Derby Day is almost indescribable. Rolls Royces locked fenders with little Fords and enormous limousines were mixed with every other type of vehicle, including gypsy carts with their ponies and motor cycles with sidecars in traffic which jammed and moved only to jam again.

Long lines of double-decked buses trundled the fifteen miles from London early in the morning. They carried all sorts of people from members of St. James Street clubs to Whitechapel social associations.

Crowd Becomes Restless

As race time approached, the crowd grew more restless. Acres on acres were covered with tents of teeming humanity. Then the King and Queen arrived, he in a cutaway and she in baby blue, to join those in the paddock but also to receive full-throated cheers from the entire throng.

Now and again the crowd uncovered odd specimens of humanity. Alleged gypsies told pretty ladies of their luck and conjurors bellowed themselves hoarse in an effort to prove their skill, knotting and unknotting handkerchiefs to show they could tip the winner—and for only 5 shillings.

Bedlam increased as the earlier races finished and the big moment neared. Redoubled cries of bookmakers sounded above sharp whistles, merry-go-rounds and the crack of rifles from shooting ranges, while the aimless babble of the holiday throng hooped around the entire scene.

Suddenly a decorous "They're off," very different from the roar that greets a start on a United States course, stilled all noises except the thunder of hoofs on green turf. Minutes later the Derby was over and the first waves of the returning tide began to move Londonward. But perhaps some thoughtful visitors went homeward making mental contrasts with stage-managed demonstrations of other European nations and wondered what sort of people these English were to make such a fuss over a horse race.

Kameda Pitches Another 1-Hitter, Beating Nagoya

Pitcher Ted Kameda, Honolulu pitcher of the Eagles, pitched his third one-hit game within a week Sunday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium when he aided his team to bump off Nagoya, 3 to 1, in the curtain-raiser of a tripleheader. The only Nagoya batsman to get a hit off him was Third Baseman Kuramoto who nicked him for a Texas Leaguer to center, first up in the fourth. He was stranded at first for Kameda retired the next three men.

Morii of Nagoya also chucked a good game, checking the Eagles to five hits.

Terauchi Homers

Lead-off man Terauchi of the Eagles swung at the first pitch of the game and knocked it into the left field bleachers for a homer. The Eagles never relinquished this lead.

Kamdea lost his control temporarily in the last half of the ninth when he walked the first three men to load the bases. But he bore down on Shiraki to strike him out and then Kuramoto grounded to short into a doubleplay.

A two-run rally in the last half of the eighth broke up a 1-all tie and the Nagoya squad, this time with Nishizawa on the mound, upset the strong Hankyu nine, 3-1, in the second game. Shiraki's timely hit off Ishida over third with the bases filled brought in Masu and Suzuki.

Duplicating the performance of Nagoya, the Hankyu ball tossers rallied in their second game of the day and turned the tables over the Giants by a 4 to 3 score in the nightcap. They clinched the game by scoring three runs off Stalphin in the sixth to forge into a 3 to 2 lead and then increased it to two runs when Third Baseman Kuroda, first up in the seventh, smashed Stalphin for a homer into the left field bleachers. That was curtains for Stalphin and Mayekawa took over the pitching assignment.

Mori replaced Odano on the mound in the last half of the sixth inning for Hankyu.

Over at the Koshien Stadium in the Kansai, the Osaka Tigers maintained their lead in the standings by beating the Senators, 6-4. They are a game and a half ahead of the Giants.

The Dolfins split their two-games affair by blanking the Lions, 9-0, but losing to the Senators, 6-1.

Missouri Awards 83 Athletes For Spring Semester

Christian Science Monitor

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 28—Awards to 83 University of Missouri athletes, including 41 major awards, have been announced by Don Faurot, chairman of the coaching staff. Major awards went to 27 varsity track men, and to 14 varsity baseball players. Minor wards went to four tennis players, four golfers, 20 freshman tracksters, and 14 freshman baseball players.

The track team, outdoor champions of the Big Six, promises to be even stronger next season with the addition of several promising men from the freshman ranks. Only five men are lost by graduation—Hugh Denny, javelin; Mark Collins, distance runs; Capt. Roy Gee, dashes; Bradley Friesz, half-miler, and Howard Bearce, pole vault.

Up from the freshman squad will be Marshall "Race Hoss" Reeves, Charleston, Mo., who at present rates second as a distance runner only to John Munski at the Tiger institution. Ed Peterson, Kansas City, is another first-rate distance star who is of Big Six caliber. Sol Schumitzky, St. Louis, is the best broad jumper in college, having passed the 23-foot mark several times this season. Elmont Dye, Kansas City, and Sherwood Hughes, St. Louis, have both turned in a 100-yard dash in 10.1s., and are good at all the dashes. Ed Slaybaugh, St. Joseph; Walter Rouzer, Kansas City, and Al and Jerome Seidel, St. Louis, are among the other outstanding freshman products who will make bids for varsity honors next season.

Three important cogs in the baseball championship are lost—Capt. Joel Carr, shortstop; Charles Mason, pitcher, and James Waechter, first baseman—but here again freshman material should partly offset the loss. Most outstanding among the first-year crop is Noel Hair, speedball pitcher from Marionville, Mo., and Paul Christman, Maplewood, Mo., infielder.

The major awards in baseball were:—William Amelung, St. Louis; Joel Carr, St. Louis; Harold Klaus, Perryville; Harlan Keirsey, Butler; Charles Miles, Willow Springs, Carl Miles, Shelbina; Marshall Sneed, Piggott, Ark.; Herbert Shelber, St. Louis; Ed Stelmach, St. Louis; William Thurman, St. Louis; James Waechter, Jr., St. Louis; Curt Vogel, Altenburg; John Daleo, Kansas City, and Harold Keller, St. Louis.

The major awards in track were—John Baldwin, Kansas City; Howard Bearce, Harrisonville; Wilbert Berg, St Louis; Harry Bridges, East St. Louis, Ill.; Kenneth Brown, Kansas City; Henry Bushyhead, University City; Paul Burrus, Edwardsville, Ill.; Mark Collins, Willow Springs; Clay Cooper, Columbia; Hugh Denny, Columbia; George Ellis, Centerville, Iowa; Vernon Ewing, Kirksville; Bradley and Robert Friesz, Keytesville.

Princeton Downs California, 4 To 3

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., June 3—Ray Schweizer, sophomore slow curve artist, made his debut as a varsity hurler today by going the route for Princeton to turn back the powerful University of California nine, 4—3, in a closely played contest on University Field.

California led off with a run in the first, but Jabara's single drove in one for the Tigers in their half, and then two safeties and a pair of errors accounted for three Nassau tallies in the third. California came back with a run in each of the sixth and ninth.

German Boxers May Come Here Next January

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, June 25—Germany's readiness to accept the Japanese Boxing Federation's invitation to dispatch a boxing delegation to Tokyo for a series of bouts with Japanese fighters was expressed by Dr. Metzner, president of the German Boxing Federation, in a conversation at the Hotel Russischer Hof here today with Nobuo Sakaguchi, Japanese delegate to the recent congress of the Federation of International Boxing Associations.

Dr. Metzner, however, told Mr. Sakaguchi that the German boxers cannot go to Tokyo in August or September as the Japanese wish, because they are engaged to meet Polish fighters in Warsaw in November. It was then temporarily agreed that the Japanese-German boxing matches should take place in Tokyo next January.

It is expected that an official invitation will be extended to the German Boxing Society after Mr. Sakaguchi has returned to Tokyo and consulted with competent Japanese authorities.

Mr. Sakaguchi will leave here tomorrow afternoon by plane for Rome, where he expects to discuss with representatives of Italian boxers possibilities of similar fights between Japanese and Italian boxers. He extended a temporary invitation to Italian fighters to come to Tokyo when he recently stopped in Rome on his way here.

Hubbell Fans 9 In Pitching One-Hit Game

By RUD RENNIE

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 29—Carl Hubbell's 198th victory for the Giants was one of his best. He gained it yesterday by shutting out the Phillies with one hit in the second game of a double-header. The Giants won both contests, 5 to 4 and 11 to 0.

Cliff Melton, the other Giant left-hander, had to have help in the ninth inning of the opener after holding the Phils to three hits and one run for eight innings.

The Phils made five consecutive hits off Cliff in the ninth, one of them a homer by Tut Stainback with two men on bases. So they came close to winning this game and might have done so if Dick Coffman had not been summoned to Melton's rescue.

Coffman came in with one on and one out, and Mueller hit into a double play, ably executed by Haslin, Bartell and McCarthy.

Stainback Hits in Fourth

Hubbell was never in danger. He had control of everything in his pitching repertoire. His curve ball had the left-handed hitters giddy. Stainback, an outfielder acquired on Thursday from the St. Louis Cardinals, was the only man to hit safely. He rammed a clean single to center in the fourth inning. But neither Stainback nor any one else got as far as second.

Al Smith was the only man besides Stainback to reach first without ending an inning. (Arnovich forced Stainback, and Young forced Smith). Hubbell walked Smith. It was the only pass he issued.

As the inning rolled along, the crowd of 26,476 was rooting for Hubbell to keep his one-hitter intact. Bartell helped him by making the only tough play that came up. The others were easy.

Hubbell fanned nine men and pitched with such consummate skill that only four balls were hit out of the infield. Three were caught.

Giants Pile Up Runs

While the old master was turning the Giants' lowest-hit victory since Goody Rosen spoiled a no-hitter for Hal Schumacher in Brooklyn on April 24, his mates were making things easy for him.

The Giants are spoiling the veteran. Last time out they made eighteen runs for him and yesterday they made eleven. Or maybe the Giants are just making up for all the close, hard ones Hubbell has pitched for them.

Anyway, the Giants made four runs in the third, which Jimmy Ripple hit a homer into the lower rightfield stands with one on, and Mancuso knocked in two with a single at a time when the bases were filled. These runs were made off Pete Sivess.

Smith relieved Sivess and disposed of Hubbell, up for a second time in the third, but he yielded a run in the fourth, another in the sixth, when Joe Moore got his second triple of the day, and five in the eighth, when Ott knocked in two for a total of four for the game, and Chiozza, playing center field, came through with his first home run of the year, with two men on bases.

Chiozza in Center

Chiozza, who recently was replaced at second by Haslin, took Hank Leiber's place in center field. Leiber participated in the opener. It was his first appearance since he pulled a charleyhorse on May 17. The most interesting thing about Chiozza's playing center field is that he got the call over Wally Berger.

The first game turned out to be an exciting affair. Moore opened it with a triple, and the Giants got two runs off Hugh Mulcahy in the first inning when Mueller threw McCarthy's grounder past the first baseman.

These two runs stood up until the fifth, when the Phils made their first hits and a run off Melton. McCarthy saved the Giants from having the score at least tied in this frame by making an excellent catch of a wide throw from Haslin to end the inning with a man headed home.

Three hits and an error gave the Giants two runs in the sixth. The one they picked up in the eighth seemed superfluous at the time. But that run, made possible by Ott's steal of second, won the game, because Melton blew up in the ninth.

Arnovich Nipped at Second

Martin doubled. Young bunted safely and Stainback hit a home run, his first hit of the year. Arnovich singled, and on a good throw by Ripple Haslin caught him trying to stretch it into a double. Then Whitney singled and Coffman was called in. Dick relieved the suspense by making Mueller hit into a double play.

Guzman Loses On Foul To Kongo In 7th Round

Fighting Guzman of the Philippines lost on a foul in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-rounder to Iwao Kongo of the Usuda Boxing Club Sunday night in a smoker at the Hibiya Public Park amphitheater.

Guzman weighed in at 121 pounds and Kongo at 108 pounds, and with the view to offsetting this 13-pound differential, the former was made to wear a bit heavier gloves.

Despite his weight disadvantage, Kongo was ever the aggressor, boring in consistently. While Guzman counter-punched effectively, he gradually began to tire and hang on clinching.

New Speed Mark Set By Roberts At Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31—Floyd Roberts, aviation engineer of Van Nuys, Calif., streaked around two and one half mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway yesterday at record-breaking speed to win the annual 500-mile race by five miles in the 26th running of the famous classic.

Roberts, winning his first major victory in 23 years of racing, most of them on dirt tracks, was never further back than fourth after the first 50 miles. He went into the lead at 200 miles, lost it temporarily to Jimmy Snyder, the "flying milkman" from Chicago, and then regained it at 400 miles and held it to the finish.

The winner piloted his stub-nosed, red racer, a new four cylinder creation, across the line in the amazing average speed of 117.200-miles an hour. This eclipsed the previous record of 113.580 established by Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis in winning the 1937 race. Roberts, driving the entire distance without relief and making only one 30s. stop for a quick time change and gasoline at 267 miles, covered the distance in 4:15:58.40.

Finishing five miles back of Roberts came Shaw. Chet Miller of Detroit trailed Shaw by two and a half miles. Miller, hanging close upon Roberts in the closing miles of the race, was forced to stop on his next to last lap to take on fuel when he was almost virtually assured of second place. The 60s. stop probably cost him $5,000, the difference between second and third prizes.

Ted Horn of Los Angeles finished fourth, nearly 30 miles back of the flying Roberts. The balance of the field was strung out for miles.

Holy Cross Beats Yale Again, 6 To 0

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 1—Airtight pitching by Art Kenney gave Holy Cross a 6-0 victory over Yale today, making twenty-eight innings without an earned run off the Crusader's delivery. He fanned nine and gave four scattered hits. Kenney also defeated Yale last month at Worcester, 9-4.

Al Stevens held Holy Cross to five safeties, but his twelve passes and one wild pitch were factors in all of the visitors' runs.

Only two Yale batsmen reached third. Orrick singled in the second, stole second and took third on Cooke's Texas leaguer to left. Grayson, walked, went to third on Cooke's single, but was out at the plate on Holt's grounder, Durand to Joubert, in the ninth.

Holy Cross had sixteen runners stranded through Stevens' effectiveness in tight spots. Because of scholarship conditions, Yale played with three reserves.

Upsets Feature Tennis Tourneys At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 25—Two seeded players, Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, and the brilliant Chinese, Kho Sin-kie, as well as young Gene Mako, of the United States, were eliminated by comparative unknowns today as the Wimbledon Championships closed the first week of play. Menzel was forced out of the running when he injured his ankle immediately after the first serve in the third set.

The most spectacular play of the day was the defeat of Gene Mako by Henry "Bunny" Austin, seeded No. 2 player. Austin, whose wife presented him with a baby girl just a few minutes before the match, was extended to five sets before he could eliminate the young American. Obviously upset by his suddenly becoming a father, the Englishman's game was patchy. Mako after barely losing the third set by a score of 9-7, shot through to a 6-0 in the next set.

Budge Wins Easily

Austin took the last set with a score of 6-4. The scores were 6-4, 4-6, 9-7, 0-6, 6-4. Mako's defeat seriously reduced the American challenge. Donald Budge, however, true to form raced through his match with R. H. Shayes, of England, by the scores of 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

The principal upset of today's matches, however, was the defeat of Kho Sin-kie by M. Cejnar, of Czechoslovakia. Cejnar was forced to go five heated sets with the Chinese star, who is ranked eighth, the scores being: 7-5, 3-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Menzel, ranking No. 3, was eliminated by Donald McPhail, of Scotland, after playing two sets. The Scottish contender forced the Czech champion to some hard playing, taking the second set by a score of 9-7, after losing the first by a hard-fought contest ending in a 6-8 score.

In the women's singles, favorites continued to dominate. Miss Helen Jacobs, of the United States, defeated Miss F. James, England in two sets: 6-4, 6-2, while Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, also of the United States, seven-times holder of the women's singles title on the Wimbledon courts, beat Mrs. Henie Miller, rising player of South Africa. The scores were 8-6, 6-4.

Yugoslav Team Beaten

The British team of George Patrick Hughes and F. D. Wilde easily defeated the highly touted combination from Yugoslavia, D. Mittic and Frantisek Puncec, ranking respectively sixth and fifth in this year's tourney. The scores were 8-6, 6-2, 6-4.

In the second round of the women's doubles, another upset was created when Miss V. E. Scott and Miss J. Saunders, of Britain, defeated Miss Helen Jacobs and Mrs. T. G. Bundy, of the United States, in two straight sets 6-3, 8-6.

The mixed doubles team of Mrs. Moody and Jean Borotra, of France, easily eliminated the combination of T. Hughan, of Holland, and Miss Ho A-hing, of China. The scores were: 6-4, 6-1.

Individual scores of today's matches were as follows:

Men's Singles (Third Round)

Donald Budge (U.S.) defeated R. H. Shayes (Eng.) 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

(Fourth Round)

Donald McPhail (Scot) defeated Roderick Menzel (Czech) 6-8, 9-7. (Menzel retired because of injured ankle).

M. Cejnar (Czech) defeated Kho Sin-kie (China) 7-5, 3-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Henner Henkel (Ger.) defeated B. Maneff (Swiss) 6-3, 6-1.

W. H. "Bunny" Austin (Eng.) defeated Gene Mako (U.S.) 6-4, 4-6, 9-7, 0-6, 6-4.

Ladislaus Hecht (Czech) defeated F. Kukuljevic (Yugo) 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Men's Doubles (Third Round)

George Patrick Hughes and F. H. Wilde (Brit.) defeated D. Mittic and Ferenc Puncec (Yugo.) 8-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Women's Singles (Third Round)

Miss Margaret Seriven (Brit.) defeated Miss Rollin Couquerque (Holl.) 6-2, 6-3.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

50-Year Old Razor Blade

The well-used razor blade owned by Mr. William Mauer of Chicago, is mighty well-worn, but good for another half-century, he claims. The razor, one of the earliest safety models, is of English make and was given him by his stepfather when William was 17. His brother also got one, but since he is two years younger, he has used his for only 48 years. Mr. Mauer figures he has saved at least $4,569 by shaving himself. He did go to a barber six times in the 50 years for shaves; but for haircuts, he hasn't gone to a barber in 47 years because the last barber nicked him. So Mrs. Mauer has been applying the clippers ever since, and he figures he's saved about $500 on that item.

Gehrig Is Hailed As Best Of All First Basemen

By GEORGE M. R. HOLMES
Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, June 3—If one were to come out in the open and state that Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees was the greatest first baseman of all time, he might lay himself open to debate from those who believe that Hal Chase or George Sisler is entitled to that distinction; but there can be no debate regarding his right to being called the "Iron Man" of baseball. The record of playing in 2,000 consecutive American League games which the Yankee captain established on Tuesday of this week is not only far in excess of any previous American League mark for this phase of the game; but it is far ahead of any record ever made by any player in any major league. When Everett Scott, former Red Sox and Yankee shortstop, established a mark of 1,307 games on May 5, 1925, predictions were freely made that it would stand for many, many years, yet at that very time Gehrig was about to start out on a record which has already bettered Scott's mark by no less than 694 games and is going higher every day. Gehrig appears to be the greatest rival Tennyson's brook has ever had.

A Most Remarkable Record

When you stop and consider all the things that must enter into the making of a consecutive-game mark such as Gehrig is compiling, the feat becomes most remarkable. In the first place, as yearly schedule of the major leagues provides for only 154 games, plus one or two which are replayed because of ties or orders from headquarters, it takes the best part of 13 years to furnish the necessary games. Then, too, a player has to be in physical condition to take part in every game as it comes along and he also has to be good enough to hold his place in the line-up. Fulfilling all of these requirements is certainly some task and it is especially so when one is a member of such team as the New York Yankees have been during the past 13 years. Gehrig has fulfilled every one of the above requirements and in only one of the 2,000 games which he had played in up to yesterday did he play less than six innings.

Always a Leading Player

Ever since he replaced Wally Pipp as first baseman for the Yankees, Gehrig has been among the leading players of the league. The very first year he played as a regular he batted for .296, making 129 hits in 126 games, 21 of which were home runs. That was the poorest year he has had as, not including the 1938 season which less than a quarter over, he has batted for .300 per cent or over each year. In 1931 he established the present record of 184 for runs driven in. In 1934 he led the league in runs batted in with 165, home runs with 49 and was the champion batter with an average of .363. This year found him starting out in a very bad batting slump; but he has gradually worked himself out of it and has his average to .280 with every prospect of finishing the year in the .300 class. Let those who want to question his being entitled to being called the greatest of all first basemen look over his performances of the past 13 years and I believe they will agree with such men as Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy that Columbia Lou is the best player that has ever covered the initial sack in major-league baseball, as well as the holder of one of the most remarkable records ever made in any sport. I was fortunate enough to see Chase, Sisler and Gehrig many times when they were at the height of their game, and it seems to me that Gehrig leads them all.

Armstrong Seeks Further Laurels, To Meet Ambers

By JAMES P. DAWSON
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 2—To the victor went the Spoils—with a vengeance. Henry Armstrong, first gladiator in ring history to hold the world featherweight and welterweight championships at the same time, was around and about yesterday, receiving the adulation of his friends and admirers, as plans went ahead for his attack on the third title which the California Negro has set as his goal.

Meanwhile Barney Ross, shorn of his welterweight crown for the second time and punched into voluntary retirement after an admirable ten-year career, was in seclusion, nursing his injured pride and the wounds he received in fifteen rounds of savage, one-sided fighting on Tuesday night against Armstrong.

The new double champion is to fight Lou Ambers, world lightweight titleholder, for the 135-pound crown on July 26, either in the Yankee Stadium or the Madison Square Garden Bowl, where Tuesday night's battle was waged. The match will be under the direction of Promoter Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century S. C., to whom Armstrong is bound for three years under terms of a contract signed yesterday by the champion's manager, Eddie Mead.

Expects Harder Fight

The doughty little fighter, whose failing fists have earned him about $140,000 in purses and distinction never before enjoyed by any boxer, in the past two years, makes no secret of the fact that he expects a harder fight from the agile Ambers than he experienced against the weary Ross. But both Armstrong and Manager Mead are confident the Californian will establish himself as the first boxer ever to hold the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at one time.

Armstrong has no intention of forsaking the featherweight ranks. Mead said his protege will make the 126-pound notch without difficulty when and if a satisfactory challenger comes along. Nor does Henry intend to barnstorm with his new-found honors. Every fight hereafter will be a championship battle for him. In short, he is on boxing's "big time," and he is still climbing.

Under State Athletic Commission and boxing rules, Armstrong's welterweight crown will not be at stake when he tackles Ambers. Custom has always dictated that a champion, contending for a title in another class where he must make a weight lower than the maximum of the one he rules, does not jeopardize the heavier crown. Armstrong, having to make 135 pounds or less for Ambers, will not, therefore, be risking his 147-pound title. His featherweight championship, of course, will not be involved because this weight will not be attempted by either.

Has Only Bruised Knuckle

The Californian emerged from Tuesday's fight with nothing more than a bruised knuckle on his left hand, and some $27,203 richer. This amount represented his 20 per cent of the net receipts of $136,015. The gross receipts were $160,860 for a battle which attracted 26,420 who paid, and a gross attendance of 28,290.

The new champion plans to remain here until next Tuesday, when he will leave for St. Louis. After a visit at Los Angeles, he will return here for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling heavyweight title bout scheduled for June 22. Training for the Ambers match will follow. In the interim Armstrong will have no fights. Manager Mead disclosed tentative plans for a motion picture in which the champion will have a leading part.

Ross, collecting 35 per cent of the net receipts, received $47,605. The retirement Barney announced immediately after he left the ring was reaffirmed yesterday by Manager Sam Pian, who said Ross probably will enter the retail dress business.

Promoter Jacobs was happy at getting the fight out of the way after two postponements from the original date. He had a profit of about $20,000 and he was in position to look forward to several lucrative gates from fights in which Armstrong will appear.

Miyatake Beats Kameda Of Eagles In Pitching Duel

Saburo Miyatake, former star pitcher of Keio University, took a turn on the mound for the Osaka Hankyu team Monday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium and outpitched Ted Kameda of the Eagles, who has been going great guns, to help his club to a 3 to 1 victory. At that, Kameda pitched a four-hitter, one fewer than was nicked off Miyatake.

The Hankyu ball tossers did all of their scoring in the fourth frame. Nishimura walked and went to second on Yamada's sacrifice. Jimmy Horio's bingle to center brought in Nishimura and on the throw-in, Horio went to second. Kameda struck out Minoru Yamashita, the Hankyu's homerun hitter. Kuroda walked. Shortstop Uyeda, who like Horio hails from Hawaii, banged out a hit to center to fill the bases. Uno's hit through first and second scored Horio and Kuroda.

Kameda contributed to the Eagles' only run in the last half of the third when he lashed out a double to left center to bat in Bucky Harris, his battery partner, who had walked.

The Giants kept in second place to the Tigers by nosing out Nagoya 7 to 6 when they came from behind scoring four runs in the seventh and another marker in the eighth.

Over at the Koshien Stadium in the Kansai, the Tigers beat the Lions, 4 to 2, in a heavy hitting game that featured 11 hits by the Tigers and 12 by the Lions. Backstop Tanaka homered for the Tigers in the eighth. The Dolfins sprung a surprise in the other game by routing the Senators, 10 to 3, behind the effective pitching of Furutani and Nakayama.

Beatty's Pitching Aids Y.C.A.C. Nine To Beat Makado, 11-1

(Special To The Japan Times)

YOKOHAMA, June 26—George Beatty, one time the only existing left handed second baseman and guardian of the hot corner as well in Tokyo-Yokohama baseball circles, is blossoming forth into a pitching ace for the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club team.

Sunday at the Y.C. and A.C. grounds, Beatty came through again with his southpaw shoots to check the Makado nine to four hits and aid the Y.C. and A.C. "seconds" to an 11-1 victory.

With a little more control, Beatty should be a stumbling block for any of the teams in the Kanto.

Points, Not Size, Aim Of U.S. Olympic Team

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 26—Rather than send as large a team as possible, the United States will pick its delegation to the 1940 Tokyo Olympics on a more restrictive basis designed to assure as many points as possible, it was revealed following a meeting of high American athletic officials here tonight.

A new American Olympic Committee ruling approved at the meeting, it is learned, restricts the team which will represent the United States in the 1940 Games to athletes who, in the tryouts, can at least outdo the performances of eighth-place winners at the last Berlin Olympics.

Besides members of the A.O.C., tonight's meeting was attended by representatives of the A.A.U. and other national and regional athletic organizations. The object of the new ruling, officials said, will be to make up a team of point-getters rather than allow maximum participation.

Kennedy Helps Tigers To Down Yankees, 8 To 4

By LOUIS EFFRAT
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 2—Up against the American League's leading pitcher, the world champion Yankees were just a lot of futile swingers for seven innings yesterday at the Stadium. When they finally did get around to solving Vernon Kennedy's slants in the eighth and ninth, it was simply too late, and the Tigers coasted to an 8-4 victory.

With the Senators winning their game, New York and Washington are now tied for second place on a won-and-lost basis. On points, however, the McCarthymen have a margin of 10.

In maintaining his unblemished record for the season Kennedy chalked up his eighth straight triumph and set down the Yankees with eight hits, while Detroit collected a total of thirteen off Steve Sundra and Irving (Bump) Hadley, routing the former in the fifth. Hadley was a decided improvement over Sundra, but he, too, arrived too late.

After seven and a third scoreless innings, Kennedy weakened and lost his shut-out. First Lou Gehrig smashed a terrific liner into the lower right-field stands for his fifth homer of the year, and then Bill Dickey, the next man up, duplicated the blow for his sixth circuit shot of the campaign. Dickey's clout landed in the center-field stands, alongside the Detroit bull pen.

Two More for Losers

Unfortunately, the bases were empty each time. But in the next stanza Frankie Crosetti drove one into the left-field region with Bill Knickerbocker on second, the result of an error by Charley Gehringer, and two more runs counted. It was Crosetti's second homer and completed the Yankee scoring for the day, to the disappointment of 8,462 fans.

All three of the losers' homers were well hit, but none compared with the drive made by Hank Greenberg in the first half of the ninth. First at bat, Hank hit a three-and-two ball nearly 450 feet into the lower left-field stands for his thirteenth of the year. Adding two earlier bingles to his list, the big first baseman enjoyed the afternoon considerably.

Long before, however, the Tigers had forged so far in front that the outcome was never in doubt after the fifth. They made three hits count for three runs in the fourth and in the following frame they added four on four safeties. The Yankees never came close.

Crosetti Boots Grounder

Sundra, making his second start, had plenty of speed in the beginning, but very little of it was left when Hadley was rushed into action. The first signs of trouble came suddenly in the fourth after one out when Greenberg got an infield hit. Chet Laabs moved him around to third on a single and reached second and the throw-in. Crosetti then booted Pete Fox's grounder and Greenberg crossed the plate. Georgie Tebbetts then singled home Laabs, and Fox scored after Don Ross had flied to Tommy Henrich in right.

In the fifth, Gehringer and Greenberg singled, Laabs sacrificed and Fox was walked intentionally, filling the bags. Tebbetts' answer was a slashing single to left, scoring the first two, and when Dickey allowed the throw-in to the plate to escape him Fox went to third and Tebbetts reached second. That marked the end of Sundra.

Ross, the first to face Hadley, singled sharply to center and two more runs were home, but Hadley succeeded in subduing the Tigers, even though Kennedy followed with a single. Except for the ninth, when Greenberg came through with his terrific drive, Hadley was supreme.

Budge, Austin, Henkel, Puncec In Semi-Finals

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 27—England, Germany, Yugoslavia and the United States will be represented in the semi-final round of the current Wimbledon singles tennis championships as the original field of 128 men players dwindled to four at the conclusion of today's play.

Donald J. Budge, lanky California red-head, seeded No. 1 in the current tourney, will carry America's colors into the semi-final round when he meets the hard-hitting Yugoslav, Ferenc Puncec.

Austin Meets Henkel

In the other bracket, the seeded No. 2 player, Henry "Bunny" Austin, on whom Britain has pinned her hopes, will meet the German star, Henner Henkel, seeded No. 4.

All four semi-finalists came through today's quarterfinal round with ease. Budge easily defeated the Czechoslovak star M. Cejnar while Puncec took the measure of the up and coming Scotch player, Donald McPhail.

Austin had little difficulty in defeating the Swiss Davis Cup star, Max Ellmer, in straight sets by the scores of 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, while Henkel disposed of his Czechoslovak opponent, Ladislas Hecht, with ease, 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

During the Budge-Cejnar match, the tall American's bullet-like services worked to perfection. One particularly hard service broke Cejnar's racket.

Miss Jacobs Wins

In the women's singles division, all favorites except Miss Margaret Scriven, seeded eighth, survived the fourth round. The English star succumbed to Miss Helen Jacobs of the United States. The American player, though Wimbledon champion two years ago, was not seeded in this year's tournament.

Miss Jacobs' unexpected victory today will place three American players in the quarter-final round the others being Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, seeded No. 1, Miss Alice Marble, seeded No. 2, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, seeded No. 7.

Mrs. Fabyan today triumphed over Miss Dorothy Bundy, also of the United States. Miss Bundy, daughter of Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, Wimbledon champion from 1905 to 1907, put up a brave fight against her more experienced opponent and lost only after three hard-fought sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In one of the best matches of the day, Mrs. D. B. Andrus, of the United States, and Mrs. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, playing together in the women's doubles, defeated the English pair of Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss Joan Ingram, 3-6, 6-1, 9-7.

Budge-Marble Near Title

In the mixed doubles, the American couple of Donald Budge and Miss Alice Marble, seeded No. 1, advanced on step nearer the championship by defeating F. Kukulevic of Yugoslavia and Mrs. D. B. Andrus, of the United States in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3.

The following are the individual scores of today's matches:

Post-Olympic Barnstorming Banned By A.O.C

Domei-Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 28—Besides restricting the American delegation to the 1940 Tokyo Olympics to potential point-getters rather than allow maximum participation, the new ruling approved at last night's meeting of the American Olympic Committee contains a series of regulations regarding the delegation, it was disclosed here today.

One of the regulations provides that no individual or volunteer coaches should make trip with the American delegation to the 1940 Games, the measure reportedly being due to the Snyder case in the last Olympics. The ruling further prohibits all post-Olympic "barnstorming" except with special permission of the A. O. C., though it is expected that the Anglo-American meet will be sanctioned.

No athletes, coaches, or managers in the official American Olympic party will be permitted to work for radio, magazines and newspapers until the party is disbanded. It was also ruled that the standard rules of the strict training characteristic of each sport shall be observed by every member of the team.

The ruling restricts the team which will represent the United States in the 1940 Games to athletes who, in the tryouts, can at least outdo the performances of eighth-place winners at the last Berlin Olympics, in order to make a team of potential point-getters rather than allow maximum participation. No alternatives will be taken along to the 1940 Games.

Rigger, Unknown To Most, Plays Vital Part Of Crew

Christian Science Monitor

It might be said that a crew is as strong only as its rigger. That is stretching the imagination a little, but the importance of the rigger still rates whether the crew be good or bad.

Perhaps there are some who do not know who and what riggers are. To begin with they are human beings and not some part of the riggin'. The duties of the rigger vary according to his knowledge and usually increase with experience.

Under some coaches the duties are more arduous than under others. A few coaches are expert riggers themselves which relieves the pressure on the rigger somewhat. When coaches are not good riggers and the oarsmen and coach are fussy and finicky, the rigger is not to be envied.

Along with caring for the delicate shells and oars, he is the man who fits the boat to the men after the coach picks the men. Each oarsman requires adjustments both inboard and outboard. He may want the seat slide different, the oarlock lowered or raised and many other fancies changed. Rigger must be inventive as well, for some of the fancies.

The importance of the rigger duties may be seen in the culmination of a year of work which is nullified in the final objective race when an oarlock or some other mechanical fitting snaps and the oarsman, trained to perfection, is rendered helpless. The labors of preparation are wasted because of a mechanical fault.

Over at Harvard Edgar Dennison has served in the capacity of rigger for more than 15 years and during that long stretch, under several coaching regimes, he has yet to have a major accident in the boat rigging. From the moment the regatta referee megaphones "Row," until the race is over, Edgar cannot rest easy.

Down at New London, where the annual four-mile race with Yale climaxes the season, Dennison awaits the result at Red Top, the Harvard Camp. When the race is upstream, he can see the finish, which is opposite the camp, and if downstream, he must await word.

First, he is anxious to know who won, and if it be Yale, the next thing he must await is what happened to Harvard? With no little concern he wonders during, after, and until he knows, whether there was anything went amiss with the rigging. Needless to say he goes over every inch of the shell before every workout and every race with microscopical inspection.

There is no room for the slightest trace of carelessness by a rigger.

London Times Praises Yates, New Golf Champ

London Times

LONDON, May 30—The Amateur Championship went to the United States at Troon on Saturday, when Charles Yates, of Atlanta, where Bobby Jones comes from, beat the Irishman, Cecil Ewing, by three up and two to play.

There can be no two opinions that the right man won, and indeed I think Ewing did very well to cling on so long and so closely as he did. He is a fine golfer with great strength and any amount of pluck, but he has not quite the straightness nor the fire nor the thrust of his conqueror, and in particular he is not so aggressive nor so accurate a putter. He fought to the end and but for a patch of weak golf at the beginning of the second round might have made an even closer match of it, but I do not think he could have won. There was something about Yates's golf that suggested a reserve of power never quite called upon. During some earlier rounds Yates had been more brilliant but never more solidly impressive than on Saturday.

Marking Times

It has often been said before that the first round of a 36-hole final was marking time. Never was it apparently truer than on Saturday. The weather was fine, there was scarcely a breath of wind, and both players, while playing well, were yet a little frightened of one another and of the occasion. In such circumstances one could hardly expect the spectacular or the dramatic, and one certainly did not get it. The golf was good and sound but it did not give the West of Scotland crowd that which they dearly love, a chance of shouting. Whatever else the match was it was not Celtic against Glasgow Rangers. Ewing began by playing excellent, unperturbed golf for four holes. He bolted at his first approach putt and gave us cold shivers down the back, but he holed like a man coming back. Yates dashed very quickly at a short putt at the second and missed it. He was heavily bunkered from a sliced tee shot at the fourth. Result, Ewing two up and all right with the world. It seemed too good to last, and sure enough Yates won the fifth. Ewing leaves himself too many four and five feet putts and nobody can hole them all. This time he left himself one of seven or eight feet, and Yates, making no mistake, was only one down.

Ewing promptly came back at him by holding a fine putt to halve the sixth and he went on playing admirably to reach the turn in 36. He was then one up and he won the 10th, where Yates hooked into glory to be two up. Incidentally, he might have holed another of those horrid dubious putts at both the ninth and the 11th, but this kind of thrust is not quite in his line. At the 12th he was bunkered and lost the hole, but he halved the 13th by holing a very long putt after Yates had hit one of his best iron shots low and straight as an arrow to the pin. The 14th was lost, but Ewing won the 15th when Yates in his turn missed a putt. Now was the time to keep the lead and lunch with a heartening sense of superiority, but Ewing made slips and Yates took his chances, so that America led for the first time with one hole to go. At the 18th Ewing hit a long drive into the rough, and considering the calm day he was hardly straight enough from the tee, but he made great amends with a wonderful high iron shot to within six feet. He had that to square the match, and all the mighty heart of Troon was lying still. Alas! the ball seemed perfectly struck, but it seemed also to lack the will to go down. It slithered over the brink and Yates led by a hole.

The scores were:

Ewing.—Out: 4 4 4 4 4 5 4 3 4.
Home: 4 4 5 4 4 4 6 4 4.
Yates.—Out: 4 5 4 5 3 5 4 3 4.
Home: 4 6 4 4 3 5 5 3 4.

After Lunch

There was a very big crowd after lunch, and barring the fact that they ran with a lunatic zest for running for its own sake they behaved well and with admirable impartiality but they made it very hard for each other to see. The first hole provided the most exciting moment of the match. Yates was eight feet past the hole and Ewing eight yards short. It looked like a 3 for Yates, but instead it was Ewing that holed, and the match was square. Never did he feel so cheerful again, for a fit of shortness attacked Ewing. He took three putts at the second, was short with his chip at the fourth after a great recovery from the rough, and short again with his chip at the fifth. Yates meanwhile made no ghost of a mistake and was three up. Every one felt that the advantage was too great to be recovered, and so it proved, but Ewing did his noble best and made a match of it to the end.

The seventh, eighth and ninth were halved and Ewing got back the 10th, where for once Yates played a poor second. At the 12th Ewing pushed a vast drive far out into the rough, 5 was the best he could do, and Yates, giving nothing away, got his 4 and was three up again. Still Ewing held on, got down in a chip and a putt to halve the 13th, and won the 15th with a splendid 3. But there was no shaking Yates now. Ewing got his orthodox 5 at the 16th and got it gallantly after being bunkered. Yates, left with an eight-foot putt for a 4 and the championship looked at it for the barest second and popped the ball straight into the hole.

His score for the 16 holes was exactly an average of 4's, and that at the end of an exhausting week and in a final was a score worthy of any champion past or to come.

Yankees Begin To Climb In American League

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 27—The up-and-coming Cincinnati Reds, by taking five consecutive games after a bad start, this week nosed the Chicago Cubs out of second place in the National League as the major league baseball season swung into the tenth week. The Reds dropped only two games. The New York Giants are still leading the National loop with 37 wins and 24 losses.

In the American loop, the heavy-hitting New York Yankees pushed the Boston Red Soxes from second place regaining the strong position held up until two weeks ago. The Cleveland Indians by splitting the week with four defeats and four wins still maintain the lead in the League.

The Philadelphia Phillies, of the Nationals, and the St. Louis Browns, of the American, continue to hold the cellar positions. Standings of the teams, including games played today, were as follows:

Dutch Swimmers Vanquish British In London Meet

London Times

LONDON, May 30—Dutch swimmers accomplished a brilliant performance at the Empire Swimming Club's second annual open tournament, held at the Empire Pool, Wembley, on Saturday, when they provided the winner in seven of the first eight events. Holland also won three relay races.

The biggest surprise of the night was the defeat, in the ladies' 100 meters breaststroke event, of Miss J. Waalberg (Holland), the Dutch champion and holder of the world's 200 meters breaststroke record. She finished three-quarters of a yard behind Miss D. Storey, who won in 1min. 26sec. The ladies' 100 meters backstroke event produced a great race between two Amsterdam swimmers, Miss N. Senff, a world record holder, and Miss C. Kint. The pair raced away from the other competitors and it was soon obvious that a remarkably fast time would be returned. Miss C. Kint went away with a strong burst at the finish to win by 2½ yards in 1min. 16sec., which is inside the European Championship record of 1min. 20.3sec. Miss N. Senff won the race last year in 1min. 18.1sec.

P. C. Schefler again won the men's 100 meters backstroke race, beating M. H. Taylor, of Shetfield, in an exciting finish. Taylor appeared a likely winner when he held a slight lead with a few yards to go, but the Dutch swimmer just managed to catch his rival in the last yard. The men's 400 meters free style event produced a similar finish. J. Hale, of Hull, led until late in the race, but then he could not resist the strong finish of D. v. d. Kuy (Holland), who just got home.

The result were:—

100 Meters Breaststroke.—H. Smitshuyzen (Amsterdam, Holland), 1; J. G. Davies (Otter S.C.) 2; E. Stratton (Beckenham S.C), 3. Won by 2 yards. Time, 1min. 19.2sec.

Australians Tie With Middlesex

LONDON, May 31—The touring Australian cricket team drew with Middlesex today for its fourth deadlock in nine games this year on English soil. The other five matches ended in innings victories for the Aussies.

The Australians compiled innings of 132 runs and 114 runs for two wickets, declared, against the county's innings of 188 runs and 21 runs for no wickets.

Don Bradman, captain of the visitors, made a sporting gesture when he declared the Australians' second innings with twenty minutes left to play to allow William Edrich, Middlesex batsman, a chance to bring his total runs to 1,000 for the month. Edrich scored 20 runs to hit the four-figure mark.

Bradman holds the record of twice exceeding 1,000 runs in May, the opening month of the English season, while W. G. Grace, Tom Hayward, C. Hallows, Walter Hammond and Edrich have each hit the figure once.

Rain was general over England today, canceling play between Derbyshire and Sussex, Glamorgan and Essex, Gloucestershire and Warwickshire, Lancashire and Leicestershire and Nottinghamshire and Hampshire. The Derbyshire-Sussex contest was rained out all three days.

Somerset improved its county championship position with a three-wickets decision over Northamptonshire and Surrey gained a first-innings victory over Worcestershire. Other country matches ended in draws and will not be included in the championship table.

The scores:

Australians, 132 and 114 runs for two wickets declared (Fingleton 32, Bradman 30 not out); Middlesex, 188 and 21 runs for no wickets (Edrich 20 not out), at Lord's.

Glamorgan, 100, vs. Essex, at Swansea.

Gloucestershire, 324 for five declared; Warwickshire, 148 for one (Santall 75, Creom 60 not out), at Bristol.

Lancashire, 174 for five, vs. Leicester shire, at Manchester.

Nottinghamshire, 290 for four (Harris 81, Gunn 66) vs. Hampshire, at Nottingham.

Northamptonshire, 166 and 165 (Wellard seven for 76); Somerset, 271 and 65 runs for seven wickets (Buswell five for 32, at Frome.

Surrey, 182 and 101; Worcestershire, 132 and 68 for seven (Gover seven for 35, at Kidderminister.

Kent, 78 for one, vs. Yorkshire, at Hull.

Cambridge University, 169 and 79 for one; Army, 287 for eight, declared (Packe 176), at Cambridge.

The "Coincidence Twins"

Charles Martin Hall of Thompson, Ohio, (1863-1914) and Paul L. T. Heroult of Thury, France (1863-1914), were born in the same year, their last name starts with the same letter, the initial of their birthplace is the same. On the 23rd of the month, in the same year, 1886, the two young men, each of whom was 23 years, independently and in complete ignorance of one another, invented the process of producing aluminum, now known as the Hall-Heroult process. They died the same year, 1914.

Pacific Coast League Ball Seems To Be Losing Ground

Christian Science Monitor

LOS ANGELES—Pacific Coast League baseball as an AA circuit continues to furnish the Bergers, Meusels, Lazzeris, and Di Maggios for the big-time, but as home-town entertainment it appears to be convincing many that it is losing ground as a popular sport.

That is, most everyone seems to be convinced except those who are on the radical front urging hippodrome tactics to ballyhoo the game and hit its way back to its one-time position as a major sport attraction in the home towns.

The season opened here, for instance, with less than 8,000 paid and passed admissions on Saturday afternoon. A few nights later midget automobile racing opened its in-town season of weekly meets at Gilmore Stadium with 17,000 on hand. Now with night games, it's uncommon to find weeks with more than 30,000 admissions at any field. The films, of course, have made the greatest inroads, with radio entertainment rated next.

Missions as Hollywood

Here, for instance, the former Missions of San Francisco are now trying to build up a following as the Hollywood Stars. They actually feel flattered when more than 1,500 persons show up. Harry Williams, secretary-general of the league, explains the lack of enthusiasm as due additionally to a business recession. Certainly the 80-cent admission is making many people ponder over the relative values to be received at Wrigley Field, at the corner movie, and in many cases at the grocery store. While women get in free except on Holidays and Sundays, they still require a 15-cent tax ticket, seven cents being the actual tax, and the rest a service charge. Added up, this price schedule for many couples costs more than a down-town first-run show, for where is the swain who will not buy peanuts and hotdogs?

Herbert Fleishhacker, the San Francisco financier, ordered his Missions to swamp uniforms for straight business reasons. Bill Lane two years ago vacated filmland to take his club to San Diego and become the League-leading Padres. This had left only one club in a drawing area equal to the total population of the rest of the circuit.

To rouse Hollywood interest, Mr. Fleishhacker fished for local money to buy in or out. Film stars such as Joe E. Brown and George Raft had long evidenced their interest in baseball and had been prominent in the annual all-stars game here. Earl Gilmore, the oil baron who has built Gilmore Stadium for midget autos, motorcycles, and both kinds of football, was offered the chance with the hope that he would enlarge his stadium for a second ball park here, something this traditionally two-team town had never had. Apparently Mr. Gilmore's new-found interest in another plant here was too good to be overlooked. And, fabulous as their salaries might be, the film stars failed to get what they considered a good offer. So Don Francisco became the local window-dresser at Stars' president, dividing his time with the All-Year Club of Southern California.

Rent Wrigley Field

But with rented quarters in Wrigley Field, the Stars have failed to overcome some of the objectionable factors in the old Hollywood-Angels arrangement. Mr. Wrigley still has the whip hand on rent percentages (although for all we know) the Gilmore Scare might have been enough to force a more share-the-wealth agreement between Mr. Wrigley and Mr. Fleishhacker than that which existed between Mr. Wrigley and Mr Lane). Another thing, the play is on another side of town from that which is recognized as the concentration of those who have-to-do-with.

Wrigley Field is 'way south of the tracks, which in Los Angeles is Pico Street, and is also on the lower East Side. The Wilshire district is at least five miles away, and Hollywood proper and Beverly Hills thrice that. The Gilmore Stadium would have been fine for accessibility, and there are those who place all the blame for lack of attendance on this one point of distance.

Los Angeles may have a following three times that of the new Stars, but even at that it depends, like so many other minor-league clubs, on the chain-store system and its affiliation with the Chicago Cubs and its backer.

At the time the present season opened there was talk that Mr. Fleishhacker, having failed to palm off his lesser club, world think nothing of immediately taking it back to the San Francisco Bay region, invite the Oakland team to go South, and then arrange to have the road-weary Missions cross the Bay every week or so to stage as many series as the East Bay fans would pay for. This would make the Oaks become the Stars and leave Mr. Fleishhacker a free hand to shuffle his Seals and Missions to taste.

Season Third Over

The season is a third over, and this possibility has about as many fans hoping for it as those against it. The Oaks are in last place, about 10½ games behind the Sacramento Solons.

Attendance all through the league is slightly under last year, and those who report this decline slur over the word "slightly." Portland and Seattle appear to be averaging well over the 30,000-week average, with San Diego continuing to surprise everyone with its metropolitan-like turnouts. That leaves the small-town Solons getting little gates, as are the two population centers and their four teams apparently pre-occupied over business trends, to the disadvantage of any indulgence in baseball attendance.

In diagnosing the decline of baseball, there are those who blame the clubs themselves for their plight. These critics believe the old-line club owners have failed to keep up with the times and use modern exploitation methods. Have the owners, they ask, forgotten that baseball became popular about a century ago because there were no comparable rivals for spectator sports? Take the May 20 game here between Sacramento and the Stars, each team managed by one of the Killefer brothers. Wrigley Field has a perfectly good public-address outfit, but the Field management failed to use it, and was negligent in the omission.

With sports writers agreeing that the Star management should be building up team interest, the announcer named only those who stepped up to the plate during the first few innings. Then, when one of the brothers protested a decision, most of the crowd of 1,400 had to read the next morning's paper to find out that he had been waved from the game. They were interested to note further that he had at first retreated only to the dugout in the semi-darkness and that his brother protested to the umpire who obliged by forcing the errant brother to the clubhouse. And towards the end of the game, this second brother also was waved out for protesting a decision at third, the cash customers fount out.

Other things which the customers pay to see but find out for sure only in the papers are the batting averages, the names of those on fielding plays, and the reasons why certain players are not in the line-up. And how many intermittent fans can tell the proper or recorded credit in a fielder's choice, bunt, sacrifice, and passed balls? Does everyone remember that a batter or runner is automatically out when he touches a hit ball? How often does a film producer in the credit footage forget to publish the name of the assistant cameraman. Certainly in baseball there are plenty of fans who would appreciate more than they are finding out under present practice.

Princeton Nine Subdues Penn Twice, 4-3, 5-2

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, June 4—By winning both games from Pennsylvania, 4 to 3 and 5 to 2, on Franklin Field today, Princeton strengthened its third position in the Eastern Intercollegiate League while the Red and Blue finished in last place.

Dawson Farber held Penn to eight hits in the opener and struck out ten batters, while Bob Riddle kept the Red and Blue's nine hits well distributed in the nightcap. He also contributed a home run with a man on base. Payson Brickley worked the second game for Penn, allowing the Tigers seven hits, but his support was shoddy.

Given's Homer Wins First

Eddie Given personally decided the first game when he hit a home run with one on in the sixth inning. The Princeton catcher came to bat with Purnell on first as the result of a walk and caught hold of Rusznak's fast ball, sending it on a line to deep left field past McDonald.

This game was a continuation of the one started at Princeton on May 14, when rain stopped play with Penn at bat in the third and Rusznak on third base as the result of a two-bagger and Sachs' sacrifice.

Captain Chuck Diven was at bat today when the first game began and drove a fly to Harper, the Penn pitcher scoring after the catch. Princeton came back in its half of the fourth and scored two runs without a hit. After Givens' homer in the sixth Penn put over two more in the seventh when Brown was safe on an error, Dignan's double, Rusznak's single and an infield out.

Trexler Ties With Homer

Princeton got out in front with a run in the first inning of the second game when Givens singled to left and McDonald let the ball get away. Dick Trexler tied the score for Penn with a home run in the fourth, but the Tigers put over two more in the fifth on Riddle's homer with Foote on base. The Tigers got another pair in the sixth on Harper's single, Sachs' wild throw of Fallon's grounder and Hill's three-bagger.

Japanese Beaten In Doubles Play At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 28—Fighting a gallant but losing battle, Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu, sole Japanese survivors in the current Wimbledon championships, were today eliminated from the doubles by M. Cejnar, of Czechoslovakia, and C. E. Malfroy, of New Zealand. The latter won in four sets.

Superior Teamwork Wins

Superior teamwork and offense gave the New Zealand-Czech combination victory but only after Nakano and Kuramitsu, who offered stout resistance from the outset, made a splendid rally to take the third set. Frequent Japanese errors in the fourth, however, ended the match.

Except for a brief period, Cejnar and Malfroy were in command, displaying particular brilliance in the last set when they forced the Japanese repeatedly to drive outside or net their shots. The final scores were 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

In another belated second-round match, the powerful Czech combination of Roderick Menzel and Ladoslas Hecht defeated Ian G. Collins and Donald McPhail, of Scotland, in straight sets. After the first went to 16 games, the Czechs ran out the match in short order.

Donald J. Budge and Gene Mako, of the United States, meanwhile repulsed a strong third-round challenge by Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, of France. The French veterans put up a gallant fight but were turned back in straight sets by the titleholding American team.

The quarterfinals of the women's singles saw three out of four American stars emerge victorious, the only foreign player to enter the semifinals being Mrs. Svend Sperling, of Denmark, who won a three-set victory over Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan. The other survivors were Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, Miss Alice Marble and Miss Helen Jacobs.

Mrs. Moody Shines

With a breeze hampering play, Mrs. Moody far outclassed Miss Katherine Stammers, of England, in a mediocre match which went to the seeded American in straight sets. Miss Stammers was uncertain, and the American star dropped only three games as she sped through the match without removing her blazer.

Playing brilliantly, Miss Marble conquered Madam Mathieu, of France, in what was rated the best match thus far played in the women's division. The second-seeded American displayed a powerful service and speedy cross-court drives, taking the match in straight sets.

Miss Jacobs Scores Upset

Miss Helen Jacobs, former Wimbledon champion, meanwhile scored the only upset of the day by eliminating Miss Jedrzejowska, third-seeded Polish star, with the loss of only five games. The Californian, who was eliminated in the third round last year, was not seeded in this year's tourney.

A summary of today's matches follows:

Men's Doubles (Second Round)

M. Cejnar (Czech.) and C. E. Malfroy (N.Z.) defeated Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu (Japan) 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Roderick Menzel and Ladislas Hecht (Czech.) defeated Ian G. Collins and Donald McPhail (Scotland) 9-7, 6-1, 6-3.

(Third Round)

Donald J. Budge and Gene Mako (U.S.) defeated Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon (France) 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

Women's Singles (Quarterfinals)

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody (U.S.) defeated Miss Katherine Stammers (Eng.) 6-2, 6-1.

Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) defeated Madam Rene Mathieu (France) 6-2, 6-3.

Mrs. Svend Sperling (Denmark) defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan (U.S.) 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.) defeated Miss J. Jedrzejowska (Poland) 6-2, 6-3.

Wrestling Team Invited To Philippines Again

From the Philippines have come an invitation to the Japan Amateur Wrestling Association to send another team to Manila in December this year.

According to the letter received by Ichiro Hata, honorary secretary of the Association, from Secretary Ylanan of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation, the trip of the Philippine team to Japan in May this year has acted as a stimulant for interest in the grappling sport in the Philippines. It also has become a regular sport of the Army. And with the view to developing the technique, the visit of another Japanese team is desired, Secretary Ylanan said.

An answer will be dispatched to the Philippine Federation shortly.

Australian Team Tops St. Andrews In Golf Tourney

Times, London

LONDON, June 8—The Australian golfers beat St. Andrews yesterday in a meeting by four-ball matches and singles over the Old Course by three matches to two. The four-ball matches were halved, each side winning one match. The Australians won two singles, halved one, and lost the fourth. They have therefore won both their fixtures in the official home of the game, an excellent performance, and leave with this encouragement to try conclusions with North Berwick and the Honorable Company tomorrow and on Friday, after spending a day in Edinburgh, where they will visit the War Memorial.

Yesterday the weather was fine, full of sunshine, but with a strong westerly wind blowing that showed the Old Course still at full stretch and a grand test of golf, both going out and coming home. The town had collected a strong side consisting of Andrew Dowie, who played in the Walker Cup trials, J. Terry, an accomplished local golfer, Ian Macdonald, a former Scottish boy champion, and Ken Greig, who has won the Scottish Amateur Championship.

A Strong Wind

The wind was blowing very strongly when the four-ball matches started in the morning. In the first of them M. J. Ryan and T. S. Mackay met Dowie and Terry. For the first six holes it was level pegging, but the Australians lost the seventh and eighth holes and turned two down. They also lost the 12th hole, but won the 13th and 15th holes on their merits and, with two to play, were only one down. Then, alas, they both fell victims to the Road at the 17th hole, found lies from which there was no hope of recovery, and that was the end of them. In the second match H. W. Hattersley and Nettlefold played Greig and Macdonald. This also was an excellent match. The first six holes were halved. Then the Australians won the seventh in 3 and the long 14th in a fine 4 from Nettlefold, but they lost the 15th, where both came completely to grief. Gray and Macdonald, however, presented them with the 16th, and that was dormy two. Then the fun began. To the Road Hole Hattersley topped his drive and eventually ran up into the green in 4. Nettlefold, with two long shots, was just under the green, but had that frightening buttress between him and the hole. For the moment he forgot that his partner had taken 4 and so he elected to try a pitch and bang went his ball into the Road and it was only dormy one. Both he and Hattersley, however, had just the inside of Greig and Macdonald to the home hole, and, with fine approaches, made certain of the required half.

The wind had abated slightly when the singles were started and dropped still further before all was done. Hattersley led off against Terry and established an early lead by winning the first and fourth holes, at each of which Terry took three putts. Hattersley lost the long hole by hitting Terry's ball into the hole, who squared the match at the sixth hole with a grand 3. Hattersley, however, won the short eighth, where Terry again took three putts. He also won the 10th and short 11th, and although he lost the 12th, took the 14th to be dormy four, and got his half at the 15th.

Going out Mackay and Macdonald had a regular dog fight. Macdonald won the first hole in a fine 3, lost the second and third, won the sixth and seventh, but lost the eighth hole, and that was all square at the turn. Mackay then won the next two holes, lost the 13th, but then won two more in a row, and that was dormy three. Macdonald kept the game alive by winning the 16th, but Mackay played the Road Hole properly, and that was the end of Macdonald. Dowie made a good recovery against Nettlefold, who, after losing the first hole, won the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth in a row and was three up with five to play. Then he lost the long hole home and the 16th by driving out of bounds, but was still one up with two to play. To the Road Hole, as in the morning, he hit two long shots and almost to the same position. Again he decided to pitch, and this time fell short and into the bunker. That was all square. Both played the home hole well, their approaches leaving each player a chance of a 3, which first Dowie and then Nettlefold just failed to achieve.

Ryan had a close match with Greig, but the pace of the greens, which were getting keen under the influence of sun and wind, puzzled him coming home, and Greig won at the Road Hole.

The results were:

M. J. Ryan and T. S. Mackay	0

Waseda Nine Leaves July 15 For Hawaii Tilts

Led by Superintendent Dr. Tadaoki Yamamoto and Coach Katsuo Tanaka, 15 members of the Waseda University baseball team will leave on the Chichibu Maru from Yokohama on July 15 for a series of games in Honolulu against Hawaii's strongest teams.

As an innovation, the team members will go in their regular student uniforms in keeping with the prevailing emergency situation in Japan, instead of the ordinary civilian suits as in the past.

Invited by Asahi Team

The trip is being sponsored by the Asahi team, composed of players of Hawaiian-born Japanese, headed by Dr. Katsumi Kometani, a dentist. Negotiations were conducted between the Waseda baseball division and the Nippu Jiji, English-Japanese bilingual newspaper in Honolulu.

The team will be in Hawaii for approximately 20 days and is expected to return to Japan on August 19.

Those making the trip in addition to Superintendent Dr. Yamamoto and Coach Tanaka are:

Ryohei Masujima, manager.

Kiyoshi Takasu, captain, and third base.

Kanemitsu Kondo, Kyuzo Ishiguro and Hiroshi Matsui, pitchers.

Katsuji Ogusu and Hiroshi Tsujii, catchers.

Go Mei-sho and Hirokuni Kataoka, first base.

Katsuaki Shirakawa and Toshihiko Kakijima, second base.

Fukashi Minamimura, third base.

Yasuo Murase, shortstop.

Saburo Nagata, Zenji Miyoshi, Kokichi Kimura and Reizo Asai, outfielders.

Waseda, which lost out to Meiji in a one-game playoff for the championship of the Spring season of the Tokyo Six University league, is a hard hitting team and should be able to give the teams of Hawaii a run for their money.

British Golfers Capture Walker Cup For First Time, Beating Americans, 7 To 4

By AL. LANEY

Herald Tribune

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 1.—Staving off a late afternoon rush by the young men from America, who threatened through several hours to recover from a hopeless position, the British Walker Cup team won the biennial contest in a series of dogged battles over the Royal and Ancient course today and the great silver trophy on which a British victory never has been inscribed came into England's possession for the first time since it went into competition in 1921.

The margin of victory was fairly wide, Britain winning seven of the twelve matches and halving one and what has been described as the best team ever to represent the home country thus atoned in a large measure for the long series of inglorious defeats. The challenging team took two of the four foursomes the first day and halved one. Today they won five of the eight singles to capture the cup by 7 to 4.

7,000 See Presentation

The entire gallery of 7,000, which had divided its times among the eight matches, came up to the eighteenth fairway with the last match and, breaking down the barriers on either side of the Royal and Ancient clubhouse, crowded up to the terrace in front of the famous South Room, where the cup was on display, and stood another hour in the drizzling rain while an elaborate ceremony of presentation took place. They even violated the sacred turf of the famous eighteenth green in their eagerness to get as close as possible.

The reaction of the members of the American team and their non-playing captain, Francis Ouimet, was a curious one. They didn't actually appear to be glad to have lost the cup, for they are mostly young and ardent. But certainly they weren't sorry. To a man they seemed to believe their defeat was in the best interests of the game on both sides of the Atlantic, and Ouimet told the crowd through amplifiers that he was delighted that such fine golfers had taken the cup into custody.

One could believe that he, at least, wasn't disappointed, whatever some of his young men may have been.

Crowd Calls for Yates

The British non-playing captain, John B. Beck, a former Walker Cup player, promised to bring just as fine a team to America to defend the cup in two years and as soon as he had finished the crowd began to call for Charley Yates. The spectators wanted to pay tribute to the Atlantan, who had taken their national title and who returns home unbeaten in eleven matches on this side of the Atlantic.

Yates came forward, bringing Gordon Peters, who, he said, had taught him a new song and together they sang "Just a Wee Deoch and Doris," in which every person in the crowd joined. Much fine cheering was indulged in, the gallery paraded behind a bagpipe band and everybody went home happy to know that the cup will remain at the holy of holies of golf for two years at least. It was one of the most pleasant occasions any international sports competition ever has known.

There were possibly one or two extenuating circumstances for the defeat from an American viewpoint in that several men counted on to win points were sadly off form, but the fact is they were beaten by a team that probably could repeat its victory if the match were replayed.

The losers were not without honor, however. Among the compensations was the fact that Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Olympia, Wash., burned up the famous course, going around in the morning in 67, a figure which no amateur has ever touched, and only a few professionals have ever equaled, to overwhelm Frank Pennink, twice English champion, 12 and 11. And Yates continued the nearly perfect play that won the British amateur title last week by beating the sensational young Irishman, Jim Bruen, who was making his international debut, 2 and 1. Lastly Johnny Fischer, after being 2 down to Leonard Crawley this morning, turned on the heat after lunch, and, with a string of six 3's in a row, ran his man down, 3 and 2.

These were the three winners, and that's meager consolation in view of the fact that three members of the team were badly beaten, and neither Johnny Goodman, the American amateur champion; Ray Billows, Reynolds Smith, Charles (Chuck) Kocsis nor Fred Haas could register a victory. Goodman, never happy since his arrival in England, floundered again, and was beaten, 6 and 4, by Hector Thomson, the man reckoned to be the hardest amateur in the world to beat at St. Andrews. Smith took a 9-and-8 beating from Peters, and Haas could carry Alex Kyle no farther than the thirty-second hole.

Kocsis Gives Up Fight

Billows brought Cecil Ewing, runner-up to Yates in the amateur last week, to the last green with a chance to tie, but the contest already had been decided by then and he was beaten, 1 up. Kocsis, hot and cold by turns often looked as if he were going to beat Charles Stowe, but he gave up the fight with a half at the thirty-fifth.

In spite of Ward's fireworks this morning and the workmanlike manner in which Yates handled Bruen, the Irish youth who was counted on for a certain point for the home side, it was obvious long before lunch that the defense of the cup was cracking and that only a reversal of form in four or five cases would prevent its loss. The Britons went in for the rest interval with this comfortable feeling and it bolstered their confidence when they returned for the last eighteen holes that would determine the issue.

One match was definitely theirs, barring a miracle; another apparently was certain and a third probably earmarked for their side. Besides, they were up in two others and only 1 down in a seventh. Only one was definitely lost to them at the halfway stage. Needing only four matches, they were certain they could manage it comfortably.

This was the situation when they came at ten-minute intervals behind Yates and Bruen at 2 o'clock. Thomson was a certain winner over Goodman. Crawley was 4 up on Fischer and Peters had Smith 3 down. Stowe and Kyle each were 1 up on Kocsis and Haas and Ewing was only 1 down to Billows.

Still a Chance for Bruen

Pennink was a hopeless victim of Ward's brilliant round, but Bruen still had a chance. Thus half of the needed four points practically was certain, there was better than an even chance for a third and three others were virtually level. To get four points out of that situation did not appear to be difficult and indeed it wasn't.

The American situation was correspondingly hopeless. The invaders could count one match definitely theirs and hope that Yates would keep up the good work against Bruen. Otherwise a lot of fine golf would have to be played between 2 o'clock and 6 if they were to find three points to add to those two, of which one still was speculative. A lot of fine golf was played and some Britishers did crack, but not enough of them.

After Fischer's fine recovery in his match with Crawley, in which he added his point to the ones turned in by Yates and Ward, things looked better, but the others failed one by one, going down before superior play.

Italy Agrees To Send Boxing Team Next Year

As the result of successful negotiations between Italian boxing circles and Nobuo Sakaguchi, representative of the Amateur Boxing Federation of Japan, now in Rome, Italy has agreed to send five boxers representing five different weights and one manager to the Italo-German and Japanese boxing tourney to be held for three weeks starting January 10, next year, according to a Domei report received here from Rome.

The Italian fighters will sail for Japan from Naples at the beginning of December aboard the N.Y.K. liner Katori Maru which is due in Kobe on January 3.

Mr. Sakaguchi, who has been successful in obtaining Germany's consent also to send representatives to the Tokyo competition, left Rome on Wednesday for the United States.

O.O.C. Urged To Stage BaseballDemonstration

The desire that the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee spare no efforts in staging the baseball demonstration game during the 12th Olympic Games in 1940 is expressed in a letter the O. O. C. has received from Leslie Mann, honorary secretary of the International Baseball Congress.

Mr. Mann also expressed the hopes that the O. O. C. will make best efforts for the inclusion of baseball into a regular sports event of the Olympic Games.

Fists Fly As Yanks Defeat Grove, 10 To 0

By JOHN DREBINGER

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, May 31—Inspired to lofty action by the largest crowd in the history of baseball, a gathering that fell just short of 84,000 for the sole reason that no more could possibly jam their way in, the world champion Yankees blazed a gaudy trail back to their lordly estate by overthrowing the Red Sox in both ends of a double-header at the Stadium yesterday.

Routing the venerable Lefty Bom Grove in the fourth inning, the aroused McCarthy forces won the opener, 10 to 0, behind a brilliant three-hit mound performance by burly Red Ruffing, who hung up his sixth pitching triumph of the year against one defeat. It also marked the first setback of the campaign for Grove, who had entered the fray with a winning streak of eight.

Two others also entered the game without finishing it. They were Manager Joe Cronin, doughty Boston leader, and Jake Powell, Yankee left fielder, who, in the inning that witnessed the routing of Grove, were ejected from the game by the umpires for engaging in a merry fist fight, which they concluded under the stands, away from the peering eyes of the multitude.

Higgins Makes Costly Error

Following all this came a nerve-racking nightcap which the Yanks, after a rousing, up-hill fight, won in the ninth, 5 to 4, behind Lefty Gomez, on a wild heave by Pinky Higgins, Boston third baseman.

It was, on the whole, a tremendous afternoon, with everything done on a vast scale, including the scaling into second place by the Yanks, who hurdled over both the Senators and Red Sox.

It even fired Herr Lou Gehrig to action, Lou's fourth homer of the year putting the Yanks back in the running in the second game, while the mighty bludgeon of Joe DiMaggio, who fired the crowd to an afternoon of deafening noise, boomed throughout both battles for a total of five hits, three of them doubles.

But it was the crowd itself that shattered all records. The official attendance total was 83,533, of which 81,891 paid.

About 6,000 Turned Away

Add to this 511 who paid their way in but had their money refunded because they could find no place of vantage to see anything but the backs of the necks of the earlier arrivals, and one can readily compute that at one time or another actually 84,044 passed into the park, while some five or six thousand fought a hopeless battle to get in after the ticket booths were ordered closed shortly after 1 o'clock.

The receipts were $91,610.75, which also cracked all records for regular championship games.

The previous record attendance for baseball was 80,284 which was the number that attended the opening of the Cleveland municipal stadium on July 31, 1932. Oddly enough, Grove also appeared in that struggle and, incidentally, fared infinitely better. Pitching for the Athletics that day, he beat the Indians with Mel Harder on the mound, 1 to 0.

The largest previous attendance in the history of the Yankee Stadium was 77,000, set on Aug. 14, 1934, with the Tigers supplying the opposition.

It was in such mammoth setting that the Yankees for the first time this year swung into a determined drive toward the top. They began battering Grove early in the first engagement, two-baggers by Bill to a run in the second inning, while Dickey and Powell sending them off Gehrig and Myril Hoag accounted singles by Red Rolfe, DiMaggio, for two more tallies in the third.

Gehrig Sends in Pair

In the fourth the revivified McCarthy forces went to work in earnest. A single by Rolfe, flanked by two passes, filled the bases and a sharp single by Gehrig scored two.

That finished Grove, and the left-handed Archie McKain came on, to fare no better. His first two pitches were plastered for singles by Dickey and Hoag.

McKain's next two pitches created an even greater uproar. Powell fell to the dirt to duck the first pitch, which seemed aimed squarely at his head and the second one struck him a glancing blow in the stomach. On picking himself up, Jake marched belligerently to the pitching mound. McKain seemed willing enough to meet him half way.

But before the two had a chance to mix, Manager Cronin dashed over his shortstop position and decided to take an active hand. In fact, he opened fire on Jake at once, and with the latter retaliating, there was a spirited struggle until umpires and the other players pried the combatants apart.

Both Cronin and Powell were ordered off the field, but that by no means ended the fighting. For as Cronin passed through the Yankee dugout, his only means of exit, several Yanks followed him.

Umpires Follow Combatants

This induced the three umpires, McGowan, Hubbard and Rommel, to do the same, and presently all the other players also dashed from view, leaving the record crowd to view in bewilderment nothing but the grass while Cronin and Powell resumed hostilities under the stands. Cronin emerged from this second scuffle the loser by several scratches on the face, received while the Yanks were hauling him away from Powell.

When order was finally restored, McKain succeeded in stopping the Yankee avalanche on the base paths, but a total of five runs was scored for the round, and that more than sufficed.

For Ruffing was absolutely at his best, holding the Sox hitless until the sixth, when Roger Cramer and Joe Vosmik came up with a pair of singles. Higgins struck the third single in ninth, and that was all. Ruffing walked five, but only two men reached second, none got as far as third.

Miss Lenglen Reported Seriously Ill In Paris

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, June 30—Miss Suzanne Lenglen, five-time Wimbledon titleholder and one of the most spectacular women tennis players ever to appear on the court, was reported seriously ill at her Paris home suffering from anaemia.

The famous tennis player, now 37 years old, underwent a blood transfusion yesterday. Physicians declined to make any comment regarding her recovery.

In 1926, Miss Lenglen turned professional and toured the United States. During the last few years, she had given up competitive tennis and had devoted her time to coaching.

U.S. Wrestlers Arrive July 6 For Meets Here

Scheduled to arrive at Yokohama on July 6 aboard the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Chichibu Maru is a six-man wrestling team of the Pacific Coast of the United States to compete in two America-Japan meets. It will be the second grappling squad to come from the United States.

The first of the two meets will be held on Sunday, July 10, at the Koshien Stadium, near Osaka, beginning at 3 p.m. If it rains, it will be postponed to July 17. The second will be held at the Hibiya Park amphitheater here on July 19, beginning at 6 p.m. In the event of rain, it will be put over to the next night.

Emilio Bruno, welterweight, who was here with the American team last year, expects to compete also in the national championships to be held at the Hibiya Park amphitheater on Monday, August 1, beginning at 6 p.m. Bruno's performance will be watched with special interest as he has been spending the past year, according to reports, in training with the view to scoring revenge of the setback he suffered at the hands of Eiichi Kazama of Waseda University, who has been invincible in this country.

The Japan Amateur Wrestling Association which has invited the American team is concentrating its efforts on development of Japanese team that will win the championship honors in the forthcoming 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940.

Budge And Austin In Singles Final At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 29—Donald J. Budge, of the United States, and Henry "Bunny" Austin, of England—world's two top-ranking court stars—today emerged as the finalists in the 1938 Wimbledon men's singles championships as both won decisive, straight-set victories over their semifinal-round opponents.

The lanky American Davis Cup star, whose hold on the title has been conceded from the first as virtually unshakeable, hammered out a fully-anticipated win over Ferenc Puncec, fifth-seeded Yugoslav player, while Austin became the challenger by defeating Henner Henkel, of Germany, in one of the best matches of the tourney.

Austin Beats Henkel

With interest centering on who would gain the right to oppose Budge in the final, the second-seeded English star played the best tennis of his career to turn back Henkel's challenge in no more than an hour of sparkling play.

Though one of Europe's rising players, Puncec was no match for the hard-hitting American champion whose smashing service and raking drives completely dominated play. Budge dropped two games in the first set, only one in the second, and then toyed around to let the Yugoslav take four games before running out the match.

Henkel, seeded fourth in the men's division, played as well as he could against Austin, but the Englishman's machine-like accuracy and beautiful passing shots never gave him a chance. Cool and confident, Austin dropped only six games throughout the match, winning the last set at love.

After losing the opening game, Austin took the next five in a row to lead 5-1, running out the set after Henkel scored once more on his own service. The German star was at his best in the second set, hitting hard and serving with tremendous power, but Austin, after trailing at 3-4, took three straight games to win the set.

Remaining completely unperturbed even when pressed, the Englishman seemed to know where every one of Henkel's shots was coming and repeatedly forced the German into errors with uncanny placements that skimmed the sidelines. After failing to break through Austin's defense in the second set, Henkel dropped the match without a struggle.

Budge-Marble Win

Budge supplemented his singles victory in the morning by winning again in the afternoon with Miss Alice Marble in the mixed doubles. Pitted against Jean Borotra, of France, and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, American ex-champion, the titleholders swept through to a convincing 6-1, 6-4 victory.

M. Cejnar, of Czechoslovakia, and C. E. Malfroy, of New Zealand, who yesterday eliminated Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu from the doubles, meanwhile met defeat in a quarterfinal match at the hands of G. P. Hughes and F. H. Wilde, of England. The latter lost the first set but took the next three to win the match.

In the women's doubles, Madam Rene Mathieu, of France, and Miss Adeline, Yorke, of England, entered the semifinals by defeating Miss Anita Lizana, of Chile, and Miss Margaret Scriven, of England, in a closely-contested two-set match.

A summary of today's matches follows:

Men's Singles (Semifinals)

Donald J. Budge (U.S.) defeated Ferenc Puncec (Yugoslavia) 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

H. W. Austin (England) defeated Henner Henkel (Germany) 6-2, 6-4, 6-0.

Men's Doubles (Quarterfinals)

G. P. Hughes and F. H. Wilde (England) defeated M. Cejnar (Czechoslovakia) and C. E. Malfroy (New Zealand) 6-8, 6-2, 6-2, 7-5.

Women's Doubles (Quarterfinals)

Madam Rene Mathieu (France) and Miss Adeline Yorke (England) defeated Miss Anita Lizana (Chile) and Miss Margaret Scriven (England) 7-5, 6-4.

Mixed Doubles (Quarterfinals)

Donald J. Budge and Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) defeated Jean Borotra (France) and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody (U.S.) 6-1, 6-4.

Champion Banqueteer

During November 1936, Harper Sibley, then President of the Chamber of Commerce of United States, made a trip to Buenos Aires at the suggestion of Secretary Hull to listen in at the meetings of the Pan American Conference, and also to investigate the facts underlying the United States-Argentine Sanitary Convention which was before Congress for ratification.

Leaving Washington on Monday morning, November 23rd, Mr. Sibley attended a banquet and conference that evening in Miami. Next day he took the Clipper plane for South America and attended another banquet in Barranquilla, Colombia, that evening. Next banquet was in Guayaquil, Ecuador, Wednesday—Lima, Peru, on Thursday— Friday in Santiago, Chile, and Saturday the 28th in Buenos Aires.

"American Tenor to Sing in Opera at Buenos Aires." Buenas arias, no doubt.

"Ford Reception at White House Left No Traces." Traces being too reminiscent of horse-and-buggy days.

"Low-Price Engine for Airplanes." The low cost of high flying.

California Helens In Singles Final At Wimbledon

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, June 30—For the fourth time, two California Helens, Miss Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, will face each other on the famous Center Court in the finals of the women's division of the Wimbledon Championships.

Six times finalist and once champion, Miss Jacobs, who was not seeded in this year's tourney, reached the final round by winning in brilliant fashion over her opponent Miss Alice Marble, seeded No. 2.

Mrs. Moody, who has won the Wimbledon crown seven times since 1927, and three of those times from Miss Jacobs, defeated Mrs. Svend Sperling, the former Miss Hilde Krahwinkel, in two hard fought sets.

Miss Jacobs Shines

The first unseeded player ever to reach the final round of a Wimbledon Championship, Miss Jacobs astounded the large crowd which assembled to witness the contest by her remarkable steadiness and clever drop-shots which slowed down Miss Marble's fast-driving game.

Miss Marble, top-notch American player who won the Forest Hills crown last year, could not vie with her veteran opponent in steadiness and court craft. She succumbed in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

Mrs. Moody's victory over Mrs. Sperling came only after two torrid sets, the first of which drew out to 22 games before the winning point was scored. It took everything the American star could offer before her Danish opponent succumbed 12-10, 6-4.

The first set, one of the longest ever played in the women's division of the Wimbledon championships, lasted for 75 minutes. With both players resorting to a hard-hitting driving duel, the rallies were extremely long. In one rally, the ball crossed the net 28 times.

In the first set, Mrs. Moody was at set-point when the scores were 8-7, but could not put the winning point over. Mrs. Sperling also had two chances to win the first set, when the score stood at 10-9. She lost both chances and Mrs. Moody ran out the set at 12-10.

Budget-Mako Team Wins

In the men's doubles, Donald Budge and Gene Mako of the United States continued their march to the Championship. Playing against the British pair of G. P. Hughes and F. H. Wilde, Budge and Mako won in three sets, 6-2, 6-4, 12-10.

During the match, when the umpire called one of Hughes' fast services a net-ball, the Americans protested. When the umpire refused to alter his decision, Budge drove the next ball out of the court giving the British players an 8-7 lead.

The individual scores of today's matches were as follows:

Women's Singles (Semi-final Round)

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody (U.S.) defeated Mrs. Svend Sperling (Denmark) 12-10, 6-4.

Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.) defeated Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) 6-4, 6-4.

Mixed Doubles (Quarterfinal Round)

Henner Henkel (Ger.) and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan (U.S.) defeated J. S. Olliff (Eng.) and Mrs. Heinemillen (South Africa) 7-5, 5-7, 6-2.

Russell (Argen.) and Miss Freda James (Eng.) defeated Christian Boussus (Fran.) and Miss Wynne.

R. A. Shayes and Miss J. Saunders (Eng.) defeated Jacques Brugnon (Fran.) and Miss Coyne 1-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Men's Doubles (Quarterfinals)

F. Kukuljevic (Yugo.) and Josip Pallada (Yugo.) defeated Sturgeon and Tuckett, 6-3, 10-8, 6-4.

Consolation Plate (Third Round)

Piercey defeated Yasumine Kuramitsu, 8-2, 5-7, 7-5.

Move For Bi-Annual Davis Cup

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 1—The organizing committee of the international Davis Cup tennis competitions, meeting at London yesterday, rejected a proposal to hold the tourney only every two years instead of annually as at present, the French sporting journal l'Auto reports this morning.

The move, according to l'Auto, was backed by several countries represented on the committee, but France and the other members raised strong opposition. The question was finally put to a vote, resulting in a 14-to-7 victory for continuing the contests on the present annual basis.

Templeton Dislikes Japan's Policy, Won't Come To '40 Games

Domei Tsushin

BUFFALO, N.Y., June 30—Voicing the opinion that Tokyo will not hold the Olympic Games in 1940, "Dink" Templeton, Stanford track coach, was quoted by the Buffalo Times as saying that he will refuse to participate, even in a coaching capacity, in the event the United States participates in the Games, on the ground that he disliked Japan's Oriental policy.

The paper also quoted Charley Hunter, San Francisco Olympic Club coach, as saying that he "did not believe the Games would be held in Tokyo." He was also reported to have added, "I believe that the Japanese are not eager to have them."

DiMaggio Homers To Aid Yankees Top Tigers, 5-1

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 4—The Yankees had one big inning yesterday at the Stadium in their farewell game against the Tigers, but the way the club is going now one inning suffices.

They were held hitless for three rounds by George Gill, but in the fourth came a four-run explosion. When the uprising subsided, Charley (Red) Ruffing had his seventh straight conquest. The count was 5 to 1.

Joe DiMaggio's potent bat hammered the first Yankee run across, and the Californian closed the scoring too. This was an appropriate arrangement for a gathering of 12,425, some 6,131 of whom were ladies' day guests. They cheered DiMaggio to the echo, which was something of a novelty. Joe responded with a single that brought the Yanks even and in the eighth inning exploded his seventh homer of the campaign into the lower leftfield stand.

Homer Off Coffman

This blow was struck against George Coffman, who finished the game after Gill gave way to an unsuccessful pinch-hitter. It was no part of Coffman's plan to be in there at the time. Indeed, Manager Mickey Cochrane spent five minutes of the eighth inning trying ineffectually to signal Coffman to get ready. In the end he had to send the signal via Umpire Ed Rommel and Tommy Henrich. As one wag put it, Cochrane might have used a carrier pigeon.

It required 1 hour 28 minutes for Ruffing to beat the Tigers with seven hits, equaling the time of the club's fastest complete game this season. Three of the enemy hits were concentrated for a run in the fourth inning.

Ruffing bowled over the enemy with only 110 pitches, on a count kept of this odd detail. He had six innings in which only three men faced him; two of the singles he gave in these rounds were nullified by frustrated stealing and a double play. He used nine pitches in the first inning and again in the second. He duplicated this figure in the fifth. And in the sixth it required only six throws to retire the side.

One Pass to Tigers

In only one inning did the Tigers push a man beyond second. That was the fourth, when Billy Rogell and Dixie Walker singled in succession and Rogell rode home after Charley Gehringer's fly to Henrich. After that round only three Tigers got on base, all with singles. Ruffing issued a single pass.

In the fourth Frankie Crosetti touched off the Yankee fireworks with a double, Red Rolfe looped a Texas League single into left and DiMaggio's single scored Crosetti. Bill Dickey's double chased Rolfe in and DiMaggio and Dickey scored on Henrich's savage single to right. That ended the Yankee scoring until DiMaggio's bat spoke so eloquently in the eighth.

33 Yankee Four-Baggers

DiMaggio's round-tripper, in addition to raising the club total to thirty-three, eleven of them struck in the last six games, brought the Californian into a tie for individual honors on the team with Henrich.

The Yanks now boast a winning streak of three straight, six out of the last seven.

Finally Wins 500-Mile Race After 22 Years

N.Y. Times

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30—Floyd Roberts, 38-year-old aviation engineer of Van Nuys, Calif., streaked around the 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway today at record-breaking speed to win the annual 500-mile race by five miles in the twenty-sixth running of the classic.

Roberts, scoring his first major victory in 22 years of racing, most of them on dirt tracks, was never farther back than fourth after the first fifty miles. He went into the lead at 200 miles, lost it temporarily to Jimmy Snyder, the "flying milkman" from Chicago, and then regained it at 400 miles and held it to the finish.

The winner piloted his stub-nosed, red racer, a new four-cylinder creation, across the line with the amazing average speed of 117.200 miles an hour. This eclipsed the previous record of 113.580 established by Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis in capturing the 1937 race. Roberts, driving the entire distance without relief and making only one thirty-second stop for a quick tire change and gasoline at 267 miles, covered the distance in 4:15:58.40.

Hit While on Truck

The race was beclouded by the killing of Everett Spence, 33-year-old probation officer of Terre Haute, Ind. Spence, standing on a truck with a party of ten others, was struck by a wheel which flew off a careening race car piloted by Emil Andres of Chicago. Spence was dead when taken to a hospital.

Andres' car, traveling at terrific speed, hit the southeast lower retaining wall, turned over three times and came to rest in the infield. The right front wheel flew high in the air and traveled 100 feet before it struck Spence. It was the thirty-fourth death in a quarter of a century of racing at this famous course and was the second fatality to a spectator.

Andres, rushed to a hospital, was found to be suffering from a crushed chest, possible brain concussion and a broken nose. At almost the same time as the Andres accident, Ira Hall, veteran driver from Terre Haute, Ind., hit a wall for the second time in the race. His car was not badly damaged and he escaped injury.

$38,000 to the Winner

Roberts, who made his first appearance in an Indianapolis race in 1934, won about $38,000 as the result of his victory. He received $20,000 as first prize and the balance in lap and accessory prizes.

The crowd was under the 150,000 attendance of a year ago.

Finishing five miles back of Roberts came Shaw. Chet Miller of Detroit, who was third, trailed Shaw by two and a half miles. Miller, hanging close upon Roberts in the closing miles of the race, was forced to stop on his next to last lap to take on fuel when he was almost virtually assured of second place.

Ted Horn of Los Angeles finished fourth, nearly thirty miles back of the flying Roberts. The balance of the field was strung out for miles.

Rush for the Exits

Shortly after Roberts flashed across the line in triumph, black clouds, which had played hide and seek with the sun all day, suddenly appeared over the vast racing plant and loosed a downpour of rain. Thousands of spectators, surging for the exits, were drenched and the remaining cars on the track were red-flagged off because of the risk of accidents.

Misfortune in the form of motor trouble forced several favorites out of the competition. Snyder was forced to surrender, after he was in the lead at 350 miles, because of a faulty supercharger. Lou Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., only three-time winner of the race, gave up at 375 miles because of a broken oil pump. The car driven by Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles broke a crankshaft, after 250 miles.

Twenty-one of the original starting field of thirty-three cars came to grief with accidents and motor trouble.

The husky, good-natured Roberts, 196-pound veteran who believes black cats are good omens, kept the last half of a promise he made two months ago on the West Coast.

The last half of that promise to his family and friends was: "I'll win the race this time. My luck always has run in cycle. For three years I didn't do so good at the Speedway, but this year I'll really cash in."

The first half of the promise was: "I'll sit on the pole."

He did just that a week ago Saturday, winning the pole position—the inside spot on the front row—by making the fastest qualifying time on the opening day of the twenty-five mile tests.

Mlle. Lenglen Shows Some Improvement From Anaemia Attack

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, June 30—Apparently slightly stronger as the result of a blood transfusion on Wednesday, Miss Suzanne Lenglen, one of the most colorful and greatest women tennis champions of the past, has shown some improvement in her illness from anaemia, it was reported here today.

Physicians, however, declined to make any statement regarding the probable course her condition will take in the next 48 hours. Miss Lenglen is confined at her home in Paris.

War Admiral Boosts Earnings To $236,050

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 7—Surviving the hardest challenge of his victorious career, War Admiral yesterday took the Queens County Handicap with Snark slowly falling back at the finish of the mile after he had been lapped on the son of Man o' War at the furlong pole. It was at the opening of Aqueduct, the same track where eighteen years ago the cry went up, "Man o' War is beaten."

Man o' War was not beaten that historic day in the Dyer, when John P. Grief made such a terrific run at him, and neither was War Admiral, although Snark drove to his saddle girth. Many in the crowd of 15,000 must have had the thought in those split seconds, however, that at last War Admiral's winning streak, which extends from 1936, was to be snapped.

Charley Kurtsinger may have feared so, too but before entertaining such thoughts further he went to the hardest drive he could muster. Then War Admiral turned on the power that has made him champion and finished a length clear of Snark for his eleventh straight triumph.

War Admiral was applauded when he went to the post, cheered when he won so gallantly and applauded again when the time was posted. It was 1:34 4-5 over a fast track, within four-fifths of a second of the course record of John P. Grier. The difference was that John P. Grier had been under 127 pounds, whereas War Admiral carried 132 after a layoff since March 5.

Two Horses Scratched

With Snark fresh from a sensational mile and a quarter in the Suburban at Belmont Park nine days before, it was a great victory for a horse who certainly appears to be the top thoroughbred in this country and pushed his earnings to $236,050. This includes the $4,425 won in the Queens County, which grossed $6,175 and had four starters. Mythical King and Rex Flag were scratched.

Samuel D. Riddle, owner of the 4-year-old colt, was not present, but Trainer George Conway went into the unsadding enclosure to slap Kurtsinger on the back. The jockey, red-faced after his strenuous efforts, smiled his acknowledgment of that unlooked-for sign of emotion from the silent veteran who has brought War Admiral through seventeen races in three seasons. War Admiral never has been out of the money, having won fourteen times, been second twice and third once.

War Admiral closed at 11 to 20 after an opening at 2 to 5. Snark was well played from 13 to 5 down to 11 to 5. Third, eight lengths back of Snark, Danger Point got the show, while Rudie brought up the rear.

That Snark did not win was through no fault of his or his jockey. War Admiral was too good, for before the smashing challenge leveled by Snark he was carried very wide at the turn into the stretch and forced to run extra distance.

Rudie Delays Start

The start was delayed by Rudie, who refused to go into the stall gate. War Admiral, obstreperous in many of his races, was meek and quiet.

Rudie cut up so badly that he was taken two lengths back and to the outside of the gate and broke from there. War Admiral was away first, but swift was the rush of Rudie that he assumed the lead in the first furlong and opened two lengths.

Kurtsinger had plenty of wraps on War Admiral and permitted Rudie to speed in front, rightly assuming that horse would stop in the stretch. Snark was dropped into the third spot, and Danger Point brought up the rear. They went down the backstretch, past the far turn and half way around the bend in that order. Then Kurtsinger let out a link and War Admiral gained.

Turning into the long stretch War Admiral was steered to the outside of Rudie, who bore out toward the middle of the track. Snark, sent forward along the fence, saved ground.

Kurtsinger took War Admiral back toward the rail on a long slant after he had passed Rudie, and in so doing rode his horse in front of Snark. This was without interference, however, as he was perhaps two lengths to the good.

Yet this compelled Snark to drive up on the outside of War Admiral with his challenge that developed whirlwind power outside the quarter pole and stride by stride approaching the eighth pole, Snark gained on War Admiral.

Stern Challenge Fails

With merely that furlong to go, Kurtsinger found Snark alongside and gaining. It was the most critical moment of War Admiral's career and the fact that he made the half length margin at the eighth pole a full length at the finish is the measure of his ability. Powerful as was Snark's challenge, he was slowly falling back as the line was crossed.

The victory gave the Glen Riddle Farm a double as the filly Hauca had taken the third race under Johnny Gilbert's handling. She, too, was an odds-on favorite.

Asianna, a 50-to-1 shot, captured the Snowflake Purse, to become the longest-priced winner of the New York season. Nick Wall piloted the Everglades Stable's filly to a three-length score over Black Wave, with the favored Happy Code third in the six and a half furlong dash.

Lions Tumble Hankyu, 4 To 0 Scoring Upset

The tail-ending Lions staged a surprise in the only game played of the professional baseball league Friday, at the Koshien Stadium near Osaka, by blanking the Osaka Hankyu squad 3 to 0. In the other number of the doubleheader, the Hankyu ball tossers vanquished the Senators, 4 to 0.

For the first time in several games, the Lions played errorless ball afield. On top of it, Pitcher Kondo had a good day and checked the usually hard hitting Hankyu players to six hits.

Gaining back his control, Shigematsu hurled a two-hitter to aid the Hankyu nine to victory against the Senators.

3,755 Imprisoned In Austria, Nazi Official Informs Press

Domei Tsushin

VIENNA, June 30—Persons imprisoned for political or criminal offenses in Austria since the Anschluss total no more than 3,755, about fifty per cent of whom are Jews, Gauleiter Josef A. Buerckel, supreme leader of the Austrian Nazi Party, announced in an interview with foreign pressmen here today.

Hoping to correct "false information" circulated abroad, Dr. Buerckel declared that, despite the large percentage of Jewish prisoners, a "lawful and righteous" solution will be given to the Jewish problem in Austria. So far, he added, only between 15 and 30 per cent of the Jewish population has indicated a desire to emigrate.

With regard to the fate of ex-Chancellor Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, the Nazi official denied that he had been permitted to leave Vienna and indicated that his detention will continue until it has been established how far he was responsible for death sentences meted out to Nazis by the former Austrian Government.

Dr. Buerckel emphasized that all reports of a lawful wedding between the ex-Chancellor and Countess Vera von Babenhausen, his 34-year old fiancee, were untrue, and he said that the latter has been obliged to leave Dr. Schuschnigg's side because the authorities could not go on tolerating their "illicit relations."

From August 1, concluded Dr. Buerckel, no German will hold an important party position in the Austrian part of the Reich besides himself.

At least one waste metal article will be donated to the State by every household. The waste articles are to be sold by the prefectural authorities and the proceeds will be donated to national defense, military relief and wounded soldiers' relief funds.

Lecture Meeting

The National Spiritual Mobilization Central Federation, which is sponsoring the above events, will also hold jointly with the Tokyo Municipal and Prefectural Offices a lecture meeting in commemoration of the anniversary, speakers including Premier Fumimaro Konoye and other State ministers, from 7 p.m. at the Hibiya Public Hall.

A hundred thousand copies of a pamphlet entitled "On Entering the Second Year of the China Incident," 200,000 posters commemorative of the Lukouchiao incident, other posters for the one-dish meal and waste metal article donation drives will be distributed by the Federation throughout the country.

The people will also be reminded by the Wounded Soldier Protection Board of the sacrifices made by the wounded soldiers. Speeches will be broadcast on national hook-up by prominent officials of the Wounded Soldier Protection Board to draw the attention of the people to wounded heroes. Slogans such as "Yield Seats To Wounded Soldiers" and "Help and Respect Wounded Soldiers" will be posted in buses and train cars.

Posters made by students of Uyeno and Shibaura Art Schools with slogans to the same effect are being distributed to all parts of the country. The authorities plan to ask literary, stage and movie circles to turn out works urging the people not to forget the sacrifices by wounded soldiers. They will also plan to promote the spiritual training of the war wounded themselves.

In Tokyo, wounded soldiers will be invited to a performance of Manzai (comic dialogues), a popular amusement at present, to be held at the Hibiya Public Hall.

At Osaka

Besides participating in the national program of the Lukouchiao Anniversary, Osaka will observe its own "self-admonition" program worked out by the municipal and prefectural authorities.

The items on the program will include refraining from costly meals, drinks and tobacco, wearing of simple and practical dresses, non-attendance at theatrical performances and dance-halls, and taking up physical exercises which will promote health. The use of motor-cars will be minimized. In short, the citizens will be urged to spend the day with the seriousness of soldiers on the front.

important policies of Japan. For this purpose, the Government will carry out what seem to be effective in improving foreign trade for which the Government is now making careful study while various petitions and advice are being presented to the Government by various private organs throughout the country.

"In order to simplify business routine for exchange license the Finance Ministry ordered its officials to attend to the business at the Commerce Ministry and is now studying measures for simplification of import license and exchange license systems.

"As for measures to maintain exports and restrict import, the Government is now considering to adopt the system linking imports of raw materials for manufacture of goods for exports, with exports. This system has already been applied to wool and a similar system will be adopted for cotton trade. Special measures will be taken for removing inconvenience in the foreign exchange from this month.

Commodity Prices

"In view of the gravity of the measure for checking upward tendency of commodity prices which disturbs smooth enforcement of the national budget, sufficient supplies of military materials and favorable exports, the Government is now taking adequate measures including official price system for daily commodities.

Thrift Campaign

Extending the spirit of the Government's commodity mobilization program, the Government is now contemplating to economize on goods consumed by various ministries by compiling the working budget for the current fiscal year. The national budget for the next fiscal year will be compiled on the similar principle.

"In parallel with measures for economizing on goods, the Government is now intending to intensify nationwide thrift and savings campaign in accordance with the recommendation of the National Thrift and Savings Commission. It is a matter for congratulation that national cooperation has been evidenced in the form of satisfactory digestion of national bonds to finance the China Incident.

National Mobilization Law

"It has been decided to invoke some part of the National Mobilization Law in order to readjust labor strength, and there is possibility to invoke some articles governing the economic field, if necessary, so as to place it at war-footing completely. There is little need to adhere too much to the Government's promise made before the Diet, as great change in the situation has been done since the Diet session closed. In short, with the war situation making rapid development, there will be no alternative than to strengthen Government's economic policy so as to meet the situation.

"Under such circumstances, the nation also must make full preparedness to cope with the situation at any cost. On the other hand, the Government will make efforts for stabilization of the nation's living."

Plot To Kill Yezhov Remains Unconfirmed

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, June 29—Foreign press reports that a number of high G. P. U. officers have been arrested in connection with a plot to poison Nikolai I. Yezhov, home commissar, failed to be confirmed here today as no information whatsoever is available regarding the incident. Foreign quarters, however, gave little credence to the reports.

The reports were published in the Paris Midi today, which learned from Riga that a Lithuanian cook, who served Mr Yezhov for 10 years, recently plotted to poison the latter. Cross-examination of the cook, according to the paper, led to the arrest of a number of high G. P. U. officers who were put in the central G. P. U. Prison.

A special tribunal headed by Mr. Yezhov himself, according to the reports, has been appointed to try the plotters.

All Wimbledon Titles Are Won By Americans

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, July 2—Led by the invincible Donald J. Budge and Helen Wills Moody, of California, four American stars today made tennis history by winning every remaining title in the current Wimbledon championships to give the United States the first "grand slam" in tourney annals.

The annual court classic, which got under way here on June 20, ended in an all-American blaze of glory as Budge, who won the men's singles title yesterday, shared in two more championship victories in the men's and mixed doubles.

Both women's titles also went to the United States as Mrs. Moody, seeking her eighth Wimbledon crown, defeated Miss Helen Jacobs in all-California singles final, while Miss Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan wrested the doubles title away from last year's holders, the Franco-British team of Madame Rene Mathieu and Miss Adeline Yorke.

Queen Mother Mary Present

Though overcast skies threatened the matches from the start, turning into occasional flurries of rain before the close, Queen Mother Mary was again in the Royal box to witness the American triumph.

A clean sweep came in sight as Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan, in the first of four schedued finals, upset Madame Mathieu and Miss Yorke to take the women's doubles crown in two straight sets. After that Budge's victories in the men's doubles with Gene Mako and the mixed doubles with Miss Marble eliminated all remaining foreign competition, while the women's singles was an all-American affairs.

Budge's triple win made him the first player to perform such a feat in two successive Wimbledon tourneys, and Mrs. Moody, by defeating Miss Jacobs for the fourth time in a Wimbledon final, staged a successful comeback into international tennis competition and added another to her already record list of title victories.

Though facing a more experienced team which won last year's title, Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan dropped only five games in a match in which they excelled in every branch of the game. Volleying with particular brilliance, the Americans displayed perfect teamwork that never gave the titleholders a chance.

Miss Jacobs, though she lost to her more famous opponent in the women's singles final, put up a stiff fight in the first set when she succeeded in taking four games. Mrs. Moody, however, produced the most brilliant tennis since her comeback to reject the challenge, going to win the second set and match at love.

The best-fought contest of the day came when Budge and Mako took the court to defend the men's doubles title against the powerful German Davis Cup team of Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa. Before they succumbed, the Germans put up a brilliant fight, taking the second set and extending the champions to extra games in the last few minutes of play.

The Americans took the first set at 6-4 but were turned back in the second to the tune of 3-6. Rain caused a 45-minute postponement when Budge and Mako led 4-1 in the third, but the resumption of play saw them drive on to victory, running out the third set at 6-3 and repulsing a last-ditch stand by the Germans in the concluding set to win 8-6.

Budge, Henkel Shine

Budge and Henkel overshadowed their partners in brilliance, but all scintillated at the net where lightning-like rallies took place, drawing frequent applause from the galleries.

Budge and Mako won their first title last year by defeating Henkel and his former Davis Cup partner, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, in five sets.

Henkel was again a challenger as he and Mrs. Fabyan made a fruitless attempt to wrest the mixed doubles title away from Budge and Miss Marble in the last match of the tourney. With rain again interfering, the German-American combination put up a stiff fight but were turned back by the champions' superior play in two straight sets.

A summary of all the final matches follows:

Men's Singles (Played Yesterday)

Donald J. Budge (U.S.) defeated H. W. Austin (England) 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

Men's Doubles

Donald J. Budge and Gene Mako (U.S.) defeated Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa (Germany) 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Women's Singles

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody (U.S.) defeated Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.) 6-4, 6-0.

Women's Doubles

Miss Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah P. Fabyan (U.S.) defeated Madame Rene Mathieu (France) and Miss Adeline Yorke (England) 6-2, 6-3.

Mixed Doubles

Donald J. Budge and Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) defeated Henner Henkel (Germany) and Mrs. Sarah P. Fabyan (U.S.) 6-1, 6-4.

Miss Lenglen Reported In Critical Condition

PARIS, July 2—The condition of Miss Suzanne Lenglen, one of the most colorful women tennis champions of the past, who has been ill with anaemia at her home here, became critical today, it was revealed by attending physicians.

While her nourishment is gradually running short, the famous tennis player is unable to absorb the slightest amount of food. In view of the present evolution of anaemia, physicians refrained from a second blood transfusion.

Lightning Kills 2 Seeing Golf At Kansas City

N.Y. Times

KANSAS CITY, June 3—Lightning killed two spectators and injured six others, one seriously, in a spectacular storm that blotted out the first round of Kansas City's $5,000 golf tournament today.

William D. Boyle, 60, widely known contractor, and E. M. Critchfield, 38, were killed near the ninth green of the Hillcrest Country Club course. Thomas J. Cunningham, a Board of Trade employe, was severely burned.

The tragedy occurred in the afternoon while the nation's big names of golf were driving through a downpour of rain. Play was suspended and the tournament curtailed to fifty-four holes of competition tomorrow and Sunday.

Boyle, Critchfield, Cunningham and Lester Allen were standing with a group of about fifteen watching a threesome of Horton Smith of Chicago, Leonard Dodson of Springfield, Mo., and Leland Gibson of Kansas City, all pros, come up the ninth fairway.

Boy Scout's Aid Fails

There was a flash and a tremendous crash. The victims fell as if shot. Boyle was killed instantly. Heroic work by George Combs, a Boy Scout, failed to revive Critchfield.

Rain had replaced sunshine an hour before. Hundreds of hardy spectators covered themselves as best they could and pushed across the fairways. A few, including Mrs. Boyle, wife of the contractor, sought the clubhouse.

Then from the darkened skies came a crash of thunder and a streak of lightning. Smith was holding an umbrella. It flew from his hands. Dodson danced around on one foot. At first he believed the bolt had struck his other foot.

The vari-colored group of spectators who held the victims swayed as if struck by a high wind. A half dozen clad in slickers sank to the ground. Others slipped and struggled backward.

Radio Engineer Hurt

Cunningham's coat sleeve and collar were ripped apart. Allen was singed and thrown to the ground. Joseph Allee, a radio engineer, was burned on the hand by a "kickback" from the bolt.

The bolt dampened what had started as a gala day in Kansas City golf. A field of 120 players was bidding for part of the $5,000 melon in the 72-hole test.

Thirty-six players had completed their 18-hole rounds when play ceased, and a 74, one over par, registered by Warren Riepen of St. Joseph, Mo., amateur, was the lowest.

Despite the rain, several of the better known players were beating par when called in. Tony Penna, Dayton Ohio, pro, was 3 under par for twelve holes, and Glenn Oatman, Kansas City amateur, was 1 under.

Smith and Dodson both were near perfect figures in their 8-hole stretch, although both started with bogey 4s.

Fred Corcoran, Professional Golfers Association tournament manager, said the same starting times would be in effect tomorrow.

Eagles Creep Up On Tigers, Hankyu In Pro Ball Loop

Behind the effective pitching of Masao Furukawa and Ted Kameda, both from Honolulu, the Eagles won both ends of a doubleheader Sunday afternoon at the Koshien Stadium, near Osaka, to creep up on the Osaka Tigers and Hankyus, first and second place teams in the professional baseball league.

Furukawa contributed to a 5 to 0 victory over the Lions by pitching a six-hit game while Kameda checked the Hankyu batsmen to four hits to aid his team to a 1-0 win.

Pitcher Shigematsu of the Hankyus also chucked a good game, yielding but three hits. Nakane's three bagger scored the Eagles' only run in the first inning.

In the other game of the tripleheader, the Senators routed the Lions, 11 to 3.

All games in Tokyo were washed out by the rain that poured all day.

A.A.U. To Send 40 To Meets Abroad

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 7—A forty-man track team will be sent abroad by the Amateur Athletic Union this Summer for competition in Europe and South Africa, it was announced yesterday by Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris. Another team may tour South America.

The squad will be chosen exclusively on the basis of performances in the National A. A. U. championships at Buffalo on July 2 and 3.

The athletes will compete in England, Sweden, Germanny, Greece, Italy, Hungary, Finland, Norway, Denmark and Switzerland. Other countries may be added.

Just how the various groups will be divided will not be determined until the full itinerary and requirements of the various countries reach A. A. U. headquarters. Although different groups leave the United States as units they may be shifted abroad.

Since the Princeton-Cornell team will be in Europe, some of the collegians may be invited to join the A. A. U. forces after their engagement with Oxford-Cambridge.

The South African team will compete first in Europe. The trip to South America is uncertain. The A. A. U. received a bid for an athletic visit this month but notified the authorities there that this was too early. No word has been received as to whether a later date will be accepted.

Spectators booed the decision favoring Gen's fighting spirit.

U.S. Swimming Champion Here On Short Visit

(Special To The Japan Times)

YOKOHAMA, July 4—Miss Claudia Eckert, new American 100-meter freestyle women's swimming champion, arrived at Yokohama this morning on the President Cleveland on a trip around the world, accompanied by Miss Eileen Scanlan, swimming instructor of Chicago.

After sight-seeing for three days in Tokyo, they will leave for the Kansai.

Miss Eckert, who also is the American women's 3-meter diving champion, attributed the absence of stars in Japan's women swimmers, outside of the breaststroke, and diving to lack of training facilities and competition. With proper training and competition, there is no reason why they should not develop to the level of the Japanese men swimming champions, she said.

According to Miss Eckert, there is considerable doubt in sports circles in America whether the 1940 Olympic Games will be held in Tokyo, and this apprehension should be removed forthwith.

In this connection, Miss Eckert said the American swimming teams will be hard to beat in the 12th Olympic Games.

Miss Eckett is a graduate of Northwestern University and is a member of the Shawnee Country Club of Chicago.

Swedish Youth Committee Votes Against '40 Games

STOCKHOLM, July 2—The Swedish Committee of the World Youth Congress today handed Prince Gustav Adolph, chairman of the Swedish Olympic Committee, a resolution against Sweden's participation in the 1940 Olympic Games if they are held in Tokyo.

Several Swedish Social Democratic youth associations, it was recalled, have already taken similar steps.

2 Marks Broken In Henley Regatta, Another Equalled

Domei Tsushin

HENLEY ON THE THAMES, July 2—Despite a windy, choppy course, American and British boatmen, giving regatta fans the best racing they have seen in more than 20 years, this afternoon broke two records and equalled another in the 1938 Royal Henley Regatta.

In the most thrilling race of the day, Oriel College (Oxford) took the Visitors' Challenge Cup by defeating Third Trinity College (Cambridge) by more than three lengths. The time for the event was 7 minutes and 18 seconds, breaking by 12 seconds the previous record set by Madgalen College (Oxford) in 1908.

Spurt Wins Race

Third Trinity led Oriel at the quarter and was racing on even terms with the winners until the last quarter, when the latter broke loose into a flying finish. At the halftime, both crews were within six seconds of the mark set by Trinity College in 1925, when it raced the fastest 5-8th-mile stretch in the history of the Henley Regatta.

The Diamond Sculls Title went from Great Britain for the fifth consecutive year when Burk, of the United States, easily defeated Habbitts, of Reading, in 8 minutes 2 seconds, a new record.

In the Silver Goblets event, the Leander Club easily defeated the Bigland Brothers, of Royal Chester, in 8 minutes and 8 seconds, equalling the Regatta record established in 1911.

The successful record-breaking events were climaxed by the London Rowing Club's highly-unexpected victory over Trinity College in the Grand Challenge Cup race. Setting the pace from the start the winners took the event in the fast time of 6 minutes 58 seconds. At the finishing line, the London crewers were one and one-third lengths ahead of the Cambridge rowers.

For the second time in five years, the Kent School, of Kent, Connecticut, won the Thames Challenge Cup by defeating the London Rowing Club B Crew by one length. The United States Schoolboy Eight took the event in 7 minutes 3 seconds. The Kent rowers first won the title in 1933.

Americans Win

The London Eight led at the half-mile, but the American pulling their oars feverishly crept ahead of the Britishers and raced to a victory.

The Ladies Challenge Cup was magnificently won by the Radley School when it defeated Pembroke College by 1¼ lengths. The time for the race was 6 minutes 55 seconds.

Earlier in the day, the Leander Club A Crew and the London Rowing Club B Crew, defending the Steward and the Wyfold cups respectively, again emerged victors in the regatta contest.

With the weather slightly cloudy and the river rough in spots, the Leander Club eight, which rowed the course in 7 minutes 33 seconds, easily defeated the crew of Trinity College, Oxford University. Steering erratically, the Oxodians finally hit booms on the river.

The "B-crew" of the London Rowing Club beat the Royal Chester crew by four lengths, the time being 7 minutes 41 seconds.

Meanwhile, in the Thames Cup semi-finals, another crew of the London Rowing Club took the measure of the Eton Excelsior team by breakwaters. The time was 7 minutes 13 seconds. The Kent School team, which rowed the course in 7 minutes 6 seconds, defeated the Yale University crew by two-thirds length.

No. 1 Seeded Players Won All Titles At Wimbledon

Editor's Note: Reprinting of the following article is by way of a tribute to the tennis expert of the London Times, who on June 18 predicted Mrs. Helen Wills Moody to win the women's singles title in this year's Wimbledon championships, which she did last week. It also gives a od description of the draw, in other words the seeding.

The draw for the Championships: a complicated rite to the layman, was achieved in record time at the All-England Club yesterday. Such is Wimbledon's far fame that by evening news of the fate of various national teams had been flashed across the world; there must have been mutterings in Chile when they heard that Senorita Lizana had been left out of the seeding. Yet it is possible to exaggerate the importance of seeding, which, after all, is merely an expression of opinion that generally is more or less correct. Omission can act as a spur, as J. H. Crawford showed by beating R. Menzel in the first round a year ago, though in the present case luck of the draw can never have been more impish than in giving Senorita Lizana an opening match against Mme. Mathieu, by whom she was beaten last year. Nor, for that matter, is Miss H. Jacobs seeded, and she was the champion at Wimbledon two years ago.

Before further comment it may be timely to say something of that mysterious ceremony, the draw itself. It is a complex business that becomes increasingly simple on acquaintance: at first all is a confusion of scrolls of paper, numbered players, numbered discs—purple, orange, white, and red—strange little bags, and a constant murmuring of names. It must be something like the plot of a detective story. That is, you begin with the final—at all events the final of the seeding committee—by drawing for the places, either at the top or bottom, of the players seeded No. 1 and No. 2. Then the other seeded players in order are drawn to fill specified places in the draw, and there follows the more complicated matter of drawing the positions of nominated players from many lands. The guiding principle is that seeded and nominated players of the same nationality shall be separated in the early rounds, which is the fundamental object of seeding. This skeleton structure achieved, all the other entries take their chance, but it will be appreciated that the handling of all five events at one sitting can be an intricate task. H. A. Sabelli has devised a system that has considerably reduced the length of the operation; yesterday it was all over in 2½ hours.

Austin's Chances

There is bound to be criticism of the seeding lists, given below, though in the case of the singles there were far fewer candidates than usual in the absence of a full American team and of a team from Australia. It is significant of the rise of European players that they have been given five of the eight places, with two Yugoslavs, Puncec and Mitic, seeded for the first time at Wimbledon. Neither has a Chinese player (Kho) ever been seeded before. Austin has been given the No. 2 position in preference to Menzel, runner-up to Budge in Paris, and although he has rarely been at his best this season his chances of playing in his second final on the Center Court are very good. The draw generally is full of coincidences, and it will be remarked that Filby, the only English player except Perry who has beaten Austin for many years, meets him in the first round. If the eight seeded players come through they will meet in this order:—Austin v. Mitic; Henkel v. Hecht; Puncec v. Menzel; Kho v. Budge. Hecht's position seems to be the weakest, for he was far below himself during the French championships, and if E. D. Andrews is still the player he was he might well beat him in his first match. One English player who must have been considered is Cliff Budge, of course, should win again quite comfortably, but Kho might worry him, and if, as seems likely, we have a Budge-Austin final there is no saying that Austin might not become the Wimbledon champion. Assuredly his strokes are worthy of that crowning distinction.

In the case of the ladies the field is much more open. Mrs. Moody has been given first place in the seeding, as a tribute, no doubt, to her great record, with another American player, Miss Marble, at the other end of the draw. Mrs. Fabyan will probably be thankful for not being in the same half as Mlle. Jedrzejowska for once, and the fine showing of Miss Stammers in the Wightman Cup came only just in time to secure her a place. Probably Miss Scriven, like Kho in the singles, is included as the hard court champion.

But if there are few men likely to upset the seeding there are several possibilities about the ladies' singles. It is remarkable that neither the champion of America Senorita Lizana, nor the champion of Australia, Miss D. Bundy, has been seeded, moderate though their form has been so far on English courts. Miss Wynne, too, has had the look of a champion about her, though she goes into her first Wimbledon with news from home of a sad bereavement. Whoever becomes the lady champion, and I still think it will be Mrs. Moody, will have the knowledge of having survived probably the most talented field in the history of the event.

Corinthians Vanquish Montreal Eleven, 7-2

The Islington Corinthians soccer team of London, which lost to an All-Kanto team in an exhibition game in April at the Meiji Shrine Stadium one day off steamer, defeated a picked team of Montreal there on June 9 by 7 goals to 2, according to a mail story received by Domei.

The Britishers led the Canadians, 3 goals to 1, at the end of the first half.

Grove And Foxx Assist Red Sox To Top Tigers, 5-3

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, June 4—Those old reliables, Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx, were just about the whole "works" today as the Red Sox trounced the Tigers, 5 to 3.

Grove, although tagged for ten hits, blanked the Tigers for eight innings and fanned nine in chalking up his ninth victory of the year against one defeat.

Foxx, driving in four of Boston's five runs, hit his twelfth and thirteenth homers of the year off Tommy Bridges, and added a single before he wound up. His first four-bagger came in the first with two on. His second came in the third with the bags empty.

Wightman Cup Team Of Britain Beats Australia

N.Y. Times

LONDON, June 6—The British Wightman Cup team deserve all the encouragement they can find in their sweeping success against Australia at Manchester on Saturday. They won by seven victories to one, but it would be an optimist who would take a line from Australia to the powerful team of the United States next week-end. Miss N. Wynne, after all, had not recovered from a cold, and her absence, which counted as two British victories by default, robbed the contest of fire.

None the less the British team were full of fighting strokes on a damp court at the Northern Club, where the low bound of the ball no doubt added to the discomfort of the Australian team. By the end of the day the ball was getting up higher and Australia won their one and only match, the last of all, in which Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss J. Ingram were beaten by Mrs. H. C. Hopman (taking the place of Miss Wynne) and Miss T. Coyne. Miss Coyne's ruthless volleying played its part, but the victory was largely due to the spirit of Mrs. Hopman and an uncertain start by the British pair. Miss Dearman and Miss Ingram, indeed, were nearly beaten at 0—4 in the second set, when they got going properly and, drawing up, made an exciting match of it by winning the set. Neither player usually misses so many volleys, high and low, and Australia, with Mrs. Hopman swiftly finding gaps for her drives, were always winning the third set.

Actually Great Britain, leading by all four matches played on Friday, had won through Miss Wynne's continued absence before Miss K. E. Stammers played Miss Coyne in the first match of the day. Miss Coyne again had great trouble in timing her drives and often was scrambling them back off the floor, but it was encouraging to see Miss Stammers playing so confidently after her retirement from the Middlesex Championships with a strained leg. She played an even, purposeful match, mostly from the back of the court, and her accurate length combined with slice on a heavy surface always had the measure of Miss Coyne in two brief sets.

That was six up, and Miss F. James made it seven against Mrs. Hopman, who may always be relied upon to make a real fight of her matches. When it came to bad bounces or missing the lines by an inch or two with drives that had Miss James out of position, Mrs. Hopman had nearly all the ill-luck that was going, or she might at least have turned a lead of 4—2 into the winning of the second set. Not that Miss James, a better singles player than she is credited with being, looked like losing the match. Her persistence of return bore out the truism that a point is not lost until the ball is dead, and as well as the deceptive direction of her drives (light strokes like Mrs. Hopman's) she had her well-made volleys as a reserve of strength. However queer the bounce, Miss James usually got the ball back; this was a contest of subtle wits, as well as of nimble feet.

The results were:—

Singles—Miss K. E. Stammers (G.B.) beat Miss T. Coyne (Australia) (6-2, 6-2); Miss F. James (G.B.) beat Mrs. H. C. Hopman (Australia) (6-3, 6-4); Miss M. E. Lumb (G.B.) w.o., Miss N. Wynne (Australia) scr.

Doubles—Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss J. Ingram (G.B.) lost to Mrs. Hopman and Miss Coyne (Australia) (2-6, 7-5, 3-6).

N.Y.A.C. Wins Track Honors In U.S. Outdoor Meet

Domei Tsushin

BUFFALO, New York, July 3—Amassing more than twice the number of points scored by its nearest competitor and last year's team champion, the Olympic Club of San Francisco, the New York Athletic Club today walked off with the 1938 Senior A.A.U. outdoor track and field championship in a meet which conspicuously failed to produce sensational individual performances.

Though the New York aggregation scored an outstanding achievement with 57 points against the former champions' 26½, only one new individual record was set in the competitions today when a comparative newcomer, Henry Clieman, of the Achilles Club, Toronto, Canada, took the 3,000-meter walk in 13 min. 33.9 seconds for a new American and A.A.U. record. Two defending champions—Perrin Walker and Allan Tolmich—were dethroned in the 100-meter run and the 110-meter high hurdles, respectively.

The New York Athletic Club yesterday won the Jr. A.A.U. title, making it a clean sweep for the annual two-day track and field classic. The Shore Athletic Club, of Elberoi, New Jersey, was second, while the University of North Carolina placed third. The points were 33, 19, 15 respectively.

Perrin Walker's failure to place within third in his specialty, the 100-meter dash, was one of the highlights of the morning's events. Running against a brisk wind, he placed fourth. First place went to his old-time rival, Ben Johnson, of the New York Curb Exchange. Second and third places went to Wilbur Greer and Mozel Ellerbe, both unattached.

In the other sensational upset, the famed Negro hurdler, Allan Tolmich, of Wayne University, was overtaken in the last few strides by Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, in the finals of the 110-meter high hurdles.

Four champions successfully defended their titles, but the times were comparatively slow. In the 1,500-meter race, Glen Cunningham, the former Kansas miler, now of the New York Curb Exchange, placed first. He was followed by Charles Fenske, of the University of Wisconsin, and Archie San Romani, of Emporia, Kansas. Time for the event was 3 min. 52.5 seconds.

Ray Malot, of the S. F. Olympic Club, retained his 400-meter run title, by taking the event in 47.6 seconds. Irving Folwartshay, Rhode Island State College, last year's titleholder, again took the 16-lb hammer throw, while Louis Lepis, of the New York A. C. delegation, retained his title in the 56-lb hammer throw.

Boosting the team's score, the New York Athletic Club took firsts in both the 440-meter and the 1,600-meter relays. Joseph McCluskey, one of the year's best bets of the N.Y.A.C. aggregation, won the 3,000-meter steeplechase for the second time this year. He took the event in the indoor championships late this spring.

A crowd of 15,000 turned out to witness today's competitions. The events were run in the recently completed Civic Stadium.

Miss Eckert Works Out In Meiji Shrine Pool

No sooner had she arrived in Tokyo Monday afternoon than Miss Claudia Eckert, American women's 100-yard freestyle champion who disembarked from the Dollar liner President Cleveland in the morning at Yokohama, hurried over to the Meiji Shrine pool for her first dip in Japan. Also enjoying the water was Miss Eileen Scanlon, swimming instructor at Chicago, who is accompanying Miss Eckert on a trip around the world.

Miss Eckert, who is the new American women's 3-meter diving champion as well, also gave a beautiful exhibition of her diving. Working out with her was Miss Masako Osawa, Japanese Olympic contestant.

Miss Eckert's record in the 100-meter freestyle is one minute 1.8 seconds.

Harvard Director Resigns Post On Olympic Body

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, June 8—William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard University, announced tonight that he had submitted his resignation as a member of the American Olympic Committee because he felt that the Olympic Games were "getting into the control of those who would use youth for their own purposes," and because he "could not ask the American people to support a team which was going to a country standing for what Japan stands today."

Making the announcement in the course of an address to more than 100 amateur athletes at the Huntington Avenue branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A., Mr. Bingham said he had sent a letter of resignation yesterday to Avery Brundage, chairman of the American committee.

He said that he had served on the 1936 Olympic committee because the date and place of the games, held in Germany, had been determined before Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

"I deplore Hitler and what he stands for," he declared.

"The situation in regard to the choice of Japan for the 1940 games was entirely different," he went on. "The International Olympic Committee knew that Japan had already invaded Manchuria. I had been hoping that the 1940 games would be awarded to Finland, or some other peaceful country.

"How are we to go to the American people in 1940 and ask them to support a team going to a country standing for what Japan represents today? I could not ask the support of the American people for the support of the Japanese games, nor could I seek the support of my university."

In conducting the games on a grand scale "we are dissipating an ideal," he declared, "and are letting the games get into the control, not of athletes, but of those who would use youth for their own purposes."

The Olympic Games "first approached greatness" in the Los Angeles contests of 1932, he said. The first Olympic village for the athletes appeared at those games, he pointed out, declaring that in Berlin two years ago the Los Angeles methods were amplified.

Suzanne Lenglen Succumbs From Anaemia; Was 39

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 4—Miss Suzanne Lenglen, rated the greatest woman tennis player in the history of the game, died here at 6:50 p.m. today after a gallant but unsuccessful fight against a five-day siege of acute anaemia. She was 39 years old.

Reported better yesterday evening though her physicians would not promise her a definite chance to live, the famous court star again suffered a relapse after midnight and rapidly sank toward the end. Before turning professional in 1926, Miss Lenglen won six Wimbledon championships, five of them in a row.

Miss Suzanne Lenglen who was born at Compiegne, in May, 1899, began to play tennis in earnest when she was only 11 years old. At the age of 12 she defeated Miss Dale, Mrs. Colston and Miss Ryan, ranking women players of that day. Then she won the European championships from Mrs. Lambert Chambers, who had held it for seven years.

In 1919, she made her debut at Wimbledon where she created a furor, being mobbed, interviewed, photographed and pestered by autograph-hunters. Until 1926, her career was an unbroken chain of triumphs. She won 30 challenge cups, representing a total of 90 victories. At Wimbledon, she secured the singles and women's doubles championships six times, and the mixed doubles three times.

At St. Cloud and Brussels she six times carried off the women's hard court singles title, while at the Olympic Games at Antwerp, in 1920, she won the singles and mixed doubles crowns.

In 1924, she retired from the Wimbledon Championships through illness, as she did in 1926 after she and her partner had been defeated in the ladies doubles.

Early in August, 1926, she became a professional, signing a contract with C. Pyle for an American tour of four months for which she received $100,000 but of this she had to pay out all except $47,000 in income tax.

Lately, Miss Lenglen had been giving tennis lessons and coaching promising players. She was also a keen skating enthusiast.

Record Smashed In Isle Of Man Annual Air Race

London Times

LONDON, June 6—The Hatfield to the Isle of Man air race on Saturday established two records. For the first time all the starters finished, and the speeds were greater than in any previous year. Though the weather was bad all the airplanes arrived at Ronaldsway airdrome, Isle of Man, the finishing point, within a quarter of an hour—a tribute to the handicapping of Captain W. Dancy and F. Fowarth.

Britain regained supremacy, the winner being S. T. Lowe. Last year's winner, Major Hans Seidemann, of Germany, was seventh.

16 Starters

The machines competing ranged from 32 to 250 h.p. There were 16 starters from an entry of 23.

The German Aero Club was represented by three entries. Latvia and Czechoslovakia were also represented. British pilots and machines took the first four places.

Mr. Lowe, who is a Leicester businessman, flew a Comper Swift (Gipsy Major engine), at an average speed of 159.5 miles an hour. His flying time for the 350 miles course was one hour, 51 minutes, 21 seconds.

The results were:—

1.—S. T. Lowe (Comper Swift), 2hrs., 55min., 28sec.

2.—A. Henshaw, Junior (Percival Mew Gull), 2hr. 56min. 30sec.

3.—Flight Lieutenant H. R. A. Edwards (Avro Avian Four), 2hrs. 57min.

4.—Flying Officer G. R. de Havilland (T.K.2), 2hrs. 58min., 33sec.

Equal 5.—Giles Guthrie (Percival Mew Gull), and F. Pasquay, Germany (Messrs. Schmidt Me.108), 3hrs. 15sec.

7.—Major Hans Seidemann, Germany (Ago Kurier), 3hrs. 19sec.

Henshaw won a special prize for the fastest flying time—1hr. 11min. 41sec. His average speed was 247.5 miles an hour. The others were:—Guthrie, 230.25 m.p.h.; Seidemann, 207.5 m.p.h.; De Havilland, 192.5 m.p.h.; Pasquay, 191.5 m.p.h.; Lowe, 159.5 m.p.h.; Edwards, 117.5 m.p.h.

Mr. Henshaw, who comes from Skegness, finished 62 seconds after Lowe. Flight Lieutenant Edwards finished one minute 59 seconds behind the winner in an open cockpit biplane.

Deluge Of Rain

Flying Officer de Havilland's T.K.2 was entered by Lord Wakefield. He is the eldest son of Captain Geoffrey de Havilland, the aircraft designer.

Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Kalla, the Czechoslovak Air Attache in London, flew in a passenger plane to the Isle of Man to see the finish.

Mr. Lowe said afterwards that he had a strenuous trip as far as St. Bees Head, but in crossing the Irish Sea he had skimmed the water to keep out of the way of the wind and rain. Several other competitors flew low over the sea to avoid the weather. The airmen landed in a deluge of rain.

Flying Officer Clouston, the England-New Zealand record holder, was to have flown with his wife as passenger. Mrs. Clouston was taken ill and underwent an operation in a Farnborough nursing home on Friday night, and he therefore scratched from the race.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

The Terrible Ship

On December 27, 1756 the British privateer "Terrible," which had been launched out of Execution dock, London, engaged in a naval battle with the French privateer "Vengeance." The French ship being superior in armament and size, was victorious in the engagement.

The victors boarded the "Terrible" and found it a scene of desolation and slaughter. Most of the crew, including the captain, were dead.

It was ascertained that the officers of the ship bore the following names:—the Captain's name was Death; the Second Lieutenant's name was Death; the third and fourth Lieutenants were named Spirit and Ghost; the Boatswain was named Butcher, and the Quartermaster's name was Debble.

It is interesting that the name of the Captain of the French ship was Buzzard. He too was killed in the engagement.

Giants Defeat Osaka Tigers To Reduce Lead

The Tokyo Giants are now only one and half games behind the leading Osaka Tigers in the near ending professional baseball league by defeating their rivals, 5 to 0, in the nightcap of a triplebill Tuesday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium here.

While his teammates banged out 11 hits, Pitcher Stalphin, the Giants' ace, checked the usually hard hitting Tigers to six hits.

In the game preceding it, the Tigers routed Nagoya, 9 to 2. The latter nosed out the Dolfins, 7 to 6, in the curtain raiser.

Pitchers Duel

Nishimura, the Tigers' most reliable pitcher during the 1937 season, engaged in a pitchers duel with Stalphin during the first four innings with neither side scoring.

The Giants broke the ice in the scoring column in the last half of the fifth inning when Shortstop Shiraishi lashed out a double to center to drive in Yoshiwara, who had gotten life at first on the third baseman's wild peg.

With Stalphin pitching the airtight ball he was, the Giants virtually salted the game away in the sixth when burly Nakajima poled one into the right field stands for a homer.

Backstop Tanaka of the Tigers singled sharply down the right field foul line to start the lucky seventh but the next three men were retired successively by Stalphin.

The Giants added two more runs in the last half of the seventh, this time off Pitcher Misonou who had replaced Nishimura after Yoshiwara and Hirayama had got on the bags with hits. Shiraishi greeted Misonou with a hit through second to bring in Yoshiwara. And Hirayama tallied on Mizuhara's deep fly to center.

Chiba Hits Triple

Chiba's three bagger to right center and a hit to left center by Ito accounted for the Giants' final run of the game to stop a long winning streak of the Tigers.

The Giants and the up and coming Eagles were scheduled to meet in their fourth game at 4 p.m. today at the Korakuen Stadium.

California Stops Yale Nine, 9 To 3

N.Y. Times

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 7—California's touring nine defeated Yale today, 9—3, to ring up its twelfth victory against two losses during its trip. The visitors from the Pacific Coast took advantage of the wildness of Al Stevens, Yale southpaw, to gain a comfortable margin while Bill Priest held the Elis in check.

The scoring opened in the third inning when two long flies brought in a par of runs for California after Stevens had loaded the bases with two passes and a wild throw to first.

The visitors added two more in the fourth on two singles, a walk and Doonan's wide peg from right field, then chased Stevens to the showers in the seventh when a single followed two passes. Crosby, relieving Stevens after two runs were scored, let another run in on a wild pitch and then was tagged for a single, scoring a fourth runner.

Gascoigne contributed the game's outstanding fielding play, an unassisted twin killing in the seventh, while Perry starred for the Golden Bears with several clever plays at short-stop.

Waseda Fencing Team Gives Exhibition In Show At San Francisco

Waseda University's fencing team made an impressive appearance in the international pageant staged at the Kezar Stadium in San Francisco on America's Independence Day on July 4, according to a Domei report received.

The exhibition by the fencers drew considerable interest.

Members of the team arrived at San Francisco on July 2 and were to leave shortly for Los Angeles.

Illini Gridiron Players Carrying Footballs Home

Christian Science Monitor

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 9—Carrying home footballs to handle during the summer and abjured by Coach Bob Zuppke to report next fall in good condition, University of Illinois football players are dispersing as the school year closes.

Later in the summer Zuppke will send letters to approximately 50 candidates asking them to report Sept. 9 at the least in order to take their physical examinations and obtain their equipment, so as to be ready for the opening of practice Saturday morning, Sept. 10.

The squad, which will take its meals in the ice rink until the university opens, will have the advantage of nine full days for practice, with the exception of time necessary for registration, before instruction begins Sept. 21. The first game is set for Sept. 24, against Don Peden's Ohio University team.

An early preview of the Illini envisages an experienced line from tackle to tackle, weaker ends than last year and prospects of a faster but green backfield. Sixteen lettermen, providing there are no losses, are expected to form the nucleus of the 1938 Illini.

Coach Zuppke plans to stay until July when he will probably take a cottage at Muskegon to play golf and paint for the rest of the summer, keeping in touch with athletic headquarters constantly. He will return early to head the fall football clinic staff of instruction on Aug. 29 and 30.

Indiana, Oct. 8; Northwestern (homecoming), Oct. 22, and Ohio State (Dad's Day), Nov. 12, are the high spots of the home schedule.

Yamagishi Wins Exhibition Tilts At San Francisco

Domei Tsushin

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4—In his first public appearance since arriving here from Japan last Thursday, Jiro Yamagishi, No. 1 Japanese Davis Cup player, today impressively defeated John Murio, San Francisco indoor singles champion, in three straight sets. The scores were 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

Then paired with his singles opponent Yamagishi swept through the doubles against Edward Chandler, former California doubles champion, and Howard Blethen, Stanford University tennis captain, to win a hard-fought five-set match. The Yamagishi-Murio combination after a bad start wound up in a superb finish. The scores were 8-6, 3-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Yamagishi in today's games exhibited excellent form, especially in his drives and back hand plays, allowing sports writers the hope that he will carry the Japanese team through a first round victory over Canada late this month.

Participants in today's matches will be entertained at a "sukiyaki" dinner to be given by the local Japanese Tennis Club.

Stanford To Have Everett S. Dean As Basketball Coach

PALO ALTO, Calif., June 9—Everett S. Dean, 13 years basketball and baseball coach at University of Indiana, virtually was assured the position of head basketball coach at Stanford University today.

The Stanford Board of Athletic Control recommended Dean's appointment last night. It is subject to approval by President Ray Lyman Wilbur and the Board of Trustees, which likely will come within a week. The salary terms or length of contract was not disclosed.

Dean would replace John Bunn, coach of the Indians more than eight years, who will succeed George B. Culver, retired, as dean of men in the fall.

Dean, a graduate of Indiana in 1921, won honors as an all-Big Ten basketball player and also starred in baseball, turning down several major and minor league offers to enter coaching.

He coached at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., before taking a coaching position at Indiana.

Lee Helps Cubs To Stop Giants By 4-2 Decision

By JOHN DREBINGER

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, June 7—Reinforced by the youthful Alex Kampouris, Cincinnati's gift to Colonel Bill Terry, the Giants came to grips with their arch rivals, the Cubs, today with a feeling of security such as they had not known in many weeks.

But unfortunately Alex is only a second baseman, and while acquitting himself nobly in his first day in a New York uniform, there was nothing he nor any of his new-found comrades could do about the home runs which Billy Herman and Joe Marty belted beyond the confines of the playing field off towering Cliff Melton in the seventh inning.

These clouts broke a 1-all deadlock between Melton and Big Bill Lee and gave Cholly Grimm's Chicagoans a dazzling 4-to-2 decision in the first of this crucial four-game series, to the untold delight of a crowd of 16,202.

It was Lee's seventh pitching triumph of the season, his sixth in a row, and widened the Cubs' hold on first place to a game and a half over Colonel Terry's rather crest-fallen troops.

Cubs Homers More Damaging

It was, in truth, a sad day for them, for they too unfurled two homers. Melvin Ott cracked No. 11 in the fourth and in the ninth Jimmy Ripple hit his seventh. But both shots came with the bases empty and so failed to overcome the damage done by the Cub blows that supplied three tallies in the seventh.

Entering the game with a string of five victories, the last three shutouts, and a streak of 32 scoreless innings, Lee blanked the Giants for the first three rounds to run the skein to 35 before Ott tagged him with a smash into the right field bleachers to give Melton a 1-to-0 lead in the fourth.

But the Giants' lanky left-hander saw his slender margin pass out in the fifth when he walked Billy Jurges and Lee outgalloped an infield hit. For a moment it seemed Cliff might avert further trouble, for Stanley Hack forced Jurges at third in attempting to sacrifice, while Hermann fanned. But Carl Reynolds shot a single to left and the score was tied.

Hack Fans in Seventh

Melton fanned Hack in the seventh before Hermann brought the crowd up with a roar as he slammed the ball over the left-field wall. There was another lull as Reynolds fouled out, but Frank Demaree singled to right and Marty followed with his four-master into the right-field bleachers.

These tallies proved more than ample for Lee, who, though giving up seven hits, never was seriously crowded. There was a mild Giant flurry in the fifth when Kampouris, who previously had singled, drew a pass and swept around to third on Jo-Jo Moore's single. But Dick Bartell ended the inning by slapping into a double play and in the sixth Hank Leiber, still not hitting anything safely, closed the inning in similar fashion.

The defeat was Melton's third against the seven victories he chalked up at a time when the National League looked to be made up of the Giants and seven other clubs drafted to provide a background.

British Ruggers Win Match In South Africa

London Times

KIMBERLEY, June 15—The British Rugby XV won the second match of their tour when they beat Griqualand West by two goals, three tries, and a penalty goal (22 points) to three tries (9 points) here today.

The British XV's forwards dominated the scrums, and their cooperation with their back was one of the features of the match. S. Walker (Instonians and Ireland), one of the British front-row forwards, Ivor Williams, of Cardiff, and R. Alexander (North of Ireland and Ireland) scored tries for the visiting side, and Walker scored a penalty goal. The two other British tries were scored by Elvet Jones (Llanelly) and R. H. McKibben (Queen's University and Ireland), two of the three-quarter backs.

The teams were:—

GRIQUALAND WEST.—Dupless, back; Williams, D. van der Merwe, L. Louw, and Engelbrecht, three-quarter backs; Koen and S. Smith half-backs; Moult, Hay, Kelly, Sneyders, J. van der Merwe, Hammond, Billing, and wilson, forwards.

BRITISH XV.—V. G. J. Jenkins (London Welsh and Wales) back; E. Jones (Llanelly), R. H. McKibben (Queen's University, Belfast, and Ireland), R. Levland (Aldershot Services and England) and W. H. Clement (Llanelly and Wales), three-quarter backs; G. E. Cromey (Queen's University, Belfast, and Ireland), and G. J. Morgan (Old Belvedere and Ireland), half-backs; M. E. Morgan (Swansea and Wales), W. H. Travers (Newport and Wales), S. Walker (Instonians and Ireland), P. B. Mayne (Queen's University, Belfast, and Ireland), S. R. Couchman (Old Cranleighans), I. Williams (Cardiff), W. G. Howard (Old Birkonians), and R. Alexander (North of Ireland and Ireland), forwards.

The committee of the British team and the South African Rugby Board have come to the following agreement regarding scrummaging:—

"That referees must insist that the following conditions be strictly complied with in set scrummages: (a) That the ball is thrown in from a distance of 3ft. to 4ft. from the scrummage. (b) That the ball is thrown from below the knees and pitches beyond the first foot of the outside forwards. (c) That the ball is thrown in at a moderate speed."

This implies that the outside players cannot play the ball with either foot until it has been played by the foot of another player. All unions will receive circulars to this effect, and players and referees will be informed that the terms of the interpretation must be strictly complied with.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 5—Competing in weather that would have had the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce shuddering in horror, Southern California won the sixty-second championship of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. in a miserable drizzle at Randalls Island Stadium yesterday, turning the trick with ridiculous ease as it captured its eighth team title.

There was nothing to it. The Trojan track and field men rolled up 47½ points, almost double that of the runner-up, Michigan State, which had 24. California's seven-man team tallied 22½ points for third place, while the East had Pitt's defending champions as it standard bearer, fourth with 20½. Then came Manhattan, 15; Harvard, 12; Princeton, 10½; N. Y. U., 10; Rhode Island State, 9, and Columbia, 8½.

This was not Southern California weather, either. Rain pattered down all afternoon, so steadily that a mere handful of spectators was under a continual shower bath. Yet, in spite of the wretched conditions, performances were extraordinarily fine until right near the end, when the track became heavy and waterlogged.

Records Hardly Expected

No records could have been expected to go overboard—the word is used advisedly—in the steady downpour, but overboard they went in startling fashion. At the end of the day three marks had been broken and two tied.

Here in brief are the high spots of a great meet:

The Records—Howard Brock of Manhattan with a 4:13.9 mile; Joe Moclair of Manhattan with a 9:21.2 two miles; Delos Thurber of Southern California with a high jump of 6 feet 6⅝ inches.

The Tied Records—Harvey Woodstra of Michigan State with 0:14.4 in the 120-yard high hurdles and John Woodruff of Pitt with a 47-second quarter-mile.

The Championship Repeaters—The mighty Woodruff, doubling again in the 440 and 880 for the first such double since Ted Meredith in 1915 and 1916; Irving Folwartshny of Rhode Island State in the hammer throw.

Burke Is Unplaced

The Championship Losers—Ben Johnson of Columbia, fourth in the 100 (he scratched in the 220); Howard Welch of Cornell, sixth in the two miles; Ham Hucker of Cornell, eliminated in a 220-yard low hurdles heat; Ed Burke of Marquette, unplaced in the high jump; Pittsburgh, fourth in the final team standing.

The Prize for Efficiency—Southern California, with men in ten events, placing men in ten events, although it won only two titles and tied for a third.

A Sop to Eastern Pride—The lads from the Atlantic seaboard at least had the consolation of winning ten and a half of the fifteen individual championships, even though the Coast colleges have won fifteen of the last sixteen team crowns for which they competed.

The Double Winners—Woodruff in 440 and 880; Woodstra in both hurdles.

In attempting to assay the meet as a whole, it is hard to choose between Woodruff and Borck for the distinction of being the stand-out performer. Ol' John equaled once again the quarter-mile record that he jointly holds with the great Bill Carr and then tripped off a superb 1:52.5 half-mile.

Oldest Mark Bettered

But in the 880 he was pressed right up to the wire by the angular Jasper ace and beat him by only a stride. Woodruff had defeated Borck a year ago, so there would be nothing unusual in that were it not for the fact that a little more than an hour before Howie had shattered the oldest record in the I. C. 4-A book, the 4:14.4 mile that the immortal John Paul Jones had posted a quarter of a century ago.

That was a world mark when it was made and yet Borck, judging his pace with the caginess of a Cunningham, broke it in the first major mile race of his career. Only once before had he won an eight-furlong test, a 4:23 effort, and the job he did in the rain was all the more extraordinary because of it.

For the first quarter the field was closely bunched and then at 660 yards red-headed Alex Northrop of Harvard, the favorite, came zooming up from thirteenth to the lead. He whipped far out ahead of Pete Bradley of Princeton and Borck, so far out that the Jasper began to get alarmed.

The Manhattanite fled past Bradley and set out in pursuit of the Cantab. He caught him in the backstretch of the last lap, a furlong from the finish, and opened up a huge margin of twenty yards on him. Meanwhile, Don Smith of Maine surged past the faltering Bradley for third position. The fractions were 0:64, 2:08, 3:12 and 4:13.9.

Waters' Trick Misfires

The derby-hatted magician, Coach Pete Waters of Manhattan, tried to pull a similar stunt in the two-mile run. He moved Borck from the 880 to the mile title and he intended to advance Lou Burns from the mile crown to two-mile laurels. Somewhere the trick misfired.

Burns never did get unwound and Moclair of Manhattan, the darkest of dark horses, let go with a sprint in the last 150 yards that left Ken Waite of Michigan State anchored firmly to the cinders. Just to make the surprise all the greater, Manhattan Joe broke Jimmy Reid's nine-year-old record with a 9:21.2 performance, eight-tenths better than the old mark.

Two grand efforts were turned in in the two shortest races on the program—the 100-yard dash and the 120-yard high hurdles. The sprint was so close, with Adrian Talley of Southern California and Wilbur Greer of Michigan State in a near dead heat, that the officials had to announce Talley the winner only if motion pictures substantiated the decision.

This was a test that saw Johnson fade badly toward the end. He led for thirty yards, and then it was Talley out in front, only to have Greer close fiercely to challenge him in a rousing drive. The time of 9.9 seconds was surprisingly slow in view of the patent class of the field.

Shows Superb Form

In the high hurdles Woodstra of Michigan State, taking the lead at the third hurdle, skimmed over the barriers in superb fashion to win by two yards from Jim Humphrey of Southern California in the grand time of 14.4 seconds.

This figure equaled Earl Thomson's intercollegiate record that was made in 1920 and then stood steadfast as a world mark for more than a decade. Woodstra also came back for a double by annexing the low hurdles in 0:23.8.

More of a suprise was the 220 flat race, in which Edgar Mason of Pitt, winner of both sprints as a sophomore two years ago, climaxed his college career by returning to the championship rolls. He led a great group in the poor time of twenty-two seconds, the rain having slowed up the track to something of a walk by this time. Yet even here Talley was so close to Mason at the wire that the result may be changed by the judges after the movies of the finish are viewed.

Hold Fast to Places

The field events saw the leaders hold fast to the places they had earned in Friday's qualifying trials with only two of them. However Brill of N. Y. U. in the shot put and Nick Vukmanic of Penn State in the javelin throw improving on their previous performances. Brill did 51 feet 3¼ inches to show that his victory over Frank Ryan of Columbia was no fluke, and the Nittany Lion did 217 feet 6⅞ inches.

Thurber in the high jump cleared 6 feet 6⅝ inches in the rain to eclipse by a half-inch George Spitz's old figure. The pole vault amounted to an upset when Bud Day and Ken Dills, new Trojan vault twins, were approximately a foot under their best in being tied by Bill Harding of Yale and R. Fuller Patterson of Princeton at 13 feet 6 inches. Anson Fetina of Princeton also surprised by winning the broad jump from Arnold Nutting and Guy Manuel, two 25-footers from California.

Former Doshisha Star Appointed As Lions' Player And Manager

The Tokyo Lions are probably the first team in the professional baseball league to employ the services of a player-manager.

In such a role was Katsuo Takata, former star pitcher of Doshisha University and a heavy hitter as well, appointed Wednesday. He succeeds Tokuro Konishi, who has been assigned to look after the management of routine affairs.

After his graduation from Doshisha, Takata entered employment of the Ujigawa Electric Company and has been umpiring. He is 35 years old.

Budge Subdued Menzel To Win French Tennis

N.Y. Herald Tribune

AUTEUIL, France, June 11—Don Budge completed his tennis "grand slam" today.

The red-headed Californian crushed Roderich Menzel, Czechoslovakia's star, 6-3 6-2, 6-4, to add the French hard-courts championship to his American, British and Australian singles titles and became the first player in history to hold all four at the same time.

If that's not honor enough, Budge can aim at repeating his British and American championships later this summer and thus win all four singles crowns in the same year.

Menzel did not belong on the same court with Budge. After the Czech had cracked his service for a 3—2 lead in the opening set, Budge stormed the net and put over a series of winners that left Menzel helpless.

Menzel came back to give the American a run for his money in the final set. The Czech put over four service aces to win the opening game and held Budge all even through the first eight games.

Budge became the seventh foreigner, but the first American, to win the French title. Tomorrow he and Gene Mako will seek to capture the doubles title in a battle with the French team of Bernard Destremeau and Yvon Petra.

The women's singles championship went to France's veteran No 1 player, Mme. Simone Mathieu, who defeated Mme. Nelly Adamson Landry, of Belgium, 6-0, 6-3.

U.S. Wrestling Team Arrives For Local Meets

(Special To The Japan Times)

YOKOHAMA, July 6—Including Emilio Bruno, American national welterweight champion, and Fortune Masdeo, 1937 bantamweight champion of the Pacific Coast, both of whom were here last year, a six-man American amateur wrestling team arrived on the Chichibu Maru tonight for a series of America-Japan meets.

In charge of the team is L. R. Ardouin with R. Springg as coach and medical adviser. Mr. Ardouin is accompanied by his 15-year-old son, Bill, who will be water-boy.

Champions Arrive

The others arriving were:

D. Hendershot, bantamweight champion of California, member of Los Angeles Whittier Club, 21 years old, 123 pounds.

M. Dalo, national bantamweight champion, University of California student, 123 pounds.

C. Conley, featherweight champion of California in 1937, member of Englewood Club, South California, 25 years old, 134 pounds.

C. Weede, 1930 featherweight champion of California, member of Los Angeles Athletic Club, 29 years old, 134 pounds.

Mr. Ardouin had high respect for the Japanese grapplers and doubled whether his team would be able to come through a winner in the meets, when interviewed.

"The fact that Bruno, who is invincible in American amateur wrestling circles, was beaten last year in Japan attests to the development of the Japanese in this sport," said Mr. Ardouin. "I am sure the Japanese wrestlers have improved even more since last year."

Mr. Ardouin saw a great future for Japanese in the grappling sport in the weights up to 158 pounds. He explained that the Japanese are physically fit for wrestling and it is fortunate that the sport is popular among the students, unlike most countries. In short, he was of the opinion that by 1944, the Japanese wrestlers should be just as good as their swimmers.

Bruno Arrives

Wrestler Bruno looked forward to his coming bouts with Eiichi Kazama of Waseda University, who defeated him last year.

The Americans will make their debut at the Koshien Stadium near Osaka on Saturday night in their first duel with the Japanese team. The second meet will be held at the Hibiya Park amphitheater on June 19, beginning at 6 p.m. Last year, the American team lost the first encounter but rallied to win the second.

Bruno will compete in the national championships scheduled for August 1 at the Hibiya Park amphitheater on August 1.

Cunningham Gets Dr. Of Philosophy Degree At N.Y.U.

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK, June 10—Two educational announcements of the current week are likely to play a considerable part in the development of sports in the near future, while several others just made public will also have much to do with the successes of the summer and fall.

In the first of these, Glenn V. Cunningham, greatest miler of the day, now for some time a resident of New York, completed his studies of his degree of Doctor of Philosophy at New York University, through its School of Education, and is now entitled to place the title before his name. This will leave him free to indulge in a little vacation, which will begin with another attempt to lower his record for the mile, at the Princeton invitation games a week from Saturday. He will face the pick of the contenders for his honors, including Archie San Romani; Joseph Mostert of Belgium; Gene Venzke and Peter Bradley, the Princeton star.

Another recipient of a degree from New York University was still another famous runner, William R. Bonthron, one of the famous milers who has represented Princeton in previous years. He received the degree of Master of Business Administration, for his work in the School of Business. He also will be available for athletic honors this summer, though no official announcements of his participation have been made.

Practice Makes Perfect

Grove Rolling Along Toward 20-Game Year

By EDWIN RUMILL
Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, June 10—Lefty Grove's campaign to reach the 20-victory level for the first time since 1935, is making rapid progress. With less than two months of the American League season gone, the "Old Master" has won 10 games and dropped only one. Although he missed the charmed pitching circle in 1936 and '37, he is due to return, unless, of course, the heat of mid-summer forces a reversal of his streak.

Lefty has been pouring fast balls plateward for a long time; 14 years to be exact. In 538 major games he has fanned 2,036 batters. And, although his "high, hard one" has lost its zip, the lanky lefthander is still master of rival sluggers. Some of those victories come harder now, but he is confident that 1938 will mark his return to the 20-game class.

Lone Setback

Grove this season has appeared in 12 Red Sox games, starting every one of them. He has pitched nine complete games. Only once—in Yankee Stadium May 30—has Lefty been driven to cover by enemy bats. It was his lone setback. In 99 1-3 innings he has seen the opposition make an even 100 base hits, but in the well-known "clutches" the former Philadelphia star had what was necessary to get those batters out.

The Grove record shows triumphs over the Tigers three times, the Browns twice, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Washington, and Cleveland. Over that stretch he has fanned 61 batters. In the Red Sox struggle to win a berth in the first division of the American League, the once-temperamental Lefty is Manager Joe Cronin's ace. Where younger men have failed, the "Old Master" has come through. He now needs only 33 victories to reach the coveted 300 mark, and should make it in 1939.

Those who knew Grove five years ago, and further back when he was Connie Mack's ace, hardly recognize him now. Not that Lefty has altered his complexion, or changed his style. He uses the same rocking-chair motion today he did 14 years ago, when he first joined the Athletics out of Baltimore. But the disposition of the mountaineer has mellowed with the passing seasons. Where Grove was once moody and hard to get along with, he now is the "country gentleman," always ready and willing to chat on the national pastime with the press or public.

No Relief Work

Grove will probably never be a relief pitcher with any degree of consistence. Perhaps he will never again fill that role. Baseball has been good to him financially, and when the trusty arm no longer can tame hitters over the nine-inning route, Mose will undoubtedly step out of the big league picture. And he has the right idea. Too many brilliant careers have been dimmed by a weak ending. Remember Babe Ruth?

Pirates Move Up To Second Place In National Loop

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 4—The sensational Pittsburgh Pirates, winning five out of six games this week, moved into second place in the National League pushing the up-and-coming Cincinnati Reds back into fourth place. The Giants, however, are holding a comfortable lead being seven games ahead of the Pirates. The Chicago Cubs, splitting even on their games this week, are in third place.

In the American league, the hard-hitting New York Yankees are threatening to oust the Cleveland Indians from first place. This week the Yanks won all six games, while the Indians won four and lost two. The St. Louis Browns in the American league and the Philadelphia Phillies in the National loop continue to hold cellar positions.

Foxx Hits Homer

N.Y. Times

BOSTON, June 7.—The league-leading Indians gained their first victory of the season at Fenway Park today by blasting out two runs in a rally in the ninth to down the Red Sox, 7—5. Lyn Lary's third single of the day, Bad News Hale's double and Earl Averill's triple were the decisive blows. The victory increased Cleveland's lead in the pennant race to four games, as the Yankees lost to the White Sox.

Right-hander Johnny Allen opened for the Indians and he tossed away a 2-0 lead in the first, when, with two out, he passed Ben Chapman and then fed Jimmy Foxx a ball that the slugging first baseman converted into his fifteenth homer of the year.

When Allen retired the side by fanning Manager Joe Cronin, the latter complained to Umpire-in-Chief McGowan that the pitcher's tattered right sleeve gave him an unfair advantage over the batter. The official agreed, and Allen was sent to the clubhouse to change his shirt.

After a five-minute delay, Manager Ossie Vitt went in to investigate Allen's tardiness. When the latter refused to obey McGowan's order Vitt fined him $20 and replaced him with Bill Zuber, who gave the Sox three more runs before he was relieved by Johnny Humphries with one out in the third.

Humpries held the home team hitless during the remaining six and two-thirds innings and Gene Desautels, who drew a pass in the seventh, was the only one to reach first base against him.

It was the second time this season that Allen has had difficulties with Umpire McGowan. He was fined $25 by League President Will Harridge for disputing McGoran's ball and strike decisions in St. Louis recently.

Ken Keltner, flashy Cleveland rookie third baseman, has signed a new 1938 contract calling for a substantial salary increase, C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president, said today. It was believed Keltner would receive about $8,500 this season, his first in the majors after coming up from Milwaukee. He also signed for 1939.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Column Of Hospitality

In the Middle Ages when inns were rare, the Italian towns had so-called Columns of Hospitality standing in the plazas of their towns. The stranger arriving in the city would lead his horse to the column and attach it at random to one of the rings. Each ring belonged to a different prominent family in the town. And the traveler was allowed to stay as a guest of that particular family all during the time he was in town. The family connection with a particular ring on the column changed every week.

New Leaders Lead Batting Race In The Major Leagues

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK, June 11—New leaders hit the top of each major league this week, in a general shake-up of the batting standings.

Earl Averill, Cleveland's clouting outfielder, collected 11 hits during the seven-day span, and, with a .371 average, passed his teammate, Hal Trosky, to take over the No. 1 slot in the American League.

Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati's catcher, traveled at an even .400 clip for the week, boosted his mark six points to .359, and sky-rocketed from fourth place to the top of the National League, while Cookie Lavagetto of Brooklyn, last week's leader, dropped to second with .356.

Biggest gains of the week among leaders were by Jimmy Foxx, the Boston Red Sox's crack first-sacker, and Blimp Phelps, Brooklyn's pudgy catcher. Jimmy Double-X banged out 13 hits in 27 chances, lifting his average 23 points to .359 for third place in the American League. Phelps hit safely nine times in 19 chances, which boosted his mark 31 points to .337, for sixth place in the senior circuit.

Tunney, By Proxy, Would Explode Theory Gorilla Can Lick Boxer

By JOHN LARDNER

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 5—A challenge will be thrown in the teeth of gorillas all over the world, and one in particular, when James Joseph Tunney, sports editor of The Connecticut Nutmeg, publishes his column this week.

The embattled journalist, former heavyweight champion of the world, has lost patience with the theory, nourished for years by the late Arthur Brisbane, that a gorilla could lick any number of heavyweight fighters—from two to six—simultaneously.

"The gorilla is overated," says Mr. Tunney, "and I aim to prove it, though not in person."

The ape on whom Mr. Tunney has his eye is none other than Gargantua, star performer of this year's Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Mr. Tunney holds Gargantua in low repute, and when the circus comes to Bridgeport, in Mr. Tunney's neighborhood, this month he will challenge the happy-go-lucky Simian on behalf of "any one of a dozen third-rate heavyweights I know."

Could Do It in a Round

"If I were in shape," says Mr. Tunney, "I would undertake to belt him out myself, in one round. But I'm not in shape—not in fighting shape, I mean—so I'll lick him by proxy."

Lined up with Gargantua in the enemy camp is Humphrey Doulens of Bridgeport, contributor to The Connecticut Nutmeg and recognized amateur circus authority.

"Mr. Doulens," says Mr. Tunney, "offers to arrange an opportunity for me to test out my theory: that a well-conditioned fighter could lick any gorilla. I would like to take up the offer for any one of a dozen third-rate heavyweights I know, but I would have to insist on immunity from any legal action by Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey for damages through injury to Gargantua the Great.

"Moreover, I would insist on a referee other than Humphrey Doulens or any other Bridgeport buddy of Gargantua, to prevent the possibility of a long count."

Calling on several witnesses among them Frank Buck and the late Martin Johnson, Mr. Tunney belittles the gorilla's fighting reputation.

Don't Reason With Gorilla

"The gorilla," he points out, "has a skull which closely resembles the skull of a man. However, encased in that skull is a small brain, smaller than that of a dog. A gorilla has no reasoning process worthy of the name.

"Suppose he was fighting Joe Louis. What would he make of that amazing fast left jab? It would bewilder him.

"A gorilla doesn't know pain, they say. Suppose Louis or Schmeling or any of the first ten ranking heavyweights were to land a punch, let's say on Gargantua's Adam's apple. Then Gargantua would know pain. Were you ever hit on the Adam's apple? It isn't fun. Jack Dempsey hit me there when we boxed in Philadelphia, and I felt as though I were swallowing pineapples for a whole week after.

"Gargantua is a big boy, but a Dempsey left hook landing on his stomach might figuratively tear the poor animal in two and leave him paralyzed on the canvas. He didn't spend years of doing bending and mat exercists.

Buck's Advice Sought

"A man has twenty-four ribs. Your encyclopedia will tell you that a gorilla has but thirteen. Between the ribs, below the breastbone, there are nerve centers. If they are shocked, the shock travels to the spine, temporarily causing paralysis. The ribs and well-developed muscles between the ribs protect these nerve centers. Twenty-four ribs are much more protection than thirteen."

It was back in 1932, at the Democratic convention in Chicago, that the scholarly ape-indicter clashed with Mr. Brisbane on the point of simian fortitude. Mr. Tunney was sitting next to Mr. Brisbane in the press rows. Frank Buck came along, and Mr. Tunney said to him:

"Frank, do you think that a well-trained prize-fighter could knock out a gorilla?"

"Absolutely," said Mr. Buck. "He wouldn't have any trouble."

Mr. Brisbane shuffled his feet restlessly during this dialogue, and when Buck moved away he shook a reproving finger at Tunney.

"Don't let that fellow fool you, Tunney," he urged. "A gorilla could lick three men."

But Mr. Tunney remained true to his principles, and today he defies the gorilla—as well as the orang-utan, chimpanzee, marmoset, gibbon and baboon—to do its worst. There is nothing personal in the attitude. Apes are sterling fellows, says Mr. Tunney. But they can't fight a lick.

Pending acceptance of terms by the circus, the anti-gorilla faction is dickering for the services of Tony Galento to represent the human race. Tony regards Gargantua as a bum, and the feeling is said to be mutual.

U.S. Ski Team To Compete In South America

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK, June 16—The United States ski team will sail from New York tomorrow, June 17 (5 p.m.), on the Grace Liner Santa Barbara, to compete in the second annual Pan-American ski championships, to be held at Farellones del Cerro Colorado, near Santiago, Chile, July 30 and 31, against teams from Chile and the Argentine. It will also enter the national championships, to be held at Lagunillas in the Maipo Valley, Chile, in August.

At Farellones the team will defend the Newell Bent, Jr., Memorial Trophy won by last year's U. S. team. This trophy was presented by members of the Harvard College Class of 1933 in memory of their classmate, who passed on in an attempt to scale Mount Aconcagua on the Argentine-Chilean border.

The members of the team are: Adams Carter of Newtonville, Mass., captain of the Harvard University ski team in 1935 and 1936, and member of the United States ski team at the Federation International de Ski Races in Switzerland in 1937, and member of the Anglo-American expedition that climbed for the first time Nanda Devi in the Himalayas, the highest mountain ever climbed by man, in the summer of 1937. Carter will act as captain of the team in Chile. He graduates from the Harvard Business School this June.

Edgar A. Bering, Jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, Western ski-jumping champion of 1935, Utah downhill and slalom champion 1936 and 1937, Utah Class C jumping champion 1932-1936, Utah Class B jumping champion 1936-1937, Utah langlauf champion 1937, Utah four-event combined ski champion 1937. He is a student at the Harvard Medical School.

Charles B. McLane, of Manchester, N. H., member of the Dartmouth College ski team.

Robert H. Shaw of Groton, Mass., member of the Harvard ski team in 1935 and 1936.

Alfred E. Moorhouse, a graduate of Harvard '32 and publisher of the "Ski Bulletin," official organ of the National Ski Association, will serve as team manager.

Norman R. Read of New York City, a member of the last three U. S. teams in the F. I. S. races held in Europe, will join the team in Chile, which he will reach via Pan American-Grace Airways.

Additional men may be added to the team after time trials to be held in Chile prior to the Pan-American races. It is expected that a number of other first-rank U. S. skiers will be in South America this season, including Robert Blatt, Jr., of San Francisco, 16-year-old ski champion of the Yosemite, and Martin Arrouge of Reno, Nev., one of his State's best competitive skiers, who will sail from Los Angeles on June 19.

In Chile the United States team will be the guests of the Chilean Government and of the Ski Club Chile. Arrangements for the visit of the team to Chile were made by Roland Palmedo of New York, chairman of the Committee of International Competition of the National Ski Association and president of the Amateur Ski Club of New York; and by Eugene du Bois, manager of the U. S. ski team in Chile in 1937 and president of the Skidreiverein of New York.

According to Augustin R. Edwards, president of the Ski Club Chile, the Chilean National ski championships, beginning this year, will consist of free-for-all downhill and slalom races open to professionals or amateurs of all nations. Many improvements have been made at Farellones since the visit of the American ski team a year ago.

In 1937 the United States ski team, composed of Warren Chivers, Howard Chivers, Edgar H. Hunter, Jr., Donald Fraser, John Litchfield and Edward P. Wells won the Pan-American downhill and slalom championships and were awarded the Newall Bent, Jr., Trophy.

National League Stars Vanquish American, 4 To 1

Domei Tsushin

CINCINNATI, July 6—Avenging the defeat handed them last year by the American Leaguers, the National League All Stars today subdued the heavy guns of the rival major loop all star nine, winning by 4 to 1 in their sixth annual charity baseball contest here.

A lone run in the ninth inning by the Americans saved them from being completely shut out by the superb teamwork of the National leaguers. Scoring one run in the opening canto, another in the fourth inning and two more in the seventh, the Nationals held tightly to their commanding 4-run lead until the end.

Last year, the Americans whipped the Nationals 8 to 3. Today's victory is the second for the winners, having first won in 1936. The Americans have four games to their credit.

Contributing greatly to the National Leaguers' victory was the brilliant pitching of Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds, who recently hurled two no-hit no-run games, Big Bill Lee of the Chicago Cubs and Brown of the Pirates, according to a special dispatch to the Yomiuri Shimbun.

Especially effective was Meer, who pitching on his home diamond, allowed but one hit and walked none in the first three innings that he was assigned. Cronin of the Red Sox nicked him for the hit in the third.

Starting for the American Leaguers was Lefty Gomez, ace pitcher of the Yankees, who was touched for two hits and a run in the first inning. Johnny Allen of the Cleveland Indians was the American Leaguers' pitcher in the fourth and he was bombarded for three runs. Mel Ott, star batsman of the Giants, lashed out a three bagger and hard hitting Lombardi of the Reds came through with a timely hit. Lefty Grove finished the game and checked the Nationals from further scoring.

A single by Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees and a double by Cronin accounted for the Yankees' only run, this in the ninth off Brown.

Meer Stars

N.Y. Herald Tribune

CINCINNATI, June 10—Young Johnny Vander Meer, the Cincinnati Reds' 23-year-old southpaw from Jersey, pitched himself into baseball's hall of fame today with a no-hit, no-run performance against the Boston Bees.

In his first full year in the major leagues, the six-foot, 190-pounder hurled as fine a ball game as any veteran could have done.

Only twenty-eight men faced him, and only three reached first base, all on walks. None got past first as he came in with a 3-to-0 victory, the first National League no-hit, nine-inning job since Daffy Dean turned the trick back in 1934, and the first southpaw to accomplish the stunt in the majors since Bob Burke did it for Washington's Senators in 1931.

After it was all over, teammates and fans carried the fast-balling strikeout artist off the field on their shoulders. Vander Meer, himself, was surprised when it was all over.

"Gee, I had no idea of pitching a no-hitter," he told his mates. "My arm felt better as I went along, and I bore down harder, particularly in the late innings."

Young Johnny, who got his seasoning with Durham, N. C., in the Piedmont League in 1936 and Syracuse, of the International League, last year, showed the benefits of Bill McKechnie's teaching this Spring. Erratic and wild last year, after striking out 295 for Durham the previous season, he was sent to Syracuse, where he won only five and lost eleven.

The Reds recalled him this Spring, and McKechnie, the club's new manager, worked on Johnny's control during most of the Spring training campaign. He altered his delivery slightly, with the result that Vander Meer has shown marked improvement.

Today he was in control of the situation from start to finish, as he outpitched Danny MacFayden to win his sixth game against two defeats. He retired the first nine men to face him, lost momentary control of his fast ball in the fourth and fifth, and then breezed in by finishing off the final thirteen Boston batters in a row. He fanned four.

The Reds fielded perfectly behind him, but his mainstay was Ernie (Schnozzola) Lombardi, who put the game on ice with a homer with one mate aboard in the sixth inning. In addition, after Johnny walked Gene Moore to open the fourth, Lombardi took Johnny Cooney's foul and fired the ball to first to double Moore off the bag.

Again in the fifth, when Tony Cuccinello, first up, was passed, Lombardi tossed to first again and caught Tony napping. With two out in the same frame, Vander Meer issued his third walk to Gilly English, but he "died on first as Johnny Riddle grounded weakly to the box.

Vander Meer's no-hitter is the only one in the major league books so far this season. Bill Dietrich, bespectacled Chicago White Sox right-hander, hurled the last one on June 1 of last year against the St. Louis Browns, in the American League. Fred Frankhouse, the Brooklyn Dodgers' "hard-luck guy, had one against the Reds last August 27, but the game was called because of rain after seven and two-thirds innings and the feat was not official.

Princeton Beats Yale Nine, 2-1

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW HAVEN, June 11—Princeton staged a ninth-inning rally with two men away and defeated Yale, 2 to 1, today. The Tigers' pitching brilliants, Bob Riddle and Dawson (Lefty) Farber, were the men of the hour as their singles drove in the tying and winning runs.

Yale had taken a fourth-inning lead of 1 to 0 when Eddie Collins tallied after Captain Dick Marcus's long fly to center. The run looked big as the two left-handers engaged in a nip-and-tuck battle, with Jubitz yielding six hits and Farber nine.

Yale Rallies Checked

The Elis had the bases loaded in the fifth and sixth innings, but a perfect peg home by Harper to complete a double play ended the fifth-inning threat, while Loveday hit into a force-out at the plate and Jubitz struck out to end the sixth-inning chance of the Blue.

Opening the final inning, Jubitz hit Fallon. Hill sacrificed, Jubitz to Cook. Novak also rolled to Jubitz, but he elected to throw out the hitter instead of playing for Fallon going to third. Then Riddle was sent in to hit for Purnell and responded with a teasing infield fly which Loveday dropped while off balance on the dead run, Fallon scoring with the tying run. Successive singles by Foote and Farber enabled Knowles, running for Riddle, to tally the deciding run.

Wargo gave Yale another chance in the final half inning by singling to center with two away, but Alter was called out on strikes for the last out.

The victory clinched third place in the Eastern Intercollegiate League for Princeton. It was Princeton's fifth straight league victory.

Tokyo Giants Lose Crucial Twinbill In Pro Ball Loop

The Tokyo Giants lost both ends of a critical doubleheader Thursday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium here to fall two and a half games behind the league leading Osaka Tigers. The Nagoya Dolfins sprung a surprise in the curtain raiser by staging a three-run rally in the ninth to win 8 to 5. The Eagles triumphed 2 to 1 in the nightcap.

2 Homers By Eagles

Two homers in the third inning off Pitcher Stalphin contributed to the Eagles' victory. Third Baseman Urushibara, first up, swung at a rather high pitch and smashed the ball into the left field stands. Then after two outs, Right Fielder Nakane connected solidly with a slow curve ball for a four-base clout into the right field bleachers.

The Giants registered their only run in the fifth. Center Fielder Go started with a hit to center. Shiraishi flied out to left but Mizuhara singled over second. Burly Right Fielder Nakajima, at the moment leading the league in batting, doubled to left to bring in Go. Pitcher Masao Furukawa was given the high sign and the Eagles' ace, Ted Kameda, who has been going great guns of late, replaced him on the mound. What did he not do but strike out Chiba and Ito to retire the side. Thereafter the Giants never had a chance. Kameda sent four men back to the bench during the rest of the game.

The Dolfins staged a three-run rally in the first half of the ninth to break up a 5-all tie from the fourth frame. Gomi was hit by a pitched ball and was advanced to second by Eguchi's sacrifice. Furutani, batting for Sei, walked. Kobayashi singled to center and Gomi romped all the way home from second. Okano Texas Leaguered to right to clog the bases and Aoshiba was sent in to pitch for Mayekawa. Tatekasa walked to force in Furutani. Kobayashi scored the third on Okada's fly to center.

America Beats Britain, 5-2 To Retain Wightman Cup

By THOMAS J. HAMILTON

N.Y. Times

WIMBLEDON, England, June 11.—Repeating its victory over Great Britain of last year by only a slightly less impressive margin, the United States won the Wightman Cup today for the twelfth time and the eighth year in succession, five matches to two.

As a fitting commemoration of her return to competition, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody scored the deciding point by defeating Miss Kay Stammers, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3, in a match which had the near-capacity crowd cheering all the way. Mrs. Moody's victory after a most thrilling final set followed an almost equally exciting triumph by Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan over Miss Margo Lumb, 5—7, 6—2, 6—3.

The United States was leading by 2—1 following yesterday's play and Mrs. Moody's triumph, which may be repeated in the Wimbledon championships, decided custody of the trophy. Miss Alice Marble, who in similar circumstances at Forest Hills last August registered a most impressive victory over Miss Stammers, was badly off form today but finally gave the United States an unneeded decision over Miss Margaret Scriven, 6—3, 3—6, 6—0.

Mrs. Wightman Receives Cup

Because of the uncertain weather play was then interrupted while the Duchess of Kent presented the cup to Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman. Mrs. Moody and Miss Dorothy May Bundy then took the court against Miss Evelyn Dearman and Miss Joan Ingram and lost, 6—2, 7—5.

To beat Miss Stammers, who yesterday defeated Miss Marble for Britain's only other victory of the series, Mrs. Moody had to call on all her steadiness, variety of strokes and the fighting heart which carried her to victory in former years. She lacked the magnificent power which for a time almost blew Miss Scriven off the court yesterday, but she made up for it with a stonewall defense which repelled Miss Stammers just when the left-handed English girl seemed on the point of breaking through.

Mrs. Moody swept through the first set so decisively that the gallery was astounded when Miss Stammers broke her service in the second set and took a lead of 4—2 with splendid sliced drives to Mrs. Moody's backhand and skillful drop shots which often left Mrs. Moody unguarded at the net. The next two games went with service and Miss Stammers took the deciding game on a series of biting deliveries followed up by two perfect drop shots.

Wears Socks Over Shoes

Refreshed by the interval, which was prolonged because of showers, Mrs. Moody took the first three games of the third set and was leading at 5—2 before Miss Stammers, with socks drawn over her shoes to combat the slippery court, made her last gallant effort. At this point the plucky English girl held her own service, but Mrs. Moody then made it 40-15. Miss Stammers then not only fought off two match points but got the advantage several times with a series of most convincing smashes.

Mrs. Moody, however, fought on and after she had gained the advantage on a net-cord ball, took the game and match with a splendid get of a net-cord shot which she returned over Miss Stammers' head to drop right on the baseline.

Mrs. Fabyan's victory over Miss Lumb, whom she beat easily in the Wightman Cup series last year, was scarcely less hard fought. Miss Lumb, who has taken over from squash (in which she is champion of England) her whole collection of troublesome cross-court drives, went all out and captured the first set. Mrs. Fabyan's greater experience and sounder strokes gave her the second set easily after she had taken the first four games in succession.

Mrs. Fabyan went ahead in the third even more decisively and although Miss Lumb fought off match point in the eighth and broken Mrs. Fabyan's service she dropped her own for the match.

The greatest surprise of the day was Miss Marble's difficulty in disposing of Miss Scriven. The latter, who follows what seems to be a rule that English singles players must be left-handed, had been given no chance against perhaps the greatest woman stylist of today—all the more so because Miss Marble had full liberty to take risks in view of the fact that the cup was already safe.

Miss Scriven is no stylist but she courageously hit out with her zipping forehand and not only held her own in the first half of the first set but her second handily. It seemed that Miss Marble could do nothing right: at least not for more than a couple of rallies at a time.

In the third set, however, Miss Marble returned to something like her last year's form—her backhand cross-court, which went like a rifle shot to the opposite corner, was a joy to behold—and she took the third set at love only less impressively than Mrs. Moody had won the first set from Miss Scriven yesterday.

As for the doubles there is a danger Miss Bundy is going to carve out a career for herself as a losing doubles player in Wightman Cup matches that do not affect the result. The contest today wasn't so light-hearted as hers and Mrs. John Van Ryn's play last year against Miss Stammers and Miss Freda James.

Despite the fact that the Americans won the toss and Mrs. Moody had the first service, the Misses Dearman and Ingram took the first five games in succession and rounded off the set with the loss of only two games.

In the second set Miss Bundy's volleying, which had been quite erratic, improved and with Miss Moody doing her efficient best they made a contest out of it before succumbing at 7—5.

Shimomura To Discuss Raw Materials Edicts In Games' Connection

An important meeting in connection with the 12th Olympic Games will be held by Dr. Hiroshi Shimomura, president of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation, with other officials concerned next Monday afternoon.

The reason for the discussions is the Government's intense control regulations covering the use of raw materials, especially of iron, which will of course affect the construction of facilities for the Games.

A movement for the abandonment of the Games is growing because of the Sino-Japanese hostilities.

Guldahl Retains His Crown In U.S. Open Golf

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON

N.Y. Times

DENVER, June 11—Ralph Guldahl retained the national open golf championship in the tournament which ended here today.

Five years ago, almost to a day, when he was an awkward lad of 21, unknown in the world of golf, Guldahl missed a four-foot putt that would have tied Johnny Goodman of Omaha, present United States amateur champion, for the national open crown.

That blow almost ended his golfing career for, discouraged and beset by financial worries, Guldahl almost gave the game up, drifting around trying this and that until the urge of golf finally drew him back.

Lucky it did, too, for today this self-same Guldahl, who was born in Texas of Norwegian parentage, accomplished a feat of which only three others golfers in history can boast.

Joins a Select Trio

When he won the forty-second national open championship at the Cherry Hills Club, one of the most exacting courses the tournament has ever been held on, today Guldahl became the fourth man in history to repeat in the event, the other three being Willie Anderson back in golf's pioneer days; Johnny McDermott and the nonpareil Bobby Jones.

The tall, droop-shouldered ace who won the crown last year at Oakland Hills in Michigan, breaking the all-time record for the championship, annexed the crown again today as he finished the 72-hole grind with a 69 that made his total 284, only three strokes above the mark he made on a much easier course last year.

His was a courageous effort for as he began his final round over the course he was third in the race, four full shots behind black-haired 29-year-old Dick Metz of Lake Forest, who was leading the pack with a 54-hole total of 211, and one stroke in back of blond Jimmy Hines, Lakeville Club pro, who won the metropolitan open title only a few weeks ago.

Fails on Final Round

But when he finished, with a brilliant and courageous 69 that made his total for the four rounds 284, the pro from the Braidburn Club in New Jersey was six strokes in front of Metz, who went to pieces on the final round when he took a 79, his highest count. Metz's total was 290.

Seldom has there been such a scene as there was on the final green of the Cherry Hills Club today as Guldahl finished his round.

In the lead from the sixth hole on, Guldahl was never over par once until he came to the finishing hole, one of the stiffest par 4s in the country, with a lake on the left side of the fairway.

There must have been fully 8,000 persons watching as he hit his last drive—a tee shot straight on the line and smack in the middle of the fairway.

There was quite a wait as the pair ahead finished putting out. Then, after Victor Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., North and South champion who was his playing partner, hit his second shot onto the green with an iron, Guldahl took out a spoon and hit his ball into the crowd over the green.

He chipped back, leaving himself ten feet short of the hole, then went two feet past and finally tapped his ball in for another brilliant triumph.

Biggest Margin Since 1921

It was the biggest margin that any one had won by since 1921, when Long Jim Barnes won by nine strokes at the Columbia Club, Washington. The case was a little different, however, for Barnes led from the start while Guldahl had to come from behind in order to gain the honors.

Tony Penna, golf salesman from Dayton, Ohio, who recently annexed the Kansas City open, and Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicopee, Mass., who has twice been within striking distance of the title, finished in a tie for third with totals of 292. Penna's last round was a 68, while Cooper had a 71.

Latest Sensation In Majors

John Vander Meer, young lefthander of the Cincinnati Reds, who has placed his name among the greatest by pitching two no-hit, no-run games in succession. He blanked the Bostoon Bees and Brooklyn recently. The Dutchman has now delivered 18⅓ consecutive hitless innings, for National League record.

Cunningham Cops 3-4 Mile Race In N.Y. Games

By JESSE ABRAMSON

NEW YORK, June 12—Glenn Cunningham never disappoints his public. Committed to two assignments on opposite sides of the Hudson River yesterday afternoon, the master miler made connections only by riding a private ambulance, and won both his races.

After running a 1:54.5 half mile in a handicap race at the New Jersey A. A. U. championships in East Orange, N. J., Cunningham donned his sweat woolens and a couple of blankets and rushed to Travers Island for the 140th games of the New York Athletic Club.

There in the bright sunshine that followed the morning's heavy rains, Cunnighnam took a jockeying duel from a fast field of challengers, winning the three-quarter-mile special in 3 minutes 6.9 seconds—six and a tenth seconds back of his own American record, established in the Winged Foot meet last year.

Borck Leads Chase

Pocketed early in the race and jostled intermittently by his rivals, the Curb Exchange A. A. marvel blasted into the clear with a lap and a half to go on the fifth-mile clay track. Howie Borck, Manhattan's new intercollegiate mile champion, gave stern chase. He closed to Cunningham's heels on the backstretch and then moved even with Cunningham around the last turn. His fighting spirit and stretch drive made it a tight battle for a spell and evoked the cheers of a crowd of 4,000 that rimmed the picturesque old oval. But Cunningham put on the pressure down the last straightaway and Borck had to yield to superior power. Cunningham won by three yards, with Gene Venzke, New York A. C., veteran, two yards back of the Jasper captain. The two others in the field were left behind. Ernie Federoff, of the Millrose A. A., beat Princeton's Peter Bradley for fourth place in the five-man field.

Track Heavy, Cuppy

The pace and the heavy, cuppy condition of the track precluded any possibility of a new record. Borck rushed to the front at the start. At 100 yards Venzke and Cunningham passed him. Bradley came up to take second, shunting Cunningham to third and boxing him. This order prevailed until two laps to go. Cunningham pushed out of the pocket and went in pursuit of Venzke. He railed him on the backstretch and led the rest of the way as Borck rushed up to make a race of it. Cunningham was clocked at the quarter in 63.7 seconds, at the half in 2:07.7, running the last 440 in 59.2.

Vander Meer's Pitching Ranks With Greatest

By EDWIN RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, June 16—Baseball hails Mathewson, Johnson, Alexander, Young, and other Hall of Fame immortals in pitching. They are great names—milestones along the major league trail. The better performers of the present era are weighed and judged in comparison with these men. But today, in the modest little town of Midland Park, N. J., there sits a young man of 23 years who has passed them all.

John Vander Meer, a wild rookie a year ago who seemed destined to base-on-balls himself right out of the professional game, is the remarkable possessor of two straight no-hit, no-run games. Never before in big league baseball has a pitcher succeeded twice in one season. The apple-cheeked Dutchman came through with his record-breaking hurling in the amazingly short space of four days.

Blanked Bees

On Saturday he blanked the Boston Bees without a hit or run. Last night, as 38,748 fans packed Ebbets Field for the initial nocturnal contest of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Vander Meer held his opponents again at arm's length. He issued eight passes, but offset this occasional wildness with seven strikeouts. In the ninth inning he loaded the bases with only one out, and then pitched his way out of the hole.

The Cincinnati left-hander has now delivered 18 1/3 consecutive hitless innings facing the New York Giants, Bees and Dodgers. This breaks the National League record of 17 1/3 established by Dazzy Vance in 1925. Cy Young holds the major league figure at 23 innings, and accomplished it in strings of two, six, nine and six innings. Eight pitchers have turned in two no-hitters over their entire careers, but Vander Meer's feat of crashing through twice in one year is a mark that may stand forever.

The young pitcher's sudden rise to fame is even more astounding when the recent background of his career is recalled. Turned down by Brooklyn, he was signed by the Cincinnati club in 1936 after striking out 295 batters in the Southern Association with the Nashville club. But Chuck Dressen, then manager at Redland, found he had taken a strong youngster with plenty on the ball and very little control.

Almost Hopeless

In the Spring training campaigns of '36 and '37, John Vander Meer was used sparingly. When he did go to the mound, rival batters were busy dodging wild pitches. Farmed to Syracuse last season, he won only five games and lost 11. In 105 innings he walked 80 men, hit two and threw 10 wild pitches. Without exaggeration it can be said that the young man was almost a hopeless case.

The arrival of Bill McKechnie in Cincinnati to manage the Reds, marked the beginning of Vander Meer's sensational work. Under the former Boston pilot the pitcher has won seven and lost only two. McKechnie, and his first assistant, Hank Gowdy, must have a secret formula for hurlers. They coached Turner and Fette into 20-game winners last season in Boston, and now have added Vander Meer to their brilliant student list.

Hube Leonard of the Red Sox was the last pitcher to chalk up two no-hitters. He did it in 1916 and '18. The following others accomplished the feat before Leonard; Tom Hughes of the Yankees and Boston Nationals; Adrian Joss of Cleveland; Frank Smith of the Chicago Americans and Cleveland Nationals; Christy Mathewson with the Giants; T. Breitenstein of the St. Louis American Association club and Cincinnati; William Terry; Brooklyn; and Jim Galvin, Buffalo Nationals. Cy Young and L. J. Corcoran each had three.

Tigers, Giants Win Games At Korakuen Park

Both the Osaka Tigers and Tokyo Giants won their games in the doubleheader staged Friday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium here for the former to maintain their two and a half games lead over the latter in the professional league race which ends soon.

The Giants were given a battle royal by the lowly Nagoya nine, their lone winning run coming in the last half of the sixth inning. Pitcher Nishizawa checked the Giants to five hits. Kawakami too chucked a good game for the Giants, yielding but four hits, and won his own game by driving in the winning run in the sixth with a Texas Leaguer to right. Scoring was Nagasawa, who had walked and stolen second.

With a three-run rally in the second inning, the Tigers led the Dolfins all the way to win by a 7 to 3 count. The Tigers had a good day at bat and knocked the offerings of Pitchers Tsunekawa and Shioda for 11 hits, one of them a homer by Third Baseman Igauye into the left field bleachers for the first Tigers' run in the second inning.

Tsuri, a newcomer for the Tigers, hurled a good game for five innings but he was sent to the showers in the sixth when Kobayashi doubled to center after one out and First Baseman Furutani followed with a four-base clout into the right field stands. Misonou took over the pitching burdens and held the Dolfins from further scoring during the rest of the game.

Nagoya Dolfins Force Eagles To 11-Inning Battle

The Nagoya Dolfins gave the fighting Eagles an awful scare in the curtain raiser of a tripleheader Sunday afternoon at the Kamiigusa diamond in Tokyo's suburbs for the Eagles, who had been enjoying a 7 to 1 lead at the end of the second inning were forced to go two extra frames to win by 8 to 7.

The Osaka Tigers maintained their three-game lead over the second place Giants by vanquishing the cellar holding Lions by a 4 to 2 score.

Hankyu Beats Senators

By a 2 to 1 count, the Osaka Hankyu squad nosed out the Senators to be on even footing with the Eagles for third place.

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Tigers	29	24	5	0	.829
Giants	31	22	9	0	.710
Eagles	31	18	12	1	.600
Hankyu	30	18	12	0	.600
Senators	31	12	18	1	.400
Dolfins	32	11	21	0	.344
Nagoya	31	9	22	0	.290
Lions	31	8	23	0	.258

The Dolfins started in great style by registering a run in the first half of the opening frame but the Eagles did it better in their portion by three runs, chiefly on account of two baggers by Terauchi, Harris and Urushibara off Pitcher Tsunekawa. The latter was sent to the showers at the outset of the second when he walked the first two men, Yamada and Tsuji. But Suzuki, who relieved him, fared no better. Urushibara's hit over short scored two men and Harris' Texas Leaguer to right brought in another.

Moundsman Furukawa weakened for the Eagles in the eighth. Sei nicked him for a hit after one out. Kobayashi and Furutani followed suit to clog the bases and Matsumoto banged one over third to score Sei and Kobayashi. The Eagles ace, Ted Kameda, was sent to the mound. Takekasa greeted him with a hit through first and second to score Furutani and put Matsumoto on third. Suzuki walked and Matsumoto tallied on Sasaki's fly to center.

Dolfins Tie Score

To the surprise of the fans, the Dolfins deadlocked the count at 7-all in the first half of the ninth. Eguchi started with a hit through second and went to second on a wild pitch. Sei struck out but Kobayashi walked and the runners pulled off a double steal. Furutani's bingle to center brought in the two men to tie the score. Matsumoto fanned and Takekasa grounded out to second to retire the side.

With two Eagles on the bags, Nakayama relieved Suzuki on the mound for the Eagles in the last half of the ninth but he walked Nakagawa to fill the bags with only one man away. Nakane attempted to make home on Sugitaya's fly to right but was nailed at the bag to prevent any scoring.

Hits by Nakane and Nakagawa scored the winning run for the Eagles in the last half of the eleventh inning.

The Tigers led all the way to beat the Lions. Hankyu came from behind to down the Senators.

U.S. Racer Scores In English Classic

N.Y. Times

ASCOT, England, June 16—William Woodwards Flares avenged the defeat of his famous brother, Omaha, when he came from behind on Ascot's "Golden Mile" to win the rich Gold Cup today.

An outsider at 100 to 7, beaten until the final strides, the 5-year-old son of Gallant Fox-Flambino stuck his nose in front of Lord Glanely's Buckleigh at the finish just as Lord Stanley's Quashed had done to Omaha two years ago in the classic two and a half-mile journey.

Thus before the King and Queen and the most brilliant racing crowd of the season, America carried off the second of Britain's three great international races. Battleship, also American-owned and bred, won the Grand National. The Derby was taken by the French-bred Bois Roussel.

Victrix II Is Fourth

The victory of the Woodward colt was the high spot of the day's racing that saw the United States win the Waterford Stakes of a mile with J. E. Wiener's 3-year-old Unbreakable, and finish third in the six furlongs of the Cork and Orrery Stakes with Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Ambrose Light. J. E. Widener's French-bred Victrix II was fourth in the Gold Cup.

Flares won from Buckleigh and W. Barrett's Senor, who was only another neck back, after a mad zigzag down the homestretch. Coming fast at the finish, he sent a great gasp up from the crowd when suddenly he left the rail and veered sharply to the left.

The American horse was disqualified for doing just the same thing last year in the Hardwicke Stakes, but Bobby Jones kept him clear of the other horses today and no protest was lodged. In earning the major share of the purse of $37,500, Flares was clocked in 4 minutes 19 2-5 seconds, two and two-fifths seconds slower than the record set by Golden Myth in 1922.

Sets Fast Early Pace

A. Gordon Smith's Toboggan II was entered in the race to make the pace for the favorite, Fearless Fox, and during the early running it looked as if he was going to steal the show. The big gray set a fast pace to the final turn and then quit.

Turning for home Senor took command with Flares last in the field of ten. Without waiting for an opening on the rail, Jones took the American horse to the outside and set sail for the leaders.

He drew level with Senor and Buckleigh an eighth of a mile from the judges. Flares swerved but Jones managed to straighten him out before any damage was done.

Victrix II was only a half-length back of the three leaders. Then came the French-bred Dadji. Fearless Fox finished seventh and broke down when returned to the paddock.

When Flares returned to the winner's circle, it was noticed his jockey was wearing Woodward's second colors. The New York banker had selected Boswell as the most likely winner of his pair but Boswell was nowhere at the finish as Flares became the first American-bred horse to win the classic since Foxhall scored fifty-six years ago.

Budge, Mako Lead Czechs By 3-1 Score

Domei Tsushin

PRAGUE, July 10—Donald J. Budge, world's top-ranking court star, today won another easy victory to give the United States a 3-1 lead over Czechoslovakia in the exhibition tennis series inaugurated here on Friday between the two countries' Davis Cup teams.

He overwhelmed Ladislas Hecht, powerful Czech star, in three straight sets, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Budge, Mako Win

Domei Tsushin

PRAGUE, July 9—Sweeping through three straight sets with the greatest of ease, the world's No. 1 doubles team, Donald J. Budge and Gene Mako, of California, today gave the United States a two to one victory over Czechoslovakia in the second day of an exhibition tennis series between the two nations' Davis Cup teams.

Facing the California combination, which recently copped the Wimbledon doubles title, were J. Malacek, fourth-ranking Davis Cup star, and Benda. The scores were 6-1, 6-2, 6-3. Yesterday the score was one apiece. Although Budge took the edge over M. Cejnar in four sets, Mako lost to Ladislas Hecht by three straight sets.

Nornay Saddler Best Of 1,380 Dogs In Annual Show

N.Y. Times

KATONAH, N. Y., June 11—Through deluges, rushing winds and brilliant sunshine, Champion Nornay Saddler survived to be proclaimed best of 1,380 dogs in the annual exhibition of the North Westchester Kennel Club on the estate of Mrs. T. Whitney Blake today.

It was the twenty-second best-in-show victory for the famous smooth foxterrier, owned by the Wissaboo Kennels of James M. Austin of Westburd, L. I. The final was judged by Alfred Maclay of Milbrook, N. Y.

Discouraging, indeed, were the early conditions for the third largest dog show in America. Rain poured down in torrents, obscuring one of the most charming views in Westchester County. George Foler had erected the largest tent ever spread for a show in this country, and for hours it was a question whether it would hold up.

In the evening, however, when the best in show award was being made there was a brilliant burst of sunshine to reward the bedraggled spectators, exhibitors and their charges.

Winner on His Toes

Nornay Saddler's record is well known. The son of Traveling Fox and Wirksop Surprise was on his toes and the comment of the judge in the final competition was that he was beautifully balanced as he was put through his paces.

In his group, Saddler had plenty of competition under the judgment of Robert Sedgwick of New York. His nearest rival was the Scottish terrier, the noted bitch, Champion Marlu Merrie Lass, owned by the Marlu Farm Kennels of Long Branch, N. J.

This is always one of the best groups and it must have been a close decision that gave third to the brilliant Kerry blue terrier, Champion Bumble Bee of Delwin, owned by John Mulcahy of the Bronx and handled by Tom Gately.

There was the largest turnout of the toys since Morris and Essex and in a number of breeds there was excellent competition. As might have been expected, top honors and the trophy offered by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bertrand went to the noted Pekingese, Champion Kai Lo of Dah Lyn, a Westminster winner owned by John B. Royce of Brookline, Mass.

Toy Poodle Second

Second was the toy poodle Bonne Bouche of Misty Isles, shown by Mrs. Austin, with third going to the pug, Monk of Eastburne, shown by Kenneth Lutz of Newark, N. J.

Louis Batjer of New Brunswick, N. J., had before him a number of the greatest hounds in the East and it was no easy task to sort them. There was a critical audience about the big ring when he gave the breed winners their final parade.

It was really a question of personal preference, as is so often the case in group and best in show awards. Therefore there could be no dissent from the gallery, since the onlookers had no opportunity to go over the individuals.

Louis J. Murr's Vigow of Romanoff, who went up, was in superb coat. This borzoi always seems to be in top condition when shown by Mr. Murr.

Second went to the beagle Bunny Run Gaylad, shown by Charles F. Hodgen and the Saddle Rock Kennels of Tuckanhoe, N. Y. This grand little beagle was showing all the time. Third was the bloodhound Mhorister of Giralda, owned by Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge of Madison, N. J.

Great Dane Scores

The working dog judging was inordinately drawn out, with the first group award to the noted Great Dane Ch. Czardas v. Eppeleinsprung-Noris, from the kennels of R. P. Stevens of Glenville, Conn. Second went to the old English sheepdog Ch. Merriedip Master Pastorale, owned by Mrs. Lewis Roesler of Great Barrington, Mass.

Dr. Samuel Milbank lost no time making his decisions after he had seen his gun dog winners in action. His best was the cocker spaniel My Own Brucie, owned and shown by Herman E. Mellenthin of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

It was interesting that the English springer spaniel Ch. Rufton Roberto of Greenfair, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Quirk of Greenwich, Conn., placed second. He is a field trial dog of distinction. Dr. Milbank apparently was not certain of third place, which eventually he gave to the Labrador retriever Ch. The Wench, owned by William F. C. Ewing of Bedford Village, N. Y.

Nocturnal Game Proves Popular With N.Y. Fans

By ROSCOE McGOWEN

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 16—Last night they turned on the greatest existing battery of baseball lights at Ebbets Field for the inaugural night major league game in the metropolitan area. A record throng for the season there, 40,000, of whom 38,478 paid, came to see the fanfare and show that preceded the contest between the Reds and the Dodgers.

The game, before it was played, was partly incidental; the novelty of night baseball was the major attraction.

But Johnny Vander Meer, tall, handsome 22-year-old Cincinnati southpaw pitcher, stole the entire show by hurling his second successive no-hit, no-run game, both coming within five days, and making baseball history that probably never will be duplicated. His previous no-hitter was pitched in daylight at Cincinnati last Saturday against the Bees, where the Reds won, 3—0. Last night the score was 6—0.

The records reveal only seven pitchers credited with two no-hitters in their careers and none who achieved the feat in one season.

More drama was crowded into the final inning than a baseball crowd has felt in many a moon. Until that frame only one Dodger had got as far as second base, Lavagetto reaching there when Johnny issued passes to Cookie and Dolf Camilli in the seventh.

But Vandy pitched out of that easily enough and the vast crowd was pulling for him to come through to the end.

Johnny mowed down Woody English, batting for Luke Hamlin, Kiki Cuyler and Johnny Hudson in the eighth, fanning the first and third men, and when Vito Tamulis, fourth Brooklyn hurler, treated the Reds likewise in the ninth, Vandy came out for the crucial inning.

He started easily, taking Buddy Hassett's bounder and tagging him out. Then his terrific speed got out of control and, while the fans sat forward tense and almost silent, walked Babe Phelps, Lavagetto and Camilli to fill the bases.

Makes a Careful Throw

All nerves were taut as Vandy pitched to Ernie Koy. With the count one and one, Ernie sent a bounder to Lew Riggs, who was so careful in making the throw to Ernie Lombardie that a double play wasn't possible.

Leo Durocher, so many times a hitter in the pinches, was the last hurdler for Vander Meer, and the crowd groaned as he swung viciously to line a foul high into the right-field stands. But a moment later Leo swung again, the ball arched lazily toward short center field and Harry Craft camped under it for the put-out that brought unique distinction to the young hurler.

It brought, also, a horde of admiring fans onto the field, with Vandy's team-mates ahead of them to hug and slap Johnny on the back and then to protect him from the mob as they struggled toward the Red dugout.

The crowd couldn't get Johnny, but a few moments later they got his father and mother, who had accompanied a group of 500 citizens from Vandy's home town of Midland Park, N. J. The elder Vander Meers were completely surrounded and it required near fifteen minutes before they could escape.

The feat ran the youngster's remarkable pitching record to eighteen and one-third hitless and scoreless innings and a string of twenty-six scoreless frames. This includes a game against the Giants, his nohitter against the Bees and last night's game.

Butcher Knocked Out

Vander Meer struck out seven Dodgers, getting pinch hitters twice, and of the eight passes he issued two came in the seventh and three in the tense ninth.

Added to his speed was a sharp-breaking curve that seldom failed to break over the plate and at which the Dodger batsmen swung as vainly as at his fireball.

On the offense, well-nigh forgotten as the spectacle of Vander Meer's no-hitter unfolded, the Reds made victory certain as early as the third frame, when they scored four times and drove Max Butcher away.

Frank McCormick hit a home run into the left-field stands with Wally Berger and Ival Goodman aboard, while a pass to Lombardi and singles by Craft and Riggs added the fourth run.

Craft's third straight single scored Goodman in the seventh, the latter's blow off Tot Pressenell's right kneecap knocking the knuckleballer out and causing him to be carried off on a stretcher. Berger tripled off Luke Hamlin in the eighth to score Vander Meer with the last run.

Germans Accept Bid To Compete In Fall

Shigenori Togo, Japanese Ambassador to Germany, has informed the Foreign Office that Germany has happily accepted the invitation extended by the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation to participate in the German-Italy-Japan athletic meet to be held here in the Fall.

It is understood that the German Amateur Athletic Association wanted to send its delegation to Japan via Canada, however, the Federation asked the Foreign Office to wire the Germans in requesting to use Japanese vessels both ways.

Furthermore, it was learned that the Germans wish to stay in Japan as short as possible since many of them are job-holders.

Meanwhile, Japan is awaiting a reply from Italy in order to map out the final plan for the tri-nation athletic meet.

Brundage Denies Knowledge Of Questionnaires

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, July 9—Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, told newspaper reporters here today that he knew nothing about the questionnaires reportedly sent out by the A.O.C. regarding the 1940 Tokyo Olympiad.

Charley Hunter, head coach of the San Francisco Olympic Club, declared at San Francisco yesterday that such questionnaires had been dispatched by the A.O.C. to athletes who may win places on the American team asking them if they would go to Japan if the present hostilities in China do not terminate.

It was meanwhile reported from New York that Daniel Ferris, general secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, also disclaimed any knowledge of such a step by the A.O.C.

Deep interest in the forthcoming Olympic Games in Japan in 1940 is evidenced throughout the middle western United States, according to Leonard J. Lucas, member of the San Francisco N.Y.K. office, who arrived here recently in conducting the American and Canadian High School Teachers' Tour Party to Japan.

The traveler, who identifies himself as of Japan or interested in things Japanese, is immediately questioned concerning the Tokyo Olympic Games, Mr. Lucas said Saturday.

"Strangely enough the growing apathy to the China Incident, is in contradiction to an increasing interest in the Olympics. Travel agents of course are sponsoring interest and discussion as well as the sports pages," stated the N.Y.K. man, who concluded an extensive trip in the middle western states prior to his departure for the Orient.

Mr. Lucas added, "So whether you meet a traveler in a Pullman or call on travel agencies in Omaha, Denver, St. Louis, Oklahoma City you will be questioned on the Games prospects and there is every evidence of heavy tourist traffic."

It is understood that the San Francisco N.Y.K. office is having a hard time in explaining that the Olympic booking is not yet started.

Helium

At sea level atmospheric pressure and at a temperature of 59 degrees Fahrenheit, the weights of air and helium are about .07651 and .01056 lbs., respectively, per cubic foot. The lifting force is the difference between these weights, but when helium is loaded for shipping it undergoes a pressure of from 2000 to 2500 pounds per square foot, which increases the weight of helium in a fully charged car to 2155 pounds. Therefore, assuming that the empty car weighed 200,000 pounds, this same car fully loaded with helium would weight 202,155 pounds. The same principles will apply to any gas which is lighter than air.

Guldahl, With 279, First To Take Western Open 3d Straight Time

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, June 16—The greatest finisher in golf painted his masterpiece today as big Ralph Guldahl left a birdie and eagle trail along the final eighteen holes for a six-under-par 65, a four-round total of 279 and his third straight Western open championship.

Par, tradition and the spirit of his rivals were shattered as the big Madison, N. J., pro methodically tore to shreds a course which for the first two rounds of the tournament had successfully withstood every assault. It is the first time in the thirty-eight-year history of the Western open a player won three years in a row.

Guldahl's 279, five strokes under par, is a fitting companion-piece to his 284 registered in winning his second consecutve national open crown last week, when he stroked out a 69 on his final round. And as he chipped in an 18-foot shot from off the green for a birdie on the final hole and his 65, the big gallery roared acclaim for a champions' champion.

Shakes Off His Rivals

Pressed from the start by a choice assortment of sharpshooters, Guldahl would shake free from one threat, only to have another storm into sight. He held a slim one-stroke lead at the end of the first eighteen Tuesday by virtue of his par 71.

Lanky Ray Mangrum of Dayton, Ohio, crept unobstrusively into a tie at the thirty-sixth-hole mark by registering his second straight 72 as Guldahl slipped to a 73.

Mangrum could not stand the pace today, but Sam Snead, the sturdy West Virginian, blasted out a 69 to replace Mangrum in a tie with the champion at the three-quarter mark with 214. Guldahl had a 70 for the third stretch. Then came the pay-off round, with Snead wilting under the pressure as Guldahl shot his bewildering scores.

Ralph was out in 34, one under par. On the home nine birdies and eagles fairly dripped from his clubs. On the twelfth he sank a twelve-foot putt for a birdie. On the thirteenth he sank a forty-footer for an eagle, on the fourteenth he dropped a four-footer for a birdie, and he climaxed the performance with his chip on the last hole. On only the eighth hole did he go over perfect figures.

Snead Fails On Greens

The pressure manifested itself in Snead's putter. Time after time he muffed chances for birdies by blowing long or short putts. On the fourteenth his temper flared as a putt stopped a foot from the cup. Disgusted, he walked up to the ball, swung at it with one hand. He missed. He finished with a 72 and a 286 total, in second place.

Par, a bear for two days, was a lamb as the field turned in a choice assortment of sizzling rounds, but they came too late. Even Jimmy Thomson's ace this afternoon was just another fine shot, although it helped him to a 292 and a tie for fourth with Leonard Dodson of Springfield, Mo. Tony Penna of Dayton, Ohio, came in with a 67 for the last round, which brought his total to 289, good for third place.

Walter Blevins of Kansas City and Glenn Oatman of Lawrence, Kan., were the low amateurs with 300 each.

Guldahl's 279 score was over the record low of 273 registered by Tommy Armour at Milwaukee in 1929. Armour was well down the list with 297 today.

Babe Ruth Named Coach Of Dodgers At $15,000 For Rest Of The Season

By STANLEY WOODWARD

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, June 19—Babe Ruth will return to baseball today.

His appointment as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers was announced yesterday by Larry MacPhail, business manager, following a brief conference between him and the Babe Friday night. Ruth will be in a Dodger uniform for the doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs in Ebbets Field this afternoon and will coach at first base. The United Press quotes him as saying that he will receive $15,000 for acting as coach during the balance of the season.

Announcement that the Dodgers had acquired the Babe led to the hasty conclusion that he is destined to succeed Burleigh Grimes as manager of the club. During the last few years of his active career the Babe frequently stated that his ambition was to manage a big-league club. No big-league club wanted him, however, when he quit the Boston Nationals in June, 1935, and he turned down all offers to manage in the minor leagues.

No Comment on Grimes

MacPhail refused to expand the mere announcement that he had engaged Ruth or to comment on the theory that the Great Man ultimately would succeed Grimes, who is working under a one-year contract. Another official of the club, however, scouted the idea. "It was Grimes, as a matter of fact," this official told The Associated Press, "who asked that we get Ruth."

Fans and experts, however, arrived quickly at the conclusion that the possibility exists and that such action will depend almost wholly on what transpires during the balance of the current season. Matters to be taken into consideration in this connection are: (a) the fortunes of the Dodgers under Grimes: (b) the conduct and capability of Ruth as a coach.

Whatever Grimes may think of the situation he seemed to be sincerely happy when our Robert B. Cooke interviewed him yesterday afternoon.

"Ruth belongs in baseball," Grimes said. "That guy doesn't fit in on the golf links. That sport isn't his size. His presence should lend much more inspiration to this club than it could possibly get anywhere else."

Will Coach at First Base

"Beginning tomorrow," continued Grimes, "the Babe will coach at first base. Tom Sheehan and I will divide the third-base coaching job. I hope to get Ruth to hit a few for the fans in batting practice. He may even pitch some, too, although that is entirely up to him."

The active Dodgers all seemed to be pleased. Leo Durocher, team captain, spoke for them "We're all happy to hear the Babe has become a Dodger," he said. 'He will do us a lot of good, but Grimes is the manager and that's that.

"I feel personally that Grimes and Ruth will form a good combination. But Grimes is the boss and I'm going to continue to give him all I've got."

The Babe, who has devoted himself largely to golf and fishing since he quit the diamond in 1935, took a last fling at golf yesterday, playing a semi-final match in the club championship at Leewood, Tuckahoe. He has won his tournament the last two years.

Interrupted on the first tee, he expressed conventional pleasure at the turn of events and described the negotiations.

Clinched Over Telephone

"The first I heard about it was last night," he said. "Larry McPhail called me up. I said yes,' and that's all there was to it."

He said he would get $15,000. "I'll like that, of course, but the best part of the thing is getting back into the game. This is the first outright offer I've had from a big league club since I quit. I would have started today, if I hadn't promised to come over here."

The Babe insisted that the Dodger management had not promised him anything additional in the future or that they had given him any hope that he ultimately would become manager.

"I've been hired as a coach for Brooklyn and that's all there is to it. I have no immediate thoughts about a manager's job, but of course I'd like to get one. Burleigh Grimes is the manager in Brooklyn and I'm working with him.

"Sure, I'd like to manage a ball club. I'd also like to own one, but that would cost plenty of dough and there's a chance that I would lose all I made in baseball."

The signing of Ruth is just another stop in the spectacular series taken by MacPhail since he took over the business management of the Dodgers, a series which appears to be weaning the fans from the morbid thought that the Dodgers can't win consistently and are not going anywhere.

Following close on the heels of the blazing nightlights and the nocturnal no-hitter pitched by Cincinnati's young Johnny Vander Meer, the Ruth case has the fierce Flatbush tribesmen talking all over again.

The important thing in Brooklyn of course, is not that the Babe may at some future time succeed to the job of manager but that this colossus of baseball, who is generally credited with having built the Yankee Stadium by the power of his bat, is going to be on exhibition in Flatbush in the flesh.

The Babe will wear "No. 35" when he turns his broad back to the first-base fans. The business of getting him a suit was one of the major problems undertaken by the Dodger management. He is not a man to wear sizes which are kept in stock. His gargantuan measurements were hurriedly taken yesterday and the sporting goods house promised to deliver the goods at Ebbets Field by special messenger in time for today's hitting practice.

When he crowds into this suit he will be starting his twenty-fourth season in professional baseball. He began with the Baltimore Orioles of the present International League in 1914, Jack Dunn having signed him for $25 a week from St. Mary's Industrial School.

After having been sold to the Boston Americans he was farmed briefly to Providence, then returned to the Red Sox and became the best left-handed pitcher in the American League.

Before Harry Frazee started liquidating the playing assets of the Boston club, Ruth had begun to hit long balls. He was sold to the Yankees in 1920, transferred to the outfield and proceeded to break most of the official and unofficial records of baseball. He hit more home runs, ate more hot dogs, made more money, paid more fines and acquired more admirers than any figure baseball had ever known. His records of sixty home runs in a year (1927) and fifteen in six World Series, are considered unbeatable.

The Babe hit his financial peak in 1930 and 1931 when Colonel Jacob Ruppert paid him $80,000 a year. In the next three years he sagged off to $75,000, $52,000 and $35,000. He was released after the 1934 season and, being a free agent, signed as player, coach and second vice-president of the Boston Braves. He quit this triple assignment after a few months, following an altercation with Judge Emil Fuchs, then president of the club.

His total earings in baseball to date are $940,000.

Yates Is Modest Of His Winning Of British Title

By LINCOLN A. WERDEN

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 18—"Lucky" was the way Charley Yates continuously referred to his triumph in the recent British amateur golf championship as he was greeted by admirers yesterday upon his return with the Walker Cup team.

The blonde-haired 24-year-old Atlantan modestly accepted the shower of congratulations that came from all sides during the day following a welcome tendered as the Cunard White Star liner Aquitania docked.

Yates attributed his victory to the good fortune that must smile upon a winning golfer as he addressed a gathering of 200 at the Downtown A. C. at a luncheon arranged as a testimonial to him and his teammates.

"The great honor to me is not in winning a tournament but in being on the team with such fellows as Johnny Fischer, Ray Billows, Johnny Goodman, Chuck Kocsis, Reynolds Smith, Bud Ward and Fred Haas," he said.

Well Liked in Britain

Although Yates was loath to talk about himself or his achievement, there were others who left no doubt that the Georgian had not only scored a brilliant victory but had made a great impression on British sportsmen.

"They wanted to keep Yates over Francis Ouimet, the non-playing captain of the team. 'I said, 'No, you keep the Walker Cup and I'll take Yates back home with me.'"

Ouimet had nothing but praise for the members of the United States team that bowed at St. Andrews, 7—4, the defeat being the Americans' first since the cup series was inaugurated.

"It was the finest trip I have ever taken and the greatest group of boys I have ever been with," he said. "To win was secondary. The boys took the defeat as the good sportsmen they are and as another event in their lives. There was no great disappointment shown by any one. Of course we wanted to win, but as we didn't I'm sure the interest in the Walker Cup series will be doubled. The British had a strong team that was highly confident, and one that had been selected with great care. And they were excellent golfers."

Ouimet classed Yates's play at Troon in the British amateur as a "magnificent performance."

The United States captain was not the only one to laud Yates. A. M. Reid, president of the United States Golf Association, congratulated him on the place he had won for himself in international golf. Reid also said that the fact that our team did not win again "doesn't mean a thing. The idea of the cup series has been to carry on friendship between the two great sporting countries."

Among others who spoke at the luncheon were Eddie Driggs Jr., president of the Metropolitan Golf Association; O. B. Keeler and Jess Sweetser.

Fred Haas Jr., who is on a brief visit to Germany, was the only team member not return yesterday.

Customs Man Takes a Look

An enthusiastic group of Atlantans, headed by Yates's "boss," James Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Atlanta, kept things humming at the pier while the baggage underwent customs inspection. The British amateur trophy did not escape the eyes of the officials. Yates had to untie the rope that bound the trophy case and open it to satisfy an inspector.

After that Charley's two younger brothers, Dan, 19-year-old Georgia Tech freshman, and Allan, 16, who attends Boys High in Atlanta, took turns carrying the big box containing the cup as they made their way off the pier. Others in the party that came from Atlanta were George Hamilton, State Treasurer, acting as official representative of Governor Rivers of Georgia, and James C. Malone of the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Yates Gets a Scroll

After passing the customs inspection the golfers went directly to the World's Fair Grounds. Following a tour of the site, Grover Whalen, president of the World's Fair Corporation, gave Yates a scroll designating him as a member of the advisory sports committee.

Returning to Manhattan, the golfers went to the Downtown A. C. for the luncheon.

Among other prominent guests present at the function were Stanley Howe, representing Mayor La Guardia; Walter P. Holcombe, president of the Downtown A. C.; Walter Slate of Adelphi College, toastmaster; Harold W. Pierce, U. S. G. A. vice president who acted as Walker Cup manager; John G. Jackson, former U. S. G. A. chief; T. Suffern Tailer, Fred Snare and Mark Stuart.

No Action Taken On '40 Olympics At Monday Meet

Nothing developed at the meeting held by the officials of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation Monday afternoon at the Chuotei Restaurant, Marunouchi, when representatives of the Planning Board took the role of listeners and made no comments on the Government's restriction of the use of leather, iron and other materials which affect sports in general, particularly the projected 12th Olympic Games in 1940.

One reason was that Dr. I. Suehiro, committeeman of the Olympic Organizing Committee, while he spoke on the necessity for improvement of the nation's health and the Olympic Games, made no reference to the restriction measures, according to the Yomiuri.

Makoto Den, director of the Board of Tourist Industry, who returned recently from a tour of the United States, spoke of the keen interest in America in the forthcoming Olympic Games in Tokyo.

Iran Sends Application

Under the name of the Society for Scouting and Physical Education of Iran, an application for participation in the Tokyo Olympic Games has been received by the Foreign Office from Shoichi Nakayama, Japanese Minister to Iran.

Rice Hurdler Breaks Record In NCAA Meet

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 18—Flying over the high hurdles in record-smashing time, blond Fred Wolcott of Rice Institute stole a big share of honors from the title-seeking Southern California Trojans in yesterday's qualifying trials of the seventeenth National Collegiate A. A. track and field championships.

The sophomore from the Houston college, who is undefeated in collegiate competition, raced through the 120-yard high hurdles in 14s., setting a new meet mark and tying the American record made by Bob Osgood of Michigan in 1937. The former meet mark was 14.1s., originally set by George Saling of Iowa in 1932 and equaled by Forrest Towns of Georgia in 1936.

The 12,000 spectators who watched the qualifying tests at Minnesota's Memorial Stadium gave the Texas streak a great hand after his record-breaking performance. Weather conditions were ideal, making for good times in a majority of events.

Dean Cromwell's Trojans lost little time in opening their march to qualifying supremacy which topped 40 colleges placing men in today's championship events. They placed two men in the first event, the 440-yard dash, then followed with two each in the 100-yard dash and 120-yard high hurdles, javelin and discus. They also will be represented in the 220-yard low hurdles and shotput.

Two colleges qualified five men each. California and Rice Institute, with Stanford, Texas University, and Michigan each planning four men in the finals.

Ben Johnson, Columbia's fleet Negro star; Mack Robinson of Oregon and Wolcott were the day's double winners of trial heats. Wolcott, in addition to his 120-yard high hurdles job, came home in front in his 220-yard low hurdle test. Johnson and Robinson won heats in the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Most favorites came through as expected, but the 100-yard dash saw two stars fall by the wayside. Marty Glickman of Syracuse, 1936 Olympic sprinter, and Adrian Talley, Southern California's coast conference champion, both were shut out in the second heat. Charlie Belcher, Georgia Tech's Southeast Conference titleholder, failed to qualify in the 440-yard dash.

John Woodruff, Pittsburgh's great middle-distance runner, withdrew from the 440-yard run to save himself for the half-mile in which he is defending champion.

Italian Embassy Supports Athletic Meet Here In Fall

The Italian Embassy Monday supported the proposed tri-nation athletic meet to be staged in Tokyo next fall.

It is understood that the Italian Embassy has already sent a wire to Rome asking that athletes be sent to Tokyo.

Germany's consent in sending athletes may hasten the Italian decision, it is said.

Japanese Davis Cuppers Training At New York

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 11—Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu, members of the Japanese Davis Cup squad, accompanied by their non-playing captain, Tamio Abe, arrived here today aboard the Normandie. They immediately joined Jiro Yamagishi, mainstay of the Japanese squad, who arrived here last Friday from the west coast.

According to present plans, the team will stay in New York for about one week in order to practice on the Forest Hills courts. Later they are scheduled to proceed to Montreal where they will face the Canadian team in the first round's play of the American Zone in the Davis Cup series.

Nakano, Abe and Kuramitsu played in the Wimbledon Championships in England while Yamagishi came straight from Japan.

Badgers Selling Coupon Books For Grid Season Now

Christian Science Monitor

MADISON—Although the football season is still some three months away, the University of Wisconsin athletic office has opened its 1938 football ticket-selling campaign and is accepting reservations for student coupon books.

Wisconsin sells a coupon book to students, admitting them to all intercollegiate athletic contests at a greatly reduced price. These books are not transferable and each bears a "passport photograph" of the owner. As Wisconsin sells more than 6,000 such books annually, the acceptance of reservations in the spring relieves the ticket-selling department of an almost unbearable load in the fall.

Students make a deposit of 50 cents and get their pictures taken in June, this makes it possible to pick up the books on payment of the balance of the purchase price, without any other formality or delay in the fall. A further advantage to the student is the fact that the first purchasers get the best seats. The advantage to the ticket office of getting a fourth or more of its book selling done in the spring is obvious.

This year, each student desiring a book must make his purchase personally and when groups, such as fraternities, desire to buy seats together, they must come together and all make their reservations at the same time.

Coupon books are also sold to university employes and faculty members at a slightly higher price. Ticket application blanks for the general public are sent out early in August and all applications received before Sept. 1 are considered as of that date, with tickets allotted by lot. A special allotment is made to the Wisconsin Alumni Association for its members.

Averill, Lavagetto Leading Batsmen In Major Leagues

NEW YORK, June 18—Cleveland's Earl Averill and Brooklyn's Cookie Lavagetto set the pace in the major-league hitting races today, but the most surprising development was that neither of the defending pennant-holders had a man among the leaders.

From Averill down to Boston's Joe Cronin in tenth place in the American League, you couldn't find a member of the New York Yankee cast with a microscope. And the same thing held true of the Giants in the National League's leading set.

While Averill, boosting his average 16 points to .385, retained the lead against the challenge of his teammate, Hal Trosky, both Bill Dickey and Red Rolfe of the Yanks, who were among the top 10 a week ago, slipped out of the select group. In the National League, Lavagetto's .353 was just enough to hold the place from the come-backing Ducky Medwick and his .349, while Jojo Moore, the Giants' member of the leading group last week, sank from sight.

Chief of the newcomers among the leaders this week was swingin' Sammy Chapman, the Athletics' rookie outfielder fresh from college, who was deadlocked for the American League second place with Trosky, each with .365. Debs Garms of the Boston Bees, and Herschel Martin of the Phillies, a pair of youngsters, climbed to a tie for fourth place in the senior circuit, each with .342. The first 10 in each league:

Big Six Schedule Likely To Be Cut Into Half In Fall

Becauuse of the anticipated shortage in supplies of sporting goods through the recently imposed Government's restriction on the use of leather for manufacture of various articles, indications are that the Tokyo Six University Baseball League, the most popular and important circuit in the country, will be forced to adopt drastic changes in its schedule for the fall season opening on September 10.

The Education Ministry, it is understood, has already requested the league authorities to adopt a schedule between the member teams instead of the two-game series in the past.

The suggestion that the games be made a seven-inning affair with the two-game schedule has also been made.

A formal decision is expected to be reached shortly by the Education Ministry, affecting the middle schools as well.

Foxx Walks 6 Times In Row To Set Record

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, June 16—A new modern major league record was established and another tied today in a torrid game which gave the Red Sox a sweep of their series with the Browns. The score was 12 to 8.

Jimmy Foxx, Boston first baseman, drew six straight walks, the new major league mark. The previous record was five, held by Mel Ott of the Giants and Max Bishop of the Athletics. The pre-1900 record was six, set by Walter Wilmot of the Cubs in 1891.

The Boston first baseman tied the major league record for most times a batter has faced pitchers in a game without being credited with an official time at bat. Miller Huggins, with the Cardinals in 1910, and Bill Urbanski of the Boston Nationals, established the mark. Both drew four walks and sacrificed twice.

Foxx, in going to bat six times without being credited with a time at bat, set a new American League record.

Traveled 2200 Miles To Bowl One Game

Mr. Frank Bruggeman, then a resident of Sioux City, Iowa, was a participant in the American Bowling Congress, Pittsburgh, in 1909, and rolled into the lead with a score of 691. After he returned home, his score was tied by a resident of Rochester, New York. Since the American Bowling Congress recognizes only one champion, a roll-off on the same A.B.C. alleys was necessary. Therefore, Mr. Bruggeman had to travel back to Pittsburgh, a distance of 200 miles for the round trip, for the purpose of bowling one decisive game. This single game was lost by Mr. Bruggeman, who rolled 168 to his opponents 214.

16-Hit Barrage By Giants Routs Cardinals, 10-3

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 18—Breaking out of their slump with such violence that the Fordham seismograph recorded a few puzzling temblors, the Giants flattened the Cardinals under a sixteen-hit barrage at the Polo Grounds yesterday, 10 to 3, and with one motion increased their lead over the twice-beaten Cubs to three games.

Colonel Bill Terry continued to scowl as his New Yorkers were tied by the St. Louis contingent at 3-all in the fourth. But the colonel started to beam when Master Melvin Ott broke the deadlock with his fourteenth homer of the season in the Giant half of that inning and then he was radiant when Hank Leiber hit the jackpot, a four-master with the bases full, an inning later.

It was a slug-fest from the opening gong. And while the Stoneham clan was hammering Lon Warneke and Ray Harrell, the Red Birds were doing mighty little with the offerings of Slick Castleman, the celebrated invalid. The slick one was touched for only seven hits, four of them in one frame accounting for the three St. Louis runs, and was pretty much in command all the way.

Seventeen Giants Stranded

The Giants had so many men on the bases that it looked for a while as if the rules would have to be revised to make room for a few more of them. They had sixteen safeties, eight walks and two hit batsmen. The New Yorkers came within one man of tying the left-on-bases record of eighteen.

The crowd of 14,251, of whom 7,054 were Ladies' Day guests, enjoyed it fully. About the only one who failed to appreciate it was Onkel Franz Frisch. The Flash's feet pained him so much that he was not in uniform. By the end of the game his head ached too.

It was quite a sight to see the Giants with their batting sights adjusted. Twice in a row they had been held to five hits. Then came that tonic for weak batting averages, the St. Louis pitching staff.

Terry shook up his batting order to see if he could shake a little more punch into the team, moving Harry the Horse Danning into the No. 2 slot and dropping Dick Bartell to seventh. It worked beautifully.

Danning Hit by Pitcher

Jo-Jo Moore, who was to share batting honors with Hank Leiber at three singles and a homer each, opened the Giant attack with a line drive to right. Danning was struck by a pitched ball, then Jimmy Ripple and Leiber rammed hits for two runs. Another came in the third on safeties by Leiber and Alex Kampouris, with a walk to Johnny McCarthy sandwich in.

But the Cards struck right back in the fourth. Joe Stripp, Muscles Medwick, Pepper Martin and Don Gutteridge hit safely and three runs were in, a walk and an error helping the rally considerably. But Castleman was not in trouble thereafter.

In the fourth Ott broke the tie with a titanic smash deep in the right-field stands. An inning later two hits and a walk set the stage for Leiber's shot off the left-field facade. When McCarthy walked right afterward, Warneke walked too, Harrell stepping in, only to toss a bit more gasoline on the flames.

He staggered through that frame but Castleman opened the sixth with a hit. Whereupon Moore cracked his sixth homer to right for the last two runs.

Shifting Of 1940 Games From Tokyo Suggested By N.Y. Times Writer

Editor's Note: The following is an article in the June 13 issue of the New York Times by its well known sports writer, John Kieran, suggesting shifting of the site of the 12th Olympic Games from Tokyo, in his famed column—"Sports of the Times." Stanley Woodward, columnist of The New York Herald Tribune, went even further by vehemently opposing the staging of the Games in Tokyo.

It appears now that it is going to be a long war—or whatever the Japanese care to call it—in China and the Olympic repercussions in this country are not going to be pleasant. Incidentally, if that isn't a war that's going on in China, it's the best imitation a troubled world ever has seen.

But when a man like Bill Bingham of Harvard buttons up his coat, clamps his hat on his head and walks off declaring that he could and would have nothing whatever to do with sending an Olympic team from this country to compete in a country like the Japan of today, it's high time to take stock of the situation. Those who may become involved in this debate had better get out their tin helmets and their gas masks.

This is going to be much worse than the Olympic war over Hitler in 1936. The carnage will be more widespread. The battle over Hitler raged chiefly in the New York sector, with atrocities on both sides. The rest of the country remained comparatively unravaged. But the coming Olympic war will find belligerents in the athletic trenches from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore., and from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande.

Good Man

Bill Bingham is a solid citizen with a level head and both feet on the ground. He was a fine athlete in his undergraduate days and he has a fine record as an athletic official and sports administrator at Harvard and in wider fields. He isn't running for public office or bidding for votes. In the famous Battle-before-Berlin there was some confusion because some notable warriors who were waving shining swords in the spotlight were also very busy grinding political axes behind the scenes.

There is no double play like that in the Bingham walkout from the American Olympic Committee. A good man has gone. He gave some good reasons for going. Possibly there were better reasons why he should have remained at his Olympic post. That probably will be thrashed out and there will be, as Harry Hotspur put it, "bloody noses and cracked crowns" in the thrashing.

As he left, Bill said there were some things he couldn't stomach. He swallowed Hitler but he coudn't swallow Japan. He "deplored" Hitler but he felt that the International Olympic Committee unwittingly had Hitler foisted upon it, whereas it accepted Japan knowingly.

A Poor Decision

There certainly is something in that indictment. When Berlin was selected as the site of the Olympic Games of 1936, there was no Hitler on the political horizon. But with the lesson later learned as Der Fuehrer came along to stir up the Battle-before-Berlin, the International Olympic Committee might well have shuddered at the bid of Tokyo for the 1940 games.

It was a generous bid, a regular gift-horse. But this was a time to look a gift-horse not only in the mouth but all the way down the esophagus. Japan already had walked into Manchuria and out of the League of Nations. It was decidedly a belligerent country and the International Olympic Committee should have realized how the Olympic program would be imperiled by accepting Tokyo as the location for the 1940 renewal. When a man like Bill Bingham, long a supporter of the Olympic idea and ideal, quits the ranks as early as this, there is grave danger that the United States athletes may be missing from the Tokyo competition. Without representation from this country, the essential part of the games, the track and field program, would be only what impassioned orators call "a hollow mockery."

There is no change in the conviction in this corner that the Olympic idea and ideal are worthy of warm and strong support. It is the further conviction here that, no matter what the difficulties may be between nations, creeds or races, the holding of the Olympic Games, even in a bad spot, will do more good than harm. In short, this observer has not walked out with Bill Bingham.

Messing Things Up

But still supporting the Olympic idea and ideal, there is every reason to mourn the mistakes that have been made and to agree with Bill Bingham in his criticism of some of them. The games have grown too large. There are too many complications. The wrong sites for the games have been selected. The program is getting more than a trifle out of hand. Germany used the Berlin games as propaganda and apparently Japan is set to do the same thing. This is something well outside the Olympic idea as originally put forward by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern games.

There should be more wisdom shown in the selection of sites and about half the Olympic sports, including all contact sports, should be summarily tossed off the program. There are always nasty rows over boxing and wrestling bouts and decisions. Soccer, another contact game, probably has caused more actual battles on the field than all other Olympic sports put together.

Olympics Are Too Big

The track and field program is the really essential part of the Olympic Games. Swimming is a natural enough addition and rowing might be kept on the program without harm. Some of the other non-contact sports might be kept or dropped. It wouldn't be of much importance either way except that simplifying the program would help in keeping the control where it belongs.

The very size of the Olympic undertaking now is one of its major defects.

At the Cairo meeting this Spring the Olympic official decided to go through with the Tokyo program. But the prospect for a friendly gathering there is growing bleaker all the time. If the Olympic solons could change their minds in a hurry, it wouldn't be too late now to switch the 1940 games to some other location. It would mean a lot of trouble and possibly a setting not as well equipped for competition and crowds as Tokyo would be. But if they could pick any reasonable spot, they would be sure that the United States team would be among those present. But with Bill Bingham walking out already, this worried bystander can give no guarantee that there will be any representative United States team on hand if the games are held in Tokyo in 1940.

Kanto Athletes Leave For Manchoukuo Meet

Ten Kanto representatives of the Japan team to compete in a dual track and field meet with Manchoukuo left Tokyo Station by the 10 p.m. train Tuesday for Osaka. Together with the Kansai members, they were to sail from Kobe at noon today for Dairen on the Oroku Maru. Meiji University members of the team were to join the steamer at Moji.

Sueo Oye, Japan's best pole vaulter, and two other athletes will leave Tokyo by the 11 p.m. train Thursday.

Mlle. Jedrzejowska Wins Final For London Net Title

N.Y. Times

WIMBLEDON, England, June 18—Mlle. Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, her magnificent forehand stronger and faster than ever, today became co-favorite with Miss Alice Marble for the women's singles title in the Wimbledon tennis championships starting on Monday.

The Polish champion polished off Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling of Germany, the conqueror of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, 6—3, 6—0, to win the London lawn tennis title. She immediately jumped to 3-1 alongside Miss Marble.

Mrs. Moody remained at 4 to 1, safe in the realization that she will not have to meet either Miss Marble or Mlle. Jedrzejowska until the final. Frau Sperling, who is in Mrs. Moody's half of the draw, was helpless today and, despite her victory over Mrs. Moody, nobody is giving her a chance to beat Helen again.

Mrs. Little Not Entered

There is nothing in recent Wimbledon history to encourage Mrs. Moody, at 33, to think she can win the tennis classic. Mrs. Dorothy Round Little, the present champion, who will not defend her title, is 28.

Miss Helen Jacobs was 27 when she won in 1936 and Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen was 26 when she ended her six straight victories in 1925. Even the 1931 winner, Fraeulein Cilli Ausem of Germany, now Countess Brae, was only 22 when she won the title.

Before the war, however, it was another story. Mrs. Alfred Sterry won the women's championship for the fifth time when she was 37. Mrs. Dudley Lacombe and Mrs. Lambert Chambers both won on the center court when theoretically they were "too old."

The two players who have tied Mrs. Moody's record of seven singles championships are Mrs. Chambers and Willie Renshaw. Mrs. Chambers won in 1903, 1904, 1906, 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1914; Renshaw in 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886 and 1889.

Triumphed First in 1927

Mrs. Moody won the championship in 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1932, 1933 and 1935.

Probably the only other player capable of dreaming of such a record today is Don Budge, who holds three Wimbledon titles—singles, doubles and mixed doubles—at present, and is so outstanding this season that nobody is paying much attention to him.

Budge, at 22, is without a rival in the amateur ranks today, and undoubtedly could stay at the top at least through his twenties. But it is generally conceded that his attempt to win the four international championships, Australian, French, British and American, this year, is but a prelude to his turning professional next Winter.

Anyway, there's a feeling here that the center court will be seeing him for the last time in the championships next week.

H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England's ranking player, won the men's title in the London event today with a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Kho Sin Kie of China.

Entries Open For U.S. National Tennis Tourney

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 11—The United States Lawn Tennis Association today announced that entries are open for the national tennis championships.

The doubles championships will be played at the Wood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hills, Mass., for six days commencing from August 22, while the singles championships are to be held at Forest Hills for ten days from September 8.

Tennis circles here predicted that Donald J. Budge, red-headed tennis wonder who recently swept through to Wimbledon titles in the singles, as well as in the doubles and mixed doubles, will listen to offers to become a professional after winning the Davis Cup and the national crown again.

U.S. Athletes Favor Coming To Tokyo Games

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 12—Though not yet complete, the American Olympic Committee's poll of opinion regarding the 1940 Tokyo Games thus far indicates that an overwhelming majority of athletes are in favor of United States participation, it was authoritatively learned this morning.

According to the New York Times, almost 100 per cent of the replies so far received by the committee advocate sending a team to Tokyo, showing that American athletes themselves prefer not to inject politics into the realm of sport.

The replies are being received in response to a four-point questionnaire addressed by the committee recently to all national A.A.U. and intercollegiate champions for 1938, as well as members of the United States team to the Berlin Olympics in 1936.

Four-Point Questionnaire

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 11—The American Olympic Committee, through its headquarters here, revealed today that it has addressed four-point questionnaires to all national Amateur Athletic Union and intercollegiate champions of 1938, as well as members of 1936 Olympic teams, in order to find out the general attitude prevailing with regard to the 1940 Olympic Games in Tokyo.

The four questions, it was disclosed are:—

(1) Are you in favor of United States participation in the 1940 Olympics at Tokyo?

(2) Do you expect to participate in the try-outs?

(3) If not, why not?

(4) Could you make the trip if you were successful in qualifying?

While the replies to the questionnaire were not all received, it was learned here that an overwhelming majority favor the Tokyo Games. Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, stated that the questionnaire had been sent out on the basis of the belief that the athletes should have a dominant voice in Olympic affairs.

Yale Nine Beats Princeton, 5-2 Before 12,000

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PRINCETON, N. J., June 18—Its last chance at the Eastern intercollegiate title gone when Dartmouth defeated Harvard at Hanover this morning, Princeton's team played punchless ball this steaming afternoon and bowed to Yale, 5 to 2, in the annual alumni day game before a gayly-clad throng of 12,000 that filled every seat in University Field and overflowed into the playing arena.

The Tigers had won five league games in a row up to today, including a 2-to-1 decision over the Blue last week at New Haven. That five-game string, longest in the league to date, had given them an outside chance at a triple tie for the crown. They started off today as if they were going to extend their string and finish the season in a blaze of glory. They scored two runs in the first inning, but they stopped there. While Yale was reaching Dawson (Lefty) Farber for hits in eight of its nine turns at bat, the Tigers were completely stymied by young John Crosby, who had gone in to relieve Moe Jubitz in the second, and failed to produce another tally.

They had at least five good chances to do so. In four of those innings they had the bases filled and once they had men on first and third, but each time the scoring punch was lacking. Altogether, they left sixteen men stranded on the bases, the highwater mark for league competition this season.

And while the Tigers were fumbling their chances, Yale was taking full advantage of its opportunities. The Blue scored one run in the first inning on one hit, and error and two bases on balls. But the visitors pushed across two more in the third on three hits and a wild pitch and took a lead from which they never were headed. They added the two superfluous runs in the fifth on three hits and two errors and then coasted in to victory behind Crosby.

Jubitz Goes Out in Second

This junior right-hander, scoring his first league victory of the season, yielded only three hits, all singles, in the eight full innings he worked, and although he walked seven men and was continually getting into tight spots, he had enough in the pinches to escape being scored on. He succeeded Jubitz, the Blues' ace left-hander, with none out and men on first and third in the second inning. Jubitz, who had pitched a six-hit game against the same opposition last week, was wild today.

Yale belabored Dawson for twelve hits, only one, a double, good for extra bases. But three Tiger errors at inopportune moments and four bases on balls also helped the Blue cause.

Al Alter, Yale's shortstop, and Greg Doonan, the right fielder, each made three safeties. Alter in four times at bat and Doonan in five. The latter also had a double. Yale's Eddie Collins jr., the league's leading hitter since early season, went hitless in five times at bat. Princeton's Ed Givens made three of his team's six hits.

This was the 180th game in the series, the oldest unbroken rivalry in America. It was Yale's 105th victory. Princeton has won seventy-two, two were ties and one game was incomplete. The first game was played in 1867 and since 1873 the series has continued without a break.

Princeton completed its season with seven victories and five defeats in the league, assuring the Tigers no worse than a tie for third place. Yale still has two to play, the home-and-home series with Harvard next week. If it wins both, the Blue will tie for third. It has a record of five and five now.

Pro Ball Loop Ends Spring Season Sunday

The Spring season of the professional baseball league will end with quadrupleheaders on Saturday and Sunday at the Korakuen Stadium with the Osaka Tigers, last year's champions, at the moment on top of the standings with a three-game lead over the Tokyo Giants.

The tripleheaders scheduled for today and tomorrow at the same stadium will be very important for the reason that the Giants cannot afford to lose if they want to remain in the race.

Both the Eagles and the Hankyus, tied for third place with 18 victories and 12 defeats apiece, have no chance for the title.

Cornell Regatta A Clean Sweep For California

N.Y. Herald Tribune

ITHACA, N. Y., June 18—Three boatloads of University of California oarsmen today tuned up for the Poughkeepsie regatta by defeating Cornell in a dual regatta on Lake Cayuga.

The Golden Bear varsity, a smooth-stroking, powerful eight, averaging 180 pounds, smashed the course record in leading Cornell by five lengths over a three-mile course. Timed in 15:51, the California varsity erased the old mark of 17:17.6 set by Cornell in 1926, when a Big Red eight defeated a California crew. Cornell today was timed in 16:08.

The regatta, climaxing a week of practice for the two navies prior to their departure early tomorrow for the Hudson River, saw the California freshman and junior varsity eights win by smaller but no less decisive margins, in two-mile races.

Jayvees Near Record

The Western jayvees came within two and eight-tenths seconds of tying the two-mile record set by Yale's varsity May 21 in winning the Carnegie Cup here. California won by three lengths in 10:26.2. Cornell finished in 10:35.

The California freshmen won by one and a half lengths in the closest race of the regatta, rowed under the best conditions. The Cornell yearlings, trailing at one point by one and a quarter lengths, spurted to close the margin to a half length at the mile mark. California answered with a sprint that was almost ruined when California's No. 6 caught a crab. He recovered so quickly that Cornell was unable to take advantage of the mishap a quarter mile from the finish.

The freshman times were: California, 10:35; Cornell, 10:39.5.

Shells Ship Water

The wind freshened for the jayvee and varsity events and the shells shipped considerable water in the heavy going near the start. The water flattened out near the finish and California's varsity put on the pressure to win going away. The Bears rowed most of the way at thirty strokes and gained steadily despite Cornell's thirty-two beat.

The varsity boatings:

California—Bow, Roe; Manross, Bergh, Emerson, Hoefer, Freeborn, Gibson; stroke, Smith; coxswain, Dieterich.

Cornell—Bow, Allen; Hooker, Dean, Rogers, Furman, Pfeifer, Buettell; stroke, Young; coxswain, Whitney.

Japanese Players Train At Forest Hills Courts

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, New York, July 11—Because the courts at the Forest Hills Club are familiar to all the players, except Yasumine Kuramitsu, the Japanese Davis Cup squad will practice there for approximately one week, Tamio Abe, non-playing captain told Domei here today.

Abe intimated that the Japanese players might participate in an invitational tournament which is being held in Boston a week from today. He declined to state whether any formal decision had been taken.

The Japanese team is scheduled to proceed to Montreal during the latter part of this month in order to meet Canada in the first round of Davis Cup play in the American zone. The series will start on July 29.

2 Hawaiian-Born Japanese Out For U.S. Swim Team

Domei Tsushin

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11—Two Hawaiian-born Japanese swimmers, in view of their youth and exceptional promise, may be able to make the United States' swimming team for the 1940 Olympics to be held at Tokyo, Duke P. Kahanamoku, former Olympic swimming champion, declared to a correspondent of Domei today.

Kahanamoku revealed that the two swimmers were Kiyoshi Nakama, 18-year old Hawaiian record holder for the 400 meter and 500 yard freestyle events, and Takashi Hirose, 15-year old youth who holds the 100 and 220-yard, as well as 100-meter marks.

Would Be Unprecedented

Should the two boys make the U.S. swimming team, Kahanamoku told Domei, it would be the first time in athletic history that Hawaiian-born Japanese have participated on an American Olympic squad.

In yesterday's exhibition meet at the Fleishhacker 50-yard pool here between the Hawaiian all-stars led by Kahanamoku, and the Pacific coast stars, Hirose copped both the 100 and 220-yard freestyle events with times of 55.4 seconds and 2 minutes, 18.3 seconds respectively, while Nakama triumphed in the 400-yard freestyle event in the time of 4 minutes, 55.8 seconds. The marks hung up by Nakama and Hirose shattered present Pacific Association records.

Nakama Holds Records

The Hawaiian swimming team is scheduled to compete in the National A.A.U. championships at Louisville, Kentucky, to be held for three days from July 29 to 31.

The Hawaiian records held by Nakama are: 400-meters, 5 minutes, 2 seconds; 500-yards, 5 minutes, 46 seconds; and by Hirose: 100-yards, 55 seconds; 220-yards, 2 minutes, 16 seconds and 100-meters, 1 minute, 1 second.

Both Nakama and Hirose are Maui high school students, and there is a story that they were "discovered" while swimming in irrigation ditches on the island of Maui. It is claimed that their discovery bears a close resemblance to the way Johnny Weismuller, former world's champion swimmer, was first "found."

Vander Meer's Pitching Keeps Reds In Race

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 11—Spurred by the spectacular pitching of Johnny Vander Meer, the Cincinnati Reds, with three wins and two defeats, this week moved back into third place in the National League nosing out the Chicago Cubs by a slim margin.

The Giants took three straight to hold the lead in the National Loop as the major league baseball season rounded out its twelve consecutive weeks of play. The Pittsburgh Pirates are in second place.

In the American league, the Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees are holding first and second place respectively, while the Red Sox of Boston maintain third place, followed by the Washington Senators, which won four games this week, losing one.

The standings of the teams, including games played today, are as follows:

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Hottest Place on Earth

The Musendam Peninsula on the opposite side of the entrance to the Persian Gulf from the Ormuz Islands, is easily the hottest place on earth. The terrible heat, which reaches 152 degrees in the summer, is so terrible that even the natives can live in the place only from November to March. The cable station established here had to be abandoned, because some of the men died, others went mad from the heat and the rest fled. The rocks are red hot, the sea the most brilliant and intense blue. There is an abundance of fish in the water of the gulf.

Tokyo To Cancel '40 Games On Govt. Request

pire Foundation, except its Sightseeing Department, and its Temporary Building Section.

Those who will be deprived of work as a result of the returning of the Games, include three German Olympic technical advisers, Werner Klingeberg and Misses Hartmann and Knoller, who have been in Tokyo nearly one year on a three-year contract.

Plans Dropped

The elaborate plans which have been under contemplation by the Railway Ministry and N.Y.K. to transport Olympic visitors were dropped. Director Nagashima of the Passenger Section of N.Y.K. said however that his company has suffered no losses as construction on Olympic liners has not started. The Federation of Ginza Stores had expected at least an additional revenue of ¥3,000,000 for the summer of 1940.

The managements of the Daiichi Hotel and Sanno Hotel in Tokyo newly built and expanded respectively for the 1940 international events, are among the quarters hardest hit by the cancellation.

The decision of the Welfare Ministry was not revealed to Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, who is now confined to his sickbed and is Chairman of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee as well as a member of the I.O.C., though his condition has been improving lately since he returned from Canada where he was taken ill while en route to the London Red Cross Congress.

Count Michimasa Soyejima, only available Japanese member of the International Olympic Committee for comment Thursday night (Prince Iyesato Tokugawa being ill and the vacancy created by the death of Professor Jigoro Kano recently while en route homeward from Cairo still unfilled), expressed the opinion that Japan should send as large a delegation as possible to the site to be determined of the 12th Olympic Games, now with abandonment of the Games in Tokyo decided. Such a step would show the true sportsmanship of this country, he said.

Soyejima Has Suggestion

Count Soyejima said he believed that in the announcement of the reason for the abandonment of the Games, it should be stated that the Sino-Japanese hostilities have developed into protracted warfare because of countries giving assistance to China; that Japan is confident of putting an end to the Incident soon, but is returning the Games to the I.O.C. at this time to preclude any inconvenience to other countries in connection with the Games, this in the event that there is no quick settlement of the Incident.

Count Soyejima said he feels deeply responsible for the decision of the I.O.C. to assign the 1940 Games to Tokyo, and intends to resign.

Dartmouth Tops Yale Nine, 6 To 4

Herald Tribune

HANOVER, N. H., June 18—Hall Wonson, sophomore, pitched the Dartmouth baseball team to a 6 to 4 triumph over Harvard this morning, chalking up his eighth Eastern Intercollegiate League victory and clinching at least a tie for first place for the Green in the league race. Harvard must win twice from Yale to maintain the tie in the final reckoning.

Tim Healy, who held down the mound assignment for the Crimson throughout, let the Green gain a good lead in the second when he gave four hits that were converted into as many runs, but for the remainder of the game he allowed only six scattered safeties. Wonson played his usual game, getting himself into innumerable tight spots, but he maintained complete control and twelve Harvard runners were left on bases.

Hankyu Defeats Eagles, 5 To 3; Horio Homers

The Osaka Hankyu ball tossers had a good day at bat Thursday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium and humped off the Eagles, 5 to 3, in the best game of a tripleheader. They registered nine hits off the Eagles' ace, Ted Kameda, including a homer by Jimmy Horio, who too like Kameda hails from Hawaii.

The Tigers, who clinched the championship of the current Spring season on Thursday, kept on winning by trouncing the Nagoya squad, 11 to 5, while the Nagoya Dolfins shoved the lowly Lions still deeper into the cellar by taking the long end of a 6 to 3 count.

Eagles Battery In Slump

Pitcher Kameda of the Eagles undoubtedly suffered from too much work on the mound for he lacked speed. And his battery mate, Bucky Harris, who last year won the award as the most valuable player in the circuit, was in a slump. The Hankyu squad chalked up six stolen bases, an unusual performance against Harris.

Sabiro Miyatake, former Keio University star, received the pitching assignment and turned out a neat job, checking the Eagles without a hit in the first five innings. Center Fielder Nakane was the first man to nick him for a hit, this in the sixth inning, but Miyatake weakened and Mori was promptly sent in to relieve him.

Hankyu scored its first run in the opening frame when Yamada, who had singled to get on and stolen second, and then to third on a passed ball, romped home on Horio's fly to left field.

It was Horio again that batted in the Hankyu run in the second inning. He came through with a Texas Leaguer to right to bring in the same Yamada, who had registered his second hit of the day.

A wild peg by First Baseman Nakagawa on a play to first aided the Hankyu team to score a brace of runs in the sixth to establish a 4 to 0 lead.

The Eagles scored their only runs, three of them, in the sixth frame. Nakane started the fireworks with a Texas Leaguer to right. Urushibara was safe on the shortstop's error. Harris singled to center to bat in Nakane. Miyatake was given the high sign and Mori replaced him on the mound. Kameda flied out to center. Nakagawa grounded to Mori but Urushibara beat the throw to third to clog the bases. Left Fielder Sugitaya Texas Leaguered to right to bring in Urushibara. Harris then tallied as Ota grounded out to second.

Horio Homers

Horio's smash into the left field bleachers accounted for the Hankyu's last run which came at the outset of the ninth inning.

The Tigers bombarded Pitchers Morii and Shigesato of Nagoya for 15 hits to win easily. Right Fielder Shiraki of Nagoya poled out a homer to center in the seventh with the bases filled. This put the score on a 7-5 basis in favor of the Tigers but the latter widened the lead with a run in the eighth and registered three more in the ninth.

Ross Hangs Up Gloves To Go Into Business

Herald Tribune

CHICAGO, June 18—Barney Ross, who won two world's championships has hung up his gloves after eight years of ring activity, never being so happy in his life.

At the age of twenty-nine, Ross, a former lightweight and later welterweight king, becomes a businessman. He's got a $50,000 jewelry business growing in Chicago and soon will be associated with his newly-acquired father-in-law in the management of a string of ladies' ready-to-wear stores in New Jersey.

"I can honestly say that I have never been happier," said Ross. "Boxing has been a lot of fun, a lot of hard work and has brought me in contact with a lot of swell friends, but I am glad it is all over.

"It's a relief to know that you can stay up until 2 o'clock in the morning if you want to, without violating this or that training rule, or to pile into a big steak at midnight. For years I couldn't do that. Now I am going to enjoy myself.

Praises His Mother

"I feel particularly happy because I am through with boxing and also because I married a very sweet girl. My mother and my brothers are fixed financially and I have no more worries. Just the other day I asked my mother, 'Ma, I am going to be gone a few weeks. How much do you need?' She replied: "It isn't what I need, it's how much you can afford to give me.' She's always been like that."

Ross, with a reputation for honesty in the ring, figures he won about $400,000 in seventy-two professional fights, out of which he saved $70,000 and his business ventures. His biggest purse was $47,608, which he received for fighting Henry Armstrong, early this month while losing his 147-pound championship. No title-holder, when he has come to the end of his championship trial can feel a deeper satisfaction and honest achievement than Ross.

Reared in poverty, in New York's East Side, and brought up in the toughening school of Chicago's ghetto, Ross rose to fame with his fists. Back in 1929 the gangling youngster won the Golden Gloves featherweight championship. Previously he had fought a hundred or more amateur bouts, frequently meeting two opponents on the same night at different stag parties.

Their Word Their Contract

Sam Pian took a liking to the youngster and later became his manager, guiding him to the lightweight and then welterweight championship. They were together for eight years with never a contract to bind them.

Ross, whose black hair is streaked with gray, prematurely, whipped the doughty Tony Canzoneri in 1933 and won the lightweight championship. A year later he stepped out of his division and conquered Jimmy McLarnin for the welterweight title. McLarnin won back the crown, but Barney regained it in the third of their great battles.

Ross is planning a six-week European honeymoon cruise with his bride before settling down to the serious task of becoming a businessman.

"I am going to enjoy myself while I can," he beamed, "after eight of the toughest years any boy ever experienced."

Tokyo Decision Likely To Give Games To Finland

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, July 14—Commenting on Japan's sudden decision to give up the 1940 Olympic Games, Lord Aberdere, chairman of the British Olympic Association, declared today that the feeling at the International Olympic Committee gathering at Cairo last March was that Tokyo "would be well advised under the present conditions not to stage the Games."

Lord Aberdere continued, "It would be the first time they would be held in Asia, and the Committee thought that they therefore should be afforded every opportunity to be efficiently controlled.

"If Tokyo will not hold the Games, then Finland would be approached and the venue would be Helsingfors. If this does not materialize, there is the possibility that London might be chosen."

He added in conclusion that the I.O.C. will meet in London in June to discuss London's application for the 1944 Games.

Germany Understands

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 14—Although voicing deep regret over Japan's decision to give up organization of the 1940 Olympic Games, German sports circles here declared that the reasons which made Japan abandon the Games are fully understood here.

It was recalled that Germany has already made important preparations for the Tokyo Games, and that 100 of the best German athletes were to be sent.

Sports quarters here opined that the Games are now sure to be held at Helsingfors.

Is Wisest Course

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 14—Failing to express any surprise regarding Japan's decision to give up organization of the 1940 Olympic Games, French sports circles this morning declared that abandonment of the Games is the wisest course under the present circumstances. It was added that the new venue for the Games may be either Helsingfors or London.

Harvard Beats Yale Team, 7-1, For Polo Title

N.Y. Herald Tribune

BEDMINSTER, N. J., July 18—Harvard regained the national intercollegiate polo championship at the Burnt Mills Club's Schley Field this afternoon by defeating Yale, 7 to 1. Harvard held the title in 1936 and ousted West Point, defending champion, in the first round of this season's tourney.

An extremely soft field played havoc with players and ponies and accurate hitting was nearly impossible after the opening minutes. Despite constant tamping, the field was cuppy and shots continually went astray.

F. S. (Skiddy) von Stade jr., Harvard captain playing his final intercollegiate game, was the pace setter for the Crimson four while B. H. (Pete) Rumsey at back was an exceedingly active player from start to finish and his fine work prevented several Yale scores. In addition he took high scoring honors with three goals. Gaylord Dilingham at No. 2 and Bennett Forbes at No. 1 completed the Harvard line-up.

Yale used Billy Chisholm at No. 1 for four periods, substituting M. (Ken) Shiffer in the third and fourth sessions. Collister (Coddy) Johnson, Yale captain, was at No. 2 with A. G. (Alan) Corey jr. at No. 3 and C. M. (Mott) Woolley jr. at back.

Harvard secured the initial score of the contest after five minutes when Rumsey backed a shot into the goal mouth with Forbes knocking it through. Rumsey added another almost at the bell when Corey missed the ball in front of the goal with an opportunity to clear.

Yale held its own in a scoreless second period marked by penalties but the Crimson came back to score twice in the third period on tallies by Von Stade and Rumsey. Four goals down, Yale began to press in the fourth chukker and Harvard took advantage of lapses to conclude its scoring with three goals, Forbes, Von Stade and Rumsey tallying. The cuppy field handicapped play for the remainder of the game with the only other score being Chisholm's tally for Yale in the fifth period after a sally down the field aided by Johnson.

The intercollegiate trophy and individual awards were presented to the Harvard team by Mrs. Anderson Fowler, wife of the president of the Burnt Mills Club.

The line-up:

Pos.	Harvard (7)	Yale (1)
No. 1—	B. Forbes....	W. H. Chisholm
No. 2—	G. Dillingham.....	C. Johnson
No. 3—	F. S. Van Stade jr.	.....A. G. Corey jr.
Back—	B. H. Rumsey.....	.....C. H. Wooley jr.

Substitute—K. M. Schiffer for Chisholm.

Score by Periods

Yale	0	0	0	0	1	0	—1
Harvard	2	0	2	3	0	0	—7

Goals—Harvard: Forbes (2), Von Stade (2), Rumsey (3); Yale: Chrisholm.

The Famous Eliza House

The Eliza made immortal in Uncle Tom's Cabin was Eliza Harris; with her babe she was taken to the house inhabited by Rev. John Rankin in Ripley, Ohio, for a short rest. Having been provided with dry clothing, she was taken to another station of the "Underground Railroad" farther from the river. From there she was taken to Sandusky, Ohio, with her babe, where they crossed the lake into Canada and freedom. The Ohio legislature has appropriated the money and the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society is arranging to purchase the house on the hill and thirty acres of ground surrounding it, which will be made into the Eliza House State Park.

Sayonara! Olympic Games

Marquis Koichi Kido, Welfare Minister (right), caught by the news cameraman as he told the press Friday afternoon of the Cabinet's formal decision for cancellation of the 12th Olympic Games in 1940.

1940 Olympics Expected To Go To Helsingfors; London, New York Bidding

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 14—Japan's relinquishment of the right to be host to the 1940 Olympic Games, which was announced in Tokyo yesterday, did not surprise the International Olympic Committee, because Japanese delegate to the Cairo congress of the I.O.C. last March refused to give any binding pledge on the subject until this summer, Karl Diem, secretary-general of the 1936 Berlin Olympiad, told the press here today.

Revealing that the Cairo meeting secretly decided to shift the 1940 Games to Helsingfors should Japan drop out, Mr. Diem expressed belief that the Finnish capital will very likely be chosen to take the place of Tokyo, while the Winter Games will be held in Oslo.

The press meanwhile published under streamer headlines cables from Japan reporting cancellation of the Tokyo Olympiad. Outlining the historical developments leading to the cancellation, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung declared that Japan's decision is to be deplored in the interest of the continuity of the Olympic ideal uniting all nations of the world. The paper, however, recalled that the Olympics were interrupted twice during the World War and pointed out that naturally a country making such human and financial efforts as Japan is doing now will find difficulty in providing energies needed for the successful staging of the Games.

The Japanese Government's decision to cancel the Games, it was added, is not surprising since General Gen Sugiyama, Japanese War minister, already declared in March that it would be impossible to stage the 1940 Olympic in Tokyo if the current China conflict continued.

London Should Get It

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, July 15—London should be given the honor of organizing the 1940 Olympic Games since the contests have not been held in England since 1908, the London Daily Express declared in an article today commenting on Japan's decision to relinquish her organization of the next Olympiad.

The paper declared that influential members of the French Olympic Committee will press the I.O.C. to choose London as the venue for the next Games.

The Daily Mail, meanwhile, opined, that if Britain took the games on such short notice, there would be a wholesale cutting down in the events since a full program could not possibly be undertaken.

New York To Bid

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 14—With the publication of Tokyo's decision to give up organization of the 1940 Olympic Games, officials of both the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco International Golden Gate Exposition today expressed the hope that the next Olympics might be held in their respective cities.

In a statement to the press today, New York World's Fair committee, Grover Whalen, chairman of the New York World's' Fair committee, declared that he would immediately invite the International Olympic Committee to hold the games at the site of the 1939 New York Fair.

Reports from San Francisco, meanwhile, indicated that the International Golden Gate Exposition committee has already applied for the 1940 Olympiad. It is reported that a suggestion has been made by the Exposition committee that the Golden Gate Fair be held for two years instead of one.

Other reports indicated that Cleveland might also bid for the Games.

To Seek Winter Games

Domei Tsushin

OSLO, July 14—News of the cancellation of the 1940 Olympic Games by Tokyo not only caused considerable excitement here today, but gave rise to hopes that the 1940 Winter Games might be brought to Oslo.

Indicating that Norway will actively solicit for the Winter Games, Sir Thomas Fearnley, Norwegian sports leader, declared that Oslo will do its utmost to have the winter sports transferred here.

Norwegian sport leaders, meanwhile, convoked a special meeting to decide upon a plan of action.

Predicts Reduced-Scale Games

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, July 14—Expressing surprise at Tokyo's intention to cancel the 1940 Olympic Games, Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, today declared that although the Games would be held elsewhere, provided a world war does not break out, Tokyo's sudden withdrawal will probably result in a drastic reduction in the number of events in the next Games.

Mr. Brundage disclosed that Tokyo's decision to give up the Contests will probably result in a changing the dates of the Games, and this would undoubtedly benefit American athletes. He added that the International Olympic Committee will hold a meeting in the near future to decide whether the 1940 Games relinquished by Tokyo are to be held at London or Helsingfors.

Jersey City Tops Montreal By 7-3

JERSEY CITY, June 18—Jersey City captured its series with the Royals today, taking the third and rubber game, 7 to 3. Hy Vandenberg went the route for the Little Giants, limiting the Royals to nine hits for his fourth victory.

Bob Porter, who started for Montreal, was removed for a pinchhitter in the seventh after he was belted for ten hits and all seven of the Jersey City runs.

Babe Herman connected for his fifth home run of the season with Ken Richardson on base in the eighth. It was a tremendous 400-foot wallop over the right-field fence.

Budge Beaten Again In Yugoslav Tourney

Domei Tsushin

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, July 14—For the second time in three days, Donald J. Budge, recent winner of the Wimbledon men's singles crown, met unexpected defeat at the hands of a member of the powerful Yugoslav Davis Cup team, when Ferenc Puncec, mainstay of the Yugoslav squad, today scored a convincing three-set victory over the red-headed American star.

Puncec, who scored over Gene Mako, American Davis Cup player, last Tuesday, played brilliant tennis to down his American opponent. Three-thousand rabid tennis fans rose in their seats to cheer the victor after his triumph.

In the other match of the day, Mako, who lost to Puncec Tuesday, had little trouble in defeating D. Mitic in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1.

Having won two singles matches on the day's play on Tuesday, the Yugoslavs now lead three matches to one in the Yugoslav-American series now being played here.

Tri-Nation Meet Slated For Fall Is Also Cancelled

Now that the 12th Olympic Games have been cancelled for Tokyo, the axe is certain to fall on a number of athletic events of international scope that have been projected. Meeting this fate Friday afternoon was the Japan-Italy-German track and field meet to be held in Tokyo in the Fall.

The decision was reached at an emergency meeting of the preparations committee of the meet at the old headquarters of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation in the Marunouchi Building. The committee will meet at 1:30 p.m. next Monday and formally effect dissolution.

The Information Bureau of the Foreign Office Friday night wired Ambassadors Togo and Hotta at Berlin and Rome respectively of the cancellation of the meet and instructed them to obtain the understanding of the officials of the two countries.

Cancellation came when plans had virtually been completed for the meet that had been considered as a prelude to the Olympic Games in 1940. Acceptance of the Japanese invitation had already been accepted by Germany and the Italian Embassy here had approved the dispatch of Italian athletes.

Werner Klingeberg, technical adviser to the Olympic Organizing Committee and a representative of the International Olympic Committee, wired to the I.O.C. headquarters at Lausanne of Tokyo's abandonment of the 1940 Games.

The Olympic Organizing Committee was scheduled to meet formally for the last time today. The hour had not been set when notices were sent Friday night to members. Wording of the reason is expected to be one of the principal topics of discussion.

The atmosphere at the O.O.C. headquarters at the South Manchuria Railway Building in Akasaka was gloomy Friday upon reports of the Cabinet's decision to request the O.O.C. for abandonment. The clatter of typewriters was a thing of the past, according to Domei.

Cancellation of the Fifth Olympic Winter Games was decided also by the organizing committee at Sapporo.

California Takes 3 Boat Races From Cornell

N.Y. Times

ITHACA, N. Y., June 18—The Golden Bears of California rowed to three decisive victories over Cornell on Cayuga Lake today with their varsity setting a new course record for the three miles.

The varsity, displaying power to spare at a low beat, swept to a five-length victory in 15:51. It was the fourth three-mile race ever rowed on the lake and the new time eclipsed the mark of 17:17.6 set by a Cornell crew in 1926 when California was beaten. Cornell's varsity, out-rowed from the start today, finished in 16:08.

Almost as impressive as the first crew's feat were California's victories in the two-mile freshman and junior varsity races. The Western Cubs won by one and one-half lengths in 10:35, with Cornell timed in 10:39.5, and might have finished even farther in the van had not the No. 6 oar caught a crab a quarter-mile from the finish.

Cornell, which had sprinted magnificently to cut the California lead from one and a half lengths to a half length at the mile mark, was unable to capitalize on the break.

California's junior varsity, winning by three lengths, covered the course in 10:26.2, close to the record 10:23.4, set by Yale's varsity May 21 in winning the Carnegie Cup. Cornell was timed in 10:35.

Conditions were at their best for the freshman race, which was started by Referee Richard (Shorty) Aronson, former Cornell coxswain, shortly after 4 p.m. (Eastern standard time). Then the wind veered to the north and kicked up a sea. The varsity shells shipped some water.

California's eights showed superiority all the way down the course but gained their biggest advantage by fast, clean starts that left Cornell trailing in all three races by nearly a length in the first quarter mile.

Tokyo To Campaign For '44 Olympic Games

Tokyo will be a candidate for the 13th Olympic Games in 1944.

Decision to start such a movement was decided by the Municipal Olympic Committee at its meeting Friday afternoon to fall in line with the Cabinet's request for abandonment of the 1940 Games.

What to do with the Todabashi boat course, which is reported to be a third of completion, the projected cycling stadium at Shibaura, yachting harbor at Yokohama, the main Olympic stadium at Komazawa and the indoor sports center at Surugadai, will be deliberated after the final meeting of the Olympic Organizing Committee, it was decided.

Strafaci Rallies To Beat Turnesa For Golf Title

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON

N.Y. Times

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., June 18.—After battling valiantly against a big deficit in the early stage of the match and against a recalcitrant driver that had him constantly playing the odd shot, Frankie Strafaci, 22-year-old automobile salesman from Brooklyn, today won as brilliant a victory in the metropolitan amateur golf championship as was never gained.

Four down to Willie Turnesa, Holy Cross graduate and defending champion, after the first seven holes in the thirty-six-hole final at the Ridgewood Country Club, still 4 down at the tenth and 3 down at the half-way mark, young Strafaci, pupil of Wiffy Cox and a product of the public links, stuck doggedly to his task.

Steadily the holes Turnesa had won by virtue of a sensational 68 in the morning came back to Strafaci until finally, on the eleventh in the afternoon, the match was all square. The Brooklynite trailed once again when he lost the short No. 12 but he pulled even on the thirteenth (thirty-first of the match), then coasted home to a 3 and 1 triumph with unconquerable golf.

Birdies Overcome Deficit

It was a birdie 3 on the eleventh in the afternoon that put Strafaci even and it was a birdie 4 on the long thirteenth that squared the match again. Strafaci had lost the intermediate short hole by bunkering his tee shot.

Between the fourteenth hole and the seventeenth, where the match ended, the winner had three more birdies—a 2, 3 and 4.

A superb No. 7 iron to the short fifteenth hole (the No. 6 on the west course) sent Strafaci on a birdie rampage. At that one he almost knocked the flag-stick out of the hole, his ball landing twelve inches from the cup.

Turnesa, who had sensed the situation a few holes before, when Strafaci either won or halved holes that appeared to be lost after his errant drives, hit a fair shot himself and almost holed out a chip from the back edge of the green.

Playing the next hole, Strafaci "skied" his tee shot, but again played a marvelous second, an iron, that stopped close to the holes, while Turnesa's second, played from the rough on the left, found a bunker. Willie played a good explosion shot but missed the putt that would have been useless anyway, since Frankie holed a five-footer for his second successive birdie.

Second Lands Near Cup

At the last hole of the match, Strafaci again had to play the odd, after the second shot, but sent his ball two yards from the hole and dropped the putt for another birdie after Turnesa, who was more than twice as far away, missed his putt.

In adding the title to the Long Island championship which he won last Sunday while Ralph Guldahl was annexing the national open crown in Denver, Strafaci defied the fate that usually befalls a medalist.

Giants Tumble Osaka Tigers By 9 To 3 Score

The Tokyo Giants hit the ball with a vengeance to rout the Osaka Tigers, 9 to 3, in the nightcap of a triple-header of the professional baseball league Friday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium here. That made it two-all in the Giants-Tigers series for the season but the Tigers have already clinched the championship. The two teams will meet in the concluding game of the season at 4:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon at the same stadium.

The Osaka Hankyu squad nosed out the Lions, 3 to 2, while Nagoya sprung a surprise to beat the Senators by the same score in an 11-inning duel.

A home run smash into the right field stands by First Baseman Nagasawa with a man on in the fourth gave the Giants a 3 to 1 lead. They then clinched the game by registering five runs in the fifth. An error by the shortstop with the bases filled sent two men across the plate. A Texas Leaguer to right by Mizuhara scored Chiba. Shiraishi struck out but Nagasawa singled through second to bring in another run. Pitcher Nishimura was sent to the showers and Aoki took over the mound work. Yoshiwara singled to center to score Mizuhara for the fifth run.

Backstop Miura was the hero for Nogoya by coming through with the hit that brought in Ishida from third for the winning run in the last half of the eleventh inning.

Mills Shackles Yankees, 1 To 0, Beating Gomez

By ARTHUR E. PATTERSON

N.Y. Herald Tribune

ST. LOUIS, June 18—Another southpaw pitching recruit stepped into baseball's spotlight this afternoon when Howard Mills, one-time hurler for the United States Navy, strolled to the Sportsman's Park mound against the world-champion Yankees and tossed a brilliant four-hit shutout for the Browns, winning a duel with Lefty Gomez, 1 to 0.

Sprinkling eight strikeouts over the first seven innings at moments when they hurt the Yankees most, shackling all the New York batters, except Jake Powell, who hit two singles and a double, and Frankie Crosetti, who also slapped a two-bagger, Mills exhibited not only a varied assortment of stuff, but a world of courage when he squeezed out of jams in the seventh, eighth and ninth. It was the second shutout suffered by the Yankees this year.

Rain Stops Second

Set back in such fashion in the opener after winning six straight games the Yankees were further annoyed when, with their ace pitcher, Red Ruffing, on the mound a severe thunder storm in the first inning caused the postponement of the second game. The Yankees had not scored against Oral Hildebrand and the Browns had two on base and two out, Mel Almada up, when the storm broke. There was some consolation in the fact Cleveland lost to the Athletics, which kept the league leaders' advantage still at one game.

In each of the last three innings of the opener the Yankees had the tying run on second, but could do nothing about it.

With one out in the seventh, Powell rammed his double into the left field corner. Then Mills sent Hoag and Gordon down swinging. Again with one away in the eighth, Crosetti doubled and Rolfe walked, but Di Maggio hoisted weakly to the third baseman and Don Heffner skipped into short center for Gehrig's fly.

The ninth was an eventful frame for the Mills fraternity. First Buster Mills, the left fielder, almost knocked Red Kress down in a collision under Dickey's pop. Kress held the ball and came away with a headache for his troubles. When Powell lined his third hit of the afternoon into left the ball bounded past the same Buster for the game's only error, but Hoag fouled to the catcher and Buster Mills made a beautiful running catch of Gordon's blast down the left-field line.

Walks Three in First

Gomez was most unfortunate in bumping into an opponent of Mills's mettle. In the first inning it seemed he would be handed a sizable lead when, between outs, Crosetti, Di-Maggio and Dickey walked. But Powell was strikeout victim No. 1, ending the inning in the only out charged against him all afternoon.

Then, in the second, the Browns made three of their six hits and their only run. Clift walked and went to third on Allen's single, the hitter being caught at second base. On Bell's infield out off Gomez's glove Clift scored. Singles by Heath and Heffner added to Lefty's annoyance, but he fanned Howard Mills to get out of that spot. Thereafter no St. Louis cleat was set on second base.

But Mills was masterful. He fanned at least on Yankee and inning, except in the third, eighth and ninth. The outfielders had only six flies to snag and Heath was credited with eleven outouts, catching three fouls as well as the eighth strikeouts. Except for B. Mills's game-ending capture of Gordon's liner, the Browns didn't have a difficult fielding chance.

Mills's background is as interesting as was his performance today. Several years back he pitched his naval base team to a championship, winning fourteen games and the title by a no-hitter. He has been up and down three times in spring training trials, but Gabby Street taught him a side-arm delivery this year and thinks he may be another Bill Hallahan.

Manchoukuo Plan For Development Not To Be Altered

Hoshino Outlines Aims Of 5-Year Project In Talk With Press

Domei Tsushin

HSINKING, July 16—Manchoukuo's five-year industrial development plan will be carried out in its original form, Naoki Hoshino, Director of the General Affairs Bureau of Manchoukuo, told the press today. He returned here at 11:55 p.m. yesterday from Tokyo, where he attended the Japan-Manchoukuo Economic Conference.

The amount of material necessary to be imported to Manchoukuo from Japan and the other foreign Powers for the execution of the industrial development plan was made clear at the conference, according to Mr. Hoshino who revealed further that the minimum amount of important commodities which can be supplied to Japan from Manchoukuo was also pointed out on the occasion.

Mr. Hoshino stressed the bright prospects of the five-year plan, pointing out that necessary preparations will be completed at the Showa Steel Manufacturing Company by the end of this year to produce 2,000,000 tons of pig-iron per annum. In October, next year, the Penhsihu Iron Works will be ready to produce 500,000 tons of pig-iron per annum. An annual production of 2,500,000 tons of pig-iron is the aim of the five-year plan.

"In view of possible flow of materials from foreign Powers, control of foreign exchange will be necessary," Mr. Hoshino concluded.

Beautification Work At Shinjuku To Start With Ceremony On July 21

The ground-breaking ceremony for the project to transform the area on the west side of Shinjuku Station into a plaza of modern style, covering an area of 6,250 tsubo, and at the same time to establish a residental section of 13,000 tsubo, centering on the plaza, will be held at 1 p.m. July 21 at the site of old building of the Tobacco Monopoly Bureau, Yodobashi-ku. Mayor Hita Kobashi and others concerned in both the municipal office and Shinjuku will attend.

The work is scheduled to be completed by March, 1940, at an estimated cost of ¥3,938,000.

The city also is to push the work on the plazas in front of Otsuka, Ikebukuro and Shibuya Stations.

A Travers Les Concerts

Chantant et s'accompagnant elle-même à la guitare, Olga Coelho a rompu heureusement la monotonie des ordinaires récitals en nous divulguant avec infiniment des charme et d'intelligence des chants indiens, des lamentations d'esclaves, des chants d'amour, tous d'origine sud-américaine.

Non seulement elle chante fort bien, mais avec un sourire exquis et une simplicité adorable elle agrémente de brefs commentaires la présentation de ces mélodies pures aux rythmes précis qui ont la saveur étrange des races métissés qui les ont inventées.

Emma Otero, jeune soprano d'origine cubaine, est surtout une remarquable interprète de scompositeurs espagnols, et sa voix sait pour eux trouver parfois des accents d'une passion ardente, presque primitive, d'une réelle beauté. Les subtilités voluptueuses de Debussy s'accordant moins bien à ses aptitudes.

Juan Manen est, paraît-il, un violoniste réputé. Je ne l'avais encore jamais entendu; techniquement, il possède tant de tours dans so sac qu'on lui pardonne presque son constant mauvais goût pour le brio avec lequel son archet voltige dans les diableries de Paganini et dans les transcriptions de toutes sortes dont il est l'auteur.

L'art sérieux et délicatement nuancé d'Ernst Lévy est tout à l'opposé, il nous restitute dans leur authenticité la pensée des auteurs, que ce soit Bach, Beethoven ou Liszt. Et toujours avec un respect si scrupuleux qu'à son piano on dirait un prêtre qui officie.

La composition d'un programme est chose difficile: le choix d'un seul auteur résout facilement le problème: ainsi Albert-Lévêque, secondé par le merveilleux flutiste Gené Leroy, nous a donné une séance Bach d'une correction irréprochable.

Enorme succès aussi pour Rubinstein revenue à Paris, après de longues pérégrination à travers les cinq parties du monde. Il a retrouve son public élégant et cosmopolite que sa virtuosité impétueuse subjugue. L'illustre critique Emile Vuillermoz appelle Heifetz: le Rastelli du violon. Tout aussi brillamment Rubinstein tient, dans nos salles des concert, la place que le célèbre jongleur occupait au cirque.

Henri Gil-Marchex.

Economic Judges And Procurators To Be Appointed

To Deal With Violations Of Wartime Control Regulations

To make effective the operation of divergent legal measures put into effect for the control of important industries, adjustment of demand and supply of goods and restriction of price-boosting under the war situation, the Justice Ministry has decided tentatively to establish a system of appointing "economic procurators and judges" in the principal cities of the country, according to information obtained in authoritative quarters Saturday.

While some time will be required for judicial and budgetary preparations for the system, Justice Minister Suyehiko Shiono is expected for the time being to put a number of procurators and judges in charge of cases in connection with violations of the economic laws in the six largest cities of the country.

Prior to the decision to establish a special judicial system for the enforcement of economic laws, the Justice Ministry officials met officials of the Commerce and Industry Ministry Saturday afternoon to obtain a detailed explanation of the principles and a definition of the Law Concerning Temporary Measures on Exports and Imports and more than a dozen other economic laws.

The Justice Minister has decided to summon procurators of the principal cities in order to study legal questions relating to economic affairs.

Italy Will Punish Militiamen Who Fired On French Tourists

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 12—Summoning the French charge d'affaires at Rome, Jules Blondel, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano announced the Italian government's decision to punish the militiamen who fired on two Frenchmen who inadvertently crossed the Franco-Italian border near Abries, in the French Maritime Alps, on July 5, it was reported today from Rome.

According to reports, Count Ciano promised the French envoy that drastic instructions would be issued to avoid a recurrence of such incidents, and that an indemnity would be paid if requested. The Italian foreign minister expressed the hope that the student who was wounded in the back would recover speedily.

It was recalled here that on July 5, two Frenchmen, one a student and the other a tourist, crossed the Italian frontier by mistake and were immediately fired upon by Italian border guards. The student was seriously wounded as he turned to flee.

workmen are also permitted to ride in the cars. Negotiations are being carried on between the Japanese Army and the foreign owners of houses or land for rent.

The Japanese authorities, at the same time, are advising the proprietors of cafes and restaurants operating without licenses from the Municipal Council, to obtain permits according to the legitimate methods.

In most cases where differences have arisen between a private enterprise and the Japanese military authorities, it seems best to seek solution through the good offices of the Japanese Consulate-General here. There are instances where such differences have dragged on for several months, with the prospect of settlement no nearer than when the negotiations started. One prominent case may be seen in the negotiations between the Japanese military authorities and the water supply company in the French settlement. The parley was carried on for several months and the end did not yet seem any nearer. The Japanese Consulate then stepped in, talked the matter over with the representatives of the company, and the problem was speedily solved.

German Starts On Passenger Plane Hop Around The World In 18 Days

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 15—Hans Bertram, well-known German airman, started from the Tempelhof Airport at 30 minutes past midnight this morning on an attempt to circle the globe by passenger plane only in a scheduled time of 19 days 22 hours and 53 minutes. He hopes to be back in Berlin at exactly 11:23 p.m. on August 3.

On the first lap of his 39,350-kilometer journey, Bertram is flying aboard a regular Lufthansa transport to Bagdad. From there to Bangkok he will use the Air France, from Bangkok to Hongkong the Imperial Airways, from Hongkong to New York the Pan-American Airways, and from New York back to Berlin the Lufthansa's new trans-Atlantic service.

Interviewed before his departure, Bertram described his projected journey as a "world flight to the minute." He denied trying to set any sort of record but said he wished his trip to be a "memorial" to those who have given their lives to the promotion of commercial aviation.

If successful, Bertram's journey will take approximately one day and eight hours longer than that of H. R. Ekins, American newspaper reporter, who circled the globe in October, 1936, in 18 days 14 hours and 57 minutes. Ekins, however, traversed the Atlantic by the zeppelin Hindenburg.

Japan Able To Fight For Several Years, Virginia Parley Told

Domei Tsushin

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Virginia, July 12—Despite General Chiang Kai-shek's hope to defeat Japan by a "war of exhaustion," the latter is capable of going on fighting for several years, Dr. Elizabeth Schumpeter, of the Harvard Bureau of International Research, told the annual session of the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs here today.

Japan, declared Dr. Schumpeter, is not now or potentially weak as far as strategic and economic factors are concerned though "obvious she could not continue the conflict forever." At present, she added, even the severance of some supplies obtained from foreign countries would not prostrate Japan.

"It would all be quite different if Japan had to fight simultaneously against a first-class power such as Russia," asserted Dr. Schumpeter, "but thus far this threat is remote."

Hankow Session Of Kuomintang Organ Is Closed

To Create People's Political Councils For Provinces, Hsiens

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, July 15—After passing a number of bills, whereby discharging its duty as an advisory organ to the Government, the People's Political Council at Hankow was brought to a close with due ceremonies at 3 p.m. today it was reported here.

A declaration issued on the occasion reiterated China's dauntless will to resist Japan through mobilization of man power and commodities. Appreciating sympathy and assistance accorded by friendly Powers to China, it urged the governments and peoples of those countries to observe international and treaty obligations by taking sanctions against Japan.

Creation of people's political councils for all provinces, hsiens and cities was decided by majority at yesterday's session of the People's Political Council, according to information reaching here.

The decision is designed to establish closed relationship between the people and provincial governments, prepare for local autonomy and perfect mobilization.

The proposed councils will be established within three months for provinces and hsiens and six months for cities.

Observers here predicted that creation of such provincial organs will tend to increase Communist influence further, as it will give the Communists the chance of approaching the people.

13 Meetings Held

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, July 16—The People's Political Council in session since July 6 at Hankow, adjourned yesterday.

Bills handled in the 10 meetings of the Council and by its five investigation committees totaled 116.

The major part of the discussions has been focused on diplomatic and financial issues.

During the session, one member of the Communist Party present is said to have proposed that the National Government abandon the projected readjustment of relations with Italy and Germany. The proposal, however, was not approved.

Forty thousand rabid ball fans turned out for the concluding quadrupleheader of the Spring season of the professional baseball league Sunday at the Korakuen Stadium at Suidobashi. They had the treat of seeing Bucky Harris, Eagles' catcher, bang out to homers in the game against the Osaka Hankyu squad, duplicating his feat on the Saturday previous, for a new record of four homeruns in two successive days for the circuit.

Tigers Win

The champion Tigers went on a batting spree and bombarded four Giants pitchers for 16 hits to win 14 to 6 in the final game of the day. By virtue of this victory, the Tigers finished the season five full games ahead of the Giants.

The pennant was presented to Captain Kenjiro Matsuki of the Tigers immediately after the game by Tadao Ichioka, chief of the league. Trophies were also presented to Haruyasu Nakajima of the Giants, the league's leading hitter, and Hisanori Karita, coach and captain of the Senators, who on Saturday night had been voted the most valuable player in the season.

Heavy hitting featured the game between the Tigers and the Giants. Both scored three runs apiece in the first inning and a run each in the second. The Giants forged into a one-run lead in the third on the strength of a three bagger by Shiraishi off Kageura who had replaced Misono on the mound for the Tigers, and a fly to right field by Nagasawa.

But the Tigers deadlocked the count at 5-all in the first half of the fourth on Fujimura's two-bagger to center off Stalphin, the Giants' third pitcher in the game. They then grabbed the lead in the sixth. Fujimura and Yamaguchi both hit safely after two outs and Kageura smashed one too hot for the pitcher to handle and Fujimura romped home.

The Tigers clinched the game by tallying twice in the eighth. Stalphin lost his control long enough to force in a run and the other came in on a fielder's choice.

Hirayama's double brought in a run for the Giants in the latter half of the eighth but any hopes of catching up with the Tigers disappeared in the ninth when the Tigers went on a hitting rampage to score six runs. Successive hits by Tanaka and Igauye to start the inning chased Stalphin off the mound and Narita replaced him. But he fared even worse. The Tigers nicked him for four hits, including a homer by Kageura, to chalk up six runs.

Hankyus Outhit Eagles

The Hankyus outhit the Eagles, 11 hits to three, but weren't able to down the Eagles, the game being called off at the end of the ninth inning with the count standing as is at 2 to 2. Harris, first up in the ninth, deadlocked the count at 2-all by coming through with his second homerun of the day, a smash into the left field bleachers. His first came in the fourth when he tied the score at 1-all.

Center Fielder Omoda contributed to the Senators' 4 to 2 victory over the Dolfins by hitting a homerun in the first inning with a man on.

The Lions finally roared after a long sleep and nosed out Nagoya, 2 to 1, in the day's curtain-raiser. They tied the score at 1-all in the third when Right Fielder Mizutani poled one into the right field stands. They won the game in the fourth when Yamamoto walked to force in Nakano.

American Wrestlers In Debut Here Tuesday

The visiting American amateur wrestling team will make its debut in Tokyo Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Hibiya Park amphitheater when it takes on the All-Japan squad. There will be six bouts.

In the America-Japan meet held at the Koshien Stadium, near Osaka, on Saturday night, the two teams split honors in four bouts held.

The big feature is the return bout between Eiichi Kazama and Captain Emilio Bruno. Both are welterweights. Kazama was the victor last year.

25,000 Witness Yankees Rout Tigers, 10 To 3

By JOHN DREBINGER
N.Y. Times

DETROIT, June 26—Fighting resolutely in the teeth of a gale that lashed this metropolis in the wake of a 12-hour rain, the Yankees concluded their second Western trip of the year by thrashing the Tigers today, 10 to 3, while 25,000 sat in chilled silence.

The outcome permitted the McCarthy forces to slip eastward tonight in possession of the odd game of the three-game series and to push another half-notch nearer the front-running Indians, who, held idle again, now lead by only three and a half lengths.

All this was hardly what the crowd expected as a reward for having set what might easily stand as an all-time record for patience. That the game was played at all was due entirely to the tremendous display of civic enthusiasm which seems to grip the Motor City at the slightest provocation.

Determined to See a Game

It was still raining when game time arrived. But the folks were on hand, prepared to sit it out until doomsday, and this perhaps forced the weather to relent.

Anyway, at 4 o'clock the skies cleared, a water-logged tarpaulin cover was laboriously hauled off the infield and the battle began with Monte Pearson squaring away against Vernon Kennedy, Mickey Cochrane's mound ace, who was seeking his eleventh victory of the season.

Pearson reaped his fourth triumph with a snappy six-hit exhibition, while Kennedy faded out after the seventh to accept his fourth reversal of the campaign.

In addition to losing the game, the Tigers missed their chance of setting a new major league record for hitting home runs in consecutive games. Yesterday they had tied the Giants' mark of fourteen, set in 1935.

Kennedy's Mates Slip

With Kennedy none too well supported on the slippery field, the Yanks moved into the lead in the fourth and from then on were pretty much in command, finishing Kennedy with a three-run blast in the seventh. Lou Gehrig drove in two with a triple, the day's longest blow.

The boys were firing right into the wind, and the inviting double-deck stands which enclose the playing field in the revamped stadium here might just as well have been off in Canada.

The Yanks picked up a final cluster of four in the ninth off the left-handed Jake Wade, Joe Gordon belting in two of these runs with a single when the bases were filled.

Earlier in the battle Gordon poked in another run, while Bill Dickey, with a double and two singles, also played a prominent part in the attack.

Aside from a small lump on the side of his head, which made it a difficulty to balance his hat properly, our flashy Flash Gordon appeared none the worse for being hit yesterday, by a throw from York, who was trying to trap him off first.

By winning this game the Yanks concluded their jaunt through the West with a record of seven victories against six defeats, a snappy recovery, at that, when the misfortunes encountered in St. Louis and Cleveland are recalled.

Higgins' Record Is Outstanding In Boston Climb

By EDWIN RUMILL
Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, June 22—Frank "Pinky" Higgins, the big close-mouthed Texan from Dallas who plays third base for the Red Sox, was today the talk of baseball. He held a spot beside young Johnny Vander Meer of Cincinnati as one of the year's outstanding players. Johnny crashed the headlines recently for his no-hit pitching, while Pinky has written a new chapter in the record book with his heavy bludgeon.

Higgins was off to a slow start this season. With Jimmy Foxx, Manager Joe Cronin, Roger Cramer and other Red Sox team mates playing daily tatoos on enemy fences with their bats, Pinky's average stayed in a class with the pitchers. At the end of April he stood at .184, and had only seven hits in 38 trips to the plate.

Average Climbs

Running into May, however, the Higgins average began to rise. By the middle of the month he had climbed to .250. On the first day of June he had increased that mark to .260. When the Red Sox closed their recent home stand at Fenway Park, "Mike" had reached the .264 level.

His steady climb played an important role in the club's climb to second place in the American League standing.

In St. Louis, one week ago today, Higgins started a batting streak that has established an all-time major league record. In his sensational comeback, he has set up a standard that evaded the greatest hitters of all time—such men as Joe Jackson, Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Honus Wagner. Only Tris Speaker, of the old set, approached the Higgins record.

On Wednesday of last week, in Sportsman's Park, the Texan hit a single and double to start a hitting streak that has now extended through eight consecutive games. In the first game of Sunday's double-header in Chicago, on his final appearance at the plate, he touched Johnny Whitehead for a single. In the second game that afternoon he made a pair of singles and a double in three times up against Bill Dietrich, for a perfect day.

All-Time Record

But that was only the beginning. Yesterday the Red Sox played a double-header with the Tigers in Detroit, and Higgins contributed eight straight hits without interruption. Including the four in a row he managed in Chicago, the Detroit blows brought his unbroken string to the amazing total of 12, which happens to be an all-time record.

On July 8, 9, and 10 in 1920, Tris Speaker made 11 consecutive base hits for the Cleveland Indians. Nine players have managed 10 straight.

But until yesterday, no man had ever reached 12. And with the string still intact, Higgins is in a position to extend it today as the Red Sox continue their series with the Tigers.

As a result of this remarkable court, the Higgins average has now bared to .316. He has gained 51 points during the most recent two weeks of campaigning through the American League.

Nakajima Wins Batting Honors In Pro Ball Loop

Burly Right Fielder Haruyasu Nakajima, former Waseda University star, of the Tokyo Giants was the leading hitter in the Spring season of the Japan professional baseball circuit which closed Sunday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium. Out of 145 charged times at bat in 35 games, he lashed out 50 hits for 62 bases for a .345 average.

In second place was the veteran Kaichi Masu of Nagoya with a .330 mark, the result of 36 hits in 109 times at bat.

Bucky Harris, slugging catcher of the Eagles, placed third with 45 hits out of 139 times at bat for a .324 average.

Vander Meer Out To Win Strikeout Record In Majors

NEW YORK, June 30—Possessor of the record-shattering feat of two successive no-hit, no run games, young Johnny Vander Meer is headed toward the throne of National League strikeout king.

The Cincinnati Reds "whiff artist" has long since pitched his way into the hearts of the fans of the Ohio City. To all corners of the baseball world, tales of his two perfect game performance have sped.

But, Vander Meer, a quiet 22-year-old fast-ball flinger, is taking his regular turn on the mound for the Reds, toiling away to hang up a winning season in his first full year in the majors. If records come his way, Johnny will accept them modestly as he has twin no-hit game feat which amazed baseballdom.

Vander Meer first came to the fore in 1936, when he was selected as the outstanding minor league player of the year. The young Dutchman from Midland Park, N. J., was pitching, at the time, for the Durham Bulls and he led the Piedmont league with strikeouts with 295.

His dancing fast ball has carried him to performances with the Reds this year which have highlighted the club's climb to the first division. It was Johnny, who dumped the Giants out of first place temporarily on their recent trip west. Coupled with the home run slugging of Ival Goodman, the heavy-hitting of rookie first baseman, Frank McCormick and the master minding of Manager Bill McKechnie, Vander Meer has transformed the Reds from the league doormat into a real first-division contender.

If Vandy takes the strikout laurels he seems headed for, he'll take his place besides such pitching greats as Christy Mathewson, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Dazzy Vance and, more recently, Dizzy Dean and Carl Hubbell.

Johnny, after holding the Boston Bees hitless, outshone the 1,200,000 watt lighting display in Ebbets field at the inauguration of night baseball in the Metropolitan district, by holding the Dodgers hitless and winning 6 to 0.

It was just the proper performance needed to complete the circus-like exhibition staged in the Brooklyn ball yard. With bands blaring and the ebony bullet, Jesse Owens, performing in a track exhibition, Vander Meer's no-hitter was the last word in spectacular displays for the newly avid first nighter.

Vandy added seven strikeouts to his rapidly mounting total, which if it continues at present pace, will surpass Hubbell's mark of last season in which he whiffed 159 in 262 innings. Matty set the National League strikeout record in 1903, when he fanned 267 and pitched 367 innings for a strikeout rate of 6.54.

Johnny's record this year is the talk of the leagues. In addition to his two no-hitters, he pitched three straight five-hit ball games, blanked the Giants once, and beat the Cardinals in 10 innings.

While rounding off the rough edges via Dayton, Durham, and Syracuse, Vandy, it appears, has mastered his chief stumbling block—wildness. His terrific speed plus a good curve presages a long and brilliant career for the New Jersey youngster.

O.O.C. Office Will Be Open Until Year-End

The Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee's Office at the South Manchuria Railway Building here will remain open until the end of this year to clear up various official business in regard to the 12th Olympic Games, which have been cancelled.

Werner Klingberg, technical adviser to the O.O.C. and two of his German secretaries will receive their salaries as well as traveling expenses amounting to 35,000 yen, while the other office expenditures are estimated around 250,000 yen until the end of this year.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the Toda Rowing course, construction of which was started in 1937, will be completed at a cost of 200,000 yen regardless of the cancellation of the Tokyo Olympiad. The Yacht Harbor at Yokohama will also resume construction at a cost of 200,000 yen.

Furthermore, an organization which is similar to the American Olympic Committee will be organized permanently in order to carry out the constant Olympic works as well as increasing Olympic interest among Japanese people.

Completing plans to send out all wires to inform Japan's decision to abandon the 1940 Olympic Games to Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, chairman of the International Olympic Committee, the I.O.C. headquarters at Lausanne and others, Dr. Matsuzo Nagai, secretary-general of the Olympic Organizing Committee, Sunday recalled his memories of the past one year as the pivot man of the Olympiad.

"I feel as if I lost my own child," he declared.

"I must confess that I have been continuously stating out our willingness to stage the 1940 Olympic Games," continued Dr. Nagai added, and "I cannot face Avery Brundage, who has so kindly given me his wholehearted support and assistance throughout the Cairo session of the I.O.C. as well as all other gatherings."

Furthermore, the former Japanese Ambassador to Germany stated that the Japanese sports had been put back for 20 years. Japan must be prepared before bidding for the next Olympic Games, he said.

"I cannot accept the recommendation to be a member of the International Olympic Committee following the death of Prof. Jigoro Kano. In my own opinion, a candidate for the I. O. C. must be a young sportsman who is capable and knows something of sports. I am not fit for such task."

He added that Count Michimasa Soyeshima has announced his determination to resign from the I. O. C., therefore, Japan loses two I. O. C. members almost at the same time.

The Oldest Man Alive

Sheik Rafai Rabai, who now lives in Cairo, Egypt, was 12 years old in 1786 when Frederick the Great of Prussia died. He is probably the only man alive today who has seen Napoleon the first in person at the time the latter was in Egypt towards the end of the 19th century. He remembers well Napoleon's victory over the Mamelukes near the Pyramids in Egypt. At the age of 164 he still enjoys excellent health, and has all his teeth.

Games Abandonment Is Not Surprising To Baillet-Latour

Domei Tsushin

OSTEND, Belgium, July 17—Making his first public statement regarding Japan's relinquishment of the 1940 Olympics, Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, chairman of the International Olympic Committee, told reporters here today that he was "not surprised" in view of the prolongation of the Sino-Japanese conflict and the considerable expense involved in playing host to the Games.

Interviewed upon his arrival here by boat from England, Count de Baillet-Latour said that he had read of Japan's decision only in the press and did not know whether it has yet been officially communicated to the permanent I.O.C. office at Lausanne. He confirmed that the last I.O.C. meeting at Cairo decided to offer the Games to Finland in case Japan withdrew.

Asked whether he conferred with British Olympic officials at London, the Count denied that any sort of formal meeting had taken place and that any decision had been reached regarding the allotment of the 1940 Games.

'Dizzy' Dean Makes Comeback, Beating Braves By 3-1 Score

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, July 17—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, who had been laid up with a sore arm since May 3, today made a brilliant return to action by pitching the Chicago Cubs to a decisive 3 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves.

Indicating that his two months' ailment is now completely cured, the right-handed mound wizard struck out three batters and issued no walks to hold the Braves to a single run.

Hungarian Captures Reich Singles Crown

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 17—With no German player successful in reaching the final round, O. Szigeti, of Hungary, today won the Reich men's singles crown by defeating Bernard Destremeau, of France on the last day of the national tennis championships here. The women's title was won by Mrs. Svend Sperling, of Denmark.

Szigeti, who ranks as Hungary's No. 1 court ace, turned back Destremeau in three straight sets, 8-6, 6-3, 6-3. Mrs. Sperling meanwhile dropped only one game in a 30-minute, whirlwind final against Miss Margot Lumb, of England, winning by scores of 6-1, 6-0.

Schmeling's Trainer Hurt In Auto Accident

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 17—Max Machon, trainer of Germany's defeated heavyweight boxing challenger Max Schmeling, suffered severe injuries when his car skidded and overturned on the Halle-Nuremberg auto-speedway today.

Machon's car, it is learned, was proceeding at a high rate of speed when it suddenly skidded over a wet-spot and turned turtle several times. Taken to a hospital, he was found to have both legs and several ribs broken.

The veteran trainer returned to Germany with Schmeling only a short while ago following the latter's unsuccessful attempt to wrest the heavyweight crown away from Joe Louis, American negro champion. Louis knocked out the German fighter in the first round of their bout at New York on June 22.

Jack Dempsey Picked Schmeling To Knock Out Louis, Who Won

By JACK DEMPSEY

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, June 19—Max Schmeling will knock out Joe Louis in a short, fast fight.

That's a bold beginning, isn't it? But as a fighter I always tried to get to the point right off the bat.

However, I had better hasten to add that the fight between Louis, the champion, and Schmeling, the challenger, next Wednesday night is one of the most difficult heavyweight championship battles of our generation to forecast. And that includes my two fights with Gene Tunney. (Louis won by a knockout in the first round.—Editor).

In all the other heavyweight title bouts of recent days, the guesser has always had some peg on which to hang his hat. But this one has more confusing angles, more conflicting things to be considered, than any fight I recall. The only thing about it that's positively certain is:

The fight will not go the distance. It will end in a knockout.

But in trying to pick the winner don't just say, "Schmeling knocked him out the last time and he ought to do it again." That's like saying, "The Yankees won yesterday so they ought to win today." Too much happens in a fight between two evenly matched fellows that won't happen when they meet again.

For example, I think Schmeling won the first fight with Louis at the end of the second round. If you recall, they had been mixing it hotly when the bell rang; Louis dropped his hands and Schmeling, who had started a punch, couldn't stop it and it blasted smackdab on Louis' jaw. That punch was the turning point of the fight. Louis never fully recovered from the blow.

The punch was entirely accidental, but the point I'm making is that such a thing probably won't happen again.

Another thing in Louis' favor is the fact that he has trained harder for this fight than he did for the last one. Like the experts, Louis thought that first battle would be just a warm-up. His training camp was more like a sideshow at Coney Island. There has been no such tomfoolery this time.

And remember one more thing. Despite the terrific beating Louis took from Schmeling he still managed to recuperate enough midway in the fight to come close to a knockout. In that seventh round he landed several fierce punches to the body that I could feel where I was sitting. It was Joe's dying stand, and he almost won the fight that round. One more punch, and he might have. Will he land that one more punch in this fight? After all, when two highly skilled, well-trained boxers are in the ring, every solid punch is a lucky punch.

Both Schmeling and Louis are devastating punchers. Max has one of the finest righthand wallops I have ever seen. And Joe is one of the best two-fisted punchers in history. He carries dynamite in both hands. I like his left book particularly.

However, I don't think either is a great fighter. Schmeling isn't, or he would have dealt quickly with Max Baer the time he had the Livermore Butcher Boy on Queer Street, instead of letting Baer come back and win; and he wouldn't have fiddled around with the wobbly Louis for an extra eight rounds as he did in their last fight. Schmeling is too deliberate, too cautious, in my opinion, to be a great fighter; but maybe I'm prejudiced in favor of those reckless babies.

As for Louis, he was probably the best 21-year-old heavyweight in history, but he hasn't gone on from there. Before their last fight, Schmeling told newspapermen: "I zee zomet'ings." Well, I zee zomet'ings, too. There are still too many flaws in Louis' fighting armor. He's a good fighter, mind you, but not a great one. Gene Tunney would have cut him to shreds. Bill Brennan would have beaten him easily.

Worst of his flaws is his failure to learn how to stop a right-hand punch to the head. He just won't keep his left high enough to block an opponent's right. He should have learned his lesson during the last fight with Schmeling, but he failed to show any improvement along this line in his last three fights with major opponents. Old Jim Braddock dropped him with a right in the first round last summer in Chicago; Tommy Farr, the powder-puff puncher from England, hit him frequently with rights; and Nathan Mann belted the champion of times in the first two rounds of their brief battle.

None of these fighters punches with the deadly force or accuracy of Schmeling, and if they can find Louis' chin, so will Max—with more serious results.

This failure to block a right-hand punch becomes an almost impossible handicap when you remember that Louis is so physically constructed that he can't stand up well under a solid blow to the head. I've been quoted as saying that Louis can't take a punch. That implies that Joe hasn't the courage to take punishment. Nothing could be further from the truth. He is as game as they come. He will take a punch and he will get up when he is hit and hurt, but unfortunately his physical make-up is such that, game as he is, he simply can't absorb a stiff right hand to the head.

A lot of experts think Louis has been gunshy since his knockout by Schmeling. I would say he was just more cautious. The experts, however, think this caution is going to hurt him. I'm not so sure of that. I think his caution is one of the advantages he will have in this fight that he didn't have before. He'll be on the lookout for Schmeling's right hand; the last time he wasn't.

Some experts think also that Schmeling will have a tremendous psychological advantage over Louis because of his previous victory. Again I can't quite agree. I don't think Louis knows what fear means. You must have imagination to have fear. Louis has no imagination. Just two fists. And you'll need more than a ker or a sneer or a memory to beat him. You'll have to do it with solid punches.

This time, Louis will be fighting as the champion. Usually, a fighter who becomes champion immediately becomes a better fighter. He usually forces the challenger to fight his kind of fight. "I'm wearing the crown," he says in effect, "come and get it."

But Louis won't be able to do this to Schmeling. In the first place, Schmeling believes, and I agree, that he would be the champion if he had been allowed to fight Braddock last summer. He doesn't look on Louis with the awe the average fighter shows a champion. In the second place, Schmeling's experience and better generalship will force Louis to fight the kind of fight Max wants.

Louis marched to fame by making his opponents come to him. Schmeling knows this—just as he knew it two years ago. In that fight neither fighter tried a punch until a minute and a half of the first round had elapsed. Max simply wouldn't lead to Joe. When there finally was a lead, it was Joe who made it. And from then on Joe fought the kind of fight Schmeling wanted him to fight.

Schmeling, of course, hasn't revealed his plan of battle, but I think he will follow the same line of counterattack. And, if he does, Louis is going to fall right in and do what the smarter Schmeling wants him to do.

In my opinion, however, Schmeling won't have to stick to his counter-fighting style to whip Louis. The night I seconded Max Baer against Joe I got the idea that a fighter who could take a punch should keep on top of Louis because Joe's punching isn't as effective when he is in action as when he can set himself. I kept telling Baer to go in and throw punches. If he'd done it, I think he, instead of Schmeling, would have exploded Louis.

My theory was proved by Tommy Farr. He waded right into Louis and forced him. If Tommy could punch harder I think he would have knocked Louis out that night.

Studying this match, though, we've got to remember that Schmeling may be fighting two opponents instead of one. Father Time might step into the flood-lighted arena and fight side by side with Joe Louis. The German is 33 years old; Louis only 24. There's an old proverb that says youth must be served. Schmeling has long since passed the age when most fighters start down-grade. Thus far, the "Schlager" has been one of the few exceptions. But, sooner or later, the years are bound to take their toll. The old man with the scythe is one guy a fighter can't beat forever. The first thing he does is to grab hold of your legs. I know. In those two fights with Tunney I could hardly move. And that's where Schmeling will feel it when age begins to hit him.

However, if, as I am pretty certain, the fight is a short one, Schmeling should not be bothered by his age under any condition.

But there's the bell. . .

And may the better man win!

Japan Invited To Send Cagers To Philippines

According to a letter received by Ri Sohaku, official of the Association, from Dr. Regino Ylanan, executive secretary of the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation, the squad would be of 10 players and one coach, to ocmpete in about 10 games over a space of three weeks up to the end of January.

A decision is expected to be reached shortly by the local Association.

Runyan Wins Title

Domei Tsushin

SHAWNEE, Pennsylvania, July 17—Paul Runyan, of New York, captured the national Professional Golfers Association championship for the second time here today by defeating Sam Snead, of West Virginia, 8 and 7 in the final round. He won his first title in 1934.

Ralph Guldahl, who recently won the U.S. Open championship, was eliminated in the second round.

Track Crown Won By U.S.C. For 4th In Row

Herald Tribune

MINNEAPOLIS, June 18—The mighty Trojans of Southern California, clinching the right to recognition as one of the most balanced college track and field teams of all time, won their fourth consecutive National Collegiate championship at Minnesota's Memorial Stadium today.

As three records were erased from the N. C. A. A. record book, Southern California swept to the team title by scoring 69¾ points, with Stanford taking second place with 38. The Trojans, who recently walked away with the I. C. 4-A. championship, collected only two first places, winning the mile run and the pole vault, but they picked up points in nine of the fourteen events. Michigan was third with 28¾ points, followed by Wisconsin at 28 and Notre Dame and Rice Institute each with 24.

Cruter and Albritton Set Record

One of the records to fall was the oldest in the N. C. A. A. book—the mark of 6 feet 7¼ inches hung up in the high jump by W. C. Haggard, of Texas, in 1926.

As the shadows cut deeply into the sun-flooded stadium and with 20,000 spectators looking on, Gil Cruter, of Colorado, and Dave Albritton, of Ohio State, waged a fight for first place that surpassed the deal they put on last year for high jumping honors. As they did a year ago, they wound up in a deadlock, this time at 6 feet 8¼ inches. Wesley Allen gained a tie for third place in the event, and the 3¼ points he earned enabled Michigan to nose out Wisconsin for third-place honors.

Trojan Runs 4:08.3 Mile

The other two records wiped out were in the mile and two-mile runs. Louis Zamperini, Southern California's former Olympic runner, made a great stretch drive to defeat the defending champion and favorite, Charles Fenske, of Wisconsin, by four yards. His time was 4:08.3, six-tenths of a second under the old mark made by Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, in 1934. Fenske, the Big Ten titleholder, simply didn't have enough to fight off the Trojan ace's sudden rush from second place.

In another thrilling finish, Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, the Big Ten champion, dethroned Greg Rice, of Notre Dame, in the two-mile grind. Mehl, catching Rice in the stretch, went on to win by a foot in 9 minutes 11.1 seconds, taking three and one-tenth seconds off the old record made by Rice last year.

Wolcott Scores Hurdles Double

The meet's only double winner was Flying Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute. He captured the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.1 seconds a tenth of a second slower than the meet mark set in yesterday's trials, and then took the 220-yard low hurdles in 23.3 second.

Only two others joined Cruter and Albritton in the select group of successful defending champions. Johnny Woodruff, the great Negro from Pittsburgh, retained the halfmile title easily in 1:51.3 seconds, a second slower than the meet record he set last year. Pete Zagar, of Stanford, repeated in the discus event with a toss of 162 feet 3¼ inches.

In addition to Fenske and Rice, three other athletes were shorn of their titles. Ben Johnson, of Columbia, who held the 220-yard dash crown, injured an ankle in the stretch and pulled up as Mack Robinson, Negro ace from Oregon, won in 21.3 seconds. Earl Vikery, red-headed Southern California speedster, lost his crown to Wolcott in the 220-yard low hurdles, taking second place three feet back of the blond star. Lowell Todd, of San Jose State, defending champion in the javelin throw, could do no better than fifth in that event, won by Nick Vukmanic, of Penn State, with a toss of 215 feet 8¼ inches.

Ben Johnson Fails Twice

Mozel Ellerbe, Negro sprinter from Tuskegee Institute, won the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds, three-tenths of a second slower than the meet record held jointly by four men, of whom the most recent performer was Jesse Owens, of Ohio State. Adrian Talley, of Southern California, was a close second, with Ben Johnson, of Columbia, third in a race so close that there was a possibility a photo of the finish might change the judge's decisions.

Johnson, the Lion's defending champion in the 220-yard dash, pulled a muscle 75 yards from the finish of that race and dropped out.

Ray Malott, of Stanford, who won the 440 dash in 46.8 seconds, was second, with Jack Emigh, of Montana, third in the 220 sprint.

Malott Beats Miller by Yard

Malott captured the 440 in three-tenths of a second above the meet record held by Archie Williams, of California. The Stanford ace led all the way, beating Erwin Miller, of Southern California, by a yard, with H. Bachman, another Trojan, third.

John Francis, of Notre Dame, gamely battled his way up to within a foot of Woodruff in the 880, but the Pittsburgh ace pulled away to a four-yard margin at the finish. Fenske, of Wisconsin, Big Ten half-mile champion, was away last, but fought his way to fourth place. John Marion, of Praireview Teachers, Texas, took third.

Bill Lacefield, of the University of California at Los Angeles, won the broad jump title, leaping 25 feet 1⅛ inches, far under the meet record of 26 feet 1⅜ inches, held by Owens, of Ohio State. Michigan's Bill Watson, one of the favorites to take the event, was second at 24 feet 11 ⅜ inches.

Ryan Trails Hackney in Shotput

Elmer Hacknew, of Kansas State, won the shotput title with a toss of 51 feet 8½ inches, with Francis Ryan, of Columbia, second, at 51 feet 5¼ inches, and Watson, the Michigan star, third at 51 feet 3⅜ inches.

Pete Zagar, of Stanford, successfully defended his discus crown, hurling the platter 162 feet 3¼ inches, some seven feet further than Hugh Gribben, his teammate.

Loring Day, West Coast champion, won the pole vault for Southern California with a leap of 14 feet 2 inches. Irving Howe, his fellow Trojan, and Milt Padway, of Wisconsin, and George Varoff, of Oregon, tied for second place at 13 feet 10 inches.

Leg Injury Puts Bruno Out Of Tonight's Meet

Emilio Bruno, outstanding member of the visiting American amateur wrestling team, will not compete in the America-Japan meet tonight at the Hibiya Park amphitheater because of a leg injury for which he is presently receiving attention at the Keio Hospital, it was learned this morning.

Bruno, welterweight champion of the United States, was scheduled to meet Eiichi Kazama, invincible grappler in this country. Kazama defeated Bruno in their bout last year and the latter was keenly looking for a chance for revenge.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

A Record In Ship Construction

When Colbert became Minister of Marine in France under King Louis XIV, he decided to "sell" the King the idea of a powerful navy for France. The King was induced to go to the shipyard in Toulon, where on July 14, 1679, a 40 gun frigate named the "GRIFFON" was built, equipped, armed, manned, and put to sea within nine hours by a gang of laborers numbering 500 men.

The King, who was present during the entire time in which the warship was created from scratch, boarded the ship and took a short trip in it himself, which proved highly satisfactory. As a result, Colbert received the King's consent to the construction of a large fleet on which construction began immediately.

The account of this record in marine construction can be found in a contemporary French newspaper, the Gazette de France of November 11, 1679.

Dear Mr. Vaccari,
I have the honour to express to you my hearty respect and gratitude for your worthy work "Complete Course of Japanese-Conversation Grammar" and its "Supplement." It was really a great joy to me to find in these books an easier and smoother way to attain success in my teaching Japanese language here. Your books have especially delighted my students because of the treatment of the Japanese grammar in a similar way to that used in teaching European languages as adopted by you in your volumes, and in this respect, above all, your method is highly estimated.
Your Grammar and Supplement are really the best things for foreigners to master the Japanese language without discouraging themselves.
Y. Ohtani

....this new manual is practical and useful, and what Count Kabayama in his prefactory note calls its "human method" will make it acceptable to the growing number of English students of Japanese. When the student has mastered its sixty lessons he will have completed the equivalent of an ordinary Japanese school education and will be at home in the language and able to proceed to higher things.
A feature of the book is its transliteration with Chinese characters of every Japanese example rendered in English spelling so that the student is gradually familiarized with the appearance of the language as well as with its sound.

Japan Beats U.S. In Wrestling By 4 To 1 Score

Japan defeated America 4 to 1 in their dual amateur wrestling meet Tuesday night at the Hibiya Park amphitheater before a capacity crowd of 3,000 rabid fans, notwithstanding the cancellation of the match between Eiichi Kazama and Emilio Bruno, welterweights, the two outstanding members of both teams, because of a leg injury to the American.

Victory came to Japan through a clean sweep in the four bouts in the bantamweight and featherweight classes over which there had been some doubt expressed on the part of the Japanese coaches. Ota and Kurihara won decisions from D. Hendershot and M. Dalo respectively in the bantamweight class while Hayashi decisioned C. Conley and Yoshioka won by a fall from C. Weede in the featherweight division. It came in 2 minutes 52 seconds.

Fortune Masdeo, who was here with the American team brought last Summer by Coach Roy Moore, registered the only victory for America by winning a decision handily from Inaba in the lightweight class. The American, who went through the bouts last year without a defeat, showed marked improvement within the past one year and outclassed Inaba. The latter, however, despite his short experience in the game, gave a good account of himself by preventing Masdeo from scoring a fall.

Kenyon College Athletic Teams Are Successful

Christian Science Monitor

GAENBIER, Ohio, June 22—If anyone were to award a national all-around athletic championship to one single American college or university, little but mighty Kenyon would be a serious candidate for that most highly coveted distinction.

Limited in enrollment to 300 men, who hail from nearly every State in the Union, Kenyon has knocked off big-time colleges and universities with considerable regularity during the past year, bringing back to Kenyon's picturesque "Hill" two national titles and a "blanket" record in four sports that is probably unequaled in collegiate history.

Heading Kenyon's championship teams is tennis, acclaimed by authorities, critics, and coaches who have seen the members perform as one of the "greatest college teams ever assembled." Led by Don McNeill, national men's indoor champion and No. 9 in the U. S. L. T. A. ranks, and coached by Bruce Barnes, former world's pro doubles champion, the all-junior team has swept through collegiate competition without defeat for the second successive year.

Don McNeill Stars

Individually, in tournament play, the team members, Morey Lewis, Canadian national champion; George Pryor; Gordon Reeder, and Don McNeill, hold more than 35 national, regional, and state singles and doubles championships.

Don McNeill, who is called a cinch for Davis Cup play by Ellsworth Vines, Bruce Barnes, and many others in the tennis "know," will see action this summer in every major Eastern tournament. His coach believes he is destined to some day reach the No. 1 world's tennis position.

Kenyon's famous flying team, whose members fly for fun, in the space of one short year, have clearly demonstrated that they are among the finest in the nation. Winning the national intercollegiate championship at Hicksville, L. I., last summer, they proved their superiority in all departments by defeating Harvard, M. I. T., Michigan, Minnesota, Smith, Stanford, Southern California, Detroit, Pennsylvania, and Amherst. The Eastern intercollegiate title was later flown back to Kenyon, as was the Midwest championship, giving Kenyon the first "grand slam" in collegiate flying history.

The flyers number in their group the national intercollegiate president, Clark Henderson, Washington, (D. C.) junior, whose father was a big factor in the development of the United States air mail during the Coolidge Administration. Clark is high-point man for Kenyon, although he is hotly trailed by Rod Boren, Dayton, Ohio, and Capt. Bill Ligurance, of La Jolla, Calif.

Strong at Polo

For four straight years, the Kenyon polo trio has won the Midwest polo crown, consistently numbering among her victims universities 10 to 50 times her size. Winning eight of nine starts this year, Kenyon was the first team west of the Alleghenies to ever challenge Eastern polo supremacy. Although they went down to Harvard in the intercollegiate semifinals, they served definite notice of their present and future strength. Little Bobby MacMahon captained this year's team and throughout a brilliant four-year career, has stamped himself as one of the most effective college horsemen ever to wield a mallet.

The swimming team, Ohio champions, piled up a total of 600 points to opponents' 225 in an undefeated season. Not only were the strongest Ohio colleges ducked, but such teams as Illinois, Carnegie Tech, and Wayne also fell before it.

Brilliant success in sports, as in any other field of endeavor, seldom "just happens." At Kenyon, athletic success was the result of a sound idea and the efficient execution of that idea.

Not long ago, national surveys showed small colleges something that some of them had always known, namely, that football is often a losing proposition financially and of doubtful value to the individual player.

Instead of merely de-emphasizing football, R. J. Kutler, Kenyon athletic director, decided to emphasize those "useful" sports which would provide more actual fun for players, and which could be successfully carried on by the small college.

In order to launch such a program, two things were necessary—excellent equipment and facilities, and the finest instruction obtainable. Within two years both requirements were met. A School of Equitation, the gift of R. A. Weaver, a Cleveland alumnus, brought to Gambier a string of polo ponies, an indoor and outdoor ring and one of the nation's most eminent riding instructors, Capt Frederic Ebrle, a graduate of the Royal Bavarian Military Academy at Munich. A $15 semester polo fee overcome the "high hat" conception of the game and it became a major Kenyon sport.

Tennis, for decades the college's most popular and successful sport, in 1936 received impetus in the form of four of the best courts money could buy. Kenyon's original courts have always been known as among Ohio's finest. Instruction and severe competition, so necessary for the development of top-flight tennis, was and is provided by Kenyon's coaches, Bruce Barnes, who teaches the varsity, and Randall Jarrell, who concentrates on non-varsity and inter-fraternity aspirants.

The School of Aviation became a reality in 1935 and consists of a 125-acre field, two hangars, two planes, and a club room, all the gift of Wilbur L. Cummings, New York alumnus. Donald Gretzer, former test pilot and commercial pilot, came to Gambier as instructor, both in flight theory and in practical instruction.

A glass-topped swimming pool, the last word in pool construction, the gift of Charles Shaffer, Kenyon alumnus, took its place on Kenyon's "Hill" in 1936 and Chuck Imel, well-known Mid-western swim coach, quickly developed his charges into one of the nation's most formidable aquatic groups.

Today, barely four years after the Kenyon "Useful Sport" campaign was born, Kenyon undergraduates are among the nation's most successful four-sport men, and probably have as much if not more fun with their athletics than any other group in the world.

Helsingfors Receives Official Olympics' Bid

HELSINGFORS, July 18—An official invitation from the International Olympic Committee to organize the 1940 Olympic Games at Helsingfors was received today by the Finnish Olympic Committee, sports circles revealed this afternoon.

Following the recent announcement of Tokyo's intention to relinquish her rights to hold the next Games, Finland was regarded as the most likely candidate to be given the honor of organizing the 1940 Olympiad.

Nornay Saddler Tops 831 Rivals In Rumson Ring

N.Y. Herald Tribune

RUMSON, N.J., June 25—Ike Tennyson's brook, the smooth fox terrier, Champion Nornay Saddler, seems able to run his victory streak on forever, annexing his twenty-fourth best in show in the tenth annual event of the Monomouth County Kennel Club, held on the Harding estate today. The award came from the hands of John G. Bates, who took little time in sorting out the six finalists before he motioned Len Brumby to put Saddler, from the Wissaboo Kennels of James M. Austin and Madeline West, into the No. 1 spot.

Bates backed up the judgment of the terrier group arbiter, W. Ross Proctor, who said that Saddler was in the best condition he ever had seen him, and the former went even further by admitting that this was the best smooth he had seen in twenty-five years. The dog from Old Westbury, L. I., has taken so much silverware and other trophies in a little more than a year that it is rumored that Austin soon will have to build an addition to his house, or else move his family out to make room for the winnings.

Runner-up in Question

It would be hard to say what dog might be ranked second in Bates' findings, and among ringsiders there was divided sentiment for and against the other finalists. The working group sent up the veteran campaigner, Mrs. Florence B. Ilch's collie Champion Bellhaven Black Lucason, the only group winner of 1937 to repeat. Louis J. Murrin's Borzoi still had plenty of form to take the hound group, and the non-sporting victory of the Pillicoc Kennel's poodle Champion Pillicoc Aplomb was popular. The black cocker spaniel Champion My Own Brucie topped an excellent sporting group for Herman E. Mellenthin, while the toy winner was a surprise, being Mrs. Margaret Gutz's Pekingese Pay Ching Wo Won.

The show was the best in the series held here, not only in number, but in quality. The event drew an entry of 834 dogs in sixty-six breeds, but heavy week-end traffic kept many exhibitors away.

Breeze Tempers the Heat

A stiff breeze relieved the heat and helped make enjoyable what evolved into a three-ring circus. Spectators and exhibitors were puzzled as to what to watch, for during the afternoon there was the choice breed judging, obedience classes and the water retrieving exhibition.

The latter drew an entry of eleven dogs, representing cocker spaniels, English springer spaniels, Irish water spaniels, German short-haired pointers and Labrador retrievers. Several hundred spectators swarmed to the banks of the Shrewsberry river, where in the face of a stiff breeze and waves that sometimes were larger than the competing dogs, a fine demonstration was put on. Few failures were recorded under the judging of Harry Caesar and J. Gould Remick.

The winner here was the Labrador retriever, Banchory Varnish, owned by Mrs. Katherine E. Starr, of Islip, L. I., and handled by Dave Elliott. Second was taken by the Irish water spaniel, Champion Black Water Bog, C. D., C. D. X., owned and handled by Thomas C. Marshall, of Fairfield, Conn. Third went to the English springer spaniel, Champion Fast, owned by Mrs. W. Morin, and handled by Harry C. Cameron.

Marshall proved that a bench show champion and obedience winner also could do well in the water and put in a hectic day, taking best of breed with one entry, Bog's Jiggs. He put three dogs into the water and two dogs, all of the same breed, in the obedience work.

The obedience classes drew their usual large gallery and the dogs performed well for their handlers under the judging of Miss Frances Thord-Gray.

Yankees Rally To Take Lead In American League

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 18—The hard-hitting New York Yankees, last year's World Series winners, smashed their way to the top of the American League this week by taking seven out of eight games, pushing the Cleveland Indians, who have led the loop all through 13 consecutive weeks of play, into second berth. The Boston Bees are a close third, being only one game behind the Indians.

In the National League, the sensational Pittsburgh Pirates nosed the New York Giants, last year's pennant winners, out of first place, while the Chicago Cubs, with six wins and two losses, moved from fourth to third place. The Pirates this week took four games and lost three. The Giants apparently entering another slump lost four out of seven games played.

The standings of the teams, including games played today, are as follows:

Giants Beaten, 5-0

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 26—The Cubs did not waste their hits and the Giants had practically none to waste at the Polo Grounds yesterday as Clay Bryant yielded only three well-spaced singles in shutting out the embattled forces of Colonel Bill Terry, 5 to 0.

That neat bit of hypnotism startled a crowd of 13,914 and the colonel even more. He can now feel the heat of the National League pennant race singeing the back of his neck. The Giants are only a game and a half ahead of both Cincinnati and Chicago, with the Reds a scant five percentage points in front of the Cubs.

The Chicagoans did not do any two-fisted slugging of the Joe Louis pattern themselves, but they bunched two safeties for as many runs in the second and three more for a trio of tallies in the fifth. They had only two other singles to be extravagant with in their total of seven hits off the combined offerings of Harry Gumbert, Bill Lohrman and Walter Brown.

One Every Three Innings

As for the Giants, they were helpless against the speed and guile of Bryant. The big right-hander was touched for one hit in the first, another in the fourth and the last in the seventh. He yielded only two walks, so that second base looked as far to the Giants as the Sahara. Not one of them reached that station and a base on balls resembled a full-fledged batting rally.

The job Bryant did in achieving his fifth victory of the season as opposed to five defeats was easily his best of the campaign. He had the Giants popping up so much that some of the spectators had the roofs of their mouths sunburned from gazing aloft. Nineteen New Yorkers were retired on sky-rocket shots. Since three men fanned, there were only five retired on ground balls, an amazing feat for Bryant.

With two out in the first, Jimmy Ripple lashed a single to left. Harry the Horse Danning slammed one to the same spot to open the fourth, and Hank Leiber cracked one to center with two out in the seventh. Bryant was bowling over the Giant hitters like duck-pins.

First Homer for Cavarretta

Gumbert did not pitch too badly in the four and a third frames he lasted. In the second Frank Demaree hit safely, and Phil Cavaretta promptly blasted a fat pitch into the upper right field stands. It was his first homer of the year, which just goes to show the way the wind blows in this series.

As latter development indicated, that blow was sufficient to win the ball game.

The fifth inning put the game on ice, which, was a good idea, since the Polo Grounds were very much like a furnace. Demaree opened the festivities by dropping a double in left. Cavarretta hammered a prodigious fly to the vicinity of the Giant bull-pen and Demarees scampered to third.

Then Gumbert began to complicate things. He caromed a fast ball off the left elbow of Billy Jurges, then walked Bryant, who is no Red Ruffing as a hitting pitcher. That filled the bases, and Lohrman, seeing the impending storm, began to warm up hastily.

Indecision Results in Hit

Stanley Hack was the next batter. He hit a bouncing grounder just to the right of Sambo Leslie. Sambo started for it, changed his mind, then waved a fond farewell to it as it scooted to right field for a hit and two tallies.

Gumbert then walked to the nearest exit. Lohrman stepped in just in time to retire Billy Herman on a pop to Leslie. But Carl Reynolds cracked a line drive to right to send Bryant home just before Gabby Hartnett struck out.

Lohrman gave only one other hit the rest of the way before turning over the job to Brown for a one-two-three ninth inning.

Tigers Won Batting Honors In Pro Loop

The Osaka Tigers led all professional teams in batting in the spring season of the Japan Professional Baseball Federation, the championship of which they captured, according to official statistics released today. Out of 1,194 times at bat in 35 games, they lashed out 320 hits for 430 total bases for a .268 mark.

The Giants were second with a .250 mark, the result of 288 hits in 1,151 times at bat.

The Dolfins, who finished next to the cellar champion Lions, led in stolen bases with 50.

Miss Walsh First In 9 Track Events

PITTSBURGH, June 25—The first Polish Olympics, with attracted nearly 600 contestants and more than 3,000 spectators to the University of Pittsburgh Stadium, furnished a colorful backdrop today for a new display of Miss Stella Walsh's athletic prowess.

The Cleveland girl, who starred for Poland in two international Olympics, won nine of the ten women's individual events and ran on two relay teams. With her firsts in the 50, 100 and 220 yard dashes, 70-yard low hurdles, 8-pound shot-put, javelin, discus and basketball throws and the broad jump, Cleveland's Polish Women's Olympic Club won the team championship.

Miss Walsh sped over 100 yards in 10.8 seconds in a morning trial, but rain later slowed the track and her time for the final was 11 seconds. She took only one leap and won the broad jump with 18 feet 7 inches.

The Polish Falcons of America won the men's team title from the Polish National Alliance and the Polish Roman Catholic Union. The competition was part of a two-day celebration by the Polish Falcons of the fiftieth anniversary of their organization.

The Elizabeth (N. J.) Falcons scored 37 points in the men's track and field events for the nucleus of the organization's championship. New Britain, Conn., contributed 14 and Erie, Pa., 13.

Walter Kuzianik, Rider College star of the Trenton (N. J.) Polish Alliance, led the opposition to the Falcons with firsts in the 100 and 220 and third in the broad jump.

A Falcon team of Erie, Pa., won the men's swimming title by a 24-to-22 margin from the Polish Roman Catholic Union, represented by swimmers from Gary, Ind., and vicinity.

Max Baer Signs To Box For Mike Jacobs

By JOSEPH C. NICHOLS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 26—Mike Jacobs took a day off from the ardors of running things at the New York Hippodrome yesterday and remained at his home in Fair Haven, N. J. There he spent the afternoon in his extensive gardens, pruning a petunia here, clipping a rose there and spraying insect powder wherever he thought it might do the most good.

But if the Saturday afternoon gardener was of the opinion that the Hippodrome would leave him alone, he found himself sadly mistaken. On Wednesday night, it will be remembered, Mike, as president of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, promoted a million-dollar boxing enterprise in which Joe Louis, defending his heavyweight championship of the world, trounced the German challenger, Max Schmeling, so badly that he sent him to a hospital.

Beaten Badly Enough

There seemed no question about Louis' superiority, and the promoter hied himself to his sylvan retreat yesterday firm in the belief that Schmeling would be the last man in the world to interfere with his bucolic pursuits. He was quite nettled, then, when the news reached him that Joe Jacobs, who manages Schmeling, was issuing bulletins to the effect that Mike had agreed to promote a rematch between Schmeling and Louis next June.

"What's he want to go around saying things like that for?" inquired the promoter about the man who bears the same name as he does. "That fighter was beaten badly enough on Wednesday night. There's no call for a rematch. And especially next June! Schmeling is old enough now. What will he be, as a fighter that is, in a year?

"If he must fight, though," Mike added, "I've got just the match for him. I'll put him in with Tommy Farr any time he wants to go. Then, if he beats Farr decisively enough, he can have a selling point for another Louis fight. But as for now, nothing doing."

Mike went back to his buds and blooms and worked on them until dark. Then, feeling time hanging heavily on his hands, he jumped into the family chariot and motored down to Long Branch. There he looked up Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, and his manager, Ancil Hoffman. With little ado, the promoter pulled a contract out of his pocket and urged Baer to read it. It called for the fighter to confine his services only to ventures promoted by Jacobs within the next three years, a contract with dire possibilities for Baer, for it could mean a fight with Louis.

When that was pointed out to him, Baer blurted: "That's just what I want, another fight with Louis. He beat me once, but now I'm a father, I got insurance, levity has gone out of my life, and I want to be the champ again." He babbled some more along incomprehensible lines, giving rise to the thought that he might be haunted by Louis' specter already. At any rate, he signed the contract, and so did Hoffman, who doesn't have to take any punches.

Mike admitted that he is grooming Baer for a September fight with Louis. "Yes, he's the man," declared the promoter. "Just where I'll put the fight, though, is hard to say. It will take a lot of drum beating in New York, because that's where Joe knocked out Max before. I might put it in Chicago, and then again there's a possibility that I'll take it to the Coast. I'll announce it soon enough."

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

City Of The Blind

Vetrenik, Yugoslavia, is a city of the blind for blinded Serbian veterans of the World War. When the blind soldiers first came here, they were all bachelors, and to provide them with wives, the King had some advertisements published in Serbian papers. The responses were very profuse. Most of the girls were surprisingly good looking. When the day came, Velyko Ramadonovich, the Director of the Blind Institute, sized up the applicants, paired them off, and took them to the Chapel where they were married. The Director gave away every bride and was best man as well. Since the marriages took place, about 100 children have been born, all of whom have received the name of Alexander in honor of their royal benefactor.

Max Schmeling Never Had A Chance Against Louis, New York Accounts Show

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 23—The exploding fists of Joe Louis crushed Max Schmeling last night in the ring at the Yankee Stadium and kept sacred that time-worn legend of boxing that no former heavyweight champion has ever regained the title.

The Brown Bomber from Detroit, with the most furious early assault he has ever exhibited here, knocked out Schmeling in the first round of what was to have been a fifteen-round battle, and retained the title won last year from James J. Braddock and has now defended successfully four times.

In exactly 2 minutes and 4 seconds of fighting Louis polished off the Black Uhlan from the Rhine, but, though the battle was short, it was furious and savage while it lasted, packed with thrills that held three knockdowns of the ambitious ex-champion, every moment tense for a crowd of about 80,000.

A Representative Gathering

This gathering, truly representative and comparing favorably with the largest crowds in boxing's history, paid receipts estimated at between $900,000 and ¥1,000,000 to see whether Schmeling could repeat the knockout he administered to Louis just two years ago here and be the first ex-heavyweight champion to come back into the title, or whether the Bomber could avenge this defeat as he promised.

As time is measured, the investment in seats, which ran to $30 each, was excessive. But for excitement, for drama, for pulse throbs, those who came from near and far felt themselves well repaid because they saw a battle that, though it was one of the shortest heavyweight championships on record, is surpassed by few for thrills.

With the right hand that Schmeling held in contempt Louis knocked out his foe. Three times under its impact the German fighter hit the ring floor. The first time Schmeling regained his feet laboriously at the count of three. From the second knockdown Schmeling, dazed but game, bounced up instinctively before the count had gone beyond one.

On the third knockdown Schmeling's second and closest friend, Max Machon, hurled a towel into the ring, European fashion, admitting defeat for his man. The towel sailed through the air when the count on the prostrate Max had reached three.

Ignored in Boxing Here

The signal is ignored in American boxing, has been for years, and Referee Arthur Donovan, before he had a chance to pick up the count in unison with knockdown timekeeper, Eddie Josephs, who was outside the ring, gathered the white emblem in a ball and hurled it through the ropes.

Returning to Schmeling's crumpled figure, Donovan took one look and signaled an end of the battle. The count at that time was five on the third knockdown. Further counting was useless. Donovan could have counted off a century and Max could not have regained his feet. The German was thoroughly "out."

It was as if he had been pole-axed. His brain was awhirl, his body, his senses were numbed from that furious, paralyzing punching he had taken even in the short space of time the battle consumed.

Claims Blurred Vision

Following the bout, Schmeling claimed he was fouled. He said that he was hit a kidney punch, a devastating right, which so shocked his nervous system that he was dazed and his vision was blurred. To observers at the ringside, however, with all due respect to Schmeling's thought on the subject, the punches which dazed him were thundering blows to the head, jaw and body in bewildering succession, blows of the old Alabama assassin reincarnate last night for a special occasion.

Louis wanted to erase the memory of that 1936 knockout he suffered in twelve rounds. It was the one blot on his brilliant record. He aimed to square the account and he did.

Because of the excitement attending the finish, Louis, in the records, will be deprived of a clean-cut knockout. It will appear as a technical knockout because Referee Donovan didn't complete the full ten-second count over Schmeling. But this is merely a technicality. No fighter ever was more thoroughly knocked out than was Max last night.

Thrilling to the spectacle of this short, savage victory which held so much significance was a gathering that included a member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Governors of several States, Mayors of cities in the East, South and Middle West, Representatives and Senators, judges and lawyers, politicians, doctors figures of prominence in the professional world, leaders of banking, industry and commerce, stars of the stage and screen, ring champions of the past and present, leaders in other sports and other fields—all assembled eagerly awaiting the struggle whose appeal drew them from distant parts of the country and from European countries.

Millions Hear the Fight

In addition to those looking on at the spectacle were millions listening in virtually all over the world, for this battle was broadcast in four languages, English, German, Spanish and Portuguese, so intense was the interest in its outcome.

Louis, hero of one of the greatest stories ever written in the ring, owner of a record of thirty-eight victories in thirty-nine bouts spread over four years, entered the right favorite to win at odds of 1 to 2. He won like a 1-to-10 shot, like a fighter on whom you could write your own ticket. The knockout betting was at even money, take your pick. It could have been on Louis at 1 to 10, for Schmeling never had a chance. His number was up from the clang of the opening gong.

Schmeling, 32-year-old campaigner over a period of fourteen years, aspired to the unparalleled distinction of being the first man to regain the heavyweight crown. He suffered, instead, the fate that overtook Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Jeffries and Jack Dempsey, ring immortals all, who tried and failed.

The fury of Louis' attack explains the result in a nutshell. The defending champion came into the ring geared on high. He never stopped punching until his rival was a crumbled, inert, helpless figure, diving headlong into the resined canvas, rolling over there spasmodically, instinctively, trying to come erect, his spirit willing to return to the attack, his flesh weak, for mind and muscle could not be expected to function harmoniously under the terrific battering Schmeling absorbed in those fleeting two minutes.

Max Misses Two Punches

Emphasizing the savagery with which Louis went after this victory is Schmeling's feeble effort at retaliation. The German ex-champion threw exactly two punches—and both missed. That is how completely the Bomber established his mastery in this second struggle with the Black Uhlan.

With the opening gong, Louis crept softly out of his corner, pantherlike, eyes alert, arms poised, fists cocked to strike from any angle as he met Schmeling short of the ring's center. Max backed carefully toward his own corner, watching Louis intently, his right, the right which thudded so punishingly against Joe's jaw and temple two years ago, ready to strike over or under a left guard. At least, that was Schmeling's prearranged plan.

But Louis wasted only a few seconds in studying his foe, menacing Max meanwhile with a spearing left, before quickly going to work.

Like flashes from the blue, the Bomber's sharp, powerful left started suddenly pumping into Schmeling's face. The blows tilted Max's head back, made his eyes blink, unquestionably stung him. The German's head was going backward as if on hinges.

Max's face was exposed to left hook attack and Louis interspersed his attack with a few of these blows, gradually forcing Schmeling back to the ropes and preventing the German from making an offensive or counter move, so fast and sharp and true was the opening fire of the defending champion.

The third America-Japan amateur wrestling meet will be held at Kyoto at the Kyoto Gymnasium at 6 p.m. Saturday.

The bouts follow:

The Americans split 2-2 in the first match at Osaka and lost 4 to 1 Tuesday night in Tokyo.

Louis Was A Bit Sore Against Max

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 23—"Now I feel like the champion."

These were Joe Louis' first words on his arrival in his dressing room.

"I've been waiting a long time for this night," he added, "and I sure do feel pretty glad about everything. I was a little bit sore at some of the things Max said. Maybe he didn't say them, maybe they put those words in his mouth, but he didn't deny them, and that's what made me mad."

What Louis referred to, probably, was the statement attributed to Schmeling a month ago, to the effect that the Negro would always be afraid of him. Something must have rankled Joe, for the savagery with which he battered down the German was never displayed in his other bouts here.

Talks to Governor Murphy

Most of Louis' remarks were addressed to Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan, one of the first admitted to the champion's dressing room.

The Governor admittedly was "full of hero-worship" as he shook hands with the Detroit boxer who, on his own account, was immeasurably pleased with Murphy's visit.

"You'll never know how my heart thumped during that round, Joe," said the Governor.

"I'm glad I made it short for you, sir," responded the champion, who looked exactly like a wool-gathering youngster standing in awe of royalty, instead of a young man who had just earned about $400,000 in 124 seconds.

Louis' managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough, were incensed at Schmeling's claim of foul at first, then laughed it off, saying: "That's for German consumption."

Joe Going to Ball Game

Asked if Schmeling would be considered for a return fight, Black replied, "Certainly not. We've demonstrated tonight that Joe is just too good for Schmeling. We've had enough of him, and he certainly has had enough of us!"

The champion's immediate plans are indefinite. He'll stay around to collect his check today, and probably take in the ball game at the Polo Grounds.

Foul Is Claimed By Schmeling A Kidney Blow

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 23—In his dressing room after the quickest knockout on record in a heavyweight title fight, Max Schmeling claimed that he had been hit by a foul kidney blow, the second punch that Louis landed.

The German said that the blow paralyzed him and that for a few seconds he could not see. When reminded that there was no foul possible under the rules in this State, Schmeling still insisted that the blow was foul and that it was the cause of his defeat.

"The punch in the kidneys paralyzed me," said Max. "I felt like I had a sharp cramp and I could not move myself around. Then I can't see for a little while."

According to Max, the first punch Louis landed was a left hook to the jaw, then followed a right to the kidney. The blow did land near the kidney while Schmeling was fighting with his body and left shoulder turned toward Louis and was leaning back behind his own left guard. This position made his left side an easy target.

Schmeling was asked why he got up so soon after the first two knockdowns.

"Was your head clear?" he was asked.

"Sure, my head was clear. I knew what I was doing."

Before that, however, Max had said that he did not know what happened for a minute after he was hit in the kidney. However, it was after that blow landed that Max landed the only really good shot he had in the short fight.

Lands a Short Right

That punch was a short right which caught Louis on the face but apparently did not hurt him. He tried another a second later and it went over Louis's shoulder.

Although he was still groggy as he was taken to his corner, Schmeling had fully recovered before he left the ring and was none the worse for the fight when he reached the dressing room.

Asked if he would fight again, and would he meet Louis again, Max said "Yes" quite positively. Mike Jacobs, promoter of the fight, said that he would use Max in another fight here, but that Max Baer would definitely be the opponent for Louis in September.

Max Machon, Schmeling's trainer, who threw the towel into the ring, explained that he had done so because he could see that Schmeling could not move and did not want him to be seriously hurt.

Schmeling did not have a mark on him and posed for photographers. As soon as he could dress, he said he was going to be examined by his own physician, and departed in company with his American manager, Joe Jacobs.

Harvard Rallies To Beat Yale, 6-3

N.Y. Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 22—The Harvard battery of Tom Healey, the big sophomore right-hander, and Catcher Paul Doyle was outstanding as the Crimson squared the Yale series at one victory apiece and gained undisputed possession of second place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League by coming from behind to defeat the Elis today, 6 to 3. A gay Class Day crowd of 7,000 witnessed the contest at Soldiers Field.

Healey won his own game by poling one of John (Bing) Crosby's offerings to right center for a home run, driving in Doyle ahead of him, to climax Harvard's decisive four-run surge in the fourth.

Healey allowed the Blue six singles and the Crimson ticked Pitchers Crosby and Bud Humphreys for seven hits. But the margin of success developed from Harvard's two extra-base hits in the fourth.

The Crimson reunionists and their families felt the wilting heat until the last half of the fourth, when Yale had hung up a 3-0 lead and it looked as though second place in the league race would be shared by Yale, Harvard and Princeton, but the rally ended all hopes of a tie.

Crosby, who had allowed Harvard only two scattered hits in three innings, passed Dick Grondahl and Rud Hoye in the fourth. Jo-Jo Soltz then flied out to Bill Loveday, playing second base for the Elis.

Swim Body To Prepare For 1940 Competition

Regardless of whether Japan will compete in the 12th Olympic Games which will now be held at Helsinki in 1940, the Japan Swimming Federation will make preparations for competition, it was decided by its directors at a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Accordingly, it was decided that the national swimming championships to be held next month, this time at the Korakien pool near Osaka, will be the first tryouts for the Japanese Olympic team.

Already planned meets and training periods will be held as scheduled, it was decided.

Cunningham Wins 880-Yard Race In N.Y. Meet

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

YONKERS, N. Y., June 25—With a collective eye toward Buffalo, where next week-end they will encounter much more stubborn opposition in the national A.A.U. senior track and field championships, the New York Athletic Club athletes today at Glen Park again romped off with the metropolitan senior crown. It's a habit with them.

To the surprise of no one at all, the Winged Foot aggregation began scoring early, kept it up all afternoon and after tallying in twenty of the twenty-one events on the program, wound up with the imposing total of 122 points. It was no contest.

Meet Attracts 8,000

In the presence of a crowd of 8,000 persons, who suffered in the intense heat, Bernie Wefers' charges proved far too strong for the others. As a matter of fact, the aggregate points scored by all the other clubs, in addition to "unattached," did not equal the winning score.

Behind the victors trailed the New York Curb Exchange and the Grand Street Boys Association, deadlocked for second with 19 points each, with the Millrose A.A. next with 14, as the Winged Foot accounted for nine individual championships.

Nine Titles Retained

It was an intresting if not exciting meet, with nine titles being retained and three records being shattered. In the latter department the principals were Ben Johnson, now with the Curb Exchange; Perrin Walker, J. Kingsley Lattimer and Frank Ryan, the latter trio representing the Winged Foot.

Johnson, victor in the final, and Walker each did 0:9.7 for the 100-yard dash. Walker was caught in 0:09.7 in his heat. Lattimer negotiated the 220-yard low hurdles in 0:23.8, a tenth of a second better than his own record. Ryan came through with a tremendous toss of 52 feet 7¾ inches in the shot-put to shatter Leo Sexton's 1932 mark of 52 feet 1½ inches.

In the matter of surprises the most important was the mile victory of 17-year-old Leslie MacMitchell, the schoolboy sensation, who will be graduated from George Washington High School on Tuesday. He came from behind to triumph in the slow time of 4:25.6, sprinting away from Howie Borck, the I.C.A.A.A.A. titleholder, in the last twenty yards to win by six yards.

Glenn Cunningham, last year's mile winner, passed up that crown to capture another, the 880. This he achieved without too much effort in 1:56.5, and by the margin of seven yards over Lou Burns, former Manhattan College ace, who is now with the Sixty-ninth Regiment A.A.

Cunningham won despite a spike wound in his right leg, sustained at the very outset and caused by the size of the field, thirteen, which ganged up at the start. Borck was in this one, too, but was virtually eliminated by a fall at the beginning as he tripped over Sheldon Eldridge of the New York A.C. Cunningham's injury was only slight and he will run the 1,500-meter test at Buffalo as scheduled.

Herbert Captures 440

Jim Herbert, ten yards behind at the first turn, worked his way up to third at the last turn and with twenty yards remaining caught and passed John Quigley, De La Salle Institute star, and won the 440 by about a yard in 0:49.8, retaining his crown.

Eddie Gordon, 1923 Olympic champion, was the only double winner. He captured the broad jump and 120-yard high hurdles for the Grand Street boys.

Of special interest was the match race between Josef Mostert, Belgian middle distance star, and Ross Bush, former Southern California ace, over the half-mile distance. This went to Mostert in 1:54.4 as the victor stayed off a desperate closing spurt by Bush and won by less than two yards.

Cromwell Has Four-Year Plan For Zamperini

Christian Science Monitor

EVANSTON, Ill., June 25—Dean Cromwell, coach of Southern California's great track team, has a "four-year plan" he believes will give Louis Zamperini a new world's outdoor record for the mile run in 1940.

Zamperini of the Trojans and Charles Fenske, Wisconsin's long-striding distance star, are expected to put on a mile run duel which will develop into the top feature of the second annual Pacific Coast Conference-Big Ten track and field meet, held today at Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium.

If things work out the way Cromwell thinks they will, the race will be just another step toward a goal set for Zamperini a year ago.

"When I first saw Louis as a freshman I decided to take a leaf from Russia's book and establish a four-year plan for his development," Cromwell said yesterday. "So far, it's worked out fine. I want him to reach peak in 1940 and by that time I'm confident he'll run and outdoor mile in 4m., 4.4s."

The world's outdoor mile record is 4m. 6.4s., set by Stanley Wooderson of England last August. Glenn Cunningham, America's great miler, did the mile indoors in 4m., 4.4s. at Dartmouth and his 4m. 6.7s. performance of 1934 at Princeton ranks as the American outdoor record. Glenn once said that "if a four-minute mile ever is run, Zamperini is the boy who'll do it."

The Southern California ace is only a sophomore and Cromwell says he physically is capable of consistently adding more speed to his stride. He upset Fenske, who ranked as the Nation's top collegiate miler, at the National Collegiate meet last Saturday, with a 4m. 8.3s. performance for a new collegiate meet mark.

Ulbrickson Is Answer To Strong Crews At Washington University

By RICHARD L. NEUBERGER
N.Y. Times

SEATTLE.—The University of Washington tradition of victory on the water has been built up over eleven years, and it centers around one man, Alvin Martin Ulbrickson, the Washington crew coach. Tall, broad-shouldered, gray-eyed, Al Ulbrickson is only 35. He is the youngest crew coach in America, save one, but his crews carrying the purple and gold hold a position comparable to that of Notre Dame's football teams under Knute Rockne. Their boathouse on the timbered shores of Lake Washington has been called "the undisputed rowing capital of the world."

In 1936 the varsity crew won the right to represent the United States at the Olympic Games, and then swept to victory over the boats of the other nations. Last year on the Hudson, the Washington freshmen, junior varsity and varsity crews all sped down the broad waterway so swiftly they set new records for the Poughkeepsie course in all three races.

The Washington oarsmen have a trick of their own. The present crew coaches at Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Pennsylvania, Cornell and California all once rowed in Washington boats. Al Ulbrickson's stroke style and rowing theories are copied all over the world. His ideas and suggestions are final wherever stronglimbed athletes are taught to be expert oarsmen. Rowers watch intently the developments on the mountain-encircled sweep of Lake Washington.

Ulbrickson was already a national figure when he became Washington's coach at the age of 24. Today, with his crews supreme both here and abroad, he still looks youthful and even boyish. Seattle thinks of him as "Al." He has a big smile that his friends speak of as a "watermelon grin," and two years ago he was voted the handsomest man on the ocean liner taking the American contestants to the Olympic Games. He is 6 feet 2 and weighs 190 pounds.

The coach will discuss economics as readily as crew racing. He usually carries a newspaper or magazine folded in his pocket, and the part that interests him is as likely to be an analysis of government spending as it is to be a sports item. He majored in economics at the university, and from his watch chain dangles a Phi Beta Kappa key. On the Washington campus he is still the legendary character who simultaneously was the school's greatest stroke oar and one of its most illustrious scholars. Professors all over the West cite his record to athletes who fail to make their grades.

His family lived on an island out in Lake Washington. He used to row a battered old rowboat to high school. He also went fishing in the Cascade Mountains, and pulled against the whitecapped rivers that surge down to the Pacific. By the time he entered the university in 1922 he knew what it was to swing an oar with all the power of his shoulder and back muscles. He immediately became stroke of the freshman crew.

During all three of his varsity years he sat in the stroke position and paced his boatmates. Twice he stroked them to national championships at Poughkeepsie; once they finished second to Navy. During the last mile of his final race he had a cracked rib, but he rowed on and Washington crossed the finish line a winner.

Washington's crew coach is a quiet, reserved man, who sits in the rustic boathouse and listens while his assistants and members of the crew swap yarns. He does little of the talking himself. When he has something to say he speaks in a low voice, pulling at the towel he wraps scarflike around his neck. His oarsmen sometimes have to strain forward to hear him. He never yells at his rowers, and the twinkle goes out of his eyes when he hears one of them swear.

"Cuss words never budged an oar," he once said to an athlete.

Rigid adherence to training rules is a fundamental precept with this young coach. Concerning these he is as uncompromising as a timeclock. "You can't live on thick gravies, whipped-creamed desserts and double helpings and row four miles," he said to this interviewer recently, as he took off his coat and vest and put on an old purple sweater with a big, gold "W" and three gold stripes. "If there is any one thing that crew requires of its oarsmen it is Spartan living. When I see a fellow who can't give up late hours, liquor and hot cakes swimming in butter and syrup, I advise him to give up rowing."

The coach walked out on the dock in front of the boathouse. A stiff wind was blowing in from the lake, and he put on a frayed tweed overcoat and wrapped a towel around his neck. Several shells were rocking on the white-capped water. The oarsmen sat at ease, waiting for him to give them the signal to start. In the distance Mount Rainier loomed about the fir-covered hills, a glacier-barricaded sentinel of granite and ice.

"Those boys have what it takes to make crackerjack oarsmen," he said, pointing to the boats out on the choppy lake. "They have the muscle and the strength, and they have the endurance built up after long training. Most important of all, they have the right spirit and feeling toward a race.

"Let me tell you what I mean by that," he went on, as he stepped into a launch tied to the dock. "Power and endurance are necessary, all right, but they don't mean a thing if the rower has not a feel of victory and confidence and self-assuredness."

The launch started toward the shells, and the coach continued. "In this respect," he said, "crew is like golf. The ability to swing an oar requires the same applied study on the part of the individual as the ability to swing a golf club. A golfer must concentrate on a skilful shot, and an oarsman must concentrate on his rowing. Crew and golf are sports that reward the performer in exactly the degree to which he thinks about his performance."

The tall coach put a megaphone to his lips and called several orders to the crews. The men began to pull up the lake with long, graceful sweeps. The launch chugged along in their wake. The boathouse and university buildings and communities were left behind. A heron waded gingerly in an eddy near the shore.

The oarsmen turned back toward the boathouse at a lively pace. "The four-mile race at Poughkeepsie is not as great a strain as you would think," Ulbrickson said in reply to a question. "In the four mile race a man paces himself to the finish. Once there, he has rowed his course. He is completely exhausted and needs a long time to become rested. But in the sprint races, such as the Olympics, a rower has no time to pace his strength and endurance. He must pull his heart out from start to finish. He becomes rested sooner, but is excruciatingly tired for a while. The longer race gives a rower a chance to pace his power."

Ulbrickson observed that many people think crew contests are too great a strain on the contestants. "It's all a matter of training," he explained. "If an athlete is in prime condition, he can stand a race, whether it's 2,000 meters or four miles. If he is not in prime condition, he has no business trying out for crew. It's not fair to him or the rest of the rowers."

The coach spares no effort to make certain that Washington's oarsmen enter their boats in the best physical trim. They take their own drinking water with them across the continent, and at Poughkeepsie they drink water that came from Western rivers 3,000 miles away. Ulbrickson himself observes many of the training rules which he imposes upon his athletes. He also supervises their studies. He is no more proud of Washington's many Poughkeepsie victories than he is of the fact that in all the time he has been crew coach only one oarsman has failed to get his degree.

"Some setting, eh?" Ulbrickson said, eyeing forest fastness and white mountain. "This is all part of crew. It's the greatest sport there is—and there are other reasons besides that of being out on the water. It is the epitome of team effort. The old slogan of 'all for one and one for all' applies appropriately to rowing. There are eight men in a shell. If one of those men collapses or loses his oar or 'pulls a crab,' it is fairly likely the crew will be out of the race. Rowing demands the fiercest sort of personal discipline, submerging the individual for the benefit of the crew."

He pointed to the coxswains in the boats ahead. They were calling out the best of strokes to the bent-backed rowers. "When I refer to the men," he amplified, "of course I should also include the coxswain. No matter how strong or how powerful or how spirited a crew may be, it cannot win without a level head to guide it. We won the 1936 Poughkeepsie race only because our coxswain, Bob Moch, wisely held down our stroke at the start. We were far behind at the halfway mark. But we had enough reserve left to beat our exhausted opponent. Good generalship did that and sent us to the Olympics.

"There is one thing that must be remembered about rowing," he continued, as he got out of the launch and walked back into the boathouse, where oars and shells were stacked against the walls. "In most college sports the participants have had high-school experience. This includes baseball, football, track and all the rest. But high schools scarcely ever sponsor crew races. Consequently, the men who report to me rarely have had experience. No one has a prep-school record to boast of, and all are on an equal footing."

As either a participant or a coach Al Ulbrickson has had a part in fourteen Poughkeepsie regattas. The tense moment before the gun cracks and the varsity shells streak down the river is, in his opinion, the supreme moment in athletics.

Philippine Bid To Send Cage Team Is Accepted

Invitation recently received from the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation to send a basketball team there again next winter was accepted by the Japan Basketball Association at its meeting Thursday.

Ten players and a coach will leave Japan in December to return during the latter part of January for a series of some 10 games at Manila, according to the plans outlined by Dr. Regino Ylanan, executive secretary of the Philippine organization.

Notwithstanding the abandonment of the 12th Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1940, the association decided to adhere to its original plans of developing a strong Olympic team.

Ott's 18th Homer Helps Giants To Beat Cubs, 5 To 3

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 25—Neither rain nor the Cubs bothered the Giants yesterday. They outlasted both.

Sprinting along strongly in possession of a 3-1 lead when a steady downpour of rain started at the Polo Grounds, Colonel Bill Terry's athletes were overtaken at 3—all in the eighth inning. But a few moments later in the same frame Master Melvin Ott ended all uncertainty by unfurling his eighteenth homer of the year with a comrade aboard.

That shot settled the issue, as the Giants won, 5 to 3, held their game and a half lead over the secondplace Reds and bounced the Chicagoans into a spot two and a half games off the pace.

Those Cubs certainly are a tonic for the Stoneham clan. The New Yorkers have beaten them seven out of ten times this year. Yesterday's job was done before a crowd of 16,-944, of whom 8,[illegible] were ladies' day guests.

The Giants knocked Bill Lee from the box in about 2:04 of the first round. Five hits brought in three runs before Tex Carleton came in to keep the Terrymen pretty well handcuffed until Ott broke the bonds in the eighth.

Cubs Get Run in First

Slick Castleman started for the home forces, and was not too slick an article at that. An error, a walk and a single by Augie Galan brought a run in the first. But the Cubs' performance in the third looked much more like Brooklyn baseball than the Chicago brand.

Cholly Grimm's brigh young men assembled four hits, one a double, and a walk, stretched them end to end and reached home plate only once.

Cavarretta refused to notice the red light that Grimm flashed at third base and came charging in, Dodger style. Bartell threw him out at the plate for the second out. Such charity so inspired the Giants that when Frank Demaree rolled to Sambo Leslie, Melton forgot to cover first base. So Demaree got a hit and the bases were full again. But Rip Collins lined out to end the inning.

Coffman's Fourth Victory

Melton spent the next few stanzas leading with his chin, but not a single Cub through to knock him down until Carl Reynolds slammed his third homer into the upper leftfield balcony to tie up the ball game. Two more hits in the same frame meant an exit march for the Melton, Dick Coffman coming on to the scene. The latter received credit for the victory, his fourth of the year.

Ott gave it to him with his homer, a blow that followed Herman's bad throw on a Ripple-hit grounder. The error merely meant an extra run that was not needed.

In the first inning, though, the Giants did some forthright hitting. Lou Chiozza, Harry Danning and Ott singled for one run. Hank Leiber walked, Leslie caromed the first of his three safeties off Lee's glove to fill the bases and Dick Bartell lined to center for two more runs, an error by Cavarretta assisting in the scoring of the second of these. A double play earlier in the frame involving Danning and Ripple prevented a higher total.

Publicity Organ Of O.O.C. Holds Final Meeting

The last official meeting of the publicity committee of the Tokyo Olympic Organizing Committee was held Thursday afternoon at the New Grand Restaurant at Sukiyabashi. A small working body will be left to complete the matter of reports.

Matsuzo Nagai, secretary-general of the O. O. C., reported on the decision for abandonment of the Games and expressed his appreciation for the cooperation and assistance given by members of the committee.

Makoto Den, chairman of the committee and director of the Board of Tourist Industry, said abandonment of the Games was necessary in view of the current emergency situation but it was regrettable to lose the opportunity of contributing to Japanese-American friendly relations through sports.

The O.O.C. was to explain the decision of abandoning the Games to resident Tokyo foreign correspondents at the New Grand Restaurant at 3 p.m. today.

The final meeting of the games committee of the O.O.C. will be held at the Chuotei Restaurant at Marunouchi on July 26.

Battle Of Homers Won By Tigers, 12-8

By JOHN DREBINGER
N.Y. Times

DETROIT, June 24—Having found nearly all other methods equally unsatisfactory, our harassed Yankees went back to their old system of trading blows directly with the enemy today. But, alas, when it was all done, Marse Joe McCarthy again found himself badly short-changed.

For though Herr Lou Gehrig hit his twelfth homer of the year, Joe DiMaggio his ninth and Joe Gordon modestly contributed his fifth, Hank Greenberg hit only two, his nineteenth and twentieth of the campaign. But those two blows landed with devastating force.

They swept five runs across, and these tallies, mixed with other stunning happenings, sufficed to give the Tigers the opening contest of the three-game series, 12 to 8, before a crowd of 15,300.

Two Ahead of Tigers

That again plunged the Yanks four and a half lengths behind the league-leading Indians and gave them additional worries despite the fact that nightfall still found them retaining their precarious hold on second place over the Red Sox. For Mickey Cochrane's Detroiters, back in fourth place, are only two games behind the stumbling McCarthy forces.

Today's affair was a slambang battle. Marse Joe saw Spurgeon Chandler, Ivy Paul Andrews and Steve Sundra hammered for sixteen blows, four of them by Don Ross, while the Yanks gathered ten of their twelve hits off Harry Eisenstat in the first five frames.

But with the sixth Cochrane deftly inserted the left-handed Jake Wade, and though Jake went down for a run in that inning, he gave the Yanks no more runs or hits, and that really settled it.

That one tally in the sixth momentarily have the Yanks an 8-7 lead, a margin they might have retained but for a grievous error by Frankie Crosetti in the same inning.

With two down in this round the Tigers had filled the bases against Andrews with a pair of singles and a pass when Chet Laabs seemingly ended the threat by slapping a grounder at Crosetti. But Frankie fumbled the ball and one scored. Came a single by Ross and two more came in to give the Tigers a two-run edge.

In the eighth Greenberg doubled this margin in spades with his second circuit clout off Sundra with one aboard, and that shot enabled the Detroiters to win going away. It left the Yanks with nothing better to do than stick around until tomorrow.

Comanche

Contrary to popular supposition, there was one survivor of the Custer Massacre of June 25, 1876, on the Little Bighorn, in Montana. A horse, Comanche, the mount of Captain Keogh, was wounded seven times and apparently left for dead on the battlefield. Captain Keogh was listed among the victims of the Sioux Warriors. When discovered two days later, this horse was seen to show signs of life, and was transported to Fort Abraham Lincoln at Bismark, North Dakota. There every care was given him, and he entirely recovered from his wounds. He lived until 1891, a favorite of the ladies of the post, and at every parade and military review, Comanche attended riderless, with saddle and bridle. He is now on display at the Museum of the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

Injury To Miss Jacobs Was Disappointing To Mrs. Moody, Who Won

By AL LANEY

N.Y. Herald Tribune

LONDON, July 2—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody came back to the vacant throne room of tennis today after an absence of three years by defeating Miss Helen Jacobs, 6—4, 6—0, in the Wimbledon final, racing past an injured and limping opponent to her eighth and probably her last triumph, and a crowd of 18,000, stunned by the sudden collapse of Miss Jacobs after a tense first set, received her almost in silence.

Mrs. Moody's victory, so disappointing in the manner of its accomplishment, was the important item in a day of records in which the United States came back to complete world dominance in tennis for the first time since the great days of Big Bill Tilden and Little Bill Johnson. The winner of every Wimbledon title was an American.

Donald Budge, playing with Gene Mako and Miss Alice Marble, added the men's and mixed doubles titles to the singles title he won yesterday and Miss Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan won the women's doubles. Budge and Mako defeated Henner Henkel and Georges von Metaxa, Germans, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3, 8—6. Budge and Miss Marble won, 6—1, 6—4, over Henkel and Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan defeated Mme. Mathieu, of France, and Miss Billy York, of England, 6—2, 6—3. No nation ever before won all five titles in the same year.

Like Match of 1933

The latest meeting of the two Helens in the same arena where, three years ago, they waged one of the most dramatic tennis battles ever known, was strangely like their celebrated match at Forest Hills in 1933, when Mrs. Moody retired because of a strained back. This time their roles were reversed. Miss Jacobs pulled a tendon in her right leg while losing the ninth game of the match and she was so obviously in pain it appeared foolish for her to continue. But she did not retire even when Mrs. George Wightman, her captain, came into the court and pleaded with her. She played on to the end, winning only three points in seven games.

Thus Mrs. Moody came in an altogether disappointing manner to a Wimbledon record that might stand forever. It cannot have pleased her, for Miss Jacobs had made a gallant fight that called for a champion's game to thwart it, but Mrs. Moody showed neither disappointment over the manner of her victory nor elation over the fact of it. She played through, calm and detached, but she showed her sympathy for Miss Jacobs in little ways that did not escape the notice of the crowd.

Mrs. Moody Better Player

And it must be set down to Mrs. Moody's credit that after all these years she still was the better tennis player and very likely would have beaten an opponent unhampered by injury. That, of course, is a matter of opinion and it is true that the injury came at a time when Miss Jacobs appeared likely to establish a winning advantage in the first set. Pursued all her tennis life by misfortune, Miss Jacobs received one of fate's cruelest blows today. Although fundamentally it was only a game being played by two attractive girls, these things can be immensely tragic for Miss Jacobs this was a tragic day. For Mrs. Moody it brought the hour of triumph for which she had set her heart, though not in the way she had anticipated.

The stage had been set for this encounter exactly as it was set at their last meeting. Then, as now, Mrs. Moody was trying for a comeback and again thousands of people who wanted to see it waited in line for many hours. The first all-night queue of this Wimbledon formed outside the grounds and many could not get anywhere near the court. Queen Mary again was in attendance and nothing seemed different than in 1935 when the two girls walked out onto the court. These were not young girls. Both had been champions and were no longer. Mrs. Moody was now thirty-two, Miss Jacobs nearly thirty.

For ten years these two girls from the same street in Berkeley, Calif., had been meeting in the final rounds of big tournaments and their rivalry, one of the most intense in sport, had run through the story of tennis like the main theme of a symphony. Ever since Miss Jacobs first took up the game, always there has stood between her and the top the placid figure of a girl from up the street. Miss Jacobs came to her first Wimbledon final in 1929 to find Helen Wills already there and far too good for her. Three times since then she has come through again to meet the same player and once she came within a stroke of victory. She had been a champion at home and abroad, but only in the years when Mrs. Moody did not compete.

And now, today, Mrs. Moody was there again and, although the gap between them has steadily lessened, the greater Helen still was too good for the lesser. All of these things were in the minds of the spectators as they went through the preliminary warming-up and the prospects of another memorable match were excellent.

Miss Jacobs Loses Service

Miss Jacobs began with her service and yielded it to some fierce drives to the corners of her baseline. In the second game, with Mrs. Moody serving, she began to chase for these raking drives and recovered them so successfully as to level the score at 1—all. That set the tone of the match, and that is the way it was conducted until Miss Jacobs' accident. Mrs. Moody was in form. She seemed to be driving as well as at any time in her life and Miss Jacobs set herself to defend and wait for a chance to close in the close quarters, where her superior volleying powers could be brought into play.

She pursued this plan so well that she led, 2—1, but Mrs. Moody's game was gradually imposing itself upon her. Keeping an almost perfect length, Mrs. Moody drove with fine pace and Miss Jacobs gradually was beaten in exchanges more and more extensive.

Mrs. Moody quickly led, 4—2, and Miss Jacobs was forced, in desperation, to change her tactics. She sought the net and volleyed so well that she was able to level the score at 4-all. She was scrambling a lot, but she was winning the vital points and they came to a tense struggle for the ninth game, which was to decide that issue. Miss Jacobs was serving and she came up court every time there was a chance. This way she got to 40—30 and needed only one point for the vital game that might have meant the set.

Miss Jacobs Injured

To get this point she came up court once more, but had to stretch for the passing shot across her body from Mrs. Moody's backhand. She missed it and in so doing put herself right out of the fight, for it was in attempting that volley that she was injured. She won no more games and only three more points, for she not only was in pain, but reduced almost to immobility.

It was not apparent immediately that she was hurt, but in crossing over for the tenth game, she stopped at the umpire's chair and adjusted the bandage which no one noticed she had worn into court. Mrs. Moody won the first set with a love game and when she had gone to 3—0 in the second set, with Miss Jacobs limping badly, and deliberately hitting out to hurry matters, Mrs. Wightman came on, took Miss Jacobs' hand and talked with her a moment. Miss Jacobs shook her head and indicated to Mrs. Moody and the umpire that she would continue in spite of her distress.

It was soon over, for she got only one more point. It was a relief to everybody when the end came. There were a few handclaps as Mrs. Moody went around the net to take Miss Jacobs' hand. The crowd had wanted Mrs. Moody to win, but not in this way. Mrs. Moody did not look happy and as she came to the door through which she already had walked seven times a champion she turned for a last look at the packed center court, where it is unlikely she will compete again.

Jacobs Victory Doubtful

For Miss Jacobs it may be said that she was cheated of her chance by a cruel blow, but it may not be said honestly that she would have won but for the accident. It did not appear that she could have succeeded at last where she had failed so often.

Mrs. Moody's victory was a vindication of her methods. Always she had depended on absolute security off the ground and amazing regularity of stroke. Other girls with greater variety have risen during her long reign, but none remains to defeat her. She came to her first Wimbledon final fourteen years ago and never since then has she been beaten here. She has been the acknowledged queen of the courts, always a player apart, who lives in a little world of her own, immune from the common feelings of ordinary tennis mortals. No woman player since Suzanne Lenglen has so dominated the game, and she leaves Wimbledon still aloof from the mass, with a record that is, in its way, quite wonderful.

Averill, Lombardi Leading Batsmen In Major Leagues

NEW YORK, June 25—Although both the current pacesetters in the big league batting races—Earl Averill of Cleveland with .384 in the American League and Ernie Lombardi of Cincinnati with .367 in the National—have been around for a long time, there are rookies and second or third-year men in both loops who are right up there giving the veterans a fight.

In the American League, swingin' Sammy Chapman, fresh up with the Athletics from college, and George Washington Case of Washingtn's Senators are fourth and fifth in the hitting parade with averages of .358 and .348 for the season. Case went on a batting spree during the past week to pull himself from 12th place in the league. Another freshman, Hank Steinbacher of the Chicago White Sox, snapped out of his slump and regained the top-10 this week, winding up in seventh place with .340.

Over in the National League, Herschel Martin, Phillies' sophomore outfielder, is giving the "second-year jinx" a terrific pasting. He collected 10 hits in his last 20 chances to climb into second place with a .358 average.

In addition the senior circuit, boasts such other clouting youngsters as Buck McCormick, Reds' rookie first backer, fourth in the league with .336; his teammate, Ival Goodman, who has only been around three years, seventh with .326, and Debs Garms of the Boston Bees, tied for eighth with .317.

Nagoya Tumbles Hankyu, 3 To 2 In Pro Tourney

Staging a three-run rally in the eighth inning, Nagoya nosed out the strong Osaka Hankyu nine, 3 to 2 Friday in the opening day of the three-day second annual professional baseball championship series sponsored by the Yomiuri Shimbun at the Korakuen Stadium at Suidobashi. Nagoya won the title last year.

In its debut in Tokyo, the newly organized Nankai Electric Railway team of Osaka, which will be admitted into the regular league in the Fall, was eliminated by the Lions, 8 to 5, in the first game of the day's quadrupleheader.

Dolfins Give Giants Battle

The Dolfins of Nagoya put up a keen-fight against the Giants and forced the latter to go an extra inning before losing by a 4 to 3 count.

The Osaka Tigers, champions of the recently ended spring season of the professional circuit, showed their power by running roughshod over the Senators by 9 to 2.

Games scheduled today, including the semi-finals, were:

(A) Eagles versus Lions, 1 p.m.

Semi-Finals

(B) Giants versus winner of (A), 3 p.m.

(C) Tigers versus Nagoya, 5 p.m.

The games for Sunday follow:

Senators versus Nankai, 1 p.m. (exhibition).

Loser of (C) versus loser of (B) for third place, 3 p.m.

Finals

Winner of (C) versus winner of (B), 5 p.m.

Pitcher Ishida of the Hankyus had Nagoya limited to two hits up to the seventh and seemed well on the way to victory with a two-run lead, the two runs having been registered in the sixth, one of them on his own hit. But Nagoya came to life suddenly in the eighth. Pinchhitter Suzuki started the ball rolling with a hit to right. Masu followed with a hit through second to advance Suzuki to third. Center Fielder Ishida's fly to center brought in Suzuki. Right Fielder Shiraki's hard smash to right center took an unexpected bounce to roll against the fence for a homer, with Masu scoring ahead of him, and winning the game.

The game between the Dolfins and the Giants was a battle royal all the way through. The Dolfins broke through the airtight pitching of Stalphin to deadlock the count at 2-all in the first half of the sixth. Center Fielder Sasaki poled one of Stalphin's fast ones for a smash into the left field bleachers for a home run. Eguchi and Sei hit safely to get on and a daring double steal registered the other run.

The Giants pulled ahead again by one run in the latter half of the eighth on the strength of a three bagger and a double by Ito and Nagasawa respectively, after two outs but the Dolfins tried it up again in the first half of the ninth. Pinchhitter Nakayama's hit to center brought in Sei who had walked to get on. Stalphin lost his control and walked the next two men to fill the bases. Up to bat came Sasaki, who had smashed a homer in the sixth, and the Giants promptly sent Staphin to the showers. Pitcher Mayekawa turned in a good job in the relief role by retiring Sasaki with a foul to first.

The Dolfins had opportunity galore to score in the first half of the tenth and had a mighty good chance of winning the game. Gomi, who had struck out thrice, tripled to left. Mayekawa messed up Eguchi's bunt. The latter went to second as Sei was thrown out at first. Kobayashi walked to clog the bases. Things looked mighty bad for the Giants but Furutani grounded to Mayekawa to force Gomi at the plate. Backstop Yoshiwara pegged wild to second and Eguchi dashed for the plate but Nakagawa came through with a fine peg to the plate and Eguchi was nabbed.

Yoshiwara Wins Game

Backstop Yoshiwara's bingle over second with the bases filled, all three men having walked, won the game for the Giants in the last half of the tenth.

Pitcher Nishimura of the Tigers was in fine form and held the Senators to four hits to account for his team's easy victory.

Yugoslavia Leads Belgium 2 To 0 In Davis Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

BRUSSELS, July 21—Making a serious bid for tennis supremacy in Europe, the veteran Yugoslav Davis Cup squad today ran up an imposing two to nothing lead over the Belgian team in the semifinal round of the European zone of the Davis Cup competitions.

Reinaugurating Davis Cup play after a lapse of nearly two months during which time the French National Championships and the Wimbledon Championships were held, Ferenc Puncec, veteran Yugoslav court star, swept through to an easy four-set victory over the Belgian player J. van den Ende. The scores were 2-6, 6-0, 6-1, 6-2.

In the second match of the day, Josip Pallada defeated the Belgian No. 1 player, A. Lacroix, in three convincing sets 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

By virtue of today's victories, Yugoslavia needs only one more victory, either in tomorrow's doubles match or Saturday's remaining singles matches, to earn the right to enter the final round.

In the other bracket, France will meet Germany for the right to enter the finals.

Harvard Team Batters Topped Eastern League

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, July 3—Although Harvard finished second to Dartmouth in team batting, just as it did in the final standing for the championship, the Cantabs were the heaviest sluggers in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, the final records released yesterday reveal. The Crimson, in collecting 117 hits, high in the league, made 155 bases on them, including ninety-four singles, fourteen doubles, three triples and six homers. They led the league in doubles and home runs as well.

Pennsylvania was second in team slugging, with 152 bases on 103 hits. The Quakers were league leaders in triples, banging out thirteen. They had seventy-four singles, thirteen doubles and four homers. Dartmouth which had the best team-batting average, was third in total bases, with 144 on 112 hits.

Cornell Leads Base Stealers

In other departments of the offense the leaders were Cornell in base stealing, with thirty-three; Dartmouth in runs batted in, seventy-two; Harvard and Dartmouth in runs scored, each with eighty-seven; and Dartmouth and Harvard in sacrifice hits, each with fourteen. Yale drew the most bases on balls, sixty-four, and also struck out most, likewise sixty-four.

Harvard also produced the league's outstanding individual slugger, its captain, Ulysses Lupien, who made thirty-four bases on nineteen hits. Lupien, winner of the Charles H. Blair bat, emblematic of the league's batting crown, also topped the field in many other departments. He was tied with Princeton's Bill Fallon in home runs, with three; he drew more bases on balls than any player in the league, fifteen; and he hit safely in eleven of the twelve league games.

Art Radvilas, of Columbia, and Art Johns, Harvard captain-elect, each hit safely in ten of the twelve games.

Other individual leaders were Cornell's Walter Johnson, who won the Princeton A. A. Cup for individual base-stealing, with twelve, and led in runs scored, seventeen; Harvard's Reino Grondahl, who batted in most runs, thirteen; Dartmouth's George McLaughlin and Walter Shipp, each of whom hit three triples, and Harvard's Paul Doyle, who slammed out four doubles.

Three Split Pitching Honors

Pitching honors were divided among three hurlers. Princeton's Dawson (Lefty) Farber had the best earned-run average per game, 2.21. He pitched sixty-five innings and allowed a total of sixteen earned runs, although he won only four and lost three. Dartmouth's Hal Wonson pitched the most innings, eighty-two; the most complete games, eight, and won the most games, also eight, tying the league record set last year by Ted Horton, of Yale. He was second in earned-run average, with 2.41. Yale's Moe Jubitz had the most strikeouts, fifty-five.

Yale was the best fielding team, making thirty errors in 511 chances, shading Columbia by 1-10,000 of a percentage point. The Blue had a final average of .9412. Columbia had .9411. Yale also made the most double plays, ten.

Nagai Explains Why '40 Games Were Abandoned

A clear-cut explanation for the reason of Tokyo's abandonment of the 12th Olympic Games was given by Matsuzo Nagai, general secretary of the Olympic Organizing Committee, to foreign correspondents at a tea party Friday afternoon at the New Grand Restaurant.

Mr. Nagai said that preparations for the Games had been making good speed since June and while the O.O.C. was confident of organizing the Games, it was necessary to comply with the nation's request that they be abandoned in the need for spiritual and materialistic mobilization of the nation into a single unit to attain Japan's goal in the Sino-Japanese hostilities.

Mr. Nagai said the spirit of Olympism had by no means been abandoned by the Japanese and he expressed the hopes of seeing the Olympic Games staged in Tokyo in the not too distant future when peace will have returned to the Far East.

Eijiro Nakatsuka of the Municipal Assembly said the City of Tokyo will campaign to be awarded the 13th Olympic Games in 1944.

Masasuke Kodama of the Welfare Ministry spoke on Japan's support of the Olympic Games and regretted their cancellation.

Harvard Varsity Wins Great Duel From Yale Crew

By ROBERT F. KELLEY

N.Y. Times

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 24—The crimson banner of Harvard, run to the masthead in victory last night in the combination crew race, stayed there all today and was still aloft in the dying sunlight of a Summer day as Spike Chace's Harvard varsity completed a clean sweep of the river.

A bit more than a length behind at the finish of just such a heart-breaking duel as in last year's race was the Yale varsity, and Harvard's triumph was complete. All four races had gone to the Crimson, and all four of them had been earned by clean-cut, handsome rowing.

Not since 1916 has Harvard's cup been filled to the brim with a clean sweep. It has been a long time, and during that while there have been lean years, but today wiped all that away. For the climax tonight saw one of the great crews of Harvard and all rowing history put the final seal on a great season. There is no longer the slightest doubt that Harvard's varsity belongs in the top rank.

Yale 3 4-5 Seconds Behind

The winning time for the varsity was 20:20, with Yale timed in 20:23 4-5. Once, during the middle stretches of this desperately fought race, there had been more than half a length of open water dancing in the sun between Harvard's rudder and Yale's prow. A half mile from home Yale cut that away and ate into the Harvard shell. But in the last quarter mile Harvard went away again and finished definitely in control.

For the first few fleeting strokes of the race Yale had led, but Harvard, after the racing start, settled down close to the 32 at which it rowed most of the distance and, at the first half mile, was in the lead to stay. Thus this major event of the day of racing was put alongside the smashing triumph of the freshmen in the opening event and the narrowly gained upset victory in the junior varsity contest.

All of the traditional setting of the Yale-Harvard regatta was here today. A fleet of hundreds of gayly decorated yachts lined the course, a ful observation train bumped along the bank, and hillsides and other vantage points were black with people. There must have been 50,000 watching in the bright sunlight of a pleasant Summer evening.

Cubs Have Smooth Going

The morning dawned with a heavy fog shutting down over shipping and the race course. It was bowing quite strongly from the Sound and against the downstream direction planned for the morning races. Then it swung around so that when the men actually raced there was more of a quartering wind than a head wind. The water was pretty smooth for the freshmen but roughened up quite a bit for the junior varsity event.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

An Irish Demigod

General John Nicholson (1821-1857) who distinguished himself in the Indian Wars in 1848, so impressed the natives with his valor and strength that a brotherhood of fakirs abandoned their religion to devote themselves to the worship of "Nikkul Seyn" as their demigod. On meeting General Nicholson, the members of the sect would prostrate themselves at his feet in religious adoration. It was of no avail that Nicholson tried to stamp out this practice by whipping and imprisoning his worshipers. The Nikkul Seyn sect long survived their demigod, who died as a result of a fatal wound during the capture of Delhi in 1857, the time of the Sepoy Mutiny.

Osaka Tigers Capture Pro Ball Series Title, Beating Eagles, 6 To 5

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

In one of the best ball games ever played in Tokyo, the Osaka Tigers triumphed over the Tokyo Eagles, 6 to 5, after an extra inning duel in the final of the second annual three-day championship series of professional baseball teams sponsored by the Yomiuri Shimbun Sunday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium at Suidobashi.

It was a tilt studded with heroes, who came through with brilliant performances, and the more than 20,000 fans present had a royal treat.

Tanaka, Harris Shine

When it seemed as if Yoshio (Kaiser) Tanaka, hard hitting catcher of the Tigers who hails from Honolulu, had batted in the winning run for his team in the last half of the eighth with a two bagger against the left field wall, it was Bucky Harris, hustling catcher of the Eagles, who rose to the occasion after having two strikes on him to smash a terrific single to left field to score the tying run at 5-all from second base in the ninth that sent the game into an extra inning. Ironically, Tanaka's double came off Ted Kameda, Eagles' pitcher who was his battery mate with the Asahis team of Honolulu.

Masa Kageura, who had relieved Pitcher Nishimura for the Tigers at the outset of the sixth inning, worked his fast ball to perfection in the 10th and retired the Tigers in one-two-three order, and then proceeded to win his own game in the latter half of the same inning. Kameda struck out Fujimura but Yamaguchi just about decided the game in favor of the Tigers with a three bagger to center. At that, it must be said that Center Fielder Terauchi was guilty of an error in judgment in playing the bound and let the ball roll away against the fence. It was a tough break for Kameda, who not only had been pitching great ball but had registered three hits to bring in two runs and deserved to win. Next man to bat was Kageura, one of the Tigers' heaviest and best hitters, and Harris called for time. He conferred with Kameda. Was it to walk Kageura purposely and then gamble for a doubleplay to retire the side? It seemed that way with Kameda pitching three straight balls, all of them outdrops that Harris picked off the ground. But the next cut-drop cut the heart of the plate for a strike. Kageura swung viciously at the next pitch and lifted a fly to center. Yamaguchi beat the peg home after the catch for the winning run. It might have been better to walk Kageura, but at that the next batter was Captain Matsuki, who already had three hits to his credit in as many times up, one of them a homer high up into the right field stands in the first inning that accounted for three runs.

Matsuki Homers

That homer by Matsuki came after two outs. Kameda had the tough luck of walking Yamaguchi and Kageura after he had retired Hondo and Fujii, two first two men up.

Far from feeling discouraged, the Eagles came to life in the third. Terauchi nicked Pitcher Nishimura for a hit to right. Right Fielder Nakane then leaned on a pitch by Nishimura for a smash that proved too hot for Right Fielder Fujii to handle, and Nakane used his speed to advantage by making a circuit of the bags, with Terauchi scoring ahead of him.

The Tigers registered another run in their portion of the third inning to lead 4 to 2. But the Eagles, now confident and bent on catching up with the Tigers, scored a run in the fourth by virtue of Kameda's double to right center. And they deadlocked the count at 4-all in the fifth. Again it was Kameda that came through with a Texas Leaguer to right to score Nomura, who had singled to center, gone to second on a fielder's choice and then to third on a passed ball by Tanaka.

The spurt of the Eagles was stopped by Kageura who replaced Nishimura on the mound for the Tigers to begin the sixth inning. His fast underhand ball was effectively cutting the outside corner.

Harris had the chance of bringing in a run for the Eagles in the seventh when Nomura was hit by a pitched ball and went to second on a beautiful bunt laid down by Nakane. But Harris flied out to right and Nakagawa popped to third.

Scintillating infield play by the Eagles checked the Tigers from scoring in the seventh inning. Okada, tail end man on the batting list for the Tigers, swung at Kameda's first pitch, a slow teaser, for a single to right field. Hondo bunted but Third Baseman Urushibara scooped it up, and directed by Backstop Harris, pegged to second to force out Okada at second. Fujimura then grounded, to short and a fast doubleplay retired the side.

Kameda Singles

It was Kameda again that put the Engles in scoring position in the eighth. He lashed a line single to left, first up, his third consecutive hits. Sugitaya sacrificed him to second. Yamada struck out, looking at an outdrop. Urushibara fouled into the left field stands, barely outside of the line. A wild pitch by Kageura and Kameda went to third but Urushibara finally flied out to left.

It might be said that a slight easing down by Kameda started the Tigers to their one run in the eighth. He walked Yamaguchi on four straight pitches. Kageura forced out Yamaguchi at second. Second Baseman Nomura's peg to first was a bit too wide, else it would have been a doubleplay. Matsuki singled through first to send Kageura to second. Tanaka just about broke Kameda's heart with a two bagger to left, a high fly that missed clearing the fence by inches, and Kageura romped home. Matsuki was nabbed at the plate trying to make it on the same hit.

The Eagles deadlocked the count in the ninth when all hopes seemed gone. Terauchi grounded to Kageura for an easy out and Nomura flied out to right. After two strikes, Nakane drove a sharp grounder straight to First Baseman Matsuki. The ball took a bad bound and turned into a two bagger for Nakane. Then came that timely hit by Harris to left to tie the score.

What happened in the tenth has already been described.

Giants Win

Behind the good pitching of Stalphin who yielded but four hits, the Giants routed Nagoya, 10 to 2, in the other game to place third in the series. Nankai beat the Senators, 5-1, in an exhibition game.

The Eagles beat the Giants, 3 to 1, while the Tigers tumbled Nagoya,, 4 to 2, in the semi-finals on Saturday.

Germany Defeats France In Davis Cup Semi-Finals

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 23—Triumphing over France by virtue of a third straight victory in the doubles, Germany today advanced to the final round of the European zone Davis cup tourney where she will battle Yugoslavia for the right to play against the American Zone winner. The Yugoslavs had already entered the final yesterday by clinching their series against Belgium.

French hopes faded completely as Henner Henkel and Georges von Metaxa, who yesterday took both opening singles matches to give Germany a 2-0 lead, outlasted Yvon Petra and J. Lesueur in a five-set doubles encounter. This assured the Germans of a team victory regardless of possible French wins in the two remaining singles.

The strong Reich combination emerged victorious, but only after a desperately-fighting French team had forced them to the wall and come within an ace of winning the match in the fourth set. Petra and Lesueur took the first and third sets to lead 2-1, and the fourth went to a full 18 games before the Germans could tie the count.

After beating back the challenge, Henkel and Metaxa went on to take the fifth set and match without much difficulty. The final scores were 4-6, 6-4, 2-6, 10-8, 6-4.

At Brussels, the Yugoslavs, meanwhile polished off their series against the Belgians with two more unneeded singles victories, thus scoring a clean sweep of all five matches. Josip Pallada defeated J. van den Ende, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1, and Ferenc Puncec conquered A. Lacroix 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Japanese At Montreal

Domei Tsushin

MONTREAL, July 23—Members of Japan's 1938 Davis Cup team, who will meet Canada next Friday in the first round of American Zone play, arrived here at 12:40 p.m. today from New York. They left the latter city last night by train.

Bad luck was apparently still trailing the team, for when they arrived here, wet weather seemed likely to prevent them from getting in much practice before the matches begin. Rain had similarly disrupted their intended training program at Forest Hills.

Members of the team, headed by non-playing Captain Tamio Abe, are staying at la Salle Hotel. Shu Tomii, Japanese minister to Canada, is expected to arrive here from Ottawa early next week in order to be on hand for the matches, the draw for which will probably take place on Tuesday.

Giants Buy Seeds, Home-Run Hitter

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 25—The right-hand hitting outfielder whom Bill Terry has been seeking since he traded Wally Berger to Cincinnati has been found. The Giant manager announced yesterday he had purchased from Newark the home-run sensation of the season, Bob Seeds.

The 30-year-old veteran of a dozen seasons, nine clubs and five leagues will report today and will patrol left field until Joe Moore returns. Seeds leaves behind him in the International League a batting average of .332 and a record of 28 home runs.

Seeds startled the baseball world this season by hitting four home runs in succession in one game and continued his astonishing slugging the next day by slamming three more. His total of twenty-eight round-trippers is far ahead of the present leaders in either major league. Seeds batted in 94 runs for the Bears.

Seeds started his career in 1926 with Enid of the Southwestern League as a shortstop, batting .309. In 1928 he moved up with Amarillo of the Western League as an outfielder, hitting .340. He batted .342 for Kansas City of the American Association in 1929, advancing to Cleveland a year later.

In three years with the Indians, Seeds hit .285, .306 and .288 before being traded to the White Sox, who transferred him to the Red Sox. He drifted back to Montreal, and the Yankees picked him up in 1936 to fill in for the injured Myril Hoag. Then he was sent to the Newark farm for 1937 and 1938.

No purchase price was revealed, although estimates were that between $25,000 and $30,000 was paid for him.

Nihon 'U' Swimmers Win Title In Meet

Nihon University's mermen won the first annual national higher technical schools swimming meet Saturday and Sunday at the Meiji Shrine pool with a total of 65 points. In second place was Rikkyo Preparatory with 60 points. Third was Nihon Preparatory with 38 points.

Tomikatsu Amano of the Nihon Higher Technical team was the most brilliant performer, negotiating on Sunday the 800-meter freestyle in 9 minutes 57.8 seconds, only two seconds slower than the world record held by Shozo Makino of Waseda.

Night Baseball Is Here To Stay, Says Harridge

N.Y. Herald Tribune

CHICAGO, July 2—Night baseball for all clubs is coming to the major leagues—and coming to stay.

That is the belief of William Harridge, president of the American League, which for years was solidly opposed to the playing, after nightfall, of a game which for almost a century has been the nation's greatest outdoor afternoon sport.

Harridge makes it clear he is neither advocating nor opposing baseball at night. He is convinced, however, that night games in the majors, pioneered by the Cincinnati Reds and adopted successfully by the Brooklyn Dodgers, soon will become a standard fixture of big league schedules.

"Night baseball is coming to the majors, there's no question about it," he said. "It's coming just as radio came to the game. Not so many years ago major league owners thought radio would ruin the game. They've changed their minds and I think they'll change their minds on night baseball.

Financial Boon to Reds

Night baseball undoubtedly has been a big financial boon to the Reds. The Dodgers, in their experience with it, drew 38,000 persons through the turnstiles, and in a second after-dark tilt, against Pittsburgh, drew 28,000 fans. It takes several weekday crowds for any club to match those Sunday-figure totals.

"I think that perhaps no more than ten or twelve night games for each club each season would be good for major league baseball," Harridge said. "To me it's more of a spectacle than anything else and I don't think fans would care for night games every night. But there isn't any question that it would measurably benefit certain clubs, such as St. Louis.

"A few years ago the American League owners were solidly opposed to night baseball, and while I do not think they are completely night-minded yet, there has been a change in feeling toward the game. Two years ago they gave St. Louis permission to play seven games at night, but lights never were erected.

"In 1936, Philadelphia applied for permission and Cleveland made application in 1937. They were refused on the grounds their cases were not of an emergency nature as was the case of St. Louis, where attendance was low and new owners were taking over. I believe that if a club needed night ball to increase its financial position, American League owners now would grant permission. We have the seven night game rule, the same as the National League, but clubs must be given permission from year to year."

Finds Owners Changed

Harridge believes night baseball would do especially well in St. Louis and Washington, where evenings are warm. He said Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington team, once voiced the belief that "night baseball in Washington would pack them in."

"It took club owners years to realize that radio was a great thing for baseball, instead of something that would harm the sport, and night baseball will grow on the league as radio did," the junior circuit president said. "New York and Detroit never have cared much for the idea, but should other clubs eventually receive permission to play seven games a season at night they can fill their night schedule by playing other teams more than once."

Harridge believes that night baseball would create interest in the sport among persons who find it impossible to see afternoon games during the week and prefer motoring with their families on Sundays. He also believes seven night games would add about that many Sunday attendance crowds to the season's total and make up for many slim weekdays encountered by every club in both leagues.

If night baseball comes, however, it may prove a financial boomerang for father. Instead of asking for "two bits to see a movie," Johnny may from the habit of dunning dad for "a buck ten for a grandstand seat near the first-base line."

Hanada Retains Flyweight Title Against Sakamoto

Special To The Japan Times

KOBE, July 23—Before 5,000 fans, the defending champion Yoichiro Hanada outclassed his challenger, Hajime Sakamoto, in a 12-round bout for the national flyweight title at the Nishinomiya Stadium tonight.

Sakamoto seemed a bit nervous when he went into the ring, and over-anxious. From the very beginning to the end, he landed no perfect punch, all his blows going wild, while Hanada from the first round looked cool and ever on the alert, never wasting his energy at any time, he seldom swung which did not connect. In the eighth round Hanada sent in a punch to the right jaw which sent his challenger reeling, and followed it up with his strong right and for a moment it seemed that the bout would end in a knock-out in favor of Hanada. But the bell saved the day for Sakamoto. It was not until the last round that Hanada again gave a sickening blow to Sakamoto sending him groggy, but again the last gong rang to save him from a ten-count.

There was only one kayo during the whole evening, this coming in the first bout of the night in a four-round scrap between Ishida and Matsumura, the former winning.

All of the other seven preliminaries ended in a decision as follows: (1) Nakamura beat Nozaki (six rounds), (2) Minami beat Okura (six rounds), (3) Igarashi beat Shirai (six rounds), (4) Motogi beat Kawashima (six rounds), (5) Seki beat Miyahashi (six rounds), (6) Kikuchi beat Sozawa (six rounds), (7) Motoyama beat Tanaka (eight rounds).

Negroes Zooming In Sports World

NEW YORK, June 30—Topped off by the recent ascension of Henry Armstrong to the welterweight title and the successful defense of the heavyweight championship by Joe Louis, the American Negro is more rapidly than ever forging to the fore in the sports world.

At the present time, Negroes hold exactly one-half of the major boxing titles. Louis, the Brown Bomber of old in his annihilation of Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium, now holds undisputed ownership of the heavyweight throne after having eliminated the final stumbling bllock in his path.

Armstrong, the world's featherweight champion, jumped two classes and captured the welterweight crown from a fading and aging Barney Ross. Incidentally, he seeks to make it three titles in a row by meeting Lou Ambers, lightweight champion in New York on July 26.

Then there's John Henry Lewis, Pittsburgh's gift to the fistic world, who is so superior to the light heavyweight field which he rules that he is forced to seek action among the heavyweights.

The Negro is having his day in track and field competition. We have only to harken back to the Berlin Olympics of 1936. Remember the "Buckeye Bullet" Jesse Owens, who singlehanded won three championships for the United States?

And how about Johnny Woodruff, the famed University of Pittsburg middle distance runner?

Woodruff—nicknamed Long John by the track world—gave the United States Olympic team a good nudge along the championship path by capturing the 800 meter run in Berlin. He has put in a banner year for the Panthers this season. Eulace Peacock of Temple, Dave Albritton, Mel Walker, and Cornelius Johnson, the dusky highjumpers, and Ralph Metcalfe, the former Marquette sprinter—all these boys and others are bringing the Negro forward to a place of prominence in sports.

Strangely there are some sports the Negro does not seem to take to. Try as you may, it is difficult to find a Negro golfer of prominence. And how about basketball? The stars in this field are seldom found in the ranks of the dark skinned flashes. The same goes for swimming championships.

Football stardom comes to the Negro quite frequently, the most outstanding recent examples, perhaps, being Ozzie Simmons, of Iowa State, a couple of years back, and Brud Holland, of Cornell, last season.

Negroes adapt themselves easily to certain sports, sepecially those requiring considerable running or leaping. Their physiques are such as to adapt themselves to long and speedy striding.

Long of leg and lithe of muscle, the Negro athlete just fits into the sports picture. As a race they are receiving greater opportunities, and their appearance in great numbers in colleges indicates they are striving to better themselves. Thus, given equal footing with other races, their latent talent for athletics is being developed and is marked by their ascension to a lofty peak in sports.

Osaka All-Stars Swamp Nagoya By 10 To 0 Score

After a one-hour suspension of activities because of rain, the Osaka All-Stars came suddenly to life in the fifth inning to register six runs and three more runs in the seventh to swamp the Nagoya All-Stars, 10 to 0, Friday afternoon in the Yomiuri Shimbun's inter-city championship series at the Korakuen Stadium here. The game was called off at the end of the seventh because of rain.

The two other games scheduled for Friday were to be played this afternoon, the Tokyo All-Stars meeting the Nagoya squad at 2:30, and the Tokyo All-Stars taking on the Osaka All-Stars at 4:30.

Although he allowed a free base on balls and two hits to yield a run to the Osaka combination in the second inning, Pitcher Morii engaged in a pitchers' duel with Misonou of the Tigers for four innings. It had started raining at the outset of the fifth and play was halted for virtually an hour.

Determined to win the game before rain might have it called off at the end of the fifth frame, Osaka board of strategy sent Saburo Miyatake of the Hankyus to pinchhit for Hirota after play was resumed. He fouled out to the catcher but Nishimura singled and Fujimura was hit by a pitched ball. Kuroda then smashed one into the left field bleachers to chalk up three runs. Hits in succession by Horio, K. Yamashita and Misonou followed by a two bagger by Okada brought in three more runs during the inning.

The Osaka ball tossers pounced on Furutani, who had replaced Morii toward the end of the fifth inning, in the sixth to score three more runs.

Misonou was in fine form and checked the Nagoya batsmen to three hits.

Cubs Top Reds, 4-3; Beat Vander Meer

CINCINNATI, July 3—The Reds made a game last-inning effort but couldn't save Johnny Vander Meer from his first defeat in ten games today, and the Cubs won, 4 to 3.

Neither Vander Meer nor Bill Lee, the Chicago ace, lasted the game, Vandy being pulled for a pinch-hitter in the eighth and Lee retiring in favor of veteran Charlie Root to stop the Reds' ninth-inning outbreak at two runs. Cascarella finished for the Reds.

Cincinnati scored in the opening inning on an error and singles by Ival Goodman and Frank McCormick, but the Cubs tied it in the fourth. They went ahead with two more in the sixth, aided by two errors by McCormick and practically clinched the game in the eighth with another one.

A single by Ernie Lombardi, Harry Craft's double and Pinch-hitter Lee Gamble's single produced the rest of the Red runs.

Vandy was touched for eleven hits in the eight innings he pitched.

U.S. Track Teams Picked To Make Tour In Europe

Struck, Harvard, On All-Star Team

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 3—Vernon H. Struck, fullback, and Joseph F. Nee, guard, Harvard stars, have been selected for the Eastern college All-Star team by Coach Andy Kerr, it was announced yesterday. The collegians are slated to meet the New York Football Giants on Sept. 7 at the Polo Grounds in the third annual Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund contest.

This is the first time that Harvard players have been nominated to the All-Star combination in the three years the encounter has been held. The naming of Struck and Nee brings the squad to three players. The other, Alex Wojciechowicz, Fordham's great center, accepted his invitation last week.

Both Harvard players were major cogs in the Crimson's campaign last Fall, playing leading roles in defeating Princeton and Yale. Struck, a member of the team for three years, was hailed by his coach, Richard C. Harlow, as his most valuable player. The fullback established his reputation through his magnificent spinning maneuvers, being the key man of Harvard's tricky offense.

Harvard supporters remember Struck especially for his work against Princeton. That day the fullback reached his peak. He carried the ball thirty times for a total of 230 yards and tallied three of his team's touchdowns.

Nee also was a member of the Harvard squad for three seasons. As a sophomore he played guard, but the following season saw him at tackle and as a senior he was shifted back to guard. It was Nee who, as running guard, paved the way for Struck on many occasions.

Both athletes are 20 years of age. Struck comes from Centralia, Ill., while Nee hails from Boston. They are both big men. Struck is six feet tall and weighs 181 pounds. His team-mate is one inch taller and scales at 198. Nee, incidentally, also was chosen by Coach Kerr for the East team which opposed the West at San Francisco last New Year's Day.

Is Joe Louis The Best Yet Of Heavyweights?

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK, June 30—Scarcely had Joe Louis shot his final contemptuous glance at Max Schmeling's broken body writhing there on the canvas from a battering that might have killed a less sturdy man, when somebody wanted to know if the champion might be classified as the greatest heavyweight that ever lived.

It makes an interesting line in any story to thus put the 24-year-old negro out there all alone as the top hand over Jeffries, Fitzsimmons, Corbett, Dempsey and the rest, but I wonder if he really is that good. I wouldn't know for sure, but I'll admit he may be, or that possibly he will develop eventually into unmistakable all-time pre-eminence. He was superb in that June 22 battle.

One thing is certain. Several alleged experts saw the words of wisdom they had been gushing for weeks converted into the prattling of so many maniacs in the record time of two minutes and four seconds. I speak of those of us who picked Schmeling. I was with Dempsey, Dumb Dan Morgan, Jimmy Johnston and others who had explained at great length why Louis could not possibly win, then sat stupified while he all but clubbed the German to bits.

And that wasn't all. Some had gone to great pains to detect that Louis was without courage by virtue of the 12-round knockout he suffered in his first fight with Schmeling, and quite plainly the prediction repeatedly was made that Louis would fold when the opening gong was touched off.

Before the fight, some also found Louis without sufficient emotion. They wanted a fiery Dempsey, a gent who would come wheeling out of his corner bent upon utter annihilation.

That's approximately what they got, and I think by now everybody must be sold on the idea that Louis can be ranked at least among the top two or three heavyweights of all time. He punches as hard and as fast as any of them, and showed a fine brand of courage in taking the play away from Schmeling. He also proved once and for all that he can work himself up to such a pitch that if ever there was a killer in there he's it when he wants to be.

I don't know how well he can box compared with other great fighters and I do know that he is easily hit from the neck up. Schmeling landed one of those right hand punches that earned him a knockout in their first fight, but it so happened that, according to Louis, he was going away just enough to take the power out of it and he didn't feel it.

It didn't matter much anyhow. By that time Schmeling gradually but surely was being battered as probably no man ever was before in so short a space of time and he was to find himself nailed to the ropes a moment later and screaming out in anguish like a badly hurt child when Louis hit him so hard in the side that his spine was fractured.

That was a terrible punch, and the one that to me established Louis temporarily, among the killers. A less vicious fighter would have stepped aside to give Schmeling a chance to get out in the open where he could have been more easily handled. Obviously Louis shot his right with all the power he could muster and that blow alone would have won him the fight without the many others he landed.

Thus the fight was a concentration of drama and action seldom seen before, and so one-sided and brutal that I'm sure all lovers of the manly art must have left happy and well-satisfied. It's true that nobody was killed, but Louis did the best he could by putting Schmeling in the hospital for 10 days.

All in all it was quite an event—especially for those of us who told you exactly how Schmeling would knock Louis out.

I still would like to see Louis fight Bob Pastor again. As he fought the other night, he would knock Pastor out, instead of going to an uninteresting 10-round decision, as he did before, and I'd like to see him in there again with Tommy Farr, who made their 15-rounder close.

Return matches with those two would serve as the measuring stick of his greatness, and would prove whether he actually has developed into the super-fighter he seemed to be against Schmeling.

French Win Singles But Reich Captures Davis Cup Matches

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 24—Already assured of the right to meet Yugoslavia in the final round of the European Zone Davis Cup competitions, Germany's 1938 Davis Cup squad allowed France to take the two remaining singles matches here today. The score stands at 3-2.

In the first of today's matches, the No. 2 German player, Georges von Metaxa, lost to Yvon Petra in three straight sets. The scores were 9-7, 8-6, 6-4. In the final singles play, Bernard Destremau defeated Redl, youthful German star, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

If Germany defeats Yugoslavia, she will play the American zone winner, which in all probability, will be Australia.

Hawaiian Kennel Club Admitted To National Organ

By HENRY R. ILSLEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 3—Announcement by the American Kennel Club of the admission to membership of the Maui Kennel Club of Hawaii brings attention once more to the vast territory now under the jurisdiction of the governing body of the sport of showing pure-bred dogs and the breeding industry. There are now two members of the A. K. C. in the Hawaiian Islands, the Hawaiian Kennel Club having been admitted in December of last year.

There are now 223 canine organizations making up the membership of the American Kennel Club, the growth of which has been remarkable during the past decade. Rarely does a quarterly meeting of the delegates pass but one to a half-dozen new members are accepted and their delegates approved.

It is expected that it will not be long before other dog clubs in the Territory of Hawaii make application for the privilege of joining the A. K. C. There are few outposts of this nation where there is such intelligent and active interest in the thoroughbred dog and in breeding and show competition. In recent years Hawaii has sent a number of efficient judges to officiate in bench shows on the mainland.

The great bulk of the membership naturally is concentrated in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts, and while several new organizations are formed each year this congested area has about reached the saturation point in the matter of all-breed exhibitions, practically all available weekend dates during the desirable seasons of the year being filled by established shows that have been held annually over a period of years.

Rules Strictly Enforced

Admission to membership may not be had for the asking, nor may any organization enter lightly on a program of show giving. There must be responsibility behind every club, for the rules of the governing body are exceedingly strict and fully enforced. No longer may a few persons get together and give a show for what there might be in it. All regulations must be fully complied with and after the show bills and prize money must be paid. It is now the accepted practice to pay all prize money in the ring when the ribbons are awarded.

Not all of the 223 members of the A. K. C. give shows. Some of the organizations are comparatively inactive, while far more than half of the membership is made up of specialty clubs, the exact number being ninety-two. Thus there are a baker's dozen of beagle clubs holding membership, with the National Beagle Club the parent organization. There are seven spaniel organizations among the membership, with the American Spaniel Club at the head. Several other breeds are represented by two or more specialty clubs.

It is a sign of the healthy growth of the national organization that the membership is reaching out into distant sections of the country and into communities where there was little interest previously in pure-bred dogs. So rapid has been this growth that there are now established show circuits in the Middle West, on the Pacific Coast and in the South, Southwest and Southeast. Most of these have been established within the last few years.

Not content with giving one big all-breed show a year, many of the most progressive organizations have concentrated upon regular match shows. These monthly events have accomplished wonders in attracting new enthusiasts to the sport. They are informal and inexpensive. Members "chip in" for ribbons and small trophies. There is no benching and every one is welcome to show a dog, for the events are not confined to club members. Mostly they are limited to American-bred specimens, with champions barred. The influence of these exhibitions is inestimable.

Breeding Business Strong

Along with the growth of membership in the A. K. C. has marched the increase in breeding operations. During the major depression no industry declined so slightly as that of breeding thoroughbred dogs. It was one of the very first to pick up and go on to establish new records.

During the present recession there was again only a slight falling off in operations and once more the pick-up has been about the first. Registration figures for May, just compiled in the office of the secretary of the governing body, show that 7,100 individual dogs were entered in the Stud Book in the past month. That compares with 6,800 for May, 1937. At this rate of increase, it may be expected that the close of this year will bring the announcement of another alltime record.

Stanford Takes Intercollegiate Team Golf Title

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 29—An easterner and a southerner, one by virtue of a brilliant comeback and the other through consistent shot-making, stroked into a tie yesterday for medalist honors at the end of the 36-hole qualifying for the 41st National intercollegiate golf championship.

Firing the only sub-par golf of the round of medal play, Willie Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Holy Cross, finished early with a 145 total only to be deadlocked for the trophy a few minutes later by Lew W. Oehmig, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the University of Virginia.

Turnesa, who comes from a golfing family and a year ago was medalist of this championship classic at Oakmont with 146, finished the second round of the qualifying yesterday with a 69, two under par for the Louisville Country Club course.

A putt that hung on the lip of the cup at the last hole cost Oehmig, Virginia captain and Tennessee State champion, a chance to take undisputed possession of the medalist trophy. He clipped two strokes off par going out, but three putts at the 15 and failure to chip closely at three greens on the way in gave him a 38 and a 72 total to add to his first round 73.

The field was cut down to the 32 low scorers for a lineup of 16 matches to start championship elimination in the first round this morning at 18 holes.

Paul Leslie of Louisiana State, runnerup for the championship for the last two years, failed to qualify by taking a disastrous 80 to add to his opening 75, and Edward J. Flowers of Michigan State, the first day's leader with a 72, dissipated his medalist chances with a second-round 78.

Turnesa and Oehmig paced a record field in the championship-forming play by two strokes, with Stanley Holditch of Georgia Tech, a quarter-finalist last year, and Billie Lee Craig of Oklahoma trailing at 147.

Stanford won the team trophy with a record score of 601, an average of just one stroke over 75s for the four low-scoring players. The former mark was 611, established by Michigan three years ago. Northwestern and Oklahoma were tied for second with 609 and Louisiana State third with 615.

The Tallest Hedge In The World

The Beech Hedge, the tallest hedge known, is situated about four miles from the popular Scotch summer resort of Blairgowrie and borders the grounds of Meikleour House, the estate owned by the Marques of Landsdowne. It extends along the side of Perth Road for well over half a mile, attaining a height of 100 feet. The beautiful wall of solid greenery, resplendent in its delicate coloring of beech, was planted in 1745. It has to be pruned every 7 years, the task requiring about three weeks of ingenious labor.

(England)

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Oreste Vaccari,

Recently it was my good fortune to purchase your "Complete Course of Japanese Conversation-Grammar" and its "Supplement."

I would here take the opportunity of congratulating you jointly on the production of such a work; and I might add, without hesitation, that of all the books I have perused on this subject, yours is by far the most complete and explicit.

In addition, your method of graduated exercises, dealing in the simpliest, yet most thorough, manner with the intricate Japanese grammar, inclusive of its peculiar and difficult idioms, together with the comparative study of the formidable kanji, kana, and romaji, is nothing short of marvellous.

To both of you I extend my heartiest thanks and appreciation for the production of the work, at once instructive, interesting, and unique.

THE LONDON TIMES
LITERARY SUPPLEMENT

....this new manual is practical and useful, and what Count Kabayama in his prefactory note calls its "human method" will make it acceptable to the growing number of English students of Japanese. When the student has mastered its sixty lessons he will have completed the equivalent of an ordinary Japanese school education and will be at home in the language and able to proceed to higher things.

A feature of the book is its transliteration with Chinese characters of every Japanese example rendered in English spelling so that the student is gradually familiarized with the appearance of the language as well as with its sound.

3-City Tourney Of Pro Nines Ends In A Tie

The first Tokyo-Nagoya-Osaka all-stars three-game championship series of professional baseball players, sponsored by the Yomiuri Shimbun, ended Tuesday afternoon at the Korakuen Stadium with the title unsettled, each team winning a game.

Behind the good pitching of Nakayama of the Nagoya Dolfins, who yielded but three hits, the Nagoya All-Stars, who had been bumped off 10-0 by the Osaka combine in a six-inning game the preceding day, downed the Tokyo team, 7 to 1, in the curtain-raiser. But the Tokyo players went on a hitting rampage in the nightcap and bombarded Saburo Miyatake of the Hankyus and Nishimura of the Tigers for 16 hits to nose out the Osaka All-Stars, 6 to 5.

Kameda Pitches

Ted Kameda of the Eagles went the whole route for the Tokyo team against the Osaka representatives, allowing 11 hits.

The game between the Tokyo and Osaka teams was a nip and tuck affair all the way through. Osaka made an auspicious start by tallying twice in the first inning before a single out. Kuroda, lead-off man, gained life at first on the shortstop's error and went to third on Fujimura's double over the center fielder's head. Right Fielder Nakajima muffed Yamaguchi's fly down the right field foul line and Kuroda scored. Kameda then uncorked a wild pitch and Fujimura tallied. Kageura walked and it seemed as if the Osaka ball tossers would continue scoring but Horio grounded to short into a doubleplay and further scoring was checked for the time being.

Nakajima redeemed himself by coming through with a hit to right field after two outs to bring in Karita who had hit to get on in the last half of the first inning. Tokyo then deadlocked the count at 2-all in the third on hits by Omoda and Chiba after two outs.

Nishimura replaced Miyatake on the mound for Osaka at the outset of the fourth but Tokyo greeted him with a run to forge into the lead. Nakagawa singled and Karita promptly knocked him home with a double.

But the Osaka lads tied the score in the fifth. Fujimura walked after two outs and came in on Yamaguchi's infield hit and Kageura's timely bingle to left field.

Osaka In Lead

And then it was Osaka to go into the lead by one run in the seventh. It was Yamaguchi again that started the ball rolling with a sizzling two-bagger down the right field foul line. He came in on Jimmy Horio's smashing hit to left field.

But the lead was only short-lived as Tokyo registered a run in the eighth. Kameda singled to get on but was forced out at second by Karita. Nakane singled and Karita went to third. Then it was Harris that rapped Nishimura for a timely hit to bat in Karita.

Osaka forged into the lead again in the first half of the ninth on the strength of Backstop Tanaka's hit through second after two outs with a man on third.

Full of fight, Tokyo never gave up and gained confidence as Omoda, first up in the last half of the ninth, walked. Chiba was to sacrifice but Omoda went to second on a passed ball, and so he swung viciously and lashed a two bagger high over the center fielder's head to tie the score. Shiraishi came through with the hit that batted in Chiba for the winning run.

The only Tokyo run in the first game was a home run smash into the left field bleachers by Karita.

Right Fielder Kobayashi of Nagoya also clouted a homer, with a man on, in the seventh inning.

Mrs. Thompson Breaks Three Records In Santa Barbara Meet

Domei Tsushin

SANTA BARBARA, July 25—Mrs. Katherine Rawls Thompson of Olympic swimming and diving fame, broke her third world's record yesterday in the third and last day of the women's national outdoor aquatic championships held here, according to an official announcement made by pool officials this afternoon.

Having already broken two world's records in the 300-meter medley and mile freestyle events on Friday, the newlywed Miami star yesterday flashed through the 800-yard freestyle event in the record time of 11 minutes 33.2 seconds, clipping 1.2 seconds from the three-year-old world mark set by Mrs. Lenore Knight Wingard. Her sensational triumphs during the past three days have definitely established her as one of the greatest all-around American women natators of all time.

Waseda Nine Routs Honolulu Team, 10-0 To Open Series There

Waseda University's crack baseball team, which lost to Meiji in a special playoff game for the championship of the spring season of the Tokyo Six University league, made a spectacular start in its series in Honolulu by running roughshod over the Braves team of the Hawaii Baseball league by a 10 to 0 score in Monday, according to a Domei dispatch received here.

Waseda's victory is impressive as the Braves club, composed in the main of players of Portuguese race, is one of the strongest in Hawaii.

Waseda was invited to Hawaii by the Asahis Baseball Club, which recently won the Hawaii league championship.

Averill Discusses Return To Ranks Of. 300 Batsmen

CLEVELAND, June 24—Why is Earl Averill—the player you saw way down in the American League batting lists last year—topping both league at a .390 clip?

"You're allowed three swings and I'm taking every one," the Cleveland Indians' star center fielder declared today. "I'm swinging at anything that looks good enough to hit.

"You think you're hitting because you've found the stance, but you don't know. But that's where it comes—in getting the right stance."

The pride of Little Snohomish, Wash., refused, however, even to admit he'd wind up in the select .300 list. Last year he dropped to .299 but his lifetime average of .322 is one of the best in the business.

"I hope to keep up my pace, but you don't know. You may get in a rut, and when you do you drop awfully fast."

Averill, now in his tenth year in the league leaders' middle pasture, has been one of the main reasons the Indians are clicking so well and refusing to fold up at midseason.

He swings from the left side a narrow-handled, 40-ounce bat, and believes the well-polished ash is as heavy as is used by any other American League player. There was a time when he swung a 44-ounce club.

"I don't hit like other players," he explained. "I don't buggy whip at the ball, I sweep at it."

Averill said all pitchers are "tough" to hit, then became more explicit:

"The toughest pitcher you can face is the one you've never seen before; you don't know what he's got and you do know what the others throw."

French Violinist Claims Endurance Swimming Record

Domei Tsushin

SANTA MONICA, July 25.—Paul Chotteau, 40-year-old French concert violinist, today claimed the world's longest swim record here by remaining in the water for nearly 45 hours and actually swimming about 70 miles.

Starting from Santa Barbara Island, 56 miles at sea, at noon Saturday, the eccentric Frenchman covered nearly 70 miles because of adverse currents. After battling rough seas and fatigue for nearly two whole days and nights, he finally collapsed 15 miles short of his goal. Attending boats picked up the hapless swimmer and brought him to the hospital here.

Chotteau first made his bid to fame in 1926 when he attempted to swim the English Channel, but failed a few miles short of his goal.

Vitt Injects Spirit

By MAURICE MERRIFIELD

CLEVELAND—With the Cleveland Indians on the warpath and now leading the American league, it looks as though credit is due that old Medicine Man Oscar Vitt, for turning a bunch of squaws into a crew of rampaign braves.

Despite the verbal brickbats hurled at Manager Vitt recently by Joe McCarthy, mentor of the New York Yankees, Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers and Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, who branded Vitt as a complete heel, the records testify to his ability as a baseball strategist and handler of men.

"Breezy" is probably one of the best words to describe Vitt. He goes his own blithe way quite indifferent to jibes and public opinion. There is a hustling streak in him which has stirred the tribe out of his lethargy and kept them on their toes. Vitt holds no brief for the "kid glove" type of management and tells the boys off when they fail to fight or pull a boner. Cleveland has had the material and the best pitching staff in the league for the past three years, but they lacked the old drive. It is this spark which has been given them by Vitt, transforming a spiritless club into one with punch and determination.

At the same time, Os has forbearance and patience as long as he thinks a man is trying. When Moose Solters, slugging outfielder, went into a batting slump, causing some of the fans to yell for his scalp, Vitt pursed him along and retained confidence that the Moose would get his eye back. He makes no snap judgments on a player but gives him the full benefit of the doubt.

Reformed Rollicking Rollie

His coaching ability and experience has made itself felt in every department of the Indians' lineup. As a result of his tip to Hal Trosky hard-hitting first sacker, Hal changed his batting stance and has been rapping them all around the lot and over the fence with abandon. An old third baseman himself, Vitt has been able to make Ken Keltner into a very classy player at the hot corner as well as improving the general play of the entire infield.

In handling the pitching staff Vitt has best demonstrated his managerial ability. Instead of making Bob Feller, youthful phenom, a "Sunday pitcher" as in the past, he has kept him in there working his regular turn and the resuls have justified the move. His pitching assignments and choice of relief hurlers has helped considerably to keep Cleveland up where it is in the league standings.

Another accomplishments to his credit has been the manner in which he has handled Rollie Hemsley, "bad boy" of the league. This undeniably capable catcher has been a headache for every manager he played for, but Vitt seems to have brought him around and set him on his feet.

Career Began in 1910

It may be that Cleveland will fold before the season is over—as has happened before and as many are again predicting—but if they do, it won't be Vitt's fault for he has proved himself a fighting hustling manager.

Vitt was born in San Francisco on January 4, 1890, and played his first ball with the home town club in 1910. In 1912 he was drafted by Detroit and remained there until 1919 when he went to the Boston Red Sox for two years. Next came four years in the Pacific Coast league with Salt Lake City and two years with the Hollywood team when he started his managerial career.

In 1936 he was called east by the Yankees to manage their farm at Newark, N. J., where he finished third in 1936 and piloted the team to a pennant and victory in the junior world series last year.

Noguchi Quits As Coach Of Track Federation

Gensaburo Noguchi, head coach of the Japan Amateur Track and Field Federation, sent his resignation to the Federation Tuesday. With Tokyo's abandonment of the 12th Olympic Games, he believes he no longer needs to hold the post, he said.

Cunningham Keeps On Winning, Beats Fenske In A.A.U. Competition

By ARTHUR J. DALEY
N.Y. Times

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 3—In a shoulder-to-shoulder drive for the last furlong the mighty Glenn Cunningham beat back the desperate bid of Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin to win the 1,500-meter run that featured the golden anniversary track and field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union in the Civic Stadium today.

It was by only a foot that the old master triumphed after a thrilling race that electrified that crowd of 15,000. But it was a smashing victory nevertheless over the fastest mile array ever assembled on this continent. Archie San Romani, heir-presumptive to the throne, was third and Louis Zamperini of Southern California, fourth.

This was the high spot of a gala meet that saw the New York Athletic Club come bounding back to the top once again in winning the senior team crown, its sixth in the last seven years. Once the Winged Footers went to work it was no contest as the defending Olympic Club of San Francisco bowed to the superior speed and strength of the New Yorkers, 57 to 26½ points. The New York Curb Exchange A. A. was third at 17 and Rice Institute fourth at 15.

A Record in Reverse

In many respects this was the strangest of all national championships. No faster field ever assembled than the one which cavorted under a bright sun and a slight breeze in this new stadium off the shores of Lake Erie. But in the face of the most bristling competition in the entire history of the A. A. U. there was only one record broken—something of a record in reverse itself.

The reason was the track. This same meet at Princeton or Randalls Island would have produced new marks by the carload but the Buffalo surface was an anchor to windward all the way.

When one considers that the first four men in the 1,500 all have broken 4:09 for a mile, it was natural to expect a metric mile in well under 3:50. Such, however, was not the case, since Cunningham was caught in 3:52.5 after as bristling a struggle as this ancient meet ever has seen.

The Features in Brief

Here in brief are the feaures of the meet:

The lone record—Henry Cieman, the Toronto hairdresser, with 13:39.9 for the 3,000-meter walk to break Harry Hinkel's Amercian mark of 13:43.3.

The successful defenders—Cunningham in the 1,500; Ray Malott in the 400; Eino Pentti in the 10,000; Jack Patterson in the 400-meter hurdles; Irving Folwartshny in the hammer throw and Lou Lepis in the fifty-six-pound weight throw.

The beaten champions—Perrin Walker, fourth in the 100, Joe McCluskey, unplaced in the 5,000 (after winning the steeplechase); Allan Tolmich, second in the high hurdles; Dave Albritton, second in the high jump; Kermit King, unplaced in the broad jump; Phil Levy, second in the discus; Billy Brown, third in the triple jump; Bill Reitz, unplaced in the javelin; the Olympic Club, second in the 400-meter relay, and the Curb Exchange, third in the 1,600-meter relay.

The only double winner—Fred Wolcott of Rice, the unbeaten sophomore hurdling sensation of the year.

Glenn's Feat Outstanding

This was a grand meet in every respect except for the actual times and distances. The number of dethroned champions alone was sufficient to give mute testimony as to the caliber of the competition. But standing head and shoulders above all others was the racing masterpiece that Cunningham turned in the metric mile.

Glenn slipped over the black cinders in good position all the way, made his move at the precise time and came slamming over the wire for his fourth straight title, his fifth in the last six years.

Ambling Archie allowed himself to get pocketed in the early going. Fenske and Zamperini permitted themselves to drop back too far so that they had to sprint furiously in the final drive. But Galloping Glenn moved along serenely, ready to strike whenever he wanted.

The power house from the Corn Belt was third a lap and a half from the wire, and as the fleet field of nine thundered into the homestretch their speed was so great that there was a tremendous shuffling of positions. Fenske and Zamperini had been last most of the way, but when they all straightened out for the final tour of the oval the order was thus: Ray Mahannah of Drake in the lead, five yards ahead of Cunningham and Fenske; a yard back, San Romani and Elaine Rideout; a foot back, Josef Mostert of Belgium; a foot back, Zamperini. All the class of the race, as can be seen, was up there.

In the backstretch, Mahannah faded as the Kansan and Badger stars let go in a bristling drive. They were locked shoulder to shoulder all the way around the ultimate turn and there they stayed in an electrifying burst that lifted the crowd to its feet. But Fenske, despite his game bid, just could not make it as Cunningham won by a foot in the ordinary time of 3:52.5. San Romani closed with a rush to take third, five yards back, with Zamperini fourth, Mostert fifth and Rideout sixth.

The two shortest races on the program, the 100-meter dash and the 110-meter hurdles, produced the two closest finishes. Wilbur Gareer, the I. C. 4-A champion from Michigan State, led Ben Johnson of Columbia and the Curb Exchange at 50 meters, with Mozel Ellerbe, the N. C. A. A. titleholder from Tuskegee, whirling along almost even with Ben.

But in the last few strides the Columbia Comet zoomed past to win by a whisker and atone for the succession of defeats that followed his measles attack last May. His time was 10.7 seconds, with Greer, Ellerbe and Perrin Walker, the defender, following in that order.

The high hundles final saw unbeaten Wollcott of Rice clinch the claim to being the world's fastest timber-topper by winning by inches from Tolmich, the holder of the crown, in 14.3 seconds.

Wolcott achieved his double and gave Rice an unprecedented sweep of all the hurdles in the 200-meter timber-topping test. He same from behind to edge out Kingsley Lattimer of the New York A. C. by a yard in 0:23.6, sound time.

In the field events fifteen high jumpers cleared 6 feet 4 inches, Mel Walker finally winning at 6 feet 7 inches; in the pole vault five went over 14 feet before Cornelius Warmerdam won at 14 feet 5½ inches. Bill Lacefield took the broad jump at 25 feet 3-10 inches. Frank Ryan captured the shot at 52 feet 1½ inches; Pete Zagar unfurled the second best discus throw in the annals of the games to triumph at 167 feet 3½ inches.

City Is Requested To Build Athletic Field At Komazawa

A request that the City go through with its plans for the construction of the athletic field at the Komazawa site, which had been scheduled for the 12th Olympic Games, with the view to preparing for the next Olympic Games in 1944 and for sports promotion in this country, was made by Ryozo Hiranuma, vice president of the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation, with Deputy Mayor Minabe Wednesday.

The request was taken under consideration by the Deputy Mayor.

Count Futara, president of the Japan Cycling Federation, also requested the City authorities Wednesday to complete construction of the cycling stadium at Shibaura, the ground leveling work of which has already been started.

257 Victories Won By Yale In All Sports

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 2—Yale athletic teams and crews engaged in 408 contests in the college year just ended, which coincidentally was the same number participated in during the previous year, statistics released by the Yale Athletic Association tonight revealed. Most of the competition was dual in nature, with the exceptions in crew and cross-country.

The percentage of victories was high, but not so good as the 1936-'37 record, the teams winning 257 contests, losing 136 and tying 15, as against 274 victories, 129 losses and 5 ties the previous year. Varsity teams engaged in four fewer contests this year, 202 against 206, and won 26 victories. The results are shown in the following table:

	Total	W.	L.	T.
Varsity	202	117	79	6
Junior varsity	34	14	17	3
Freshman	146	111	30	5
150-lb. varsity	8	6	1	1
Second varsity 150-lb	1	0	1	0
Third Varsity	1	1	0	0
Freshman 150-lb.	3	0	3	0
Second freshman	11	7	4	0
Third freshman	1	1	0	0
Combination	1	0	1	0
Totals	408	257	136	15

Outstanding achievements were the winning of the national indoor intercollegiate polo championship, retention of the national squash racquets title, the winning of the national championship by the 150-pound varsity crew, and top honors in the quadrangular meet by the varsity track team. Blazing a record year of freshman victories was the undefeated football eleven, which won every game for the first time since 1923.

Though the varsity baseball team relinquished its claim to the Eastern Intercollegiate League title to Dartmouth, the team captained by Dick Marcus split the Princeton series and won two out of three from Harvard.

The 150-pound varsity football team tied Princeton for the league title.

Fencing again held a prominent spot in the year's achievements. The team won the intercollegiate foil championship, Captain Maurice Grasson captured second place in the Class A foils and Paul Perlowin won first place in the Class B foils. Yale also won the saber team championship in the pentagonal fencing meet, while Grasson and Robert Ebel won the titles in foil and saber respectively. In the nationals, Yale won the national junior saber team championship, and William Randall the junior individual epee title.

The record of the varsity football team in going through undefeated until the final game with Harvard, and the undefeated intercollegiate seasons of the varsity and freshman squash teams as well as the freshman wrestling and golf teams, is noteworthy.

Yale freshman teams won 111 and lost but thirty contests. Only three teams lost more than two events: The basketball team, with fourteen victories, three losses; the fencing team, with five and six, and the hockey team with nine victories, four losses and a tie.

Big Three championships in competition with Harvard and Princeton were won by Yale in baseball, fencing, hockey and squash racquets. In major sports with Harvard, Yale won in hockey, track and baseball, losing in football and crew and dividing the two-game basketball series. In minor sports, Yale defeated Harvard in cross-country, fencing, squash, wrestling, lacrosse, tennis and rifle, while Harvard won in golf, indoor and outdoor polo, soccer and swimming.

Major sport triumphs over Princeton were scored in football and crew. The Tigers won in track and broke even in basketball, hockey and baseball.

In varsity minor sports with the Tigers, Yale won in fencing, indoor polo, outdoor polo and squash, losing in cross-country, lacrosse, soccer, swimming and wrestling. The teams tied in tennis and did not meet in golf or rifle.

In freshman sports, Yale defeated both Harvard and Princeton in baseball, basketball, football, golf, hockey and squash.

Six Americans, One German In Wrestling Meet

Members of the visiting American wrestling team and a German grappler now visiting in this country will compete in the fifth national amateur wrestling championships to be staged next Monday night at 6:30 p.m. at the Hibiya Public Hall auditorium.

Emilio Bruno, welterweight champion of the United States, is expected to meet Eiichi Kazama of Waseda, the national champion, in the finals of the welterweight division, and it should be the greatest bout of the evening. Due to an injury to his leg, Bruno was unable to compete in the four America-Japan meets which have been held to date. But he is completely recovered now and is out to score revenge for his defeat last year.

German to Compete

Lehman, the German wrestler, will compete in the middleweight division.

Fortune Masdeo, who was a member of the wrestling team that came here last year from the Pacific coast of the United States, is a strong contender for the title in the lightweight class. He has yet to lose a bout in this country.

The draw made Tuesday night by the Japan Amateur Wrestling Association follows with two bouts for each class, the winners clashing for the titles:

Bantamweights

Hendershot (U.S.) versus Kurihara (Meiji).
Dalo (U.S.) versus Domei (Waseda).
Ota (Waseda), alternate.

Featherweights

Weede (U.S.) versus Ishiguro (Senshu).
Condey (U.S.) versus Ko (Meiji).
Watanabe (Keio), alternate.

Lightweights

Pirates Conquer Cardinals By 5-1

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, July 2—Rookie Bob Klinger, who has been beaten only once this year, won his sixth straight pitching victory today, holding the Cardinals to six hits in hurling the Pirates to a 5-to-1 triumph. The only run off him, in the first inning, was unearned.

Manager Frankie Frisch of the Cards said the Gashouse Gang was playing the game under protest, because the Pirates had more than the maximum of twenty-three players on their bench. But the Bucs used only nine players altogether in trouncing Fiddler Bill McGee.

The game was sewed up as early as the second inning, when McGee loaded the bases on two walks and a single, and Pep Young promptly unloaded them with a long double.

Budge Praised By Queen Mary On His Triumph

N.Y. Times

WIMBLEDON, England, July 1—Queen Mary asked to see Don Budge and Bunny Austin after Budge had beaten the Briton in straight sets for the Wimbledon tennis championship today.

The Queen Mother congratulated the blushing Californian and sympathized with Bunny.

"She's a kind and wonderful lady," said Budge later.

Budge Too Good

By THOMAS J. HAMILTON
N.Y. Times

WIMBLEDON, England, July 1—Playing with precision and power that would not be denied, Don Budge today made doubly sure of his place among the immortals of tennis with a crushing victory over Henry W. (Bunny) Austin which gave the American the Wimbledon singles championship for the second year in succession.

The score of 6—1, 6—0, 6—3 was overwhelming but Budge's superiority was still more overwhelming. The three sets required only sixty-six minutes to play, and Budge, who had won fourteen games in a row, might have made it two love sets instead of one but for a slight lapse of concentration in the closing stages.

As it was, he allowed the Englishman only four games. In 1932 Ellsworth Vines defeated this same unfortunate Austin in straight sets with the loss of only ten games. Last year, in winning the title for the first time, Budge allowed Baron Gottfried von Cramm only nine.

Master of All Amateurs

But today will ever be memorable in the career of Budge, not because of comparative scores, but because it demonstrated he had attained his full stature in the game of which he is now the undisputed master—at least in amateur tennis.

Once he had conquered his early raggedness, which permitted Austin to hold his opening service for his only tally in the first set, Budge had every shot in his great collection working at its best.

Asked by this correspondent tonight to explain how it happened, Budge smiled and said, "It was just one of those things."

"I was right—I never played better," he continued before going on to praise Austin for carrying on throughout the tournament despite the strain of becoming a father for the first time.

Actually Austin, despite the arrival of his daughter and his 31 years, today played one of the best games of his career. Except for an unwise tendency to go to the net when the situation did not justify it—certainly not against Budge—Austin produced the same orthodox game that for years has kept him tantalizingly close to the heights.

Austin Sticks to Task

Even against a champion like Budget playing in today's form Austin never despaired. The moment Budge weakened Austin was quick as a flash to seize his opportunity—it was thus that he got his game in the first set and three in the third—and when Budge was content to stay on the baseline Austin most of the time held his own and occasionally even won a point with an untouchable placement.

Most of Austin's points, however, came from Budge's errors, which is by no means a contradiction of Budge's statement that he was "right" today. For he had to lose points now and then because there were so few winners from Austin that most of the games would otherwise have been decided at love.

Yet Austin started strongly. There was a most prolonged struggle over the first game, for Budge's first service was not functioning correctly and in unanswerable fashion. And since Budge took a certain amount of time to find his length, Austin held his own service at love.

But then Budge found his game and never looked back. It wasn't anything like blowing his opponent off the court, but a calm, cool application of irresistible pressure. A couple of times in the fourth game Austin, willing to try anything, hastened to the net only to despair at the passing shots that he could not get near.

Englishman Rallies

The first set thus went calmly and the second rapidly, although Austin managed to lead at 40—15 in the fifth game and even win an advantage after Budge had drawn level.

Now the spectacle was growing unbelievable for Austin, giving his best, like the plucky fighter that he is, was producing wonder shots that only elicited still greater shots in reply. Drop shots that other players would not have attempted drew Budge in from deep in the back court and he put them away. Passed at the net, caught on the wrong foot on the baseline, it was all one—he gained in strength and precision as the games raced on.

Still without a sign of faltering, Budge went on through the first half of the third set, although Austin led at 40—15 in the third game. By this time it was obvious Budge was trying to close out the match with a run of seventeen games, which would have made history indeed, and the gallery applauded Austin every time he managed to save a point.

At this point the weather, which had been threatening throughout the match, produced a cold drizzle, and since it was obvious that the tournament officials hoped the match could be concluded without postponement, Budge redoubled his efforts to finish his opponent.

Budge's Service Broken

Austin, rising to the challenge, fought on all the harder and with his drives making up in precision their inferiority in power to Budge's swooping backhand, he broke Budge's service in the fourth.

A shout went up from every side of the center court stands in tribute to this effort and swelled to a roar as Austin, redoubling his efforts, took the next game at 15 and Budge was leading by only 3—2.

The American came back to take the sixth at love, but Austin captured the next before a real downpour of rain forced the authorities to order an interval.

When they returned, Budge quickly annexed the eighth game, then, after falling in the ninth, proceeded to contradict the habits of ordinary morals by taking the next three points for a 15—40 lead. A short rally and Budge missed his first match point, then another, and Austin put his forehand in the net to decide the match and the championship.

After such a glorious victory Budge could not resist the attendants who beleaguered him to get his signature on the balls used in this historic match. Then, while Austin, in token of his defeat, laughingly held an armful of Budge's rackets, the champion spoke in the rain to a British television audience.

Eden in Royal Box

From these activities Budge and Austin were summoned to the royal box, where the Californian received the congratulations of Queen Mary and the Duke and Duchess of Kent. Sitting in the back row, unnoticed by the crowd, was Anthony Eden, who has been playing tennis mainly since he left the Foreign Office.

Canadians See Win For Japan Against Canada

Domei Tsushin

MONTREAL, July 26—With both the Canadian and Japanese Davis Cup players in excellent shape for the opening of the first round of the American zone competitions next Thursday, Montreal tennis observers today conceded a victory for the Japanese, although they admit the Canadians will make a good showing.

After watching the Japanese net stars practice yesterday, Henri Laframboise, non-playing captain of the Canadian team, declared that Jiro Yamagishi appears "very strong" and that he will instruct the Canadian team to concentrate on the other Japanese players.

If Japan's chances of winning appear too weak, observers said that Tamio Abe, non-playing captain, might pit Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano, rated Japan's No. 1 and No. 2 stars respectively, in both the singles and doubles.

Drawings for the matches will be made Wednesday morning at the Mount Royal Tennis Club, officials said. The first two singles matches will start at 1:15 p.m. Thursday, the doubles at 2 p.m. Friday and the remaining singles at 1:15 p.m. Saturday.

Although Laframboise refused to reveal the names of his candidates for each of the matches, he is known to be placing the brunt of the Canadian's team's burden on the shoulders of Robert D. Murray, leading Canadian net ace, who is described as Canada's "only hope," while Ross Wilson and Laird Watt will probably be his choice for the doubles.

Primed for action, the Canadian team has been materially strengthened by three weeks of experience in the competitions in the United States grass court tournaments, plus another week of intensive practice under the careful tutelage of Frederick J. Perry, former British Davis Cup star. The players will rest up the next two days, undergoing only light practice.

The Japanese Davis Cup team of Tamio Abe (non-playing captain), Jiro Yamagishi, Fumiteru Nakano and Yasumine Kuramitsu, who arrived here last Saturday from New York, are staying at the Berkeley Hotel.

JAPAN TAKES OPENING SINGLES FROM CANADA

Jiro Yamagishi And Nakano Top Murray, Wilson

Japan virtually clinched its three-day series in the opening round in the American zone of the Davis Cup play on the opening day, Thursday, at Montreal by taking the two opening singles. For even if the Japanese team loses the doubles scheduled for today, Jiro Yamagishi should have no trouble beating Ross Wilson, the No. 2 man of the Canadian team, in the concluding two singles.

Yamagishi on Thursday had little trouble beating Robert D. Murray, the Canadian No. 1 man, 6-1 6-3 and 6-3, while Fumiteru Nakano scored an impressive 6-2, 6-3 and 6-2 win over Wilson

Canadians Concede Victory

Domei Tsushin

MONTREAL, July 27—Although virtually admitting that the Canadian squad has little chance of emerging victorious from its three-day Davis Cup series against the Japanese in the first-round's play in the American zone, Henri Laframboise, non-playing captain of the Canadian squad, declared on the eve of the opening day's play that he was "confident that our boys will give a good fight and score a few points."

The draw for the series which took place at the Mount Royal Tennis Club at 10:30 a.m. today, revealed that on the first day, tomorrow, Jiro Yamagishi, foremost Japanese player, will face the Canadian star, Robert D. Murray, in a singles match. In the other encounter, Fumiteru Nakano, Japan's No. 2 player, will meet Ross Wilson.

On the second day, Yamagishi and Nakano will meet the Canadian doubles team of Wilson and Laird Watt. Saturday, the remaining singles matches will be played with Yamagishi pitted against Wilson and Nakano against Murray.

Sees Japanese Victory

Even the Canadian press conceded a Japanese victory in the series, picking the Japanese as seven to five favorites, one paper here declared, "The cool and confident Japanese have every indication of being an attacking team. The problem, therefore, is how far can our boys defend against the Japanese."

Frederick J. Perry, England's sensational player who recently turned professional and who is coaching the Canadian squad, commented on the respective strengths of the Japanese and Canadian players.

"I have the greatest respect for the way Yamagishi plays," Perry declared, adding, "I believe he has the ability of being one of the greatest players Japan has ever produced. Nakano and Kuramitsu," he added, "are also fine players, however I believe that the latter have the tendency of being a little game shy."

The former English Davis Cup player continued, "I believe that Yamagishi won't encounter much difficulty in defeating Wilson, however it is certain that Murray will put up a good fight. Nakano and Wilson," he added, "seem to be an even match."

Regarding the respective doubles combinations, Perry declared, "I can hardly say anything with regard to the doubles, because both have good teams."

Also commenting on the ability of the players, the Japanese team's non-playing captain, Tamio Abe, declared. "I believe the Japanese will encounter a hard fight. It is difficult to estimate the exact strength of the Canadian players since they have practiced exclusively with Perry.

He continued, however, "I believe that Bobby Murray is one of the best all-around players I have ever seen in Canada while Wilson's strong smashing forehand shots would certainly be hard to hit back.

"I am confident that Japan will win the doubles," Abe declared. He added, "However I am pinning my hopes on Yamagishi to defeat Murray."

Commenting on the selection of the Japanese squad, Abe declared that he had picked Yamagishi and Nakano to participate in all the matches. "Yamagishi and Nakano," he declared, "are in the best condition. Kuramitsu, who was ill when we practiced at Forest Hills has not yet recovered completely while I have had a slight pain in my right arm for the past two days and do not wish to take any chances.

50-50 Chances Predicted

Meanwhile, R. N. Watt, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, declared today, "I saw both the Japanese and Canadians practice last week and came to the conclusion that they have 50-50 chances of winning.

"The Canadian team, which I believe is one of the best, toured the United States for more than five weeks and got the best training Canada has ever been able to offer Davis Cup players. I believe the doubles match will decide which team will be victorious."

It was also announced here today that Abe and Yasumine Kuramitsu, the fourth member of the Japanese squad, will prticipte in an exhibition doubles match against two Canadian players whose names have not yet been announced. The contest will be held on Friday.

Japan, in the event she is victorious over Canada, will meet the Australian team in the final round of the American zone on August 11, 12 and 13 at the Mount Royal Tennis Club here, it was formally announced.

Tokyo Tennis Star Shines In U.S.

Mrs. Tokuko M. Nakano of Tokyo, who proved women's invincible champion of Hawaii for a number of years and then won the Japanese championship here without trouble, (third from left) and Miss Helen Germaine (on her left) won the doubles title of the women's Eastern clay court championships at Montclair, New Jersey, recently. Their opponents were (left to right), Miss Olga Kallos and Miss Edna Smith. The score was 6-0, 9-11 and 6-3.

Mrs. Nakano Of Tokyo And Hawaii, Partner Win N.J. Doubles Title

N.Y. Times

MONTCLAIR, N. J., July 4—Miss Edna Smith of Cleveland captured the women's Eastern clay court tennis championship today at the Montclair A. C., taking the third set by default from Miss Helen Bernhard of New York, who was forced out by an ankle injury sustained in a fall in the second set.

Miss Bernhard, seeded third, won the first set at 7—5, only to have Miss Smith, fourth seeded player, make a spectacular uphill flight to annex the second at 9—7.

Although the tournament committee offered to give Miss Bernhard longer than the usual ten-minute intermission at the conclusion of the second set, the 16-year-old Wadleigh High School girl found she could not continue play.

The diminutive Miss Smith, a graduate of Ohio State University, is ranked fourth in the Western Association and in Class A nationally. Miss Bernhard is ranked eighth in the Eastern Association.

The final provided the gallery with an exhibition of steady tennis and long rallies. In the first set six of the twelve games went to deuce, with only three games won on service, two by Miss Bernhard and one by Miss Smith. Miss Bernhard clinched the first set with a love game, sending down two smashing passing shots.

It was in the eighth game of the second set that Miss Bernhard, racing to retrieve one of Miss Smith's smashing forehand drives, turned an ankle and fell to the ground. In falling she also suffered a bruised arm. Despite the fall, she took the next game to lead, 5—3 and 30—love.

At this point the Cleveland star rallied gamely, chalking up three straight games to go ahead, 6—5. The New York girl then evened the tally and after dividing the next two games, Miss Smith, scoring repeatedly on sizzling forehand smashes and clever drop shots, triumphed by 9—7.

Miss Helen Germaine and Mrs. Tokuko Nakano, top seeded New York team, took the doubles title, defeating Miss Olga Kallos of Ridgefield, Conn., and Miss Smith by 6-0, 9-11, 6-3.

The finals of the men's New Jersey State singles and doubles were postponed until next week-end. The tentative schedule, announced by Referee Harry F. Wolf, calls for the singles test between Don Hawley of Orange, the defending champion, and Robert Peacock, University of California, on Sunday and the doubles match bringing together Robert Underwood and James Seaver, Stanford, and Peacock and Doug Imhoff, California, on Saturday.

Feller Of Indians Stops Red Sox, 7-3

CLEVELAND, June 27—The Indians backed up Bobby Feller's classy seven-hit pitching today with a fifteen-hit attack of their own to trounce the Red Sox, 7 to 3, and boost their American League lead to four games.

Feller, scoring his ninth victory against two defeats for the year, bested the veteran Lefty Grove, who received his third setback.

Feller got himself into several tight spots, but pulled out of all of them. He was particularly cool in the third, when the Red Sox loaded the bases on two singles and a walk, with none out. Then Feller fanned Pinky Higgins and forced Ben Chapman to ground into a double play to end the threat.

Again in the fifth it looked bad when Jimmy Foxx clouted his twenty-first homer of the year and Joe Cronin followed with a two-bagger, but again Feller struck out Higgins to pull through. Altogether he fanned ten Boston batters.

His mates, meantime, didn't leave the issue long in doubt. After the Red Sox got away to a one-run lead in the first, the Tribe landed on Grove for two runs in the third, and they were never behind after that.

Feller's chief aides in his triumph were Rollie Hemsley, who treated himself to three singles and a double; Bruce Campbell, who had a double and a pair of singles, and Hal Trosky, whose tenth homer of the year brought in two runs in the seventh.

The defeat dropped the Red Sox a game and a half behind the second-place Yankees and left them holding third by a similar margin over the Senators.

Danish Mermaid Starts On Long Distance Swim

Domei Tsushin

COPENHAGEN, July 27—Jenny Kammersgard, famed Danish long-distance woman swimmer, plunged from the Danish ferry terminal at Gedser, Isle of Falster, early this evening in an attempt to swim across the treacherous Fehmarn Belt to Warnemuende, Germany, which is almost directly south of Gedser.

She expects to negotiate the 31-mile swim, which is 12 miles longer than the route across the English Channel, in less than 45 hours, depending on water conditions. Before starting her long swim, she told reporters that she was confident she would succeed, adding that if everything went in her favor she might make the distance in 25 hours.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

The Problem

The Problem was built in 1844 at the instance of a Mr. Dempster of Newcastle, England, as an experimental coasting collier, with money provided by some Scotch businessmen, who suggested the name of The Problem for this ship, one of the most extraordinary ever built.

It was neither a ship nor a bark nor a barkentine, nor a brig nor a brigantine. No words can describe the vessel. It was square-rigged on a tall main mast rigged with jib-headed sail on the fore and mizzen, completely defying classification. Its hull was built to resemble an inverted cocked hat and it could sail backwards, which was thought to be an advantage in case of a man falling overboard. She was also thought to provide better maneuverability and stability, but she turned out to be a great disappointment and she was soon taken out of service.

JAPAN DEFEATS CANADA IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

Yamagishi-Nakano Tumble Watt-Wilson In Doubles; To Meet Australian Team

Japan eliminated Canada in the first round of the American zone of the Davis Cup play Friday afternoon at Montreal by taking the doubles to lead 3 to 0. The results of the two concluding singles scheduled for this afternoon will have no effect on the final results. The chances are that Japan might score a clean sweep for a 5 to 0 victory.

Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano took the measure of Laird Watt and Ross Wilson after a keen struggle. The score was 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 and 7-5, according to a dispatch received today by Domei.

On the opening day Thursday, Yamagishi defeated Robert D. Murray, 6-1, 6-3 and 6-3, while Nakano bested Ross Wilson 6-2, 6-3 and 6-2.

In the concluding singles today, Yamagishi will take on Wilson while Nakano will meet Murray. The latter is believed to have a chance of winning.

Japan will now meet the strong Australian team in the final round of the American zone at the Mount Royal Tennis Club courts at Montreal on August 11, 12 and 13.

In the American zone last year, Yamagishi and Nakano were stacked up against the American team, which later went on to win the championship, and bumped off 5 to 0 in the opening round at San Francisco.

Japan Takes Singles Play

Domei Tsushin

MONTREAL, July 28—Japan's 1938 Davis Cup team, playing in the opening round of the American zone competitions, today ran up an impressive and imposing 2-0 lead over Canada as Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano swept through straight set wins in both singles events over their Canadian rivals.

With Japan needing but a lone point for victory, Canada's chances to defeat the Japanese appeared very pessimistic tonight. Both Yamagishi and Nakano, Japan's No. 1 doubles combination, will be out to clinch the series when they meet the Canadian pair, Ross Wilson and Laird Watt, in the doubles, and probably the deciding event.

Yamagishi Wins Easily

In the most interesting of this afternoon's singles matches, Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's foremost expert, easily defeated Robert D. Murray, Canada's outstanding amateur, in three straight sets. The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. Fumiteru Nakano also had little difficulty in disposing of Ross Wilson in three straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Jiro Yamagishi

Fumiteru Nakano

Yamagishi won the first set without a struggle, forcing Murray, who was described by experts as Canada's "only hope," to run all over the court. Murray, however, failed to hit back Yamagishi's strong and long cross-court shots. The score 6-1.

During the first part of the second set, Murray took to stroking long shots and forced the Japanese star near the net, whereby the young Canadian gained three games. Later, Yamagishi again forced Murray to play the long shots and thus won the set easily. The score was 6-3.

During the middle part of the set when the umpire announced an error against Yamagishi, the crowd loudly "booed" his action. The Japanese player, however, accepted the error gracefully and went on playing.

In the last set, Yamagishi, this time clearly the master of the situation, beautifully placed his volley of shots, each time the ball bouncing out of the reach of the Canadian. The match ended with the last set standing at 6-3.

Wilson Outclassed

Nakano, in the first match of the day, easily outclassed Ross Wilson. During the first and second sets, Nakano showed an ability to make almost perfect baseline shots, which Wilson attempted consistently to kill by net plays. The young Japanese coolly received Wilson's smashing volleys and in turn made some beautiful placements.

In the third set Wilson, after realizing the futility of forcing Nakano into net plays, began shooting cross-court shots, which the Japanese returned with a steady and powerful backhand. Wilson seemed a little nervous throughout the entire match, making many errors and out-of-bound plays. The scores for the Nakano-Wilson match were 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

The opening match started at 2:30 p.m. under rather cloudy, but moderately cool weather, conditions ideal for tennis.

War Minstrel, 8-1, Takes $12,040 Test

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, July 4—War Minstrel, grandson of Man o' War, kicked dust in the face of the mighty Seabiscuit today, beating the Pacific Coast champion by three and a half lengths in the $10,000 added Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park.

A record crowd of 50,000 made Seabiscuit, owned by Charles S. Howard of San Francisco, an odds-on favorite for the mile-and-a-furlong race, and if it had been a furlong farther he might have won. On a slow track that he did not fancy, Seabiscuit ran a dull race, but bounded out of ninth position at the head of the stretch to close gamely behind War Minstrel, 8-1 shot, owned by Mrs. Emil Denemark of Chicago.

Main Man Runs Fourth

Arabs Arrow finished third, half a length back of Seabiscuit, with Main Man fourth, Chance Ray fifth, Count Arthur sixth, Burning Star seventh, Grey Gold eighth, Eagle Pass ninth, and Melodist, running as an entry with War Minstrel, last in the field of ten. War Mintrel, ridden by Ira Hanford, finished in 1:54 1-5.

Mrs. Denemark's entry paid $18, $4.40 and $3.60 for $2 across the board. Seabiscuit returned $4 and $3.60 and Arabs Arrow $3.60.

The race had a gross value of $12,040, with $9,060 going to Mrs. Denemark. War Minstrel's victory made it two years in a row that Mrs. Denemark's colors have been carried to victory in the Stars and Stripes. Last year she won with Corinto.

Owner Howard announced that Seabiscuit would be shipped to Los Angeles tomorrow for the $50,000 added Hollywood Gold Cup on July 16. He will return to Arlington Park to start in the $25,000 Gold Cup on the closing day of the meeting.

Owner Is Disappointed

Mr. Howard was disappointed at Seabiscuit's failure in his first start since April 16. He said the horse refused to stride as he usually does and showed a distinct dislike for the track, which had failed to dry rapidly.

War Minstrel, fresh from his race in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs, where he nosed out War Admiral for third money, was much the best. Never worse than sixth, War Minstrel moved into fifth and then into second place at the head of the stretch. He overtook the tiring leader, Main Man, and held his lead while Seabiscuit wore down the other contenders

Grey Gold set the early pace, but tired rapidly after three-quarters. George Woolf, riding Seabiscuit, blamed the defeat on the condition of the track and the fact that the horse had to carry 130 pounds.

Newark Downs Toronto Twice, 10 To 1, 3 To 0

TORONTO, Ont., July 9—Behind the effective pitching of Marius Russo and Jack Haley, the Newark Bears sped to a double-barreled triumph over the Toronto Leafs tonight, 10 to 1 and 3 to 0.

Russo yielded seven hits in the seven-inning twilight game, three of them coming in the second for the only Toronto run of the night. Haley scattered eight hits in the floodlight to register his tenth victory of the season and preserve his unbeaten record.

Four Toronto pitchers handed out a total of twenty-one passes in the two games.

Fishbach Wins Eastern U.S. Tennis Crown

N.Y. Times

MONTCLAIR, N. J., July 2—Turning back the threats of western invaders, Joseph Fishbach of St. John's College, Brooklyn, seeded eighth, and Gerard D. Podesta, Princeton's captain-elect, gained the final of the sixteenth annual eastern intercollegiate singles tennis championship today on the courts of the Montclair A. C. The pair will meet in the first all-Eastern final since 1935 at 2 p.m.

Clashing with Robert Kamrath, second seeded star, of Texas University, Fishbach was victorious in his semi-final match by 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. Outsteadying and outvolleying the tall Texan, Fishbach displayed a brilliant forehand, and scored time and again with passing shots.

Displaying the same lasting power that carried him to numerous victories as Princeton's No. 1 man this season, Podesta came through in his battle with Robert Peacock of California, seeded fourth, by 6-3, 2-6, 9-7, 7-5.

Peacock, also entered in the Jersey State event, showed the effects of playing in two singles tournaments at the same time and Podesta outlasted him in a grueling three-hour struggle. Displaying coolness under fire, Podesta invariably sent passing shots down the sidelines as Peacock constantly stormed the net.

Charles T. Mattman, a Long Island youth representing Miami University, conquered Robert A. Low of Stanford in a torrid five-set engagement to capture the freshman title. Seeded second, Mattman won from the Pacific Coast star, who hails from the metropolitan district, by 8-6, 5-7, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4. The match took three hours.

Following the college singles tomorrow, Don Leavens and Kenneth Bartlett of Southern California will clash with Gordon Giles and Richard Y. Bennion of Utah for the Eastern doubles championship. Leavens and Bartlett advanced by virtue of a 6-3, 6-3, 7-5 triumph over Robert Underwood and James Seaver, Stanford, while the Utah pair vanquished Paschall Walthall and Warren Christner of Texas, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Semi-finals of the men's New Jersey State singles and doubles also are scheduled for tomorrow. In the upper half of the singles, Don Hawley, top-seeded entrant, will face Howard V. Stephens Jr. of Yale.

Playing true to form, all four seeded players in the women's Eastern clay court singles gained the semi-finals. In matches tomorrow at 2 o'clock Miss Helen Germaine, New York City, will oppose Miss Helen Bernhard, also of New York, while Mrs. Tokuko Nakano, another New Yorker, will meet Miss Edna Smith, diminutive Cleveland star. In the doubles Mrs. Nakano and Miss Germaine are to face Miss Smith and Miss Olga Kallos, Ridgefield, Conn.

Dean Aiming To Sue Cards For Overwork

CHICAGO, July 9—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, apparently held the answer tonight to whether Dizzy Dean, of the Chicago Cubs, would use the St. Louis Cardinals charging damages to his pitching arm—and Landis withheld comment

Dean said today he planned to take legal steps and would ask $250,000 from his former employer, alleging the Cardinals forced him to pitch too soon after a injury last year.

He said he had talked to Landis regarding the advisability of such action, would confer with him again and would be guided by the commissioner's decision. Landis would make no statement.

Purchased from the Cards for $185,000 and three players, Dean has won three games against no defeats this year, but has not pitched since May 4. His injury was diagnosed as "sub deltoid bursitis" and a rest was ordered.

A week ago the soreness had almost disappeared, but today another examination disclosed it had returned to the muscles back of the shoulder blade and a further rest was prescribed. An X-ray picture also was taken. On Monday it will be examined again in the presence of William Wrigley jr., president of the Cubs.

Charles Drake, assistant to Wrigley, answering a query whether Dean might be retired unless his arm begins to heal, said:

"There was never a thought of retiring Dean. What we are trying to do is get him into condition to pitch this year."

"I am not getting any place this way. I might as well sue," Dean asserted.

Drake said Dean told him "he was going to take the $250,000 and pay back Mr. Wrigley the $185,000 he paid for him."

Sam Breadon, president and Branch Rickey, vice-president and general manager of the Cardinals, did not comment when advised of Dean's threat to sue. Previously they had said Cub officials were advised of Dean's condition at the time of the deal.

Louis And Galento Top N.B.A. Ratings

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON, July 4—The National Boxing Association today rated Tony Galento as No. 1 heavyweight, next to Champion Joe Louis.

Galento's rating was based on his "consistent knockout wins and the fact that he is willing and anxious to meet Joe Louis or any other heavyweight, Baer or Farr preferred," according to Harvey L. Miller, Chairman of the ratings committee for the N. B. A.

Other heavyweights were rated in the following order: Max Baer, Tommy Farr, Bob Pastor, Max Schmeling, Gunnar Barlund, Roscoe Toles, Clarence (Red) Burman, Al McCoy and Nathan Mann.

"Jimmy Adamick," the association said, "is not included in the first ten and will not be considered until the completion of his recent bout with Jack Trammell."

The N. B. A. supported its member unit, the British Boxing Board of control, in declaring the flyweight title vacant because Benny Lynch, champion, weighed 118½ pounds in his recent bout with Jackie Jurich. The association rated Small Montana as flyweight No. 1 and Jurich second. It said it would consider for the title the winner of a fifteen-round bout between the two.

Improved Methods To Attain Nippon Spirit Are Stressed

Definite principles of the Kokumin Gakko (National School) were decided on Friday by the special committee of the Educational Council. The Kokumin Gakko is the substitute institute of the existing primary school and the bill will be presented to the general meeting of the Council for sanation about the middle of September.

The gist of the principles follows:

1. In view that the Kokumin Gakko education is a basic one, facilities for the synthesized education and its practices should be given.

2. Emphasis should be given on improved education methods and physical and cultural promotion to attain Nippon spirit.

3. Article 1 of the Primary School Law and other corelative laws and regulations should accordingly be revised.

4. Courses on which lessons are given are:

a. National Course (ethics, national language, history and geography).

b. Scientific Course (arithmetic and rudimentary natural science).

c. Physical training course. (Judo, Japanese fencing and gymnastics including military drill and athletics).

d. Art course (music, Japanese penmanship, drawing horticulture, sewing).

Special attention will be given to the East Asian and world historical subjects, national defense subjects and local historical and geographical features of the country. Decision on the practical courses of the Kokumin Gakko were to be decided today.

Yugoslav Players Tie

set and after concentrating their attack on Nakano finally won the game at 6—3. During this set, the Canadians kept close to the net, while the Japanese sought baseline plays.

In the third game, the Japanese and Canadians exchanged a series of beautiful smashes and volleys of passing shots resulting in fourteen deuces. Yamagishi and Nakano finally took the set when the former drove some hard base-line shots. Forcing the doubles team of Wilson and Watt to play far back into the court, Yamagishi with his long drives made the Canadians chose the ball all over the court. At this point, the Japanese, especially Nakano, appeared to be faulting, but made up the loss by strong back-hand cuts and steady strokes. The score for the third set was 6—3.

In the fourth and most exciting game, the Japanese won by a score of 7—5, the victory due mostly to the sudden smashing volleys of Nakano. Both teams won their serves. With the game standing at 5—4 in favor of Japan, Yamagishi again lost a game due to a couple of foot faults.

Nakano in the end suddenly began shooting terrific smashes, and back up by the base-line drives of his partner easily climaxed the set and the match.

A crowd of 3,000 watched the teams in action, despite cloudy weather. The court was wet, due to early morning thunderstorms, but later dried sufficiently to allow good playing.

Following the Japanese victory, Tamio Abe, non-playing captain of the Japanese Davis Cup team, paired up with Douglas Cameron, member of the Canadian team who is scheduled to meet Yamagishi in tomorrow's singles matches, played a two-set exhibition game against the Montreal city doubles champions, Rogers Durivage and Roland Longtion. The Abe-Cameron lost the first set, 6—1, but won the second set, 6—2.

Ramos Explains Status; Is Going Back On August 5

Denies He Is A Fugitive From Justice As Reported In Press

Benigno R. Ramos, Leader of the Sakdalist Party in the Philippines who is scheduled to sail from Yokohama on August 5 for Manila with his two secretaries Saturday afternoon gave the following statement to the press:

"I have never been a fugitive from justice as the Manila correspondent of Domei has hinted in his last report. I left Manila with my party secretaries Messrs. Enrile and Crespo on November 26, 1934. Thousands of people gave us a warm send-off. There was a public meeting in Luneta before we embarked and I was the principal speaker then. There was not any kind of charges or suit filed against me then so as to justify the allegation that I was a fugitive from justice for if there was any, the Philippine authorities would not have allowed me to have my passport, my traveling-ticket, the Sakdalista parade, the public meeting in Luneta which was not only attended by the people but by some representatives of the government as well.

Paper Still Published

"A fugitive from justice is the one that, having a case pending in the court against him, has managed to escape to other country or is unwilling to surrender to the constituted authorities, but in my case I can not recall any slight fact that could justify the accusation of being a fugitive from justice, for even during my stay here in Japan all Manila officials know my address which is constantly published in my newspaper (Sakdal) and I even pointed out in some of my articles that in case there is anything against me I hope the Philippine government would notify me.

"But up to this time I have not received any official notification regarding any charge filed during my absence against me. Had I received any official notification I would render my service either by letter or by going directly to Manila. How then can I be considered as a fugitive from justice?

"We reached Japan on December 7, 1934 intending to continue our voyage to America after looking for a hospital wherein I could depend on for the cure of my wife whom I left behind. After notifying my wife to come personally and choose the hospital which would suit her, she, with my children and mother together with Messrs. Celerino Tionco and attorney Elpidio Santos came to Japan on February 9, 1935.

"On March 11, 1935, Messrs. Tionco and Santos left for Manila with the instruction to direct the party according to our platform and to abide to my advice in case any difficulties arise. Due to the delay of my wife to determine her entrance to Tokyo hospital, I could not resume immediately my trip to America as was my promise to my party. Between entering the hospital and going back to Manila she preferred to return, as I could not be always at her side for the mission entrusted by my people.

Purpose Explained

"What is then our intention in going to America? As I told the American consul at Manila our plan was to bring the case of the Tydings-McDuffie law before the Supreme court of the United States on the ground that it was a breach of promise specified in the former Jones law. In our first visit to America in 1933 several prominent American lawyers gave us the assurance that they would defend the case and were sure to attain some substantial political gains in favor of Philippine independence. Foremost among these great American lawyers was the world famous jurist, Honorable Clarence Darrow whose death is a great loss to the whole world and especially to the Filipino people.

"Just when we were preparing for America, the so-called Sakdalista revolt occurred. All of my cablegrams to Manila, which are an open record to everybody, always advised my people to be patient and wait for the result of our endeavor and that even if injustice were being committed by some officers of the law they should always resort to legal means and respect the constituted authorities.

"Whether it was a frame-up or not, time will tell, for in one thing this staged revolt has been successful—we have lost our friends in America and the American ports were forever closed to us.

"Since then charges of sedition and illegal association have been filed in the court according to press reports. I expected the official notification but nothing has been received. I heard that the Philippine government wanted to extradite me, but I think it would have been avoided if I was only honored with some official notification. There is no sufficient ground to brand me as a fugitive from justice.

"During my brief interview with the President of the Philippines on board the Empress of Japan I did not think it proper for me to molest His Excellency about my personal affairs. All I asked was that the political offenders still in jail and these 'political cases' still pending must be pardoned 'to effect once and forever the regrettable causes that gave rise to those regrettable consequences,' which I repeated in my radiogram of July 13 sent to His Excellency.

"On July 26 I sent a radiogram to my family asking them to file bonds for my temporary liberty in case it is true that there is any charge pending again me. I am an innocent man and still have faith in the power of justice. I will return with a tranquil conscience and with the conviction that I have contributed my best for the cause and welfare of my people. In the midst of passionate political conflicts it was natural that I should endeavor to procure every means of defense for my people which our Japanese friends managed so well by avoiding the worsening of the situation thanks to their patience in convincing the American and Philippine governments that it was not the real intention of the Sakdalistas to take by arms the independence of their country but through legal means and that they hope the Philippine government under the guidance of His Excellency Manuel L. Quezon will give them a fair deal to realize their political ambition."

'Hot Air Treatment' Used By G.P.U. On Purge Victims, Fugitive Reveals

Domei Tsushin

KEIJO, July 29—Methods of torture employed by officials of the G.P.U. to force confessions out of counter-revolutionary suspects were exposed by Rudolf Lidke, a member of the Foreign Affairs Section of the People's Commissariat for Home Affairs at Vladivostok, who smuggled himself into Shanghai from the Russian port to escape the blood "purge," according to reliable information received in Keijo today. The Soviet official is quoted as having declared that the purge is in full swing in the Maritime Provinces and that high officers of the Far Eastern Red Army and officials of various Soviet organs in the provinces are frequently transferred from one position to another. The commander of the artillery unit for the Vladivostok fortified zone and members of the political section of the G.P.U. have been arrested and executed, he said. "Suspects are confined by the G.P.U. in special cells into which hot air is forced in order to force confessions out of them. When the suspects swoon in their cells they are taken out and brought to their senses. G.P.U. officials repeat this on all suspects. It usually results in false confessions," he said.

Movement To Aid Jobless To Begin Early Next Week

Ministries Embark Upon Supervision Of Retail Market

The meeting of the Central Unemployment Committee on August 3 at the Welfare Ministry will be a commencement of the official relief movement of the unemployed totalling more than 5,000 in Tokyo. The vocational department of the Welfare Ministry and the police bureau of the Home Ministry have been busy investigation the actual number of those victimized by the recent official economic control measures and the following figures of unavoidable sacrifices were recorded on Saturday in the hide and leather industry:

On July 25, the closed factories numbered 297; those suspended operation 1,669; and those restricted operation 2,535, creating 5,100 unemployed operatives. Only 495 are still engaged in the industry.

In the cotton spinning industry, some 400 factories are estimated to be victimized. Almost all the main industries throughout the country are now in a transition period, being at a loss how to utilize the surplus labor. The unemployment problem will have to be seriously discussed by the responsible authorities by this autumn, it is reported.

To seek stability in the livelihood of the masses in general, the Welfare and Commerce and Industry Ministries have embarked upon supervision of retail markets of daily necessities, both public and private. In this regard, both Ministries issued a notification to all the prefectural governments of this country Saturday.

The essential points of the notification are given below:

1. To set up a commission regarding retail commodity markets within each prefectural government;

2. To station special supervisors within prefectural governments;

3. To fix commodity sales prices of fresh fish at retail markets every day;

4. To fix sales prices of daily necessities other than fresh fish twice a month;

5. To make public such retail prices through the press and radio; and

6. The Welfare Ministry will make loans to public retail markets.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

Anthony Eden

and without too frequent reference to the whole Cabinet. Only on matters of major importance would the Premier take a hand in the conduct of affairs. But having seen how Britain was handicapped by the slow working machinery of democratic government when called upon to meet or counter sudden moves by the dictatorship states, Chamberlain was determined to concentrate greater powers of action in his own hands.

With such an object in mind, he thought it would be a convenience to have a young, able and popular Minister at the Foreign Office, one already tied to him by bonds of personal respect and affection. Probably the same thought inspired the appointments of two other young men to the War Office and the Admiralty —Hore-Belisha and Duff Cooper. Another old friend, Cunliffe-Lister, now Lord Swinton, was at the Air Ministry. With Simon at the Treasury, the Prime Minister would be able to retain his control over all important questions of finance.

Chamberlain's Course

For a time it appeared that the conduct of foreign policy under the Chamberlain regime would work satisfactorily. Eden was well pleased with the arrangement. Eden took his problems straight to the Premier, got swift decisions and issued his instructions accordingly. But the Premier's urge to take new initiatives abroad began to assert itself comparatively early. And the object of his advances was Italy, where Eden had no rival in the popular and official mind as Public Enemy No. 1. In the August holiday of 1937, Mr. Chamberlain wrote his first personal letter, in most friendly terms, to Signor Mussolini. The rest of the story is too fresh in mind to call for close study. Little by little we see the growing impatience of Chamberlain to get away from old inhibitions and to discover whether, by frank and friendly approach, it might not be possible to remove old enmities and to establish new confidences. To him it appeared, and still appears, that failure to follow this course could have but one alternative—war, sooner or later.

In pursuit of his idea Mr. Chamberlain did not care how many snubs he might receive. He considered it was his duty to accept such reverses blandly and to renew the effort at the earliest opportunity. Eden, brought up in the Foreign Office tradition, could not concede that such methods were calculated to achieve the desired results. He considered that to run after the dictators was the best way to convince them that Britain was frightened and unlikely to offer any effective opposition to the realization of their aims. Further, his constant contacts with foreign statesmen led him to believe that Britain's dwindling circle of friends and admirers would become still smaller through a similar process of reasoning. Confident that he was right, and supported by his permanent advisers, he endeavored to hold to his line. The Premier, no less confident of his own rightness and certainly no less obstinate, pressed on independently. Soon it became apparent that British foreign policy had a dual direction, one flow coming from the Foreign Office, the other from No. 10 Downing Street. A clash was inevitable.

The final parting might have come on any one of many issues. Had it not reached a head on the acceptance of Mussolini's peremptory demand that Britain should come to Rome and talk peace "now or never," it would have done so on some other matter. It might have been on the dispatch of Lord Halifax to Berlin, or on some question of making a demonstration of naval strength at a point where British interests were being menaced. The fundamental clash was as to which of two men should conduct the nation's foreign policy, Premier or Foreign Secretary. In such circumstances the junior is left no choice if his convictions are strong. Eden took his decision calmly. His friends in the Cabinet regretted his going, but conceded that a parting of the ways was unavoidable. They concluded that Mr. Baldwin had done him a great disservice by promoting him to the Foreign Secretaryship too early in his political career.

Enjoying Freedom

Among the older Ministers there was no little dismay. They felt that they had lost an important electoral asset. As a freelance on the back benches and in the constituencies, Anthony Eden might, if he chose, become a positive danger. They tried to persuade him to return to the fold—once the little Italian matter was out of the way. Although Mr. Chamberlain has had his success in Rome, these appeals have not ceased. Mr. Eden has remained uninterested. He is enjoying his freedom and apparently plans to take an active part in rallying the youth of Britain to face whatever struggle may lie ahead. As these lines are written, it is too early to say whether his future plans will lead him into actual collaboration with other accepted political leaders of public thought, such as Winston Churchill. Probably he is destined to remain out of office for some time to come. He is not likely to accept any new appointment in a Chamberlain government. But it is inevitable that he will "come again," if only because he is the natural representative of a generation into whose hands control of public affairs must necessarily pass with the normal march of time. Besides, he enjoys the personal backing of Lord Baldwin, still in his retirement a powerful figure in British Conservative circles. Lord Baldwin has rewritten his former political testament, which named Sir Samuel Hoare as next Conservative leader after Neville Chamberlain. The name of Hoare has been erased and that of Anthony Eden has been substituted.

Shine In Track And Field Meet

Kohei Murakoso, famous Olympic athlete, who won the 10,000-meter run in the 4th annual Tokyo track and field championships Sunday at the Meiji Shrine Stadium. (Top): Miss Kinko Ishihara, Kofu Higher Girls' School, in the leap of 4.95 meters which won for her the women's broad jump in the 14th annual Kanto championship held Sunday at the same field.

Murakoso Still Invincible Here In Distance Runs

Kohei Murakoso, 32-year-old Olympic athlete who won the plaudits of the world by placing fourth in the 5,000 and 10,000-meter runs at the 11th Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936, is still the peer of all middle distance runners in this country. Winning the 5,000-meter run on Saturday in 14 minutes 55 seconds for a new meet record, he triumphed easily in the 10,000-meter run in 31 minutes 52.4 seconds Sunday in the closing day of the 14th annual Tokyo track and field championships at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Leads From Start

The time, though the first to be registered this year under 32 seconds was slow for Murakoso. He took the lead as usual from the bark of the gun. His time for the first 3,000 meters was 9 minutes 3 second to be good but thereafter he began to lose speed. His lap time, for instance, dropped from 1 minute 13 seconds to 1 minute 17 seconds, and his time for the first 5,000 meters was 15 minutes 28 seconds. His pace in the last 5,000 meters averaged from 1 minute 18 to 20 seconds. Yamashita of Senshu University, who had been running a good race to be only 100 meters behind, cut down Murakoso's lead but began to tire from the 6,000-meter mark.

Two other records were set. Masao Yazawa of Senshu University ran the 200-meter dash in 22 seconds flat. Masukichi Inouye of Nihon University won the hop, step and jump with a leap of 14.82 meters.

The other winners Sunday were:
Running high jump: Isamu Kanehara (Bunrika University) height: 1.85 meters.
3,000-meter steeplechase: Takio Osawa (Nihon University), time: 9 mins. 58.6 secs.
Discus throw: Sei Motogi (Keio), distance: 39.47 meters.
400-meter hurdles: Akira Kawamura (Bunrika University), time: 56.6 seconds.
Women's broad jump: Setsuko Tachibana (Sumire Club), distance: 4:52 meters.
Women's shot put: Masuko Yamakita (First Higher School), distance: 8:62 meters.
Women's 200-meter dash: Kiyoko Katayama (Sumire Club), time: 28.8 secs.
1,500-meter run: Isanji Omori (Meiji), time: 4 mins. 25.4 secs.
Hammer throw: Atsushi Murata (Meiji), distance: 44.19 meters.
Modern decathlon: Masaya Yamamoto (Chuden), points: 4,649.
50,000-meter walk: Zenichiro Yamamoto (Teikoku Club), 5 hrs. 9 mins. 13 secs.
1,600-meter relay: Keio, time: 3 mins. 31.8 secs.
Marathon: Nan Ki Riu (Teikyo Commercial) time: 2 hrs. 53 mins. 2 secs.
Women's 400-meter relay: First Higher School, time: 56 secs.

The 14th annual Kanto track and field championships were also held in conjunction.

Nakano, Hirose Of Hawaii Star In U.S. Swims

Domei Tsushin

LOUISVILLE, Kentucky, July 30—Rather disappointing performances characterized today's running of the National Amateur Athletic Union's men outdoor swimming and diving championships here following the failure of America's new 1938 crop of natators to set any impressive records.

Two young Japanese-American stars, 15-year-old Takashi Hirose and Kiyoshi Nakama, 18-year-old Hawaiian record holder, won the eyes of pool officials who looked to them as potential Olympic timber. Hirose came in second to Adolf Kiefer in the 220-yard freestyle event, while Nakama finished second to Ralph Flanagan in the one-mile swim. The times for the events were quite slow, however.

Flanagan, the star of the Miami Athletic Club, defended his title in the 440-yard freestyle event, by taking the swim in 4 minutes 51.1 seconds. He was followed by Nakama and Paul Herron.

Yesterday, Flanagan won the mile swim in 21 minutes 6.3 seconds. Nakama was second but was 60 meters behind the winner. Steve Wozniak, of Chicago, was third. Flanagan's time failed to approach his national record of 20 minutes 42.6 seconds set at Chicago last year.

Adolf Kiefer today won the 100-meter backstroke in 1 minute 7.8 seconds, while William Neunzig and Fred Van Dyke were second and third respectively. J.I. Emerson, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, took the 220-yard breaststroke, his time being 2 minutes 49.2 seconds. In the 880-yard relay, Ohio State University defeated the Detroit Athletic Club. The Lakeshore Athletic Club, last year's winners, did not defend its title. The time for the event was 9 minutes 51.4 seconds.

Yesterday, the Chicago State University team, composed of William Newungig, Robert Johnson and Wiliam Quayle, won the 330-meter medley relay in 3 minutes 30.1 seconds. The Detroit A. C. No. 1 team was second, while the Stockton Olympic Club, California, was third.

Mitsuyama Loses To Murata By Foul In 5th Of 10-Rounder

Ichiro Mitsuyama, Korean battler, had Motoshige Murata of the Fuji Boxing Club puzzled with his left-handed boxing and was well on the way to victory but lost the bout on a foul that was called in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-rounder Sunday night in a smoker sponsored by the Fuji Boxing Club at the Kokusai Theater at Asakusa. Mitsuyama weighed in at 140 pounds and Murata at 145 pounds.

Scoring heavily with his lefts to the body and to the jaw, Mitsuyama sent Murata down in the fourth. But a low punch below the belt robbed him of victory in the fifth after 2 minutes 15 seconds of fighting.

Tatsuo Kaneko, Kansai welterweight champion, knocked out Harukichi Motoyama of the Tokyo Boxing Club, with a right hook to the jaw in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-round bout. It was a rip-snorting fight all the way through. Kaneko weighed in at 142 pounds and Motoyama at 137 pounds.

Fighting Guzman of the Philippines, 123 pounds, and Toshiro Aoki of the Fuji Boxing Club, fought to a draw, and Noboru Shirai of Osaka won on a foul from Saigo in the eighth round in the other two scheduled 10-round bouts.

Japan Wins, 5-0 From Canada In The Davis Cup

Domei Tsushin

MONTREAL, July 30—Taking two straight-set matches with the apparent greatest of ease, Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano, Japan's No. 1 and No. 2 net stars, today made a clean 5-0 sweep over Canada in the opening round of the 1938 American zone Davis Cup competitions.

Although assured of the right to play Australia in the American zone finals by virtue of a doubles victory yesterday, both Yamagishi and Nakano this afternoon demonstrated Japan's superiority over Canada by winning the two remaining singles matches.

Yamagishi Brilliant

Yamagishi, Japan's foremost amateur, swept through an easy straight-set victory over Douglas Cameron, while Nakano bettered general expectations by winning a three-set match over Robert (Bob) D. Murray, Canada's first-ranking star, by the scores of 6-4, 6-3, 6-0. The scores for the Yamagishi-Cameron match were 6-4, 6-1, 6-0.

In the first match of the day, Yamagishi easily defeated Cameron. Although bothered a little at the start by Cameron's tricky service, the Japanese star, before the first set was over, began concentrating on the Canadian's weak back-hand and after several beautiful cross-court placements had Cameron at his mercy.

The Canadian ran up an imposing 4-0 lead but Yamagishi, driving perfect baseline and crosscourt shots, ran down Cameron. The last two sets Yamagishi took easily, allowing the Canadian to win only one game. The match ended with the Japanese ace taking 18 games while Cameron had won only five.

The most interesting of this afternoon's matches was the apparent easy contest in which Nakano handily defeated Murray. Nakano appeared somewhat uneasy at the start, allowing Murray to run up three games, but after concentrating on base-line plays and long shots, the Japanese had an easy time in winning the match.

Nakano Stars

Taking the first set at 6-4, Nakano came back in the second allowing Murray to win only three games. He climaxed the match by winning six games in a row. The young Japanese won the plaudits of the crowd by skilfully outmaneuvering the bold strokes of Murray.

Despite a hot and sultry afternoon, a record crowd of 5,000 spectators watched the matches at the Mount Royal Tennis Club.

The Japanese team will meet Australia on the same courts on August 11-13 in the final round of the American zone competitions.

Australia Advances

Domei Tsushin

KANSAS CITY, Missouri, July 30—Clinching its series against Mexico by a third straight win, Australia today advanced to the American zone final of the Davis Cup tennis tourney, where it will meet Japan which has eliminated Canada.

Already in posession of two singles victories, Australia scored a third win as Quist and Bromwich easily took the measure of the Mexican combination of Hernandez and Tapia, 6-1, 6-0, 6-3. Two more singles matches remain to be played, but they will not affect the outcome.

2-0 Lead Scored

Domei Tsushin

KANSAS CITY, July 29—The Australian Davis Cup team, playing in the first round of the American zone competitions, today ran up a commanding two to nothing lead over the Mexican squad.

Adrian Quist, veteran Australian player, swept through the Mexican No. 1 player, Dr. Daniel Hernandez, in three sets while his teammate, John Bromwich defeated Eugenio Tapia also in straight sets.

The scores of the matches were as follows:
Quist-Hernandez 6-1, 7-6, 6-4.
Bromwich-Tapia 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Pacific Coast College Stars Win Dual Meet

Christian Science Monitor

EVANSTON, Ill., June 28—In shadowy twilight descending on Northwestern University's stadium, track and field stars from the Pacific Coast Conference overwhelmingly demonstrated their superiority over a picked Western Conference squad last night by winning their second annual dual meet, 101 to 35, before 10,000 spectators.

The Coast squad won 12 of the 16 events, scoring clean sweep in the 100-yard dash, the javelin and the broad jump, in addition to capturing both relays. In their triumph the invaders established four of five new meet records hung up.

The Big Ten team, paced by Wisconsin's remarkable runner, black-haired Chuck Fenske, scored only four victories, with Fenske accounting for two of them. The long striding Badger star, rated among the six fastest milers in the world, won the "revenge mile" from Louis Zamperini, rambling Italian from Southern California, by a decisive 12 yards to wipe out the Southern California's victory scored in the National collegiate meet two weeks ago.

Fenske came back to win the 880-yard run in another impressive victory, this time by a margin of three yards. He shared double triumph honors with Arnold Nutting of California. Nutting won the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds, a new meet record, and the broad jump with a leap of 25ft. 2in., wiping out the old mark of 24ft., 6in. made in the first meet between the Conferences last year.

The only other Big Ten winners were Dave Albritton, Ohio State star, who won the high jump with a leap of 6 ft. 6⅝ in., and Walter Mehl of Wisconsin, who won the two mile run in 9:13.5, a new meet mark.

The West Coast team got away to a fast start by winning the first three events and from then on the Western Conference entrants were looking at the backs of their running rivals or marveling at their skill in the field events.

Jim Humphries of Southern California set a new meet record of 14.3s. in the 120-yard high hurdles, and Southern California's red-headed speedster, Earl Vickery, eclipsed his meet record in capturing the 220 yard low hurdles in 22.9s.

Waseda Nine Blanks Chinese Of Honolulu, 3-0, To Win Third Game

Waseda University's baseball team sent the Japanese fans of Honolulu into ecstasy on Saturday by defeating the All-Chinese team of the Hawaii Baseball league. The score was 3 to 0, according to a dispatch received by Domei. It was the Tokyo collegians' second victory in three games.

The All-Chinese team, formerly composed in the entirety of players of Chinese race but now includes several players of other nationalities, even a Japanese, has always been a tough team for Japanese collegians to beat.

The Waseda team is in Hawaii at the invitation of the Asahis, ball team made up of Japanese players, which captured the Hawaii league championship this year with an unprecedented string of 11 straight victories.

Germany Defeats Yugoslavia, 3-2 In European Zone

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 31—Germany today emerged victorious in the final round of the European zone's play of the Davis Cup series by defeating Yugoslavia three matches to two, thus winning the right to meet either Japan or Australia in the inter-zone finals.

Henner Henkel, Germany's ace player, was easily the hero of the day, his straight-set win over Josip Pallada of Yugoslavia giving the Germans the necessary margin of victory. Pallada was no match for the powerful German who swept through to victory by the scores of 6-3, 7-5, 6-1.

With German victory assured, the next match between Georges von Metaxa of Germany and Ferenc Puncec was scratched and in its place a contest was arranged between the young German Ridel and F. Kukuljevic of Yugoslavia. The latter won easily by the scores of 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Germany Leads Yugoslavia

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 30—Battling hard for the right to play the winner of the American zone in the 1938 Davis Cup competitions, Germany today barely ran up a 2-1 lead against Yugoslavia in the second day of the European Zone final.

With the two teams tied with one victory apiece as the result of singles matches played yesterday, Henner Henkel and G. von Metaxa, of Germany, squeezed a hard-contested five-set win from the Yugoslavian combination of Ferenc Puncec and Kukuljevic. The score was 1-6, 7-9, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

Kazama Battles Bruno Of U.S.A. In Bout Tonight

Emilio Bruno, American champion, or Eiichi Kazama, pride of the Japanese?

That will be the uppermost question of the capacity crowd that will jam the Hibiya Park amphitheater tonight to see the fifth annual national amateur wrestling championships beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Bruno, here with the American team last year, lost to Kazama and has been in keen training for the past year to score revenge. Kazama, meantime, has been to the Philippines and defeated all comers. Due to a leg injury, Bruno was unable to compete in the series of America-Japan meets that have been held to date in Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Kyoto. But he is completely recovered and is rarin' to go. A master of all the holds in the game and possessing plenty of strength as well, it will be no surprise if Bruno turns the tables over Kazama this time. Both are welterweights.

Fortune Masdeo of California, who was here last year with the American team as a bantamweight and has yet to lose a bout, is likely to take back with him to the United States the lightweight title.

Competing in the middleweight class will be Lehman, who is here from Germany.

Varsity Teams Of Dartmouth Won 94 Events

N.Y. Herald Tribune

HANOVER, N. H., July 9—Compilation of the results show that Dartmouth's sports teams enjoyed the best record in years in 1937-'38, no less than four intercollegiate championships being won and one unofficial "Ivy League" title. The Big Green varsities in all sports won ninety-four contests while losing forty-six and tying three. Losing records in some sports were more than made up for the fact that Dartmouth won league championships in basketball, hockey, baseball and lacrosse, while the football team, with an undefeated record, was the unofficial champion of the "Ivy League."

Coaching played a prominent part in leading Dartmouth to titles in hockey, basketball and baseball, as none of these teams was favored on paper before the season started. Eddie Jeremiah, a coach of the hockey team, with makeshift material, became the first mentor to sweep the Harvard, Yale and Princeton series to win the Quadrangle Cup, and his sextet finished in third place in the International League, behind McGill and Queens, the Canadian leaders. Clarkson was the only American team to defeat Dartmouth in hockey.

Osborne Cowles, coach, faced even more difficult odds in basketball, as during the latter part of the season he lost four centers either through ineligibility or withdrawal, but the team built up such an early league lead that the Indians coasted to the title.

Jeff Tesreau, coach of the baseball team, celebrated his twentieth year as leader of the Big Green by upsetting all predictions in winning the championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate League. In this case Dartmouth did not lead until the final week of the season and then Yale's victory over Harvard a week later assured Dartmouth of the title.

Buried among the champions were the lacrosse players of Tim Dent In winning eight out of ten games they swept through to the New England League title, brushing aside all contenders with a high-scoring record and ending with the season's high by crushing Toronto, 24 to 8.

The football team had early groundwork laid by Earl Blaik, coach, and his assistants, and in this sport Dartmouth was generally the favorite. The eleven won seven games, defeating among others Harvard, Princeton and Columbia, while being held to ties by Yale and Cornell. The track team, with dual meet victories over Harvard and Holy Cross, was the only other undefeated varsity team.

The freshman sports produced thirty-three victories and eighteen defeats as well as two ties. The freshman track and soccer teams were the only ones to go undefeated, the latter posting five dual meet victories. The records:

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"---by Ripley

North America's Oldest Horse

Dolly's owner, Walter Carruthers was rendered a total cripple in an accident at a barn-raising, forty-one years ago. At that time the doctors proclaimed his case hopeless, and gave him six months to live. He lived, however, but has never walked since the time of the accident. Thirty-one years ago he purchased Dolly, then ten years old, and had an apparatus installed in his buggy whereby he was able to sit up and drive the horse in spite of his broken spine. Since that time, he has made a daily trip into Wingham, a distance of three miles every day.

Dolly, who has never been on the grass for the past thirty years, has never been sick since Carruthers bought her. She is so accustomed to driving that she stops for all STOP signs at intersections and when her master is hailed by old friends in the town, she pulls over to the curb without the use of directing rein.
